McDEVITT FIGHTS FOR $200,000 TO HELP POOR BATTLE DISEASE

Strangely Enough, Only Member of State Health Board Opposed the Measure

Senator Criticised For Making Bold Charge on Newspaper Clipping

(Special to the Ledger)

Senator John J. McDevitt, of Quincy caused a sensation in the hearing-room of the committee on Social Welfare Friday by openly charging that the State of Massachusetts wasted $200,000 last year on its printing contract. He was arguing the merits of his bill which provides that the State Board of Health be given an appropriation of $200,000 which is to be expended for medical attendance among the poor. Some of the committee were staggered by the size of the appropriation and asked if it wasn't extravagant. Then Senator McDevitt made the charge as stated above. Representative Ellis of Newton, took decided objection to the statement and said that he is perfectly familiar with the printing contract and that the charge made by the senator was absolutely untrue.

Senator McDevitt stated that his authority for the charge is an article printed in a Boston newspaper. Mr. Ellis thought that Senator McDevitt's bold charge should not have been made on the questionable authority of a newspaper clipping.

SENATOR JOHN J. McDEVITT.

In supporting his bill, Senator McDevitt claimed that 5000 lives are sacrificed, some of them needlessly, in this state every year. With proper medical treatment many of these lives could have been saved, especial-

PETITION WITH CHARGES TURNED DOWN BY COMMITTEE

Park and Downs Church Positive in Loyalty to the Pastor, Rev. William B. Ayers

Allegations Have Been Investigated and Lacked Proof

What is probably the last report that the standing committee of the Park and Downs church will make relative to the loyalty of its members to the pastor, Rev. William B. Ayers, was given out today following the consideration by the committee of a petition calling for the removal of Mr. Ayers because of certain things mentioned in papers enclosed with the petition.

The petition was signed by 11 individuals, some not members, and others not regularly active members of the church but the names have not been given out.

The standing committee met Friday evening, with William Colby presiding to consider the petitioners charges. The following letter was addressed personally to each petitioner today and tells its own story.

"Your communication with its enclosures has come under the full con-

YOUNG PEOPLE HAD GALA TIME

Supper, Play and Dance of St. Margaret's Guild

PROVED ENTERTAINING

The Sixth Annual Valentine Supper of St. Margarets' Guild was held in the Parish House, Christ church, Friday evening. This supper is a leading social event and is anxiously looked forward to by the younger set. The parish house was handsomely decorated by a committee, Miss Emily Moyle, chairman assisted by the Misses Elizabeth Wallace, Dorothy Doble, Ethel Schools, Minnie Barnicoat and Lucy Moyle.

White crepe curtains with fringed edges and patched with stars were draped from the windows and red streamers were suspended from the posts throughout the room. Rows of valentines extended round the room and over the stage the word ""Welcome" appeared in red and white. Cupids appeared everywhere and the whole scene was very attractive and much credit is due the committee for their untiring labor.

Supper was served at 6.30 under the direction of Miss Edith Fox, chairman, assisted by the Misses Ethel Rendle, Olive Smith, May Veale, Lizzie Dickie, Isabelle Walker and Mrs. Louise (Mandigo) Woodbury.

Six long tables seated 160 and at each place was a red heart shaped menu and very dainty little favors, the work of Miss Ethel Schools. The menu consisted of Ham, Potato salad, Escalloped Oysters, Salmon salad, Macaroni with cheese or tomatoes, pickles, Coffee, Rolls, Cranberry Sauce, Cake and Pie.

The supper was delicious and was served by the Misses Edna Wright, Ardelle McDonald, Mildred Smith, Helen Schools, Margaret Clark, Grace Brownrigg, Adeline McDowell, Florence Pratt, Minnie Barnicoat, Anna McDowell, Olive Barnicoat, and Elizabeth Wallace.

After the enjoyable supper the guests adjourned to the choir room and arrangements were made for the entertainment. A farce entitled ""The Masquerade" which was very funny indeed and the parts were very well taken. Miss Mabel Dickie was chairman of this committee, and assisted by Misses Lizzie Dickie, Maud Johnston, Ruth Dahl, Ruth Farmer, Bertha Wallace and Marion Bolster.

Maud Johnston as Dinah was exceptionally good and Marion Bolster as Bridget was her equal. Mabel Dickie as grandma was splendid and Bertha Wallace as Lena Stiles was very girlish in her manner. Ruth Dahl and Ruth Farmer as masqueraders were also very good. At the conclusion of the play, dancing was in order until eleven o'clock. Dance orders bearing cupids and hearts were distributed and they caused many exclamations of delight. Music was furnished by Frank Boutilier.

When the strains of "Home, Sweet Home" were played the gathering broke up and many were the exclamations of delight at the good time that had been enjoyed by all.

The members of the guild all worked hard and faithfully for the success of the occasion and the fruits of their labors did not go unrewarded.

Miss Maud Johnston was chairman of the ticket committee.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN SOCIETY CELEBRATING 25TH ANNIVERSARY

Observance Opened at the Church Friday with Reception by First Pastor and Committee

Many Relics of the Initial Movement Offered For Inspection

The celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Wollaston Unitarian Society opened with a reception and supper to present and former members Friday evening, just 25 years from the day when it was organized.

From 5 until 6.30 the parish committee of the time the church was dedicated and Rev. Wm. S. Key, first pastor of the church received.

In the receiving line were Dr. and Mrs. George B. Rice, Walter J. Wellington, Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Page, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. White, Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Simmons, Mr. and Mrs. Chandler W. Smith and Walter M. Hatch.

Decorations of pinks and other cut flowers, palms and potted plants were most effective.

On exhibition in the minister's study were many articles of interest in connection with the forming of the church. Included was a bound volume of the Sounding Board and Angelus, Unitarian publications circulated in Quincy and vicinity in the early days Files of the "Dial," the church calendar. Pictures of Wollaston 40 years ago. The silver cornerstone trowel. The old pewter communion set. The church scrap book, church seal and many others.

Shortly after 6.30 supper was served in the vestry to the largest number ever seated at one time. The guests included many former members now of other cities. The toastmaster was Walter M. Hatch, who in his inimitable way introduced the speakers.

Letters were read from Rev. Frank Wright Pratt of Calgary, Alberta, a former minister, Rev. H. Houghton Schumacher, Iowa City, Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Crane of Fresno, California; Mrs. Gertrude Sherman Ellsworth of Milton and Mrs. Mary G. Chase of Los Angeles, California.

Prominent among the guests were Mrs. Edwin E. Bagley of Toronto, wife of a former and much revered minister and her son Edward.

In extending the welcome of the society Hon. Eugene H. Sprague declared it to be a pleasant duty.

"To the old friends who have come back to help us celebrate," he said, "we extend a most cordial welcome. We have killed the fatted calf. The latch string is out. The best chamber in the house is yours. We offer the best we have for your comfort and sustinence while you stay. To the friends of more recent years a sincere welcome is extended. You have taken hold and been of assistance in helping the older ones with burdens to carry. To carry on our church for 25 years has meant great effort and no little self denial. In it we find courage to approach another milestone."

Responding to the toast "The beginning" Rev. D. M. Wilson of Kennebunk, Maine, then pastor of First Church, Quincy said in part:

"During my ministry over the ancient First church in Quincy I made frequent parochial visits to Wollaston and flung out many earnest words about the honor of being connected with the old historic church. The bulk of the people hung back, Wollaston had come to be a centre of its own. It had developed a community consciousness.

"What was to be done? Should those number of possible church workers be sacrificed in order to retain the fellowship and support of the few that worshipped loyally in Quincy?

"Providence interposed the instruments she made use of were the Baptist and Trinitarian Congregational churches. The pastor of one was the late lamented Rev. Dr. Dewhurst and the pastor of the other our beloved brother Rev. William R. Lord. Both of these men were about the same time repeted by an influential number of their parishioners. They were devoutly religious men but they were progressive and their deliverances did not fall on welcome ears.

"I went at once to the laiety whom I knew as Unitarians and to others whom I had reason to believe were liberals. The response was encouraging.

"I decided in a date to call the public together for Liberal Religious services in Wollaston and issued a circular.

"The hour arrived, Sunday October 23, 1887 at 7 P. M. and people began to come into the hall. As the services proceeded earnestness seemed characteristic of all. Such was the beginning of the "Wollaston Unitarian Society." I continued in charge of the services until you felt able to support a minister all your own and then Rev. Mr. Key was called.

"It was not long before I had the pleasure of assisting at the laying of the corner stone of your convenient and picturesque little church.

"Thus have you risen in your prosperous career until now, on your twenty-fifth anniversary, clothed in the strength which is able to help solve the problems of a great day coming.

Dr. George B. Rice first president of the parish responded to the toast "The founders." He said:

"The memory of those with whom I was associated 25 years ago is still vivid, although I have been away for a considerable time.

"The first services of this church held as most of you know in Boynton and Russell Hall now Odd Fellows hall are still fresh in my recollection and the first meetings of the parish committee are as yesterday.

"The members of this committee were Frank P. Waterhouse, treasurer, Charles T. Baker, clerk; Walter E. Simmons, Henry O. Fairbanks, Chandler W. Smith, L. C. Ela, W. P. Chase, and myself as president.

"Then others came into the work. The lamented Sylvester Brown, Walter Hatch, Walter Wellington and later many more.

"How these recollections awaken others. Our ministers Mr. Key, Mr. Bagley. Our choir. Our Sunday school and its leader Frank Page. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, our organist, a tower of strength in church and Sunday school then as now.

"What a busy organization it was even in the early days with the Unity club, Ladies Alliance, Musicales and gatherings of one kind and another. That this church still exists and is flourishing is sufficient evidence of its usefulness. It has justified itself and has been a mighty factor in the perpetuation of our faith."

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

January certainly made a pleasant and delightful exit, one would almost wish it to last longer under such conditions.

About time for Coleman and Big Bill Keliher to put in health applications for pardon.

The question which should be put to pardon seekers now is not if they are sick or well but whether they are amateurs or professionals.

The health experts are still sparring diligently and people go on eating the same old things just the same.

The legislative committee has turned down the proposition to make St. Patrick's day a holiday. It is doubtful if the saint cares very much about it.

If Miss Foley proves as energetic in her new job as in the woman suffrage movement there should be some thing doing in that department.

While the peers have another chance to reject Home rule, their powers are limited and then the house of commons can pass it and the Lords must be satisfied to accept it.

It is impossible to estimate the many lives which the wireless has saved during its brief period of existence.

When it comes to the distribution of here medals Quincy has quite a few persons who would certainly be in the front rank.

And unless some thing unheard of intervenes the war will be renewed Monday. Rather a sad commentary upon the enlightenment and intelligence of the present age.

If Chamberlin had come out as openly and positively about the Railroad condition a few months ago, there would not be so much cause for regret in certain quarters at the present time.

The school hours are long enough if only a fair proportion of them were devoted exclusively to study.

Bryan is willing enough but will he prove the right man in the state secretary job.

The starving policy of the London suffragettes should make no difference in the length of their sentences. If they desire to be even more insane than they are for the cheap notoriety it gives them have the dose with full measure.

A graduating income tax would seem to place the burden of public expense where it properly belongs and to prevent tax dodging the tax should be national and not variegated state or city. The U. S. Revenue collectors appear equal to any emegency.

An ex-convict has started an old age pension scheme and as usual he was successful in reaping a harvest. It now remains to be seen how he will dispose of it.

And now there is quite a fuss being kicked up because Harvard has dropped Dartmouth from the football schedule. What a terrible calamity for the world at large.

And now a theatrical man has offered $1000 a week to Thorpe. What will the country boy who has been led to believe in "honesty being the best policy," say to that?

ANOTHER STRIKE THREATENED.

Unless changes intervene between now and that time, Boston will witness a strike on the part of 5000 garment workers, Monday morning. The object of the movement at present in force is a compliance with conditions of the eight hour workday, better wages and in sympathy with the strike of the New York Garment workers. The bosses will be given a chance to sign an agreement which will be submitted to them. If this is done the operatives will resume work and no cessation in activity will be experienced. Strikes are not very desirable propositions in the main. It is to be hoped that the parties concerned will get together and enter into some sort of an amicable and satisfactory adjustment of their differences so the hardships, bitterness and other disagreeable features of a strike may be averted.

A MARVELOUS TALE.

From his prison cell "Big Bill" Keliher, serving an 18 year sentence for his participating in the wrecking of the Cambridge bank, issues a marvelous tale of clever swindling operations on the part of himself and his accomplices which with attendant legal proceedings promised may reveal some of the mysteries which have all along shrouded this remarkable case. In his story Keliher is credited with naming prominent Boston men eager for a share of profits from out and out gambling operations, who were caught in toils similar to those which surrounded George W. Coleman the young bank clerk and they were mulcted in the same ruthless manner, but because of their connections were forced to accept their losses in silence.

Even a judge on the Massachusetts bench, now dead, is mentioned as a victim who bit at the bait, and likewise was forced to accept his losses without a word of protest, because of his high position and the smirch which would redound to the ermine if he made any vigorous protest. Other people are included in the revelations of Keliher who were not screwed to silence by the same process, but forced the "gang" to unload. While the names of those people are withheld, their connections are so clearly set forth that the secrecy in the case of some of them is so thinly veiled that it is not difficult to determine just who are meant.

Out of all this tangle of rascality however there is one thing which stands out prominently. Keliher and his gang depending upon the ease with which New York police and officials were silenced by the ever persuading influence of "palm greasing" believed the same process would apply when practiced upon judges, lawyers and jurors in Massachusetts. In this they were mistaken. The Massachusetts judiciary, bar and jurors were proof against such proceedings. It is a matter upon which the state may well experience a justifiable pride.

Coleman and Keliher had to take their medicine. Martin Walsh the brains of the enterprise is believed to be dead. The others made a successful getaway.

Keliher's story, or prison cell confession will be followed by other court proceedings which it is believed will bring more light upon the whole subject. The public from the start has been somewhat in doubt upon this entire case. It was believed that the whole inside operation was not revealed by Coleman, who was used as a witness against Keliher. The tale of the latter may haye the effect of still further loosening Coleman's tongue at this time and the whole inside story may yet be revealed. In connection with the case, the work of Ex- Gov. John L. Bates who as receiver of the defunct bank has produced such good results, stands forth in a most commendable light.

MISS FOLEY'S APPOINTMENT.

The confirmation of the appointment by Gov. Foss of Miss Margaret Foley, to the board of trustees of the Children's Institution departments of Boston has set at rest the guessing contest which was engaged in with regard to her possible success as a candidate. It is early as yet to predict what Miss Foley will do in this position and her future course will be watched with interest. If she brings to the place all the enthusiasm and energy manifested in her woman suffrage effort, coupled with wise and discriminating judgment in the administration of the affairs of the department, then no mistake will have been made in selecting her to fill this important post.

HIGH SCHOOL HALL.

The turning down of the request of the Quincy Women's club for the use of High school hall for one or two of its meetings does not seem to be very good policy on the part of the school committee or in line with what is done in other cities and towns. The following item was clipped this week from a Boston paper. "The next meeting of the Chelsea Women's club will be held in High school hall today," etc. This is probably one of many instances where school buildings are used for the benefit of citizens who pay for their erection. Quincy schools cost a great deal of money and the buildings should be used for furthering education and civic and social work.

As the Women's club works along these lines and started the savings system in the schools and is generous in many ways toward the schools they should have the right to use the halls of the buildings for any thing helpful to the city.

If the request had been for a public entertainment for which tickets are to be sold, it would have been a different matter but as the request was for one of the regular meetings of the club and the club was ready and willing to pay for the use of the hall it seems as though the women have grounds to think the School Committee has not used them fairly in turning down their request.

ly those among the poorer classes who can not afford a specialist.

Representative Michael T. Sullivan of Quincy, favored the bill as did Whitfield Tuck of Winchester. James Lewis Cowles, of New York City and Miss Charlotte Smith, of the Womans Industrial Union.

Frank W. Goodhue, of the State Board of Health opposed the bill. He claimed that local medical authorities are not living up to their duties or such a waste of life would not occur. He said that there is ample law now on our statute books to compel the proper attention of needy cases among the poorer sections of the cities, and that the way to accomplish what the McDevitt bill seeks is to enforce these laws. He said, however, that his department is not strictly opposed to the bill, and if it passes the legislature he has no doubt but what the State Board of Health can reduce the number of deaths that are now attributed to lack of expert care.

GRANGE MEETINGS.

The splendid success of last year's series of big winter field meetings has caused the arranging of another great series for this year, comprising ten big Grange Rally days, covering the entire state from the Berkshires to Cape Cod, held under the auspices of the Massachusetts State Grange, in co-operation with local Granges. It will be ten days of Grange enthusiasm interest and profit as follows:

Feb. 17—Great Barrington, Town hall.
Feb. 18—Greenfield, Grinnell hall.
Feb. 19—Gardner.
Feb. 21—Worcester, Horticultural hall.
Feb. 22—Waltham, Odd Fellows' hall.
Feb. 24—Yarmouth, Grange hall.
Feb. 25—Taunton, Odd Fellows' hall.
Feb. 26—Milford, Town hall.
Feb. 27—Wilmington, Grange hall.

The general plan of all these big meetings will be as follows: Morning session at 10.30, open in the fourth degree. An exemplification of degree work, given by some Grange team that can do it exceptionally well. Half-hours' discussion of this topic: "Resolved, that the farmer's reward for his work equals that earned in the average occupation." Morning session to close with an outline of Grange plans and policy for the new year. Dinner at noon, on the basket picnic plan, everybody bringing a box, exactly as they would do at a summer field meeting out of doors. Hot coffee and red apples served free and the novelty of such a dinner will add to the interest. Bring cups as well as a dinner box.

The afternoon program begins at 1.45 to include splendid musical and literary features and the chief event on most of these days, to be an address by N. P. Hull of Michigan, lecturer of the national Grange.

MANY PUPILS OLD AND NEW

Of Woodward Institute Gathered in Annual Reunion

VERY ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

The annual reunion of the alumnae and pupils of the Woodward Institute was held at school hall Friday evening was the occasion for a large gathering of the present and former pupils of the school and many of their parents and the evening was one of enjoyment for all.

One of the chief events was a series of basket ball games between teams from the alumnae and from the school. Six teams were formed and the games were hotly contested. The alumnae however came off victorious the total scores being 24 for the alumnae and 10 for the school.

After the basket ball games there was a series of folk dances in costume, and light refreshments were served. Aside from the basket ball games and folk dances the occasion was one that afforded the alumnae of the school an opportunity to renew acquaintances and was therefore a very enjoyable affair

BETHANY CHURCH.

At the pleasant Sunday evening service the pastor will deliver an address to young people on "Three Forms of Religion." This will be to observe the anniversary of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. Singing will be under the direction of Mrs. F. Moore, and the congregational singing will be inspiring.

Feb. 2—Three forms of Religion.
Feb. 9—The Old Time Wreckers.
Feb. 16—Abandoned Farms.
Feb. 23.—Too Late to be Sorry.

POEHLER—CHRISTOPHER.

Final arrangements for the proposed Poehler-Christopher special bowling match for a purse of $500 will not be made until on or after Feb. 15, owing to the absence of Christopher, who is a travelling man, from Boston. In the meantime the local man will continue splitting the set ups at the local alleys in preparation for the match. The friends of Poehler at the Fore River yard are making up a purse and it is said that individually they are willing to back him to the limit. The necessary delay adds a little flavoring to the match because of the intense interest which will naturally develop among enthusiasts.

DIED AT HOSPITAL.

James Hickey, formerly of Wollaston, died at the Massachusetts General hospital Thursday morning, where he went six weeks ago for treatment, and underwent an operation some two weeks ago for ulcerated colitis, but acute peritonitis set in. The body has ben brought to Hall's Undertaking establishment and the funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at St. John's church at 1.45 o'clock. Burial will be at St. Mary's cemetery.

BIG VOTE FOR SATURDAY

Mrs. Marnock Leads in Gain with 860

MR. BOWDITCH ADDS 535

Several of the candidates in the Washington Inauguration contest made good gains today, a larger increase than is usually expected on a Saturday.,

Mrs. Emma C. Marnock, the candidate of the Woman's Relief Corps, made the biggest gain, an addition of 860, increasing her total to 22,380.

Mr. Bowditch cast 535 and now has a total of 11,515. Third in gain was Fred D. Williams with 110.

Miss Nellie Morrissett, the West Quincy candidate added 60 and now has 6,325 to her credit.

Gains were also made by William Wolf of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, Miss Etta Kenney and John H. Hart of the Fore River shipyard.

All the leaders will probably make big gains on Monday, as there is an active contest for the 2000 vote prize certificate to be awarded at 9 A. M. that day for the biggest gain during the week.

INAUGURAL PARADE.

A Washington dispatch to a Boston paper says: Prospects that the largest crowd that ever gathered here for an inauguration will witness the ceremonies incident to the induction into office of President-elect Wilson were apparent at the "Booster day" meeting of the inaugural committee on Thursday.

According to figures made public, 20,000 national guardsmen and members of other organizations have definitely arranged to attend the inauguration. The figures, however, indicate only a part of the big host.

The stand in front of the White House from which the new President and his family will review the parade will be a replica of Monticello home of Thomas Jefferson. A small forest of cedar trees will surround the place, and in the branches will be hundreds of electric lights. Calcium lights from across the way will be thrown on the President to show him to the crowds in Lafayette square.

ANOTHER BIG PRIZE.

The prize for the largest gain in votes this week is a vote certificate good for 2,000 votes, twice as large as last week. This will probably be the last prize for weekly gain, as the contest is drawing to a close. This certificate for 2,000 votes will be credited next Monday at 9 A. M. to the candidate who makes the largest gain during the week of Jan. 27—Feb. 3. To be successful in the contest for the free Washington trips a candidate will almost need these 2,000 votes. It will make considerable difference whether they are awarded to him or to the other fellow.

It has been decided by the Contest Editor to give third and fourth prizes in the Washington Inauguration contest, and possibly other prizes. The first four today are Fred D. Williams, Sturgis H. Hunt, A. R. MacKay and Mrs. Emma Marnock. Next in line is Galen Bowditch, who is still hopeful that "the committee" may send him to Washington.

Remember, the last coupon in the contest will be printed Saturday, Feb. 8, a week from next Saturday.

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN

was answered by Walter E. Simmons. He said:

"Wollaston or rather Wollaston Heights as it was known at the time this church was built and before, in some respects is not so very far removed from the Wollaston of today. There is the same neighborly and friendly spirit, the same loyalty and the same delightful surroundings that make it an ideal spot in which to live.

"In 1870, 42 years ago the settlement of Wollaston Heights began, some 20 families coming here during the first year. They had much to contend with. There were no sidewalks and the streets, being newly made, were almost impassible in rainy weather. When the spring mud came, one could only tell its depth by personal contact. Many a rubber shoe, lost weeks before, came to light when the frost was gone and the roads dried up.

"It was the custom to wear rubber boots to the station, change them for house boots to go into the city, then on return change again to go home. The house boots were left at the station during the day and rubber boots durin the night. They were all honest in Wollaston then as they are now.

"As one of the oldest residents said 'The inhabitants were so few that everybody knew everybody and people were only too glad to be neighborly. We met in one part of the hotel on weekdays when seeking our groceries or Uncle Sam's mail and in another part on Sundays for a union religious service.'

"The only grocery store in town was in the hotel on the corner and the dispenser of kerosene and potatoes was the guardian of the United States mail. Yes, that same hotel which you see today was one of the early settlers. It is one of the few excuses which Wollaston has to make.

"There were no shade trees and a village improvement society was started and a large proportion of the beautiful trees which have added so much to the beauty of our village were set out by the society.

"The Wollaston Literary society, afterwards continued for many years as the Eliot club was the only organized social society and many of us older residents have done most remarkable dramatic and musical stunts at the meetings of this renowned society.

"Then there was the fire department. Ah, such a department! Every man was a host unto himself. Many would get to the fire before the engine, leaving a few to bring up the rear with the machine in time to save the cellar and the well.

"At first there was but one church, the Baptist, but in a short time the Congregational church was built and then the Methodist later built their chapel on Beale street opposite South Central avenue. Afterwards came our church.

"The town grew rapidly and in 1888 when this church was organized it was a flourishing hamlet of over 2000 inhabitants.

"The old inhabitant would find the town today had grown beyond its original confines. He would find the depot had crossed the railroad track.

"He would hark back to the time when 40 years before he went to the little one room structure that was dignified by the name of school. It would scarcely hold 12 scholars and stood on the north side of Beale street, about midway between Newport avenue and Farrington street.

"When the town grew so that the house could not be used for school purposes it was turned into a cobbler shop. Afterwards it was moved to Wollaston beach, turned into a bath house and later destroyed by fire. It deserved a better fate.

"Our returned wanderer would find a town of nearly 6,500 inhabitants instead of about 2000 which he left 25 years before.

"He would still find Wollaston to be, as one enthusiastic resident said: 'A part of the earth where the sun shines a little brighter, where the view of the land and sea is a little better, where God's free air is a little clearer and purer than anywhere else. That is Wollaston Heights.' "

A duet by Dr. and Mrs. Rice was followed by a response to the toast "Our first minister" by Rev. William S. Key of Watha, N. C.

Mr. Key spoke intimately of his pleasant recollections of early days spent with his Wollaston flock.

"I hope," he said, "the same earnestness prevail and for many quarter-centuries this church will continue to be an enobling, uplifting and inspiring influence in the good and beautiful town of Wollaston."

Mrs. George W. Bennett replied to the "Ladies Aid Society." She said:

"In the summer of 1888 several ladies interested in the Wollaston Unitarian church met at the home of Mrs. William P. Chase and a society was formed called the 'Unitarian Aid Society.'

"By November the average attendance was 24 and 3 months after their first sewing meeting these earnest women held a fair and over $500 was realized. By Springtime they had about $600 and the following September voted $500 to the church committee to purchase the land for a church building.

"For the two years following the record is one of May festivals, pie supper, June festivals, socials, entertainments and sales. In May 1891 the women with the men of the parish held a fair in the church when it was partially completed and cleared $1147 which was given to the committee for the new church building.

"Still with us are the following women who were actively interested at the beginning: Mrs. Walter E. Simmons, Mrs. Charles T. Baker, Mrs. George W. Bennett, Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, Mrs. Edmund S. Taylor, Mrs. Herman Weiting, Mrs. Walter Wellington, Mrs. Caroline McIntyre, Mrs. Frank White, Mrs. Walter Hatch, Mrs. Couchier, Mrs. Charles Bryant and Mrs. Nora Totman and the next two years before the church was built Mrs. Frank A. Page, Mrs. George Weston, Mrs. Mary Brown, Mrs. Lucy Arnold, Mrs. Florence Loring, Mrs. Maria Weston and Mrs. Frederick H. Bishop.

"In June 1838 the Ladies Aid Society entered into a larger life and became the Ladies Aid Alliance. We are happily conscious we gave our best efforts and are blessed indeed that so many of our hopes were realized."

Frank A. Page the first superintendent responded to the toast "The Sunday School."

"The other officers at the time were vice superintendent W. E. Simmons, then a promising young man; secretary Miss Mary Ela; librarian Edmund Taylor and a little later assistant librarian George Ela.

Mr. Page recalled many of the scholars now grown up and told many anecdotes of the various classes.

The "Wollaston Unitarian club" was answered for by Dr. Charles S. Adams. He said: "I am reminded that 12 years ago the 23rd of last October certain men of this church met to consider the advisability of forming a club for men. There were 40 men present.

"This was the launching of one of the most important clubs in the city. The membership includes men from all churches.

"The presidents of the club since its foundation number 11 and include: F. H. Bishop, C. S. Comins, W. M. Hatch, E. H. Sprague, W. E. Simmons, F. E. Parlin, F W Plummer, E C. Hultman, C. H. Brigham, C. S. Adams and L. F. R. Langelier.

"There have been 7 secretaries: J. Q. Litchfield, W. O. Parker, C. B. Luard, N. A. Thayer, C. H. Brigham, L. L. Cleveland and J. E. Simmons. There have been three treasurers, W. E. Simmons, Jr., F. P. Waterhouse and C. P. Loring.

"All parts of the city have been represented in the club and the attendance was always large. The membership is limited to 100 and there has never been a time when there was not a large sized waiting list.

A cello solo by Miss Marion Moorhouse and vocal solos by Miss Rosetta Key, daughter of the first minister of the parish were enjoyed.

Strangers in passing through our town
On pleasant summer days,
Oft note a little church of stone
Which stands with ivy overgrown
At parting of the ways.

Its graceful lines, but modest mien,
The trees all rustling near,
The roof with pigeons murmuring low,
Make it, as all who see it know,
A joy to eye and ear.

Thus, one, a stranger in your midst
A decade past and more,
Found it a church home full of cheer,
Round which has gathered year by year
Feelings of love and awe.

For the brave founders of our church,
To whom we owe its gift,
Built it of things more precious far
Than many costlier buildings are,
Those which do souls uplift.

Its firm foundation they have laid
With rocks of earnest thought,
The broader creeds, the larger plan
Of faith in God and love for man,
Which here to us are brought.

The corner stones by them were wrought
Of courage, strong and true,
And sacrifice of things of earth
For those which are of heavenly birth,
That "Life which makes all new."

The porch, so beautiful, was built
Of hospitality,
For no one enters by that way
Without a hand stretched out to say,
Here non may stranger be.

A symbol of our faith and hope
In vaulted roof we see,
So while this shelter's o'er our head
No gloom can over us be spread,
From faith and hope 'twill flee.

And in the walls twined in and out
Sweet memories, abide;—
Of children to the altar brought
Who in this Sunday School were taught
Now scattered far and wide.

Mem'ries of two, whose mission here
To help, to cheer, inspire,
In North and South each found his field,
In lands which larger harvests yield
Their labors never tire.

Mem'ries of one much loved, we oft
His ministry recall,
The Father gently took his hand
And led him to that fairer land
Which shines by faith for all.

And while the organ softly plays,
Faces before us rise,
And voices sweet we seem to hear,
Those "gone before," yet ever near,
Most tender memories.

Surely to you brave pioneers
Our bounden thanks are due,
You bore the burden and the heat,
The rains that fell, the winds that beat,
When helpers were but few.

Now stormy days are passed, we're blessed
With willing hands and hearts,
And best of all, a pastor strong,
Who leads us wisdom's path along,
That righteousness imparts.

Be ours then friends to guard our faith
With true fidelity
Show love to God, all wrongs forgive
To seek for truth, for service live,
Our watchword "Unity."

Then will this little church of stone
At parting of the ways,
Become a place of shining light,
A beacon which is ever bright
To guide us all our days.

"How we paid for our church" was told in an interesting manner by Charles T. Baker. He said:

"I find in the records of the parish committee that in September 1888 the sub-committee on hall were requested to investigate the purchase of a church at Harrison Square.

"I have a dim recollection that there was a vacant church for sale and we had an idea that we might purchase it at a bargain and move it to Wollaston. I don't find any report of that committee but evidently there was nothing doing in bargain sales of churches.

"A committee was later appointed to find a suitable lot of land to build on. Dr. Rice and Mr. Smith were that committee and recomemnded the present site. It was secured for $400. This was the first permanent investment of the society and the money was paid by the women.

"With untiring zeal and fidelity they have labored constantly, never refusing any call for assistance.

"In March 1890, the parish voted to build a church according to designs of Edwin Lewis provided it did not cost more than $6000. In June the building committee reported the church would cost $9400.

"The society had decide that it was going t oahve a church and the committee was authorized to proceed with the work. The church was built and when finished cost $10,598.

Mr. Baker described the various schemes of raising money until in July 1909, the mortgage was cancelled and the church freed from debt.

The last toast of the evening was one with a forward look and was to "Our future church. To this Fred M. Rollins responded and the message he brought was full of hope and earnest purpose for the future.

Among former mebers present were: Rev. and Mrs. William S. Key of Watha N. C. and their children, Rosetta, Beatrice, Ernest, Cecil and Florence of Winthrop and William A. Key of Pembroke, Mr. and Mrs. eTrbert W. Luil and their daughter Mrs. Gould of Hingham, Mrs. James Edwin Bagley and son Howard of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. George K. Boyce of Melrose, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Delano of Waltham, Mr. and Mrs. aPul Curtis of Roxbury, Mr. and Mrs. Chester B. Campbell of Dorchester, Mrs. George W. Bennett of South Weymouth and Mr. and Mrs. Herman Weiting of South Weymouth.

The decorations in the vestry were of banks of evergreen while at each window and on the tables pinks were in evidence. Other vines adorned the platform while at each side an orange tree.

The supper was served by the Ladies Aid Alliancein charge of a committee consisting of Mrs. Fred C. Merrill, Mrs. Frank A. Page, Mrs. Samuel Chapman, Mrs. William M. Burrell, Mrs. George B. Damon, Mrs. Kimball, Mrs. Edward J. Cumings, Mrs. Charels E. Monroe and Mrs. Arthur W. Rohn.

THE GLEANERS.

The Gleaners of the Swedish Baptist church met Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Alfred Beaulieu, Buckley street, for their monthly business meeting. The session was well attended and an excellent secretary's report was read after which the members responded to the roll call.

There being but little business to consider the evening was spent in enjoying piano selections and singing. Mrs. Beaulieu served delicious hot chocolate and cake and the society adjourned until the first Friday in March.

A dime social was held in the vestry of the Wollaston Methodist Episcopal church on Wednesday evening, at which the dime cards which were given out a week ago were called in. The proceeds were very satisfactory. The address of welcome was given by Mrs. George Crothers, president of the Ladies Aid Society, which was followed by a piano duet by Miss Eldiene Young and Miss Marguerite L. Holbrook of Atlantic. Miss Ruby Walton's read two selections and Miss Holbrook sang Carmena. The entertainment closed by a piano solo by Miss Young. A social time was enjoyed during which coffee, cake and sandwiches were served.

Europe Urging Them to Meet Turkey's "Concessions"

GERMANY FEARS OUTCOME

All Officers and Men of Turkish Army Ordered to Report For Duty—Military Governor Denies Report of Dissensions Among Ottoman Troops on Tchatalja Lines

London, Feb. 1.—The Turkish government has sent orders to the Ottoman peace plenipotentiaries to leave London at once for the Turkish capital, according to a dispatch from Constantinople. All the officers and men of the Turkish army now on furlough have been ordered to rejoin their regiments at once.

The military governor of the capital has issued an emphatic denial of the reports of dissensions among the Turkish troops on the Tchatalja lines. The porte has protested to the powers against the denunciation of the armistice by the Balkan allies.

The overwhelming strength of public opinion throughout Europe in favor of peace in the Balkans is exercising a profound influence on the delegates in London of the allied Balkan states, and the European ambassadors here will, it is expected, shortly make themselves the mouthpiece of this widespread sentiment to convince some of the more unyielding spirits among the representatives of Bulgaria, Greece, Montenegro and Servia.

The European diplomats take the view that Turkey, especially since the revolutionary movement which has brought into power men who are considered irreconcilable on the question of Adrianople, could not offer more than what was contained in Thursday's reply to the European powers. This, they think, at least justifies the resumption of negotiations between the Balkan allies and the Ottoman empire.

The Turks, with their usual shrewdness, instead of simply asking for the holy shrines and a few more monuments of historic or religious character in Adrianople, suggested dividing the city by the River Mariza, by taking the part situated on the left bank. This would mean that they obtain the lion's share, although they would leave to Bulgaria the railway station on the line communicating with Macedonia. This, however, does not mean nor does the Turkish reply say, that it is their irreducible concession, so the way to an accommodation between the parties may still be left open. It is thought the men now ruling at Constantinople wish to have at least the appearance of not ceding as much as their predecessors.

Great pessimism regarding the Balkan situation is displayed in official circles in Berlin, owing to Bulgaria's uncompromising attitude. Germany, in conjunction with the other powers, is doing her best to persuade Bulgaria and Turkey to attempt to reach a compromise, but the resumption of hostilities on Monday next is regarded as highly probable.

The situation causes considerable concern to the German government, which fears that if the war should be resumed, Bulgaria may push matters beyond her own interests.

CREEK WARSHIPS SUNK

Turkish Cruiser Destroys Vessels In Harbor of Stampalia

Constantinople, Feb. 1.—The Turkish cruiser Hamidieh attacked and destroyed three Greek warships in the harbor of Stampalia, an island of the Sporades.

The onslaught of the Turkish cruiser on the Greek vessels was not a violation of the armistice or the stipulation for four days' warning of its denunciation, since Greece never signed the protocol of Bagtche.

Germany to Train West Pointers

Berlin, Feb. 1.—The German government at the beginning of October next will invite thirteen students from the military academy at West Point to come to Germany and study for six months at the military schools at Neisse and Metz and also to pass six months as lieutenants in the German cavalry and artillery regiments. The scheme is to be tried out for two years.

Twenty-Four Murderers Freed

Chicago, Feb. 1.—Twenty-four murderers now in the state penitentiary at Joliet will be given their freedom. The commutation of their sentences was announced as one of the last acts of Governor Charles S. Deneen. The action of the governor has caused criticism from police heads.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Moon and Hub's Mayor Conspire to Prevent Moonlight Hike through the Parks—May Have to Await Another Moon and Another Mayor—Boston Becomes Worse Place to Live in, Says Civic League Secretary—Housing Conditions are Intolerable—New England Ideas Spread to Whole Nation—Now it is "The World in Chicago" Modeled after The World in Boston.

Don't come to Boston to live until the housing facilities have been improved. Such advice at least might be deduced from a talk before the Women's Municipal League by Edward T. Hartman, secretary of the Massachusetts Civic League. Right in the American Athens, according to this authority, are blocks of newly erected structures that would discredit an Alaska mining camp. A square mile of Cambridgeport is one of the world's worst congested districts. Other similar facts which Mr. Hartman developed are more or less generally understood to be so. The community has grown rapidly, and without let or hindrance to the speculators who throw up the flimiest of three deckers, unload them on householders and then perpetrate the same atrocities elsewhere. Meantime the chance even for a person in comfortable financial circumstances to get a livable house at a reasonable rent becomes less and less. It is a matter of almost universal comment, as Mr. Hartman says, that Boston is steadily becoming a worse place to live in. A minature garden city at Forest Hills, now building under the auspices of local philanthropists and capitalists, is the one bright spot in the situation. There are many who hope it may be multiplied many times over.

The mayor and the moon have apparently entered into a conspiracy to defeat the Municipal Athletic Association's plan of moonlight walks and hikes. Everything was nicely scheduled for a couple of trips under the satellite's mollient rays. One of these walks was to be leisurely, precise, proper. The other was to be livelier, quicker and yet not fast. A Thursday evening was selected when the moon was full. Entries began to come in, in a manner to assure the project of success. Then came a Thursday morning with a drizzling rain and a weather prognostication of "rain tonight." A notice of postponement was hastily issued. Right thereafter came the thunderclap—a report that Mayor John F. Fitzgerald had forbidden the use of the parks for any such purpose. The exact wording of his prohibition was not given out by the newspapers, which, however, made a three days' sensation of it. Meantime the pretty project awaits another moon and possibly, another mayor.

Here's to the telephone girl! was a toast at a dinner of telephone men a few years ago. The speaker who proposed it showed in an eloquent little speech that the very life of a great industry depended on the efficiency and interest of the young women who operate at the switchboard. That this regard for the hello girl's health is more than academic—more than a matter of toasting her at a banquet—is shown by the far reaching scheme of medical assistance to operators which is announced from New York. Here is a peculiarly wearing, nerve racking job. She is already amply supervised on the technical side; a large group of public service companies now undertake to help her to maintain that excellent general health which is prerequisite to success in any calling.

Boston ideas spread. The promise of a vast middle west missionary pageant, a "World in Chicago" exposition similiar to the "World in Boston" which a couple of winters ago thronged the Hub's streets with visitors almost innumerable, proves that a programme which at once attracted New England attention is pretty sure to command the enthusiasm of the nation. The efficient pageant master of next May's Chicago performance, Percy J. Burrell, president of the alumni association of the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, has been spending a few weeks in the east while arranging for the publication of a book of the pageant. Mr. Burrell has had entire charge of the pageantry features of the recent "World in Cincinnati" and "World in Baltimore" expositions. The affair in Chicago will be the greatest of its kind yet given. More than 30,000 people will take part in the combined exposition and pageant. Upwards of 8,000 of these will appear on the stage.

The task of organizing and drilling such a host is a serious one, but Mr. Burrell is a seasoned veteran at managerial duties. His first great undertaking of the kind was his management of the annual costume carnival of the New England Conservatory of Music. The work of the presidency of the Conservatory alumni association has also given valuable experience for it means securing the co-operation of several thousand former students of America's largest music school. The prominence, certainly, that has been achieved by this graduate of the late Samuel R. Kelley's courses is evidence of the opportunities that come to young men and young women who have had proper training in the musical and dramatic arts and who are capable of applying that training to practical problems like that of directing the dramatic action, music and dancing of the wonderful missionary pageant to be given at Chicago.

MULE'S KICK IS VALUABLE

Farmer Forgot Where He Buried Money but Suddenly Remembered

Enid, Okla., Feb. 1.—John Allen, a farmer living near here, as the result of an accident, forgot where he had buried $2865 in the financial trouble of 1907, and as a result of another accident remembered where the money was hidden, and recovered it.

Several days after Allen buried the money in his pasture he was seriously injured in a runaway accident, and as a result lost his memory as far as the money was concerned. Then last Saturday, while he was hitching up one of his mules, the animal kicked Allen on the side of the head, and for some time he was unconscious. Physicians removed a piece of his skull, and with its removal Allen at once recovered his memory. Later he dug up the money.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

"Stonewall" Jackson is killed. Grant takes supreme command of the Federal armies, and Sheridan invades the valley of Virginia.

Gertrude loves West, but disappears before he reaches Belle Bosquet. West recognizes Bedloe as Frank Haverill.

CHAPTER XIII.

Signals From Three Top Mountain.

"PARDON me," murmured General Haverill, finally turning away from the youth. "Now, Colonel West, speaking of young officers, we have an adventurous piece of work for some one of them"—here Frank stopped to hear the rest—"a dangerous mission, so much so that I shall not order any individual to undertake it. A volunteer to lead the venture is what we want."

"Oh, sir, general, may I have the chance?" cried Lieutenant Bedloe.

"I thought you had passed on, sir," returned the general, looking keenly at him again.

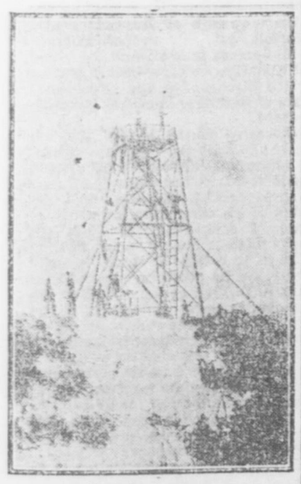

"If it is a scouting expedition, sir," the young man went on with irresistible eagerness, "I beg to say that I have made myself thoroughly acquainted with the region hereabout. In fact, I was hoping to qualify as a scout. Please don't refuse me, sir."

General Haverill could not help showing that he was pleased.

"That is the right kind of talk," he declared, turning to the other officers. "Our young friend shall listen while I tell you what is required. We want the key to the enemy's cipher and signal code. They have a signal station on Three Top mountain yonder and another somewhere down the creek that is a nest of mischief to us. Every night we see their messages in fire on the mountain top, and we can't read them. What we want is a bold dash inside Early's lines and a sudden attack upon the station, with seizure of the papers and dispatches. If there is a practicable way of approach from this side of the mountain the thing might be risked with the right sort of a leader."

"I know of a path, general, and I believe I could accomplish the undertaking," urged Frank.

"Very well. Major McCandless of my staff here will take you to Young's headquarters. He will furnish scout, men and horses—and Confederate uniforms if needed. Now, lieutenant"—here General Haverill took out his notebook—"give me a few particulars about yourself. Have you parents living?"

"I have the particulars regarding Lieutenant Bedloe and his parents, general," said Heartsease, hastening to poor Frank's rescue.

"Very well. I will ask you for them if necessary. Goodby, my lad," he added, turning to Frank and grasping his hand. "Do the best you can—no man can do more. Keep a brave heart and come back to us."

The young man bowed, saluted and started away. Heartsease met him at the end of the veranda, and they exchanged a whispered word. Then Heartsease returned, saying:

"Colonel West—aw—it's deucedly embarrassing, you know, but I shall have to ask leave of absence and go with him."

"Good boy, Heartsease! Well, ask the general. He can hardly refuse you."

"That's all right, but I've got to ask Miss Buckthorn, too, and the thought of that so stirs my emotions, that—well, au revoir, colonel."

The day began very early at Belle Bosquet that golden October season in that restless year of war's alarms. It was scarcely an hour after sunrise when Colonel Ellingham and Madeline West, returning from their favorite walk to the neighboring hilltop, met Jenny Buckthorn, who had already been down to the camp to meet her father.

"It's all up with us, Madeline," she said. "You know papa only gave us our passes, at least yours, because we all thought the fighting in this part of the valley was through with. Now it looks as if it were just beginning. Anyway the general says this is no place for women, and he has ordered us to Winchester."

"But surely time will be allowed us to say goodby?" inquired Madeline anxiously. "I can't help feeling worried at Gertrude not having returned last night, though Rob—that is, Colonel Ellingham—says she has stopped at the house of one of the neighbors down at the ford, where she and I have a class of school children."

"She may be home for breakfast," added Bob reassuringly.

"I hope she will," rejoined Jenny, "not only on our account, but because a certain officer here is just as good as hors de combat as a result of her absence. She knew Colonel West was coming, and it seems very funny for her not to be here to receive him if only as a sort of 'dearest foe,' you might say. Gertie is no cold, cruel, marble hearted thing, you know."

When they reached the house they found Kerchival West already there, pacing the veranda.

"Have you any word from Miss Ellingham?" he asked as soon as they came in sight.

"Not yet, Kerchival," replied Bob, "but my sister is as well able to take care of herself in these parts as you and I are, and she's sure to give a good account of herself before much longer. Depend upon it, Kerchival, old chap, she never left this house with any idea of being absent when you arrived."

"Colonel West," spoke up Jenny Buckthorn, "I understood my father to say that General Haverill was coming up from him to have a talk with you."

"Do you know if they have further orders for me that will take me away from here today?" asked Kerchival.

"Not that I heard of, colonel. But they seem to be awfully worried about those signals from Three Top mountain and about that expedition just sent to try to get the key. I have had to let Heartsease go out on the job too it seems General Sheridan wants to run over to Washington, and we are afraid there's mischief brewing if he does."

Cincinnati, Feb. 1.—Jim Thorpe, greatest all around athlete, declared a professional by the A. A. Representatives of the Cincinnati, Chicago, New York and Pittsburg National league clubs were in Carlisle, to dicker with Thorpe. Cincinnati offered Thorpe $4500 a season. The Giant representative, however, outbid all others.

Former Representative Berger Thinks That Solution of Problem

New York, Feb. 1.—Victor Berger, the first Socialist representative in congress and former mayor of Milwaukee, discussing Socialism before the university forum of New York university, advocated purchase of all trusts by the United States government.

He said their business could be so administered that in ten or, at the most, twelve years, they would pay for their initial cost. The purchase price should be based on their physical value, he added, and not on inflated capitalization.

Berger represented the affirmative side in a debate on Socialism, which will be concluded at the next meeting of the forum, when Bird S. Coler will present the negative side.

SUFFRAGETTES ARE POOR MARKSMEN

Hurl Lead Discs at Windows but Fail to Break Them

London, Feb. 1.—Poor marksmanship is conceded to be the most formidable handicap of the "bashibazoukesses," as the suffragettes are called. From the tops of motor omnibuses militants yesterday continued their catapaulting campaign.

With "slingshots" they threw lead discs stamped "votes for women" at house and store windows, but no damage was done and one militant succeeded in getting arrested.

Conspicuous in the demonstrations was "General" Flora Drummond, whose outspoken intention was to break into prison again.

Indignation was widespread among the militants when the outrage to "General" Drummond became known. They suspect, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst declared, that the men have clubbed together to pay the fines of the militants.

An actress named "Jackie" Melford was charged at the police court with bombarding shop windows with a "catapult" from the top of an omnibus. She was fined $10 or a month's imprisonment. Her father, Mark Melford, an actor, paid the fine.

The suffragettes continue to set fire to the contents of the street letter boxes. Large numbers of letters were destroyed at various points.

DEMURRERS OVERRULED

United Shoe Machinery Company Loses In $5,000,000 Suits

Boston, Feb. 1.—Judge Colt of the United States district court overruled the demurrers of the United Shoe Machinery company in the suits for $5,000,000 damages brought against it by Charles A. Strout, trustee of the Goddu Sons Metal Fastening company, and Harry E. Cilley.

Both allege in their suits that the United Shoe Machinery company drove the concerns they represent out of business. The actions are brought under the Sherman anti-trust act. Strout sues for $3,000,000 and Cilley for $2,000,000.

Mellen Pleads Not Guilty

New York, Feb. 1.—Charles S. Mellen and E. J. Chamberlin entered pleas of not guilty in the federal district court to indictments charging them with violating the criminal clause of the Sherman anti-trust law in connection with a "monopoly agreement" between the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad and the Grand Trunk railway.

Pastor to Become Editor

Washington, Feb. 1.—Rev. Charles P. Wiles has resigned his pastorate here and will go to Philadelphia about April 1 to become editor of the Sunday school literature of the Lutheran churches belonging to the general synod of the denomination.

FREED FROM ELLIS ISLAND

Castro Succeeds In Getting Writ of Habeas Corpus

SEES SIGHTS OF NEW YORK

Surety Company Gives Bail of $500 For General Who Is Glad He Finally Found a Judge Who "Would Give Him Justice"—Will Not Talk About Killing of Paredes

New York, Feb. 1.—Cipriano Castro, former president of Venezuela, walked the streets of New York yesterday afternoon, temporarily a free man under a writ of habeas corpus issued by Judge Holt in the federal court. Argument on the question of making the writ permanent will be heard on Friday next.

A surety company gave bail for the general, which was fixed by the court at $500. The case was brought before Judge Holt as the result of the refusal of the department of commerce and labor to admit the general to this country. His lawyers said that Castro had already been held at Ellis island for several weeks, "in a manner sufficiently outrages to satisfy the vindictiveness of anyone" and asked that he be admitted to bail immediately.

"It seems to me," said the court, "that this is a case for bail."

Followed by a curious crowd Castro went immediately to the Hotel Plaza where he had engaged a suite. He was all smiles and beaming with happiness as he invited photographers to surround him as he posed for his picture.

"I am glad I have finally found a judge who is willing to give me justice," remarked Castro as he left the federal building.

Castro would himself say nothing of the killing of Paredes, for which he is held responsible by the immigration authorities, but Sanchez said that Castro "was in a dying condition" when the order was given that Paredes be put to death and "could have known nothing of it."

He referred to his release as a "triumph of liberty."

"The statue of Liberty will burn brighter after this," he said; "I wish happiness to the United States and I wish happiness to Venezuela. I wish them both to be united in bonds of equity, justice and mutual prosperity."

Castro did not think the United States should fortify the Panama canal.

"If the rule of right is to prevail, there will be no need for the United States to fortify the canal; if force, the United States cannot fight all the nations of the earth. The statue of Liberty ought to be placed in the Panama canal zone. This was the idea of Bolivar, the George Washington of South America."

QUINCY LOST AT THE CLOSE

Was Holding Holliston Well when Bad Breaks Came

AND THE TRICK WAS TURNED

Holliston High school, championship basket ball claimants in the state, followed up the acceptance of their challenge by Quincy High school by defeating the local team in the high school gym Friday afternoon, 21 to 15.

The game was won in the closing minutes of play by E. Brown who took three passes from his brother at centre and dropped them into the net. Up to this time the score was tie at 15.

The first period closed with the score tie at 9 points. During this period Quincy had played very intelligent basket ball, showing up good in passing and covering the men.

M'NICHOLAS DID NOT MAKE CONFESSION

Admitted Identity to Facilitate Removal to Cleveland

Boston, Feb. 1.—Postoffice inspector Gray denied that James H. McNicholas of Cleveland, mining promotor, has confessed his guilt of the offenses set forth in the indictment returned against him and others in Ohio claiming violations of the postal laws. The defendant at the East Cambridge jail has admitted that he is the person mentionad in the indictment and that he was an officer of the company which is under prosecution by the federal authorities. He has decided that it is useless to compel the government to bring witnesses from other parts of the country to establish his identity, when eventually he will have to go to Cleveland.

McNicholas intends to fight the charges made against him and nothing will be gained by remaining in this part of the country, without possibilities of securing bail. The defendant declares that he will return to Boston and prosecute the alleged false statements which have appeared about him.

United States Commissioner Hayes ordered McNicholas before him this morning, and an order was issued for the prisoner's transfer to Ohio.

TWO LEAGUES FAST BOWLING

Many Players Performed Better Than 100 in Games

OTHER ALLEY GOSSIP

City League matches at the City Square alleys and Fore River League matches at the Coliseum alleys furnished bowling amusement Friday evening. Good scores were made. Strings running as high as 119 were rolled. White of the Yard team making that single, with a total of 312.

The Granites beat the Gilt Edge team at the City Square alleys, 4 to 0. Erickson with 113 was high man of the bunch. R. Olsen secured the high total. But four men rolled on each team.

In the Fore River league the Yard defeated the Government Draftsmen, with Poehler rolling for the losers, 4 to 0; the Machine Shop Gallery beat the Electricians 3 to 1, losing the fourth point by but two pins. The Patternmakers were beaten by the Pipe Fitters, 4 to 0 and the Shipfitters beat the Machine Floor, 3 to 1. The summaries:

—The new junior senator from Massachusetts will never move the country with a ringing speech upon representative government or upon any other subject, but he will do a full legislative day's work, and make his mark early. There is not a busier representative than Capt. Weeks. He has had no idle moments in Congress as he has no idle moments in business on State street. He will get on in the Senate, for, like the shrewd politician he is, he has the knack of cultivating friends, and his boundless energy makes him a man to be reckoned with.—New York Sun.

MONEY HIDDEN IN BOSTON

"Big Bill" Keliher Says It Is In Safety Deposit Vault

CUSTODIAN'S NAME SECRET

Search For Hidden Loot of National City Bank of Cambridge Is Being Conducted by Receiver Bates—Keliher Claims to Have Been "Double-Crossed" by His Pals

Boston, Feb. 1.—Search for the hidden loot of which William J. Keliher was relieved after he and Martin J. Walsh, king of the faro sharpers, had fleeced George W. Coleman, is engaging the attention of John L. Bates, receiver of the defunct National City bank of Cambridge, which Coleman wrecked.

"Big Bill," in his confession, says much of the stolen money which he took away from Coleman is hidden in a safety deposit vault in a certain bank not far from Boston. Detectives for Bates are hot on the trail of this loot.

The name of the custodian of this money is withheld until suit against him is filed by Bates, who is trying to recover all the money that was originally stolen from the bank to pay back as much as possible to the depositors.

Detectives for Bates are also trying to corroborate parts of Keliher's confession where he gives names of certain people who were associated with him in getting the money away from Coleman.

"I will start criminal action against any person, if it is shown to me that he took the bank's money with guilty knowledge," said United States District Attorney French after he had read of the confession made by Keliher.

The federal prosecutor said he already has two confessions of Keliher's in which the convicted gambler makes statements which accuse a number of people with violations of the federal and state laws.

Keliher's reason for making the confession is because he now feels that he has been double-crossed by certain people who promised to help him keep out of jail. He says he never expected to serve a day behind prison bars for his part in the wrecking of the Cambridge bank. He says he expected the jury which tried him would be sucessfully bribed, and he even goes so far as to say that he believed certain prosecuting officials had been "fixed" also. It was not until he was convicted that he awoke to the fact that he must pay the penalty.

Keliher declares he had a large part of the money taken from Coleman when he (Keliher) returned to Boston after Coleman was arrested, and that it was his intention to make a clean breast of it all and turn the money over to the authorities in order to escape severe punishment, but that he was prevented from carrying out this plan.

In his confession, Keliher gives names, dates and places where not only Coleman, but prominent Boston bankers, business men and even a judge of a Massachusetts court were "trimmed." The judge lost $4000. The judge next day threatened those who had "trimmed" him, but when it was represented to him that the story might not look well in print and that he might be removed from his position on the bench he desisted.

According to Keliher's amazing confession, one Boston banker was fleeced of $120,000 at fake faro by Walsh and himself. Another lost in the vicinity of $5000. Another prominent Massachusetts citizen lost $40,000.

Although many people insist that Martin Walsh did not die in New York as reported, Keliher says his "pal" really is dead. Many people believe Walsh's alleged death was simply a hoax, planned so that he might live peacefully for the rest of his life under an assumed name.

According to the story told Yergey is working under the contract system and Palmgren under the day system. Both men were working in the turret of the battleship, Yergey using a small riveting machine. Palmgren was using a hand wrench and was continually getting in the way of Yedgey, the latter repeatedly requested Palmgren to get out of his way but the latter did not seem to heed the request.

TAX RATE TO JUMP

Caused by Raises Given to Firemen, Police and Laborers

Boston, Feb. 1.—On account of the increased cost of things in general and the raises in pay given the policemen, firemen and city laborers, the mayor said last night that the tax rate of the city would probably jump next year. For the three years of his administration the mayor pointed out the rate has been $16.40, a drop of 10 cents from the rate of the year before he came into office.

At the same time the mayor announced that the city had finished up the year with a substantial surplus in the treasury, amounting to approximately $500,000. This is greater than expected, although the surplus last year was about $1,000,000.

The failure to show as large a surplus as last year was due to the increase of about $450,000 in the state and metropolitan assessments, as well as the additional 10 cents taken from the tax levy for the schools.

VERY CLOSE CONTEST FOR 2,000 VOTE CERTIFICATE

Fred D. Williams Led A. R. MacKay by Only 1,110 Votes

Former Not Yet Sure of That Washington Trip

It was a pretty race today between Fred D. Williams and A. R. MacKay for the prize certificate in the Washington Inauguration contest, given for the largest gain during the week ending at 9 A. M. today. Mr. MacKay, the Heptasophs candidate forwarded 13,110 today but Mr. Williams, the Rexall clerk, went him 1,110 better, a total of 14,220. Mr. MacKay's gain for the week was also 13,110, while that of Mr. Williams was 14,330. To this the Contest Editor has added the prize certificate good for 2,000 votes, making the grand total of Mr. Williams 75,780.

Sturgis Hunt, the Y. M. C. A. candidate also made a big gain today, adding 8,950 votes, and his total is nearly 50,000. He still holds second place but must go some to keep ahead of Mr. MacKay, who now has 45,760 to his credit. It is also evident that Mr. MacKay may be a formidable candidate for the first prize, the Washington trip for two persons, valued at $150.

Mrs. Emma Marnock, the W. R. C. candidate, also made a handsome gain of 5,550 today and 6,410 for the week. Her grand total is now 27,930.

Mr. Bowditch made his largest gain since the inauguration of the contest today adding 2,330, making his gain for the week 3,960. It is rumored that he has a large reserved vote.

Miss Nellie Morrissett, the West Quincy candidate added 650 today, a total of 905 for the week, and is well established in sixth place with 6,975 to her credit.

Gains were also made today as follows: Harry Burr, the High school candidate, 230; Miss Ruth Cahill, the candidate of the Odd Ladies, 145; Miss Ethel Randall, a stenographer at the shipyard 100.

THE LAST COUPON.

The last coupon in the contest will be printed on Saturday of this week. Look for announcement tomorrow relative to date for closing the polls, etc.

It has been decided by the Contest Editor to give third and fourth prizes in the Washington Inauguration contest, and possibly other prizes. The first four today are Fred D. Williams, Sturgis H. Hunt, A. R. MacKay and Mrs. Emma Marnock. Next in line is Galen Bowditch, who is still hopeful that "the committee" may send him to Washington.

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

ENCOURAGE HOME INDUSTRY HAVE CITY WORK DONE ELSEWHERE

School Committee Awarded Report Contract To Highest Bidder, Boston Firm.

Tax Payers Joyful at the Fine Prospect Such Course Holds Out

The Quincy School Committee at a meeting last Tuesday evening voted to award the contract for the printing of the annual report of that body to a Boston firm despite the fact that there were three printing concerns located in Quincy which had submitted figures, and the figures of all three were lower than those of the Boston firm securing the contract.

If the figures of the Boston firm had been lower than the three local concerns there might have been some excuse for the School Committee of Quincy going to Boston or anywhere else to have the work done; but when the figures of the successful bidder were the highest of four submitted, it presents rather a peculiar condition of things.

The carrying out to its logical conclusion this policy in all departments of the city would be most interesting to look forward to.

Of course such a thing would have little or nothing to do with the arrangement of the tax rate.

It is the most natural thing in the world for officials of any city to receive bids for certain work and then award the contract to the highest bidder, who is located in another city. That is a proper encouragement of home industry. It lowers the tax rates, it keeps the money right at home in circulation among local merchants, and aids local workmen in their efforts to meet their daily expenses.

This arrangement would hardly fail to meet with the approval of every tax payer in the city. Any work that is needed by the city send it out of the city by all means. It is the surest possible way of developing an interest in home industries. In this way home industries are encouraged and built up and fostered, and by this means they are enabled to increase their business, add to the number of men employed, make greater distribution Saturday night among a corps of employees who in turn will be able to circulate it among local merchants. All those things come of sending any local contracts which come up to some one in another city to be done, but of course it should be understood that to make the operation more successful and effective the out-of-town bidder should be higher than the local, otherwise there would be no honor or glory in the award either to the successful bidder or to the department making the contract.

Chairman John L. Miller, of the school board, said today that he had been away for two weeks and was not present at the meeting of the committee when the mater of printing the annual reports was considered. On his return he learned from Mr. Barbour that the contract had been awarded to a Boston firm. He did not care to make any comment upon the action of the board.

Superintendent Barbour stated today that Arthur W. Newcomb presided in the absence of the chairman. There since a messenger has been appointed from the First Norfolk Senatorial district and when it became known that there was a vacancy there was quite a hustle for the appointment. There were several Quincy gentlemen seeking the position and it was late Saturday before it was definitely known on whose shoulders the mantle would fall. The appointment was made by the Sergeant at Arms at the State House and Mr. Furnald notified to appear for duty this morning.

Henry P. Furnald is too well known to need any introduction to Quincy people. He is a son of Napoleon P. Furnald, and has always made his home in Quincy. His business is that of a jewelry salesman, which he has followed for many years. Aside from this he has done considerable in the line of catering for Masonic, club, church and private parties.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH PLANNING GOLDEN JUBILEE CELEBRATION

Pastor Coan Buys Property in Anticipation of Growth of Point District

Parish Receipts $20,000, Expenses $16,000 For Year Just Closed

Rev. Fr. John J. Coan, pastor of the St. John's Catholic church, at the late mass Sunday announced that he was considering plans for the observance of the 50th anniversary of the church and that in anticipation of the growth of the Quincy Point district he had purchased about 60,000 feet of land for future church purposes.

He also read a financial statement of the year which showed the parish to be in a healthy condition.

The property purchased is at Pray and Washington street. One parcel owned by Thomas F. Merrill contains 7573 feet of land and has an apartment house and small shop thereon. It is assessed for $4900. The adjoining property of Louis J. Smith was also purchased. The land area is 45,763 feet, and the assessment is apportioned as follows: stable, $500., house, $700., 36,463 feet of land, $2800 and the small piece of 9300 feet, $1100., making a total assessment of the Smith property of $5100 and a total assessment on the property purchased of $10,000.

Father Coan has been pastor since 1908, and is the fourth pastor to preside in 50 years. In the financial statement he read, he stated that the receipts for the year were a little over $20,000 and the expenditures a little over $16,000, including a note of $5000 on the new parochial school, leaving a debt balance on that structure of $35,000.

The property now in the name of St. John's church is St. John's Catholic church, a Convent and Parochial school on Phipps street, a summer home at Manet beach and a mission, the St. Frances by-the-Sea church at Houghs Neck.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

For base ball managers to be fighting over the possession of Thorpe is offering a premium for such sharp practice as he indulged in.

The public so unscrupulously bitten by the Indian should express its disapproval of his appearance on any ball field or any other public place in the proper manner.

Quincy money should be spent in Quincy. This should apply to city officials as well as private individuals.

With a banner fish year why was the cost of brain and other foods held to such high standards?

"Big Bill" Keliher is going to get square with some one, providing he can get any one to believe his tale.

Boston is to continue getting its light from the Rising Sun, even if it does come high.

A probe into many of the so-called charities would probably mean a cleaning up of a good many more fake institutions.

The London suffragette who had her fine paid claimed it was not the act of a friend and she went right out and commenced more window smashing. She should be put in a straight jacket.

If Carrie Nations only knew what a carnival she is missing by having been born too soon.

District Attorney Pelletier has put it up to Mr. Cady to prove his charges of graft or forever hold his peace.

In looking over the women's club news in the Sunday papers we find it the rule rather than the exception that most of the women's clubs hold their meetings in public school buildings or churches. Very few of them have club houses. Today the Milton Woman's club meets in the Vose school. Tuesday the Scituate club met in Jenkins school hall, Friday, the Chelsea club met in High school hall and so it goes.

As we said editorially Saturday we think the Quincy School Board is behind the times and unprogressive when it refuses to allow the Quincy Women's club to meet at the High school. If any body of Quincy residents is organized for the good of the city at large, it is the Quincy Women's club and it is up to the School Board to reconsider their request.

THE THORPE CASE.

The more the Thorpe case is stirred up the worse it appears to be from a true sportsmanship standpoint. And this naturally leads to the query if there is any real sportsmans spirit for the real love of sport in this country at the present time, Boxing and base ball have been reduced to the science of commercialism . And much along the same line applies to the other sports.

Now a New York base ball manager claims he has signed up Thorpe at a fancy salary. The Indian is classed as an indifferent player, a poor pitcher, and no great batter. Then his attractiveness lies simply in his being the man who fooled the world as to his standing, as an athlete, and placed this country in the most unenviable position. In fact in a decidedly unpleasant position. The public as having the greatest concern in this affair should act in the only way which should set its stamp of disapproval of such crookedness in sports or in anything else for that matter. For the people to act otherwise would be placing a premium on out and out swindling.

It now appears that Thorpe had signed a contract with a southern league, over two years ago, which was well known to ball managers in some parts of the counrty, yet they permitted him to represent this country in the premier athletic events of the world ,without recording a word of protest or dropping a hint that his withdrawal would be better for the sport.

HAVERHILL MAN FOUND DAZED

Lost His Money, Fell from Electric Car, Doped

THOUGHT HE WAS HOME

Sunday afternoon a telephone call was received from residents of Adams street about a man acting strange in the rear of the William B. Rice estate officer Murray went down and found a man in the meadow back of the house with his eyes closed and in a dazed condition. In answer to questions by the officer the man said that his name was Charles A. Flynn, and that his home was in Lewiston, Me. He had been employed in Haverhill and supposed that he was then in Haverhill. The man was on the verge of derliriums and he wes sent to the police station. This morning the police were able to get a more connected story. He left Haverhill two weeks ago with $18 in his pocket. After reaching Boston he had something to drink and seems to think that he must have been doped for he remembers nothing until finding himself in Quincy, although he suposed that he was in Haverhill. His money was all gone. He has a faint recollection of falling off a street car, but does not just know where. He was apparently all right this morning, but a little dippy. He will be kept until Tuesday when he will doubtless be allowed to go home.

TO WALK BAREFOOT.

The New York woman who "to carry out the idea of simplicity inaugurated at Trenton," will consent to walk barefooted in the inaugural parade, should have something done for her for the benefit of her gray matter. Of course such a suggestion is only made in the hope of the silly publicity it will produce. Few would care if the woman went barefooted or not. It would be her own hunt. If the day is cold, rainy, snowy or slushy, she will have the satisfaction of contracting a cold or some other more serious ailment. With women presenting a decent, dignified and womanly request for the ballot, they will receive consideration and undoubtedly in time all over this country woman suffrage will be in operation. But their cause is set back, months and years by silly demonstrations and practices which are dragged forth for no other purpose but the vain desire of the offender to pose in the lime light and gain a certain amount of cheap notoriety and publicity.

THE RIGHT COURSE.

A certain Boston clergyman has been making wide and sweeping charges of graft, dishonesty and a whole lot of other things in connection with the state prisons and other institutions of the state. District Attorney Pelletier has decided to request the presence of the gentleman before the grand jury. If those conditions exist they should be run down and rooted out. The minister will have a chance to tell what he knows. If he fails to do this he fails in his duty . If his statements are mere hearsay then he should maintain silence. The people in general no doubt incline to the opinion that the district attorney has taken the right course in this matter. It is now up to the minister. If he makes good he will be performing a great public service. If he is unable to prove his charges he has been doing someone considerable injustice.

Park and Downs Church Takes Action Upon His Plea

FOR A TRANSFER

Chester A. Boynton of Revere, one-time officer of the Park and Downs Congregational Church of Wollaston, plaintiff in a $25,000 alienation suit against its pastor, and supplicant for reinstatement as a member and transfer to another church, was Sunday night unanimously refused his plea and dismissed from the Wollaston congregation.

The atcion of the members of the church who were entitled to a vote in the matter was as brief as it was sensational. Quietly, and ostensibly to "adjust a smal business matter that had not been decided at the last meeting," the congregation met in conclave after the regular evening service and within a quarter of an hour had not only "turned down" Mr. Boynton's request for a leter o ftransfer, but had dismissed him as well.

JONES BROTHERS GAVE CASH BAIL

OF $300 WORTH CASTINGS

Melvin Jones aged 37 years of North street, and his brother William Jones 27 years, of 75 Howard avenue, were arrested Sunday by Sergt. Larkin and Henry McLaughlin, chief of theFore River private police on a complaint charging them with the larceny of brass and copper castings to the value of $300. William Jones is a machinist and is employed nights at the Fore River, while his brother Melvin maintains a house boat off Pine Pointt in the summer and is also employed at the Fore River as a machinist.

The plant of the Fore River was entered one night last week and a large amount of casting taken away. Appearances the next morning indicated that a team had been backed up to the fence on Howard avenue and that some one on the inside had made frequent trips from where the castings were stored to the fence, transferring the metal to parties waiting outside.

William was arrested and a little later Melvin was found at the home of another brother and placed under arrest. Both men were arraigned in court this morning on a complaint charging them with larceny and were held in $100 cash bail each until Saturday for a hearing. The police officers declined to say what evidence they had against the men until the cases came to trial.

New Organization With 40 Members Makes Good Start

SOME INTERESTING TALKS

The opening of new headquarters of the Quincy Young Men's Hebrew Association Sunday night was attended by most of the Hebrew population of Quincy and was an immense success in every way. Joseph B. Grossman, secretary of association in presenting a granite gavel block, inscribed "Quincy Y. M. H. A., 1913," said he hoped the organization would stand the wear of years as well as the granite block. In concluding, he introduced chairman Isador Abrams who outlined the progress and growth of the association. He told how it had been organized in September, 1911 by eight sturdy young men who stuck to it through thick and thin; how it grew until it now has 40 members, and is one of the most active Y. M. H. A.'s in New England.

The first speaker was Mayor Eugene R. Stone. He said that an organization such as this ever ready to help the community was a credit to the Jews of Quincy. He urged those not naturalized citizens, to become so ,and said he would ever be ready to assist any who needed his help in becoming citizens.

Leo J. Lyons, of Boston spoke on Citizenship and Naturalization. He said there was no reason why any Jew, eligible to citizenship, should not take advantage of the privilege. In hardly any country in Europe were the Jewish people allowed to vote. When a Jew comes to this country and does not become naturalized, he not only does an injustice to himself and family, but also to the Jewish race in general. He said the Jews in America had nothing to be ashamed of since the first man who landed on American soil, with Columbus, was Louis De Toras, a Jew; that the man who loaned $500,000 to the United States, during the Revolution, for the relief of Washington's army at Valley Forge, was Hyan Soloman, a Jew, that America's greatest men, thinkers, philosophers, soldiers, were Jews. With this fact in mind, Mr. Lyons did not understand how anyone could let go by the chance of being a citizen of this country, where he could have equal rights with every one, and not be considered a mere obstruction to progress, as in Russia and other European countries. In closing he said he hoped every Jew in Quincy, not naturalized would take advantage of the Y. M. H. A. Naturalization Bureau and become a citizen.

Next speaker was Albert L. Barbour superintendent of schools. He spoke of the advantages of education, which the city of Quincy gives, and said he would like to see a Jewish class taught by a Hebrew teacher, in a night school next term. He praised the educational work undertaken by the Y. M. H. A., which sees that its members are able to read and write and acquainted with some elements of education, in order that members may become American citizens. He hoped the good work would continue. That the association was patriotic was demonstrated by the fact that every nook and corner of the rooms was decorated with American flags.

The last speaker was Abraham H. Klubock, president of the Associated Y. M. H. A. of New England. He pointed out the benefits of the Y. M. H. A.. It had three duties, the first was to its members, the second to the community, and the third to the city. He showed how the Y. M. H. A. movement was growing in New England, as in June, 1911, there were only six, in Jan. 1912 eleven and at present twenty-five. He urged the Hebrew young ladies of this city to form an auxiliary.

Refreshments were served after the speaking followed by an entertainment with the following program:

Piano solos by Miss Minnie Winick, and Miss Marion Litchman; violin solo "Hearts and Flowers" by Edward Berman, accompanied by Miss Dora Grabowsky at the piano and songs by the Y. M. H. A. quartet, Henry Yeager, Jack Litchman, Abraham Cohen and Max Cutler.

The committee in charge of the affair were Edward Berman, chairman, J. B. Grossman, J. Szathmary, President, S. Litchman, J. Litchman, H. Yeager, I. Abrams, M. Cutler, S. Grabowsky, S. Kadets, H. P. Levowitch, W Asnes and H. Winick .

NEIGHBORING MINISTERS JOIN IN SILVER JUBILEE OF CHURCH

Clerk Boynton Read Interesting History of the Wollaston Unitarian Society

Bronze Tablet In Memory Of Those Passed Away Dedicated

A large public meeting in the church auditorium Saturday evening continued the observances of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Wollaston Unitarian society.

Congratulatory addresses were delivered by neighboring ministers of a quarter-century ago and others and a history of the church was read by William H. Boynton, clerk of the parish. Hon. Eugene H. Sprague presided.

The meeting opened with an organ prelude and an anthem "Cantante Domino" by a double quartet of former singers.

Following an introductory service a solo was sung by Mrs. Mary V. Slade.

The historical address by Mr. Boynton was of great interest not only from an ecclesiastical standpoint but for the light which it threw upon the early history of Wollaston.

The following anniversary hymn written especially for this occasion was sung by the congregation after being read by its composer Rev. Edward A. Horton of Boston:

We honor those whose work began
With praise to God and prayer for man;
The altar fire they kindled here
Shines brightly forth from year to year.

Here groping sorrow found the light;
Here wills of weakness turned to might;
Here brotherhood rejoiced to be;
Here rose the sons of God set free.

O Source divine, give all this hour
Fresh faith in truth's triumphal power;
New hope for never-ending life,
More love subduing hate and strife.

These earthly temples, Lord, decay,
For mortal glories have their day;
But praise and prayer live on sublime
Above the wreck and wrath of time.
Amen.

Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson of First Church, Quincy, was the first speaker.

"I bring congratulations of an elder sister to you" he said.

"I am reminded that shortly after Mr. Wilson took part in your dedication First parish celebrated its 250th anniversary.

"While your elder sister looks back on centuries instead of decades, she does not put on the patronizing airs in which older sisters are said to indulge.

"She has had occasion to learn lessons of value from her aggressive and healthy sister at Wollaston Heights.

"There is a deep and profound feeling of sisterly pride, sympathy and congratulation that I bring in the greetings from First parish.

"The church has in the world today a tremendous responsibility. Unless it has the loyalty to faith and duty that made New England strong it is doomed to go down into degradation rather than up to better things.

"Because you are fighting for God and right I congratulate you in the name of your sister, old First parish, Quincy."

The next speaker was Edwin J. Lewis, president of the Norfolk Conference of Unitarian and other Christian churches. Mr. Lewis was the architect who designed the church building.

"I well remember," said Mr. Lewis, the enthusiasm and energy with which I entered upon the work of its design and later its construction. That was a quarter of a century ago and since then undoubtedly I have become more proficient in matters ecclesiastical as well as architectural.

"Nevertheless, I am free to confess there seems to be nothing about the building to be really ashamed of and I am perfectly willing to own up that I did it.

"The style of the building was unusual in that far off day and generation. This led to several rather amusing episodes. I remember well the anxious and excited message that came to me from two members of the building committee just after the first roof truss was set in place.

"These two disturbed officials were perfectly sure that the trusses were so low that no one could walk under them. No, they had not tried to do so, but any one could see from the road that an ordinary sized man would bump his head. These are the offending trusses over our heads tonight. Truly 'there were giants in those days.'

"I recall too, on one of my superintending visits finding no masons at work upon the half completed walls and everything as quiet as the grave.

"It developed, on inquiry, that the whole gang had been celebrating on the previous night and all had to be hailed into court and sent to Deer Island or some other resort reserved for those that feast not wisely but too well.

"However, after various vicissitudes the building was finally completed and on June 15th 1891 it was formally dedicated.

"For a quarter of a century you have faithfully upheld the liberal standard in this community. You have much to be proud of, to be grateful for. The laurels are yours. You have won them.

"Do not, however, forget that there are other prizes, fully as desirable, quite as worth striving for, ever within reach. May you as a society never grow old but ever retain the enthusiasm and boundless energy which are the glorious attributes of youth."

"Twenty-five years is a long time, especially in a man's life," said Rev. James Huxtable of Hawes Unitarian church, South Boston, the next speaker.

"I remember well the occasion of the dedication although I don't recall that I took part in the speaking.

"Twenty-five years really tells the story. I think the little help I contributed came before you had a local habitation but not before you had a name.

"It was while you were holding meetings in the hall that I tried to persuade the inhabitants of Wollaston that life was not worth living another day until they built a Unitarian church.

"You have no Mayflower traditions no revolutionary ancestry to fall back on and glorify. Whatever merit you have gained is entirely yours. You have won it."

Mr. Huxtable urged, in closing, that in taking up a new religion the church be sure and retain the good things in the old.

Rev. William R. Lord of Dover was the next speaker after a vocal solo by Earle Boyce, a former member. Mr. Lord was pastor of the Wollaston Congregational church some 26 years ago but has for a number of years been a Unitarian clergyman. He said:

"It is 31 years ago tomorrow, February 2 that on a Sunday I preached my first sermon in Wollaston as pastor of the church further up on the hill.

"I came fleeing from the bonds of Presbyterianism and expecting to find a greater theological freedom. I found a creed I had not dreamed of examining and a covenant that in the time of Cotton Mather would look severe.

"I found for the most part a conservative people but so kind and considerate that when the year closed they asked me to stay another year.

"They missed the evangelical quality in my sermons but they were kind and patient and when we parted I doubt if I could have had more intimate friends than those people in the succeeding years.

"You have done a fine thing. You have had a church here and stood by it in real man fashion. There are not many churches that can boast of a better record.

"Nothing is good enough for you but the best. The best thing Heaven has handed down is a church universal, with God the father of all and every one a child, brother and sister, bound under every form the church takes on, in spiritual bonds that make life worth while, the bonds of Divine and human love.

Rev. Edward A. Horton was the last speaker and related several anecdotes in connection with the dedication of the church at which he was a speaker.

He recalled the extremely hot day and how Robert Collyer, who was one of the speakers, dripped. One of the speakers, and there were twelve, prided himself upon being able to give the shortest speech of any minister in New England. On this occasion Mr. Horton set out to outdo him and succeeded.

"These little humorous touches" said Mr. Horton, "come on the surface of a very impressive and significant event. I think of Wollaston as one of my best beloved homes. You have been kind to remember me on all great occasions.

"I have often pointed to the work and career of this church as indicating what can be done by the co-operation of hearty souls determined upon a given object and adhering to that object."

Mr. Horton referred to all of the previous speakers and commented on their remarks. He emphasized the Sunday school and the long superintendency of Frank A. Page. "I think it can hardly be equalled" said Mr. Horton, "in more than one or two villages in New England.

"The ladies work shines on with undimmed radiance from year to year Upon the women of any society greatly depends the future, whether you decline or go forth to make the church a community power. They are actually said t ohave influence over their husbands.

"What constitutes the success of a church?" asked Mr. Horton in conclusion. "The work of the live church is translated into terms which apply to the acts, needs and conditions of the world today.

"Things go to two extremes regarding the functions of the church. The old one is that the church is a place where certain select gather and by their membership secure certain privileges and benefits.

"The other is that the church should turn itself into a department store and become allied with every local activity that has the community and the needs of modern life at heart. We should dwell in neither.

"The real living church to represent the living God and the religion of Christ must interpret great truths and test great affairs of life but must not become immersed in them.

"If we stand the next 25 years as we have stood the last we will do a vast deal to spread the light, break manacles and prepare a highway for the Lord of all humanity."

Rev. Carl G. Horst announced the anniversary gifts to the church as follows:

At the Wollaston Unitarian church, Sunday morning, the concluding service in the observances of the twenty-fifth anniversary, a bronze tablet in memory of departed members was unveiled. The ceremony was performed by Mrs. W. E. Simmons who read clearly and distinctly the following inscription upon the tablet:

In memoriam to those members of the Wollaston Unitarian Society who have passed on to higher service. The Ladies Aid Alliance erects this tablet in loving memory.

1888 — 1913

The tablet was dedicated by the pastor Rev. Carl G. Horst with the following words: "As minister of the Wollaston Unitarian church I dedicate this tablet to be sacred to the memory of those dear friends and co-workers, who have passed on to higher service, whose faces we see no more but whose love is with us forever, and I call upon you all to confirm this dedication by renewed consecration to the aims, purposes and ideals of this, our beloved church, which in the love of truth and the spirit of Jesus Christ stands for the worship of God and the service of man."

The anniversary sermon was preached by Rev. Samuel A. Eliott, D. D., president of the American Unitarian Association who took his text from Isaiah "Thine ears hear a voice behind thee saying 'This is the way, walk ye in it.'

Music was furnished by a double quartet of former singers consisting of Mrs. Lucy J. Day, Mrs. Frank A. Page, Mrs. Royal L. Turner, Mrs. George H. Collyer, Samuel King, C. A. Powers, Louis B. Weston and Gorham Nickerson.

At the service the following hymn, written by Rev. Henry Hervey Barber, D .D., professor emeritus of the Meadville Theological school was sung:

We join our happy memories
Of fellowship thro' gathering years,
Of hallowed hours of holy ties,
And service which this house endears.

We hail the faithful pioneers
Whose zeal and patience planted here,
Beyond their hope, despite their fears,
The faith we hold with them most dear.

A growing work the years have wrought,
Enlarging life, uniting love,
Faith into earnest purpose wrought,
And hope enkindled from above.

Workers and work alike we hail,
And own the blessing and the call,
Live in the Life that cannot fail,
And trust the Love that keepeth all.
Amen.

"The power of the life of an institution or individual" said Dr. Eliot, "may justly be measured by the union and proportion of the sense of continuity and new beginnings.

"A church ought to have a deep root in the good soil of the heritage that is past and at the same time be capable of making a new start at any time.

"It should be like the mountain stream. It is one stream from its higher source to the deep sea, but different in every mile of its flow.

"Now rapid, now calm ,now a pool so still, then breaking into new cascades. Fed by tributary streams it knows the mingled continuity and new beginnings.

"We should join the strength of maturity with the elasticity of youth. We should know the good the past has had and welcome the infusion of new methods. We must have the happy privilege of conserving and at the same time creating.

"No institution can be in a healthy condition that commits itself to either a conservative policy or revolutionary ideas. There must be harmony and balance to gain permanent advance.

"No mind moves forward unless it moves from some preceding position Don't mistake restlessness for progress, revolution for reform. The removal of your neighbors landmarks is an improvement to your own territory.

"No permanent progress is based on dissension. From no standpoint outside the church can the church be reformed. True reform lies in co-operation with the established law. We must join experience with the joy of new adventure.

"While we celebrate the days that are gone we must look forward to the days to come. Let us discard nothing of value for the preparation, the reception and transmission of a truth established among men.

"It may not be ours to plant the church of the future but we can at least be faithful to the present. Let us be glad of the privilege given us to sow the tree of life whose leaves are for the healing of nations.

"The liberal movement must not tarry in the camps of the conservatives nor follow the paths of the radicals.

"Not in the Arctic frost or the torrid heat but in the temperate zone is it that the grain best ripens.

The anniversary season is good for us. We should out of the ordinary experiences provide new inward impulses. We should work out a perpetuation of fresh and renewed life.

"We should not be obedient to the spirit of Christian heritage if we forget the things behind in eager pursuit of the things before.

"It is our task to preserve unbroken the spiritual life of the Christian centuries. Christ does not survive in cloistered virtue or scholastic theology but must be continually refreshed by evidence of the increased power of God in the lives and works o ftoday."

Dr. Eliot presided over the communion service which followed.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL

Sunday was observed as Christian Endeavor day at Wollaston Congregational church. The auditorium was decorated with C. E. flags and pennants, and bunting. At the rear of the pulpit, beneath the gold cross, were two large flags—the Stars and Stripes and the Christian flag, held together with a gold C. E. monogram. The church was crowded with an audience of which a large percentage were young men and women.

The pastor, Dr. I. W. Sneath, preached upon the topic, "Live Wires in the Twentieth Century" taking for his text the 4th verse of the 1st chapter of John, "In him was life, and the life was the light of men." He spoke of the observance of Christian Endeavor day everywhere, and gave a cordial invitation to all the young people to attend the Christian Endeavor meetings and ally themselves with the movement.

There are no idlers in the twentieth century. The live wire of life is helpfulness, but the wire is dead until it comes into contact with the source of power at the power-house. Christ is the life, and the Bible is the power-house.

If there is to be usefulness there must be contact with our neighbors. Today 90 per cent of all uplift work is financed by the church and 90 per cent of the work is done by church members. He closed with a strong appeal to the young men and women to become live wires, in helping make America a Christian nation.

There was a large attendance at the Sunday school, under the leadership of Supt. Charles A. Campbell.

There was a good attendance at the Junior Christian Endeavor meeting at 4 o'clock, leader, Albert Hale Waite. A talk on the history and principles of Christian Endeavor was given by the junior superintendent.

There was a larger attendance than usual at the Christian Endeavor meeting at 6 o'clock which was lead by Miss Madeline K. Morse. The subject was "Christian Endeavor principles and how to uphold them." An interesting history of the Endeavor movement was given and the service was a very helpful one.

In the evening a very interesting stereopticon lecture on "The Immigrant and his coming," was given by Dr. Sneath, in the vestry.

Tuesday afternoon the Auxiliary, W. B. M. will meet with Mrs. A. A. Lincoln, subject 4th chapter of "China's New Day."

"The True Significance of Ash Wednesday and Lent" will be the topic for the mid-week service, Thursday evening, at 7.45 o'clock.

Sunday evening at 7 o'clock under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E., Miss Cora F. Stoddard, secretary of the Scientific Temperance Federation, will give a stereopticon lecture, in the auditorium, on "Alcohol in Every-Day Work and Play." The other churches are cordially invited to unite in the rally.

BETHANY CHURCH.

It was an inspiring sight that greeted the Rev. B. A. Willmott when he arose to begin his sermon Sunday evening the pews being full of serious men and women, young and old, all classes being represented. The attendance was up to the high mark maintained of late ,many being obliged to go into the gallery for seating accommodations. The subject was "The beauty of service." The speaker said in part:

"Men seem at times to have lost the desire to work for the common cause and that is because the world has at times seemed to lose its vision of a sacrificial Christ. It may not be given to many of you, young me n and young women, to become famous, but let it be truthfully said of you that you never shirked responsibility and that you were ready at all times to carry your share of the burdens of the world. Let a foreigner arriving in America ask for the greatest man and he is directed not to the millionaire but to Jacob Riis. Let him inquire for our greatest woman and we don't send him to the mansions, wherein wealth is found but to Hull House in Chicago where Jane Addams works. The life of service is the complete life."

FUNERAL FROM CHURCH.

The funeral of Victor Gustafson of Cranch street was held Sunday afternoon from the Swedish Congregational church, services being conducted by Rev. George W. Palmgren. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

ATLANTIC LOCALS.

Mrs. Sarah Butler of Atlantic street is spending several days this week with Mrs. J. H. Anderson of South Braintree, formerly of Atlantic.

Dr. Millard F. Baker of Walker street has his field ploughed for a garden on last Friday and would have planted peas this week if the cold weather hadn't come.

LONG SESSION QUITE LIKELY

When the City Council Gathers For Fourth Time

A regular meeting of City Council will be held this evening and while it is not known that there is anything that will create a long a session if anything can be judged by the last meeting this will also be a long one. There are quite a number of matters in the Council calendar and it is expected that President Bryant will refer them to special committees in accordance with the new rules. Mayor Stone last week requested the various department heads to forward their estimate of the sums needed by their department for the year and most of these have complied . Whether the Mayor will forward these estimates to the Council Monday night has not yet been decided. The School Committee usually one of the first departments to send in estimates has not done so as yet, as at the last regular meeting the Chairman was absent from the city.

AWNING BURNED.

The alarm from Box 24 at 10.14 Friday night was for a fire on the awning in front of the Ladies' store on Maple street. There was a high wind blowing at the time and it is thought that this caused the awning in swinging to come in contact with the gas lamp. A chemical stream extinguished the fire. The damage was slight.

CONANT STATUE.

The bronze statue of Roger Conant by Henry H. Kitson was unveiled Friday at the Art Museum at a reunion of the Conant family. ## Each Balkan State Leaves One Delegate In London

TROOPS BEFORE ADRIANOPLE

Declared to Be Most Efficient Ever Gathered Together and Confident of Capture of Fortress—Daneff Says Balkan Union Will Remain Alive and Intact

London, Feb. 3.—With the end of the armistice between Turkey and the allies but a few hours away, hope has not been completely abandoned that a resumption of hostilities may be averted. Each of the Balkan states has left one delegate here so as to be prepared in the eventuality that the peace conference be resumed.

General Savoff, the Bulgarian commander, has informed the Bulgarian delegation that the Bulgarian and Servian forces before Adrianople are the most efficient ever gathered together. He says every detail for an assault and the capture of the city has been perfected. The men are so sanguine of success, he says, that they are betting on which army will be the first to plant its flag on the walls.

The Balkan delegates say a renewal of the war would permit the allies to absorb European Turkey entirely, including Constantinople. Dr. Daneff, the leading Bulgarian delegate, said:

"We leave England, having shown the world that the Balkan union is not a bluff, but a real and important factor in Near Eastern politics. We intend that our alliance shall remain alive and intact.

"The feature of the situation which stands out is the unity of the great powers and the fact that none of them desires to take advantage of the troublous state of affairs in the Near East. I am convinced that all the powers desire peace. The allies will always regard the collective note of the powers to Turkey as their Magna Charta.

"The immediate future rests with rifles and guns. Probably the contest will be short and sharp. Probably there is in store for the world a bigger surprise than the earlier events of the war provided.

"I have noticed in some quarters a disposition to accuse us of not exhibiting a conciliatory spirit. Is the public aware that in deference to the powers the allies on three separate occasions deferred the final act? To remain longer would be undignified and ridiculous."

It is asserted here that the Montenegrins and the Greeks have received semi-official assurances that Russia and France will support their retention of the Turkish fortresses of Scutari and Janina if they succeed in capturing them while the Bulgarians are taking Adrianople.

King Nicholas of Montenegro, on the one side, and Crown Prince Constantine of Greece, on the other, say they will lose their lives or take the Turkish fortresses by storm.

Pittsburg, Feb. 3.—After a general advance in wages had been announced, 40,000 employes of the various plants of the United States Steel Corporation have been directed to quit work in a general strike ordered by the American Federation of Labor.

The strike order was signed by Frank Morrison, secretary of the federation, immediately after the officers of the steel corporation refused to meet striking employes of the American Steel and Wire company at Braddock and Rankin, where there was a fatal riot a few days ago, and where 2000 men have been out for some time.

The labor leaders say they will carry their fight to every steel plant in the country. The American Federation of Labor will start this week a nation wide campaign for funds to continue the strike.

ENGLAND WORRYING OVER KING'S HEALTH

Court Circles Are Reported to Be Gravely Concerned

London, Feb. 3.—Despite official denials by his doctors and Private Secretary Ponsonby, King George's health is causing no little concern in court circles. It is learned that the king has been suffering from a severe cold ever since his Christmas illness, when Queen Mary forced him to take to his bed.

King George, because of his frail constitution, is very susceptible to weather changes, and the sudden shifts of temperature of the present season have affected him adversely. He has always suffered from a chest weakness.

The stoop of the king's shoulders has increased perceptibly and he has lost considerable weight.

Keliher Ready to Tell About Onetime Police Official

SAVE $50 000 FOR PROTECTION

District Attorney to Ask Federal Authorities For Permission to Bring "Big Bill" From State Prison to Testify—Convicted Gambler Says Walsh Hid Large Sums of Money

New York, Feb. 3.—If the federal authorities permit, it is reported, "Big Bill" Keliher is to be brought here from the state prison in Boston, where he is serving an eighteen year sentence, to testify against a onetime police official who, he says, aided him and Martin Walsh, receiving $50,000 of their loot in return for his services. If possible Keliher may also be taken before the Curran committee to testify to the relations alleged to have existed between this police official and the fake faro band Keliher headed.

The man in question is alleged to have received $200 a night for guarding the band and their fake faro bank. He is now retired on a pension and is engaged in a business, to establish which Wash is alleged to have given him $25,000.

District Attorney Whitman is reported to have said he will ask the federal authorities for permission to have Keliher brought here. John L. Bates, receiver of the National City Bank of Cambridge, Mass, from which George W. Coleman, the youthful cashier who was one of Keliher and Walsh's victims, stole $350,000, has volunteered to aid Whitman in every possible way. Bates has learned from Keliher where Walsh hid his share of the loot. The money has been attached by Bates, who has begun suit to recover it.

Friends of Walsh have been quoted as saying the man had not died, as reported, at the Sonoma apartment house here, but that a body had been sent to Boston and buried as Walsh's. Keliher says this is wrong, and Walsh dropped dead from heart disease in a quarrel in which he had threatened a prominent Republican politician. The politician, a physician and the man who was a police lieutenant at that time are all involved in Keliher's story.

Keliher says his operations in this city alone netted him fully $500,000, but that lawyers and others got it away from him. In 1909 Walsh, he says, had at least $240,000, of which $150,000 had been taken from Coleman. Part of this, according to Keliher, was sent to a wealthy relative of Walsh's in Erie, Pa., who put it in a safe deposit box. More of Walsh's share of the loot was put in a safe deposit vault, Keliher says, in a branch office of a trust company in Boston.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

STUFFED BAKED POTATOES.

BAKING potatoes is one of the most wholesome ways of preparing them. There are many methods of serving them thus besides the simple, old fashioned one of bringing them to the table baked an naturel.

Among these methods may be mentioned the following:

Potatoes With Onions.

Stuffed Potatoes With Onion.—Take large, even sized potatoes and for each potato allow a tablespoonful of stale grated cheese, a teaspoonful of minced cold bacon and a teaspoonful each of chopped onion, parsley and drippings.

Scrub the potatoes and bake them until they are soft inside. Cut one end off each and scoop out the interior with a small spoon. Mash this smoothly and mix it with the cheese, meat, parsley, onion, warmed drippings and seasoning. Refill the skins with this. Reheat until hot through and serve at once.

Spanish Potatoes.—Scrub and bake six medium sized potatoes, cut open lengthwise and take out the inside. Mash the potatoes with grated onion, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of butter and a cupful of cream or milk. Replace the mashed potato, dividing equally among the twelve shells. Place a slice of bacon on the top of each and brown in the oven.

Potatoes and Ham.

Stuffed Potatoes With Ham and Peppers.—Peel good sized potatoes and hollow out a space in each, leaving a canoe or boat shaped piece. Fill the hollows with a mixture of chopped ham, chopped hard boiled egg and chopped green peppers, seasoning to taste with salt, pepper and melted butter. Bake until the potatoes are done.

Stuffed Potatoes With Eggs.—Take six potatoes; put them in the oven without peeling. When done take out the insides, but preserve the shape of the potatoes. Put the insides of the potatoes in a basin and add one and a half ounces of butter and salt and pepper to taste. Mix together until light and add two well beaten whites of eggs and stir all together. Fill the potato skins with the paste, first rolling each piece in beaten yolk of egg; then bake in the oven. Serve as soon as the tops are well browned or in from ten to fifteen minutes.

DAINTIES WITH RAISINS.

RAISINS are a veritable boon to the housewife in winter, when there is not much choice in the matter of fruits. They are very nutritious, containing as they do from 50 to 75 per cent of grape and other fruit sugars. Raisins are really dried grapes.

To stone the raisins pour boiling water over them and let it stand for five or ten minutes. Then drain off the water and rub each raisin between the thumb and forefinger until the seeds slip out. Select for use fruit that is absolutely fresh.

An Emergency Jam.

Nuts and raisins make a nice dessert. Raisins in puddings add to their food value as well as make them more palatable.

Raisin Jam.—When other preserves are exhausted this may be made for an emergency. It tastes like grape jam. Wash and seed a pound of large sweet raisins. Put the fruit on the fire in a saucepan with a cup of water half a pound of sugar and half a grated nutmeg. Cook until thick. Then remove from the fire and serve cold.

Stewed Raisins.—Wash the raisins carefully through several waters, put in a saucepan, cover with cold water place on the fire and boil for about ten minutes. Flavor by adding a little lemon rind. Mix a little cornstarch with water and thicken by adding this to the stewed fruit. Use a teaspoonful of cornstarch to each half pound of raisins.

Brown Raisin Bread.—Take a cupful each of cornmeal, ryemeal and whole wheat flour. Sift these together, then add one teaspoonful salt and two tea spoonfuls melted butter. Add to these one and three-quarter cupfuls water three-quarters of a cupful of molasses two and a half teaspoonfuls of soda and one cupful raisins. Steam for four hours.

A Winter Pie.

Raisin Pie.—Take a cupful and a half of flour, a tablespoonful of lard and one of sugar, a half teaspoonful of salt and a half pound of seeded raisins.

Wash the raisins. Put on with one cupful cold water. As soon as they boil add a little cornstarch, wet with cold water. Add the sugar and remove from fire at once, but keep warm to fill into the pie.

Sift the flour and salt into a bowl, add the lard and rub in very lightly. Add enough cold water to hold together. Roll out half the dough on a floured board. Line pie dish with the rolled dough and fill it with the raisins. Roll out the remainder of the dough. Wet the edges with cold water and cover. Brush the top with milk. Bake twenty minutes in hot oven.

REORGANIZATION OF ARMY IS ORDERED

Three Infantry and One Cavalry Division Provided For

Washington, Feb. 3.—Provision for the tactical organization of the United States army into three infantry divisions and one cavalry division is made in an order issued by direction of President Taft and made public last night by Secretary of War Stimson.

This plan of reorganization, which becomes effective Feb. 15, includes the entire mobile army within the continental limits of the United States.

Hitherto there has been no tactical army organization higher than a regiment. There have been no brigades or divisions existing in time of peace. Upon the outbreak of war, when an army was needed, it was necessary to create such an army under all the stress and hurry and excitement of such an occasion.

Hobos Throw Out How

New Orleans, Feb. 3.—James E. How, the self-styled millionaire "hobo leader," was repudiated as a leader by the hoboes in convention here. How tried to inject Socialism into the proceedings and was told to get out.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

A STITCH IN TIME

Quincy People Should not Neglect Their Kidneys.

No kidney ailment is unimportant. Don't overlook the slightest backache or urinary irregularity. Nature may be warning you of approaching dropsy, gravel or Bright's disease. Kidney disease is seldom fatal if treated in time, but neglect may pave the way. Don't neglect a lame or aching back another day. Don't ignore dizzy spells, irregular or discolored urine, headaches, weariness or depression. If you feel you need kidney help begin using the reliable, time-tried remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills. For 50 years, Doan's have been found effective. Endorsed by Quincy people.

W. Charlesworth, 33 Cranch St., Quincy, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly an effective kidney medicine. They fixed me up in good shape some years ago and since then, I have had no kidney trouble."

"When Your Back is Lame—Remember the Name." Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Charlesworth had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

At this moment General Haverill himself approached. He asked Colonel Ellingham about the latter's sister, Gertrude, and then immediately entered into such a serious conversation with Colonel West that the other young people discreetly withdrew.

"We have reason to expect a movement on the part of the enemy," began General Haverill, "and we must be able to read their signal dispatches if possible. Captain Lockwood of our own signal corps will report to you here with officers and men. In the meantime Colonel West"— Here the general took from his wallet a newspaper clipping and a letter envelope, which latter he hastily returned to his pocket. It bore the address of Colonel West in Mrs. Haverill's handwriting, being, in fact, the one which had inclosed the missive from Washington received the day before and shown to Frank, who in his eagerness had dropped the envelope on the rustic table on the veranda, where the general had chanced upon it and reserved it without comment. Now he continued: "Perhaps you can help me in explaining a personal matter about which I am curious. Here is a paragraph copied in the Richmond Dispatch from a South Carolina paper which interests us both."

He handed the clipping to Kerchival, who read:

"Captain Edward Thornton of the Confederate secret service has been assigned to duty in the Shenandoah valley. Our gallant captain still bears upon his face the mark of his meeting in 1861 with Lieutenant (now Colonel) Kerchival West, who is also to serve in the valley with Sheridan's army. Another meeting of these two men would be one of the strange coincidences of the war, as they were at one time, if, indeed, they are not at present, interested in the same beautiful woman. The scandal connected with the name of the lovely wife of a northern officer at the opening of the war was of course overshadowed by the attack on Fort Sumter, but many Charlestonians will remember it. The lady in defense of whose good name Captain Thornton fought the duel is the wife of General Haverill, who will be Colonel West's immediate commander."

"General," exclaimed Kerchival, reddening and rising to his feet, "this is an abominable outrage. But I think we both know its source, and it is fortunate indeed that I have the opportunity to nail it now that the matter is raked up in such a scurrilous way. The article states the truth in one particular, however—I did strike Mr. Thornton after a personal quarrel."

"And what provoked the blow? Evidently there is something in this affair that has been concealed from me, yet which I have a right to know. I need hardly say that I refuse to accept the statement of this scandalous paragraph. At the same time I feel justified in asking you to tell me the whole story frankly as man to man."

"You are right, general. I shall be more than glad to tell you all—as soon as we can be by ourselves for half an hour without interruption."

The latter proviso was occasioned by the abrupt appearance of Sergeant Barket, the body servant of General Buckthorn ever since the Mexican war.

"Colonel West," he sputtered, "Adjutant Rollins wishes to report a prisoner just captured."

"For the present, colonel," said General Haverill, rising, "we both have our duties. We will meet tonight after taps, when the camp is at rest."

"Worse, sor—a petticoat."

Kerchival bowed assent and saluted.

"Now, then, Barket, I thought you were to wait at Buckton's ford with a fresh horse in readiness to watch for the return or tidings of Lieutenant Bedloe's party and bring the first news posthaste."

"Right ye are, colonel. Sure, wasn't I there? And that's where we captured the prisoner."

"Guerilla or spy?"

"Worse, sor—a petticoat."

"What?" cried Kerchival, aghast.

"Yis, sor. I towld the boys yer honor wouldn't thank us for the catchin' of her. She's a lady and a purty one."

"Well, tell Major Williams for me to let her take the oath and everything else she wants, with the United States government's apology and an order for a new bonnet."

"The young lady to take the oath, is it? An' she's afther saying she'll see us d——d first."

"Did she say that?"

"Well, she didn't use thim exact words, but she looked at me to that effect. Oh, she's a spanker, sor. She was ridin' lickety split through the woods on a gray horse, and we had the divil's own chase before we caught up wid her by the bend in Oak run. And at the same toime we saw the gray back of a Confederate officer skedaddling off on the other side of the creek."

"H'm! Have you found any dispatches on the prisoner?"

"Colonel West, I'm a bachelor, an' I don't be afther pretendin' to any familiarity with the jayography of women's clothes. What could we b'ys do, yer honor?"

"Sure enough. Tell them to send the prisoner here, Barket, and then you hurry back to your post at Buckton's ford and stay there until you get news of Bedloe."

The Irish trooper departed, and the fair prisoner was brought in by a corporal and two soldiers.

Dressed in a dark green riding habit and hat with sweeping plume, after the approved antebellum fashion of the fox hunting Dianas of that section of Virginia, she looked indeed a dashing type of self reliant womanhood. Kerchival could not see her face because, ere he had time to look up from his map, she had proudly turned her back to him.

"Will you be seated, madam?" said the young colonel, who had risen from the bench and now stood by rather bashfully, wondering how he should proceed.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Colonel and the Lady.

THE lady drew herself up disdainfully, folded her arms and remained silent. Kerchival shrugged his shoulders and made a new start.

"I am very sorry, madam, but circumstances are such that I can take but one course consistently with my duty. You have been captured within the lines of this army, and there is reason to believe that you are the bearer of important despatches. If so, I must ask you to give them up. I trust that you will give me whatever you have at once. It would be of no advantage to you and extremely awkward for me if you were to compel me to adopt the extreme—the very disagreeable—course for both of us of having you—well, I hesitate to use the word as a seeming threat, madam, but the military law compels that you shall be"—

"Searched? Is that what you mean? If you dare, Colonel West!"

Here the prisoner turned upon him quickly enough, disclosing a flushed face and flashing eyes, framed in rebellious flair of warm bronze color. One look at this splendid spirited picture and Kerchival West sprang forward with arms extended, exclaiming:

"Gertrude, my dear Gertrude! Is it possible!"

"Not 'dear Gertrude' to you—my jailer!" she retorted, drawing back.

So this was their meeting! "Enemies" still, and drawn up in line of battle.

"Pardon me, Miss Ellingham," said Kerchival humbly. "I feel that I am your prisoner now."

"We must both face the painful realities of war," she answered coldly.

"Believe me, Gertrude, my position is more—more regrettable than yours."

"Do not forget your paramount duty as a military officer on my account," she pursued tauntingly.

"Will you please hand me whatever dispatches or other papers may be in your possession?"

"And if I don't choose to? You can threaten me with force, I suppose. I am only a woman, going about my business—my military duty, if you please—in defense of my home. I—I did not know, Colonel West"—here her voice wavered a little, but she recovered herself instantly—"that you were coming in this threatening attitude. Well, I am in your power. Order in the guard! Call up your whole regiment! Beat the long roll and then see if I give up!"

"Hello! What's all this?" demanded a gruff voice as the imposing form of General Buckthorn loomed up behind them. "Is this your prisoner, Colonel West?"

"Yes, general," stammered Kerchival, who nevertheless felt relieved at the sight of his senior commander.

"Jenny's father!" gasped Gertrude. "I wonder if he will recognize me?"

"Fine young woman, eh?" said the old general in a hoarse whisper, at the same time giving Kerchival a sly punch in the ribs. Then he turned and bowed gallantly, removing his hat, but as suddenly resumed his air of military sternness, held out his hand to Kerchival and demanded, "Let us see the dispatches."

"She refuses to give them up," answered the young officer.

"Oh, she does, does she? My dear young lady, kindly let us have those dispatches without any further palaverling."

"I have no dispatches," replied Gertrude spiritedly, "and I would not give them to you if I had."

"What! You defy my authority? We'll see about that. Colonel West, search the prisoner!"

Kerchival stood aghast.

"General Buckthorn, I cannot obey that order."

"You—you refuse to obey my order?"

"That is the woman I love, sir," whispered Kerchival aside to the general.

"Oho! Why didn't you say so? I'll have to take matters in my own hands then."

"Don't do that, General Buckthorn!" said the young officer, facing him with determination.

"Blast your eyes, sir! I'd court martial you if you did let me search her. But duty is duty. Consider yourself sworn at, sir. Young woman, Colonel West here has sacrificed his life to protect you."

"His life?" cried Gertrude.

"I must have him shot for insubordination in front of the enemy," continued the general, giving Kerchival a huge wink.

"Oh, sir! General Buckthorn! I have told the truth. I have no dispatches. I haven't a scrap of paper about me, except"—

"Ah, 'except.' Except what?"

"Only this letter," taking it from the bosom of her riding habit. "Here it is. Upon my honor, it is all I have—truly, it is."

General Buckthorn took the letter and glanced it over quizzically.

"Washington—ho, ho! I see—Colonel Kerchival West"—

"Don't read it aloud, general, please," interrupted Gertrude.

"Very well, I won't." He read on, aside, mumbling to himself—"had heard you say, as I did'—m—m—'you loved him with your whole heart'—this is important—'Signed, Constance Hav'—H'm—'my dear Gertrude.' Are you 'my dear Gertrude,' Miss Gertrude Ellingham?"

"Colonel West, search the prisoner!"

"Yes, general."

"Thunder and Mars! Then this is your house, and my daughter Jenny is your guest?"

"Why, of course! Jenny is here all right."

"Well, of all the dangerous little rebels!" Here the general chucked her under the chin before turning to Kerchival to say: "Colonel West, I leave this suspicious young person in your charge. If she attempts to escape or is unruly in any way read this letter. Here, take it—but not till then."

"Oh, let me have it back. It's mine," pleaded Gertrude.

"I shall obey orders," said Kerchival, putting the letter into his pocket.

CASE COMING UP AGAIN

Crystal Gazer's Twenty-Five-Year Sentence Is Quickly Set Aside

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Mrs. Louisa Lindoff, crystal gazer, convicted of poisoning her son, Arthur, was sentenced to 25 years' imprisonment. A moment later the sentence was set aside and further action deferred until Feb. 21.

The sudden turn in the fortunes of the seeress was due to the fact that her attorney was late in reaching court and was not present when sentence was pronounced.

Mrs. Lindoff was suspected of poisoning other members of her family. She claimed in her defense that presence of arsenic in a corpse was not conclusive evidence of murder because that drug was used in many medicines and also in some embalming fluids.

Superior Court. Norfolk, ss.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court next to be holden at Dedham within and for the county of Norfolk. Respectfully libels and represents Harriet R. Morgan of Quincy in said county that she was lawfully married to Ellsworth E. Morgan now of Jersey City in the state of New Jersey at Rutland, Vermont on the sixth day of October A. D. 1885, thereafterwards your libellant and the said Ellsworth E. Morgan lived together as husband and wife in this Commonwealth to wit, at Boston, Massachusetts and in Quincy, Mass. for twelve years in the latter place, that your libellant has always been faithful to her marriage vows and obligations but the said Ellsworth E. Morgan being wholly regardless of the same at said Quincy on or about the eighth day of June A. D. 1909, without just cause wilfully and utterly deserted your libellant which desertion has continued from such time to the date thereof, being more than three consecutive years next prior to the filing of this libel and that the said Ellsworth E. Morgan being of sufficient ability to do so, grossly, wantonly and cruelly refuses and neglects to provide suitable maintenance and support for your libellant.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Ellsworth E. Morgan and that the libellee may be decreed to pay such alimony to your libellant as to this Honorable Court may seem just and reasonable and that the real and personal estate of the said Ellsworth E. Morgan may be attached to the value of one thousand dollars in order to secure a suitable support and maintenance to your libellant.

Dated the fifteenth day of January A. D. 1913.

HARRIET R. MORGAN.

ALPHONSUS 24, QUINCY A. A. 23.

In the best game of this season in the N. E. A. A. A. U. League, the St. Alphonsus team defeated the Quincy A. A. on the former's floor, 24 to 23.

The game was played on a marble court. While chasing the ball, Boyle struck a pillar, and in following up the ball slipped. A player of the other team was following closely and he also slipped. Both his knees struck Boyle just under the ribs. Boyle was forced to retire.

The ball was constantly in the crowd throughout the game and the rooters were wild in their excitement. Quincy played without the services of Kelly and Joe O'Rourke, which was a big handicap until the local lineup was changed.

After three minutes of play in the second half, the score was 22 to 4 in favor of St. Alphonsus. "Dan" Duggan was then sent to the back position and Hebert shifted to a forward. Under this change Quincy was able to hold their opponent to one basket while Dan Duggan caged eight. The last shot he made rolled around the rim and did everything but drop through the net.

One of the baskets credited to the winners was made after the whistle had blown. Referee Kelliher, while about to make a decision, was suddenly surrounded by the rooters and it is possible that this may have influenced him to make a ruling in favor of St. Alphonsus.

The second game went to the Quincy A. A. second. The first half closed with the St. Alphonsus leading 9 to 6. It jumped to 11 when they scored again. The local boys then got together. With but a very short time to play "Mil" Chapman secured a basket, "Bute" threw a foul which was called on them for rough house playing even though the crowd did yell like mad trying to rattle him and shortly after he caged the winning basket.

The summaries:

ACCEPTANCE OF RESIGNATION

Of Rev. A. M. Thompson by United Presbyterian Church

Rev. A. M. Thompson, the dean of Quincy Ministers and pastor of the United Presbyterian church, has received official acceptance of his resignation. He acquainted the members of the church with his desire the latter part of December. The principal reason for resigning is that the salary is too small.

Rev. Mr. Thompson pays a high tribute to the willing workers of his parish saying that they constitute a fine congregation, are energetic and willing to do all they can for the church and its pastor. Mrs. Thompson stated that she regretted that circumstances necessitated the resignation since she had deep affection for the church members.

Rev. Mr. Thompson has been in Quincy six years. During that time he has seen 28 churches vacated. The rumor current to the effect that he was to leave the ministry was denied this morning.

He will continue to be a minister of the New England Presbytery. A meeting of that association will not be held until April, at which time his resignation will be confirmed. While he has the privilege of calling a special session it is doubtful that he will do so because of the great inconvenience it would cause ministers living a great distance from Boston.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

was no record of a vote on the awarding of the contract as it was not done under a yea and nay vote.

The figures submitted he said were, as follows:

F. F. Green, of Quincy, $86.
Spargo Print, of Quincy, $91.50.
Murray & Emery of Boston, $128.
Tudor Print of Boston, $180.

Mr. Barbour said that no bid was filed with the board by the George W. Prescott Co., but he understood that a verbal bid of $115 was made to the chairman.

MR. MACKAY'S STATEMENT.

John D. Mackay, a member of the board, said: "While personally I voted to have the work awarded to the lowest bidder, and while I regret that the work did not remain in Quincy, a majority of the board decided otherwise after careful consideration of the matter, and I feel that their decision must be respected, having been arrived at carefully and conscientiously."

SURPRISE PARTY.

The many friends of Miss Margaret Read of Squantum street, tendered her a surprise party on Saturday evening in honor of her 18th birthday, which was on Friday. The young people met with Miss Marion Newcomb of Webster street and went to Miss Read's home.

FIRE LOSS OF $1,500,000

Blaze of Unknown Origin Sweeps Savannah Wharves and Warehouses

Savannah, Ga., Feb. 3.—Damage estimated at $1,500,000 resulted from a fire of unknown origin which swept the Savannah river front for two blocks, destroying the wharves of the Merchant and Miners' Transportation company, several warehouses and business structures and the Planters' rice mill.

The blaze was discovered in a shed on the western end of the wharves and it required a fight of four hours to get it under control. There was no loss of life, but several firemen were slightly injured.

STRIKE IS DELAYED

No Definite Date Yet Set by Aroostook Trainmen to Enforce Demands

Bangor, Me., Feb. 3.—No definite action as to the time for the proposed strike of conductors and trainmen on the Bangor and Aroostook railroad to become effective was taken at a meeting of a joint committee, representing the railroad employes. Engineers and firemen on the road have been on strike two weeks in support of their demands for a wage advance.

It had been expected that the conductors and trainmen would quit work today, but pending final action regarding the time for beginning the strike the men will remain at work, although they have already voted in favor of striking.

TERM IS TOO LIGHT FOR STATE PRISON

Horse Thief Is Resentenced to House of Correction

Pittsfield, Mass., Feb. 3.—John Williams, convicted of stealing a team of horses, was sent to the right jail by Judge Crosby in a special session of the superior court. After being sentenced to from two to three years in the state prison by Judge Irwin, Williams was taken to Charlestown, and was refused admission by Warden Bridges on the grounds that he could not legally be admitted.

Williams' feelings were not hurt by this treatment, but the deputy sheriff who had brought him down from Pittsfield reported back to the court. Then it was found that there had been an error on the part of the court, for the statutes provide that state prison sentences cannot be less than two and one-half years, and the proper place for Williams was the house of correction.

In order to straighten things out it was necessary for Crosby to revoke the state prison sentence and resentence him to the house of correction for two years.

FIVE THOUSAND OUT

Many Outsiders Join Ranks of Boston Union Garment Makers

Boston, Feb. 3.—The strike of the 4000 men and 1000 women makers of men's ready made garments has begun. At about thirty shops the bosses told the operatives to finish up the work in hand and leave Saturday afternoon, pending today's developments, and at a number of other shops the workers stopped when they finished the jobs they were on.

At the United Garment Workers' union headquarters, groups of men and women brought numbers of men and women not members of the union, but who immediately joined.

SACRIFICED OWN LIFE

Motorman Who Stuck to Post to Save Passengers Is Dead

Lowell, Mass., Feb. 3.—William J. Taylor of this city, the motorman who stuck to his post when the brake of his car refused to respond as it dashed down Beach street, died from his injuries.

Taylor might have jumped to save his own life, but fearing the car would overturn at the end of the hill, he stayed at his post and saved the lives of many passengers, of whom only a few received injuries.

WOMEN KILLED IN FIRE PANIC

Trampled to Death In New York East Side Theatre

Causes Rush of Four Hundred People For Exits—Pile on Top of One Another as They Try to Descend Steep Steps—Eleven Persons Found to Require Hospital Treatment

New York, Feb. 3.—A boy's cry of "fire," and the smoke from an exploded reel of motion picture film in an East Side theatre last night resulted in a panic among the 400 spectators and a rush for the exits, in which two women were killed and eleven other persons so badly injured that they had to be sent to hospitals.

The panic occurred in one of the densely populated sections of the East Side, and the thousands who poured into East Houston street in front of the theatre and rushed to the doors added to the confusion and to the number of injured.

The two women were trampled to death in the crush of the crowd to reach the doors. The operator of the machine soon extinguished the burning film and the flames did not spread beyond the fireproof cage in which he worked.

With the exception of one rear exit door, the only way of escape from the theatre was through the main vestibule, and it was here in a narrow space that most of the injured were found. The two women who were killed were picked up in the main section of the theatre where they had been trampled.

Steep steps led from the sidewalk to the theatre entrance and down these hundreds fell while those behind piled on top. Children became separated from their parents and frantic searchers for friends or relatives mingled with the panic-stricken audience.

In the panic clothes were torn from the backs of their wearers and the police gathered up a great pile of hats, coats, shoes, eye glasses and even pocketbooks. A few rings and watches were among the salvage taken to a police station for identification.

At the time the panic started fully 100 persons were waiting in the vestibule to gain admission to the theatre, and as the doors burst open from within these people were caught in the rush to reach the street.

Fire Commissioner Johnson arrived at the theatre soon after it had been cleared. In a statement he declared that there were 800 similar theatres in Greater New York where conditions were equally perilous.

He said, however, that the theatre owners had complied with every ordinance governing such places. In addition to the usual Sunday night throng, the management had advertised an added spectacular attraction, which caused an unusually large crowd to gather.

MILLS GETS SEVEN YEARS

Misapplied $50,000 of Bank's Funds While Serving as President

New York, Feb. 3.—For misapplying $50,000 of the funds of the Audubon National bank in a deal to obtain control of the institution, David B. Mills, the bank's former president, was sentenced to serve seven years in the federal prison at Atlanta.

A witness testified that Mills told him to get notes signed by "washerwomen and newsboys." On these notes the witness, through Mills' influence, was able to borrow $50,000 from the bank, and the cash was used to purchase a controlling interest in the stock.

QUINCY WINS.

Cambridge Y. M. C. A. did not prove to be so very hard to beat at hte local "gym" Saturday night for the first team won by the score of 27 to 19; while the second team had a walk-over the score being 44 to 23.

The local first team played like five strangers, all during the first half of their game. There was no passing at all, while every man shot for the basket regardless of the distance to be covered. If the Cambridge players had been able to shoot at all the score would have been a large one in their favor. During the intermission a "heart to heart" talk was held and the results were plainly evident in the increased team work and consequently the scoring was much greater. The first half ended 12 to 11 while the second half was 15 to 8 in Quincy's favor. Rich excelled in shooting getting a total of 6 baskets. Much of his success was due to the clever passing of Parker and Jenkins in the last period. Trask was evidently a "marked" man, his work at Cambridge being remembered, "Henry" was not able to get more than three feet away from his opponent at any time during the game and he certainly earned his three goals. "Jenks" did his scoring in the first half, getting three nice shots.

"Al" Thomas played about the whole game for the second team, scoring 25 points out of a total of 44. The local team never looked worse than it did during the first half of its game, for it was outpassed, outplayed and everything but "outluched." The guards were dead and Dineen and Price, the two forwards did not seem to know what the basket looked like. On the Cambridge team Whiting, who also played center, was the whole show, for he scored 16 out of his team's total of 23 points.

Both games were comparatively free from fouls, 15 being called in the first game and 11 during the second teams game.

The summary:

| Quincy Y.M.C.A. | | Cambridge Y. M.C.A. |

—It appears to be the opinion of many people that the unusually warm weather this winter has resulted in much saving of coal. As matter of fact, those who give any attention to the subject know that the high temperature has not served to reduce very materially the amount of coal consumed. There has been some saving no doubt, but not nearly so much as would be generally supposed. The warm weather has, however, undoubtedly reduced the suffering which would have followed such a severe winter as that of last year.—Banker and Tradesman.

COMMITTEE FORCED TO RETREAT BEFORE McANARNEY HEAVY FIRE

City Solicitor Rather Routed Hobbs and His Cohorts on Legal Questions

At the Hearing on the Street Laying-Out Bill by Mayor Stone

(Special to the Ledger)

Attorney General Swift has been called to render a decision on the constitutionality of the bill, dealing with the acceptance of streets which came into the legislature on a petition of Mayor Eugene R. Stone.

It seems that the committee on cities which is made up of a number of former city officials, and presided over by Clarence H. Hobbs, of Worcester, who was city solicitor of that city some ten years ago, was all primed for the petition of Mayor Stone and awaited the presentation of the case with fight in their eyes. Hardly had the bill been called, than members of the committee began to tell the speakers who favored the bill that it was unconstitutional, had been tried out by former legislatures and found wanting, and that the right of the legislature to interfere was extremely questionable.

City Solicitor McAnarney, however, was also armed with a bunch of legal facts and before he got through citing law to the committee and telling them a few things that they should have known, that committee decided that perhaps after all they did not know all there was to be known about the case.

It was told to them that towns already have a right to govern the width and grades of proposed streets before they are layed out and if constitutional for towns, it seems ridiculous that it is unconstitutional for cities. In Quincy, the committee was informed, many land company's had gone ahead with laying out new streets, etc., in the exploitation of some developement schemes. The streets had been made considerably narrower than the ordinances require. After the property had been improved, the residents have com eto the city to have the streets accepted

COUNCIL VOTES TO LET CHARTER REVISION GO TO THE PEOPLE

Committee Appointed to Oppose Dock Commission Bill

New Rules Lead to Some Little Confusion and Long Session

The first real tryout of the new rules of the City Council came Monday night and considering that they are perhaps not fully understood or comprehended by the members they worked well. There seemed to be a misunderstanding in the matter of the appointment of committees. Some of the members had the idea that all matters were to be considered by a committee of the whole unless the Council by vote referred the matters to a special committee as provided by Rule 23. Under Rule 7 which provides that all committees shall be named by the President unless otherwise ordered by the Council.

When the new rules were under consideration President Bryant stated that his idea was to refer matters to special committees and in doing so he should endeavor to select the strongest men for the matters to be referred. He also stated that if the council saw fit when an order was offered that the council could vote to referr to a special committee and itself name the committee.

It was this misunderstanding that caused all the trouble which arose when the President announced that he would refer all street matters that had come over from last year and those introduced this year to a special committee naming that committee.

The debate of the evening came on the resolve of Councilman Cunningham for the Mayor, City Solicitor and President of the council to appear before the legislature and oppose the bill to amend the City Charter.

Every member was present.

A venire was received for the drawing of traverse jurors and the following were drawn by the Mayor, City Clerk and Councilman Griffin, Richard H. Joyce, Martin W. Cunniff, Peter A. Barry, Michael Curry, John J. McDevitt and John D. Smith.

The Chief of police reported favorable on the application of Frank Giglot for a job wagon license and it was granted.

The Chief reported on the application of John H. Gillis for a license to keep and sell gasoline and a hearing was ordered for Feb. 17.

The mayor forwarded a communication from the Board of Health recommending that the salary of the school inspectors be increased from $100 to $200 a year. Laid on the table.

The City clerk and Tax Collector asked to be excused from attending Council meetings as their offices were open for business Monday evening. They were excused.

The Overseer of the Poor in a communication stated that Paul C. Madison was not entitled to Soldiers Relief from Quincy and the applicant was given leave to withdraw.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from Edward A. McEttrick, attorney for Alexander Norrie concerning a claim against the city. The attorney set forth that at the time the water company was under control of a private company, Mr. Norrie paid for for the extensions of the mains on Newcomb place the sum of $28 in order to connect with his house. Subsequent to the acts of 1891 Mr. Norrie permitted connection with his house to supply a neighbor. In 1912 this neighbor was notified by the Commissioner to make an independent connection with the water service. This was done but Mr. Norrie's plumbing was not left in proper condition. All that Mr. Norrie now asks is that his plumbing be restored to its former condition and that he be reimbursed for the extension of pipe now used as main, $28 without interest. Referred to the Executive.

The City Clerk called attention to the need of having the ordinances printed and an order appropriating $200 for codifying and printing the ordinances. Adopted.

The Auditor stated that notes and deeds should be countersigned by the City Auditor. Councilman Bailey offered an order amending the ordinances so as to provide that the auditor should countersign all notes and bonds. Ordered to a second reading.

The auditor called attention to the bill before the legislature relative to the appointment of a dock commission. These officers were exempt from giving bonds as other officers handling large sums were and that the auditor had no authority to examine books.

Councilmen Little, Richards, and Cunningham were appointed a committee to oppose the bill.

The Auditor forwarded a bill of A. H. Dunham of $29.32 for groceries furnished a small pox family in 1911. Councilman Bailey offered an order for payment of the bill which was adopted.

John A. Weeden and Patrick H. Bradley appointed constables and John Evans, Frank Crane and John A. Duggan as fence viewers, confirmed.

Appointment of Walter E. Piper as a member of the Board of Managers of the Adams Academy in place of Rupert F. Claflin resigned. Placed on file.

The Grand Army was granted the use of Council Chamber for Saturday evening, Feb. 22, for a patriotic lecture on Washington.

Petitions for lights on Hanna street and favoring the granting of a pool table license to Constant Hill were referred to the Executive.

A petition for a location for poles on Fayette street from the Electric Light Co. Hearing ordered for Feb. 17. Also a hearing at the same time on petition of the street railway for a location for poles on Sea street.

A petition was received from Squantum for the acceptance of Huckings avenue, Bellevue road and Dorchester street and hearing ordered for Feb. 17

A petition for more police protection in Wollaston Park was referred to the Executive.

A petition for refund of half cost of sidewalk on Upland road was referred to the Executive.

Applications for the apportionment of street betterment were granted.

The special committee on the petition to change the name of the postal station at Houghs Neck to "Seagirt" reported leave to withdraw. Report accepted.

Councilman Cunningham offered a resolution that the Mayor, City Solicitor and President of the Council appear before the legislature and oppose the bill to amend the City Charter.

President Bryant ruled the resolve

ANNUAL PARTY OF THE MOOSE

Splendid Gathering of Members and Friends at Music Hall

The first grand ball of the Quincy Lodge 413, Loyal Order of Moose, was held at Music hall Monday evening. The guest of the evening was Mayor Stone. There was a large attendance, visitors coming from surrounding ctites and towns including a delegation from the Brockton Lodge.

The hall was prettily decorated, Wilson's full orchestra being hidden behind a wall of potted plants. A concert program of six numbers, the final being the "Moose" song dedicated to the order by Hans Flath was well rendered. The moose head of the lodge was the centerpiece of a large wreath of pink carnations and galaxy leaves which was conspicuously set on the stage.

The grand march was formed about nine o'clock. Dictator Albert J. and Miss Irene Williams were the first couple. They were followed by Vice Dictator and Mrs. Joseph Halter, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Daley and about 75 others.

The march broke up in the opening waltz and until two o'clock dancing was enjoyed. Seven of the 22 numbers on the order were square dances and thoroughly enjoyed by the older members.

At 11.30 o'clock the line formed and all present marched in to the banquet hall where supper was served. Dancing was resumed after midnight.

Albert J. Williams was floor marshal and the assistant was Joseph Halter. James A. Daley was floor director and Frank W. Sampson assistant.

HOLDERS OF LIBERAL VIEWS ON RELIGIOUS MATTERS INVITED

To Meet and Form Wollaston Unitarian Society 25 Years Ago

Tracings of the Outcome of That Movement Since That Time

One of the most interesting events of the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Wollaston Unitarian society was the reading of its history by the clerk William H. Boynton.

A history of the Wollaston Unitarian Society from its organization January 31st, 1888 to January 31st 1913.

In October 1887 Rev. Daniel M. Wilson, pastor of the First Church of Quincy issued a circular calling a meeting of all persons in Wollaston who held liberal views on religious matters. The meeting was held in Boynton & Russell's Hall, October 23, 1887, was well attended and listened to addresses by Mr. Wilson and Rev. Christopher R. Eliot. At this meeting it was decided to hold religious services every Sunday evening and a Committee was appointed to have charge. Under the name of the Christian Liberal Church, services conducted by Mr. Wilson and others were held in the hall every Sunday until Jan. 1888 when the committee concluded to effect a legal organization of the society.

A meeting was held Jan. 31, 1888 and the Wollaston Unitarian Society was organized with these charter members:

Men's Club, Point Church, Make Good in Annual Event

CLOSING WITH TABLEAUX

The third annual entertainment of the Men's club of the Quincy Point church was held at Alpha hall, Monday evening and despite the inclement weather, every seat in the hall was occupied. The audience was not only large but thoroughly appreciative especially in the topical song and end men jokes, where they all caught the points at once and indicated the knowledge by laughter and applause.

The whole show was good from start to finish. Every number on the program was encored and some performers were recalled two or three times. This was especially true of Jack Johnston in Town Topics and Charles Moyle in the final end song. Where every one did so well it would be difficult to pick out any particular ones and say they did better than others. All showed the result of careful training and hard work under the direction of Henry W. French. The chorus was strong and had the right swing to it.

At the conclusion of the minstrel part there were several interesting tableaux, closing with that of Columbia. The spot light operator was not equal to the emergency and some lit-

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

It is doubtful if the public has been much edified by "Big Bill's" latest recital, but of course he wants to get square with some one and he thinks his unsupported word will do the trick. Not much to rely on to say the least.

Encourage home industry, do all your trading in Quincy, that is up to a certain point according to some doctrines.

Tomorrow is Ash Wednesday, the beginning of the lenten season. No doubt many people will plan many sacrifices for the next 40 days.

February has made good its claim that it must always be reckoned with before the winter calendar is rolled up.

The prosecutor who says he does not expect to convict the millionaire charged with assault on his wife in the South, when that wife denies the assault should be asked to be less reckless in the way he spends the people's money.

It is amusing to watch a large public assembly when called upon to sing "The Star Spangled Banner," or any other popular patriotic song and see how many people "mumble their words."

A Newspaper headline announces the "real function of the money trust," possibly many may be mistaken but it has naturally been accepted that the trust did not let a great many people into that secret.

Around about every summer resort a whole bunch of college amateurs can be found each season playing base ball or some other game for pay. One sport writer suggests that colleges should not consider this as affecting amateur standing. Rather ingenous to say the least ,but no doubt the Olympic authorities would have a word to say as well as the college authorities. The Thorpe incident is not creditable to American Athletics.

BIG BILL SQUEALS.

As a contribution of the current literature, "Big Bill" Kelliher's latest serial will hardly be given a place in the "institute" and so far as its gaining him a niche in the hall of fame or producing new interest in his case, it seems rather a lame effort. "Big Bill" made the mistake of announcing that he is feeling fine, eating well, happy and that his incarceration has done him good. No doubt his present abode for the past few months has been productive of a world of good to the community. As to his remaining there, until the end of his term or even longer his own desires and expressions should have first hand weight in that matter. The gentleman enjoys the vacation. It is doing him good according to his own tale. Let him stay there. He is all right in that particular spot. On the whole his tale is not so very new or marvelous. It is an old story. He got stung after stinging so many ,and now he opens up. He should consider that unsupported his testimony would have little weight, and even if his tale was absolutely true, it would be all the same, unless corroborated by some one else. The gentleman's previous reputation was not such that there would be an unbiding faith in his honesty of purpose at the present time. On the whole it does not appear as if there was a great deal to go into hysterics over the tale as told. Literature would not have lost a thing by having it returned with thanks. The public would be just as well off if it had not been treated to this late screech in the effort to keep in the lime light.

THE COAL PRICE.

The drop in the price of coal announced Saturday came as a welcoming relief to coal consumers. But there is a possibility that the relief may be only temporary. The price of coal in Quincy is of course governed by the price in Boston. When the drop came in Boston, Quincy dealers fell into line and met the situation. A Boston dealer is quoted as saying however that there is a possibility that the drop may not be of long duration and there is a possibility of a rise to the same price which prevailed last week or the price to the consumer may even soar higher. All depends upon the weather.

Thus far this winter the weather man has been very favorable in his dispensations. It is to be hoped that the good prevailing will continue. At the same time, it is difficult to understand why any cold snap at this time should make any material difference in the price of coal. The Boston coal dealers must certainly have a supply sufficient on hand to tide them over for the balance of the winter. In that case, any advance at this time hardly appears reasonable. There does not seem to be any justification for such a course. In the meantime the poor patient public is waiting anxiously to hear some note of relief or at least resemblance of activity from the much tooted investigation into this situation which was so loudly proclaimed just prior to the state election.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX.

An income tax is soon to become one of the provisions of the United States constitution. The vote of Wyoming, ratifying the change, the 16th to the constitution since the original draft, made 36 states who favor such legislation and it is now up to congress to enact a law to levy the tax. The new law it is believed will supersede the corporation tax and provide for an assessment on all incomes of $5000 and over. Some thought of making the minimum $4000 was under consideration, but it is believed that the larger sum will finally be adopted.

The excise tax framed by the congress of 1912, which was modified to meet the conditions of the supreme court will be dropped and an entirely new law, with some of the old provisions included, will be framed. The Supreme court held that a former income tax, of some years ago was unconstitutional. It is assumed that the new law will be framed so that it will be acceptable from a constitutional point of view to the supreme court.

It is reckoned that this will produce a revenue of $100,000,000 annually to the government. The fixing of an income tax by constitutional amendment precludes the possiblity of tax dodging. Immense estates which hitherto have enjoyed immunity will under this new law be forced to meet their proportion of the expenses of the government. It seems a good measure that immense wealth should pay its proportionate part of the government expenses as certainly the persons of small means at the present time have to come across with their full portion and really contribute more to the government in proportion than those people who count their possessions in the six figures.

THE LAW ON THE SCHOOLS

Member of the School Board Quotes Relative to the Same

IN DEFENSE OF THEIR ACTION

A member of the School Board requests the Daily Ledger to publish the law governing the letting of school halls and the fact that the meetings for which the Women's club wanted the High School hall were not to be open to the general public and were to be the regular meetings of the club, not meetings for "educational purposes,"—facts which the Board took pains to ascertain before voting on the application.

The law reads as follows:

"The school committee of any city or town which accepts the provisions of this act shall grant the temporary use of rooms or halls in school buildings upon such terms and conditions and for such public or educational purposes as the said school committee may deem wise: provided however that such use shall not in any way interfere or be inconsistent with the use of the halls for school purposes and that such use shall not be granted during the regular sessions of the school unless the means of egress have been approved for such purpose by an inspector of public buildings of the district police."

The members of the school committee are not hostile or indifferent toward the interests of the Quincy Women's Club. In fact the wives of most of them are members of the club. It was merely a question of interpreting the law and observing it.

tle inconvenience was experienced from this at the start, but it was soon remedied. The closing tableau was brought to an abrupt close by the breaking of the curtain cord. While these little mishaps were unavoidable they did not detract one whit from the pleasure with which the audience enjoyed the show.

The singing was good in all departments. The quartet gave a good account of itself and Miss Ethel F. Raymond sang very sweetly in her numbers. The violin solos by B. E. Meurk were very pleasing and the ballads of J. W. McLeod were especially good.

Charlie Moyle made more of his opportunities as an end man than any of the others. He was on the move all the time and put much of the snap and ginger into the show from start to finish. One of the hits of the evening came when Jack Johnston was singing his topical song. An immense box was handed to him over the foot lights. On the card was the message, "While every one else is getting it, this is to remember the baby." Out of the packing case he unearthed a baby's milk bottle already for use.

The program, chorus and other features of the show, with those who took part were as follows:

AUXILIARIES CONFEDERATES

And Allies Are Women With Hearts of Gold

AND ALWAYS HELPFUL

"Auxiliary — Confederate — Ally!" what a world of practical comfort and cheer go with those words and the people for whom they stand. What should we do without them? We are reminded every day that strong movements of moral, philanthropic and religious forces come by way of hearty alliances.

Particularly helpful and stimulating are those bands of devoted women who in their quiet, persevering ways place themselves at strategic points and watch out with keen interest, wise counsel, generous motives and friendly help for the success of needed enterprises—making things go as only loving mothers, wives and sisters can do—

"These women with hearts of gold
Of whose nobleness the half has Never yet been told."

The Quincy Young Men's Christian Association has for years been greatly helped by the Woman's Auxiliary. In a recent print of a convention of Auxiliaries where a paper was read entitled, "The Auxiliary from Year to Year" most suggestive hints of the work of forty auxiliaries in this state were given and we are ready to endorse the statement that "In most cases they are actuated purely by their love of humanity and are assisting in the betterment of the world by reason of their love of God and righteousness.

Our Quincy Y. M. C. A. has for years had the unfailing support and cooperation of a noble group of women now numbering over a hundred who in the midst of numberless cares and calls upon their time, thought, money and sympathy have given themselves to the welfare of young men and boys of this city. While men forget, become listless, tired, discouraged, faithless, women remember, plan, do persevere and hold their faith. Oh that men and boys knew the range and depth of interest which the women take in their welfare and safety. We wonder sometimes how many of these devoted ones are working and planning in the presence of some dear mystic form who sometime left his playfellows and was laid aside to sleep, too tired to play any longer here. Many springs of service reach down deep into hearts of sacred memories. Let the careless owners of young folks stop once in a while and inquire why these good people are anxious and concerned about other peoples' treasures. 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto,' etc.

One of the latest and substantial tokens of interest in our Y. M. C. A. is the re-decorating of the parlor; its fine cheery, homey appointments for those far from home as well as for local callers must be much appreciated. Remember your many benefactoresses and thank them by careful and happy use of their thoughtful bounty.

Many thanks to our auxiliaries, confederates and allies. Long live their resourcefulness and consecration to the community's well-being. They shall be held in loving remembrance.

A. M. Au.

SIXTH WEEK OF STRIKE

Struggle For Leadership Among New York Garment Workers

New York, Feb. 4.—An apparent struggle for leadership between higher officers of the United Garment Workers' union, a feeling of discontent among the thousands of workers because of the few strike benefits paid and the continued bargainings between union representatives and manufacturers over terms of settlement, marked the opening of the sixth week of the clothing strike.

There are approximately 110,000 men, women and girls idle on account of the strike.

FIGHTING FOR SECOND PLACE

POLLS CLOSE FEB. 18

After the enormous vote of yesterday when over 45,000 votes were cast, a quiet day was expected in the Washington Inauguration contest of the Daily Ledger, but now there is a big fight on for second place and over 3,200 votes were cast today.

The largest gain was made by Sturgis H. Hunt, the Y. M. C. A. candidate, who added 1,705. But A. R. MacKay is close upon his heels and made a gain of an even thousand.

Mr. Kessler is still in the running, and today added 250. He hopes to finish number seven or better.

Mr. Bowditch adds 200 today and has passed another thousand mark, having a total of 14,045.

Miss Morrissett has now over 7,000 to her credit having added 40 today. Smaller gains were made by other candidate.

BOOM FOR MACKAY.

A coupon dance for the benefit of Candidate MacKay was held last evening at New Colonial hall, which is reported in another column.

The following verses entitled "Bound for the Capital City" have also been forwarded for publication:

A trip to Washington is being planned,
By the Ledger of our city grand,
For the person who can get
The largest vote in our set.

For we know that A. R. MacKay
Is aspiring for Inaugural day.
We trust his friends will strive
To continue to keep his cause alive.

The Heptasophs and T. R. & S.
Are working hard for nothing less.
In Ward Six where he lives,
One and all their support gives.

So send in your coupons, one and all
In large numbers as well as small;
Then our candidate will have won
The Ledger's trip to Washington.

"CIVIL WAR" BACKED BY MRS. PANKHURST

Quite Likes the Idea of Militant Acts by Suffragettes

London, Feb. 4.—Vigorously denouncing what she called the hypocrisy of Lloyd-George, chancellor of the exchequer, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst addressed a huge mass meeting in the London pavilion.

"I quite like the idea," she said, referring to the mutilation of the Birmingham golf links by suffragettes. She said the Birmingham militants were the most ingenious in England. She also commended the glass smashing in the Tower and said the "civil war" would be kept up by the "bashibazoukesses."

NEILL'S TERM EXPIRES

Senate Deadlock Leaves Commissioner of Labor's Office Vacant

Washington, Feb. 4.—Because of the deadlock in the senate over President Taft's nominations, Charles P. Neill, who has been United States commissioner of labor since Feb. 1, 1905, is now out of office.

There is, so far as can be learned, no opposition to his reappointment on the ground of unfitness, nor is there any other candidate in the field. Moreover, it is understood the Democrats of the senate are willing to make an exception in his case and confirm his nomination, but the Republicans who are sticking out for confirmation of all the president's nominations or none will not agree to this.

NOT A CRIMINAL MONOPOLY

Government Loses Suit Against United Shoe Machinery Company

Washington, Feb. 4.—The United Shoe Machinery company, the so-called "shoe machinery trust," is not an unlawful monopoly under the Sherman anti-trust law. Its officers will escape criminal prosecution.

Such was in effect the verdict of the supreme court. Applying the "rule of reason" of the Standard Oil and tobacco cases, the court affirmed the decree of Federal Judge Putnam of Boston, dismissing the criminal indictments brought against five officers of the company for alleged violation of the Sherman law.

The court, however, did not pass upon the legality of the system by which the company leases machines on terms that no "independent" machinery be used.

The government will prosecute officials of the company under the one remaining indictment, it was announced at the department of justice. That indictment charges monopoly and unfair competitive methods and is declared by officers to be the most important and strongest of the indictments returned against the company. It is this which involves the so-called "tying" clauses.

BOOM FOR BRO. MACKAY

Dance Given by Heptasophs and Other Friends

A good time and a boom for Bro. A. R. MacKay were the objects last night of the Heptasophs and other friends of the candidate for the Washington trip in the Daily Ledger contest. Now it is evident where Mr. MacKay gets his great strength in this contest, for the New Colonial hall was crowded with friends. Not only were Granite conclave, Improved Order Heptasophs, and employees of the Tubular Rivet and Stud Co., well represented with ladies, but several members of out-of-town conclaves were present, crowding the hall.

It was a merry dancing party, the hours being from 8 to 12. Joseph Mullen was floor director. Provost's orchestra of five pieces furnished the music. It was a financial as well as a social success.

CITY COUNCIL

out of order and Councilman Cunningham as promptly appealed from the ruling of the chair.

President Bryant stated that the Council might pass a resolve that the bill ought not to pass but could not instruct the Mayor, City Solicitor, and President to oppose. If the resolve should pass he would present the resolve to the legislative committee and then he should favor the bill. The resolve went further than it had a right to.

Councilman Cunningham said that it was simply a request and not instruction.

By a vote of 7 yes and 15 the ruling of the President was not sustained.

The question then came on the resolve. Councilman Whiton opposed It was desirous that there should be an amendment to the charter .

Councilman Sandberg moved an amendment to strike out the parties named, and insert the name of Councilman Cunningham.

Councilman Richards was called to the chair.

Councilman Cunningham thought the motion not a fair one and hoped the Council would withdraw it, as it was probably done as a joke.

Councilman Sandberg said it was no joke. He believed as the parties named favored amending the charter that someone should be sent who did not favor it.

Councilman Little said that he opposed the ruling of the President but he did not think that the gentleman named should be obliged to go.

The motion of Councilman Sandberg was then rejected.

President Bryant said that if passed he should go and present the resolution, and then speak for the proposed amendment. He believed it right that the citizens should have their say as to whether the charter should be amended. Any man is a coward who is not willing to have this question go to a referendum vote. He referred to the gentleman from Ward Six who introduced the order as a skilled parliamentarian but that his attempt to railroad this through was pernicious legislation. Who is better able to decide this question than the people themselves. If they do not want it they will kill it.

Councilman Bailey thought it was up to the people. We would make a laughing stock of ourselves if we say we do not want the people to vote on this question as we are afraid we will lose our jobs.

Councilman Corcoran said that he was in favor of the resolution.

Councilman Whiton said that the bill proposed a reduction in the members of the Council and a two year term for the Mayor. He believed in the proposition and would go even further and make the Council only seven members. He would also like to strike off the question of party designation.

Councilman Sandberg asked a number of questions and referred to the City of Newport where the Council had been increased from 35 to 197, and where it was working fine. He also spoke of towns where the voters met in a body and transacted business.

Councilman Cunningham denied any attempt to railroad the resolution through. Is there any demand for this? Are the people rising up and demanding it? I certainly do not find it so. There was never a charter produced but someone found fault with it. It seemed to him that the Council was able enough to decide this question.

President Bryant said that his position was that the Council had no right to oppose something that the people have a right to vote for. Give the people a chance to settle this question.

Councilman Sandberg asked what the objection was to a large Council and President Bryant replied: "Too much talk for one thing."

Councilman Little said the trouble was that the people did not give enough consideration to the questions on the ballot. He would however vote to give the people a chance to have their say.

Councilman Duffy asked if the referendum was attached and City Solicitor replied "absolutely." Continuing the City Solicitor said that when the bill came up before the committee he should propose an amendment to provide the question should be submitted in three propositions.

First. Are you in favor of amending the charter?

Second. Are you in favor of adopting the proposed change with party designation eliminated?

Third. Are you in favor of the proposed amendment with party designation?

He was going to do what he could for the passage of the bill.

Council Cunningham said, people would not be interested enough in the propositions to study it.

President Bryant then asked how many had asked him to oppose it.

Councilman Cunningham replied several dozen more than those who had asked for it.

The resolution was defeated on a rising vote of 7 yes and 13 no.

Councilman Cunningham offered an order amending the Fire ordinance so as to provide for One Assistant Engineer at a salary of $1200, instead of three assistant engineers. Laid on the table.

Councilman Whiton offered a resolve requesting the City Solicitor to look up the question of the bounds and lines of Washington street as to how the city had lost the original lines of the street as laid out to 66 feet. Adopted.

Councilman Ross offered a resolve authorizing the Mayor to petition the legislature for the enactment of a law relative to the promotion of call fireman to the permanent force. The bill provides that call firemen not over 45 years of age who have served continuously for not less than five years and who are certified by the City Physician to be physically qualified shall be eligible to the permanent force without further examination, provided, that persons on the civil service list eligible for appointment as permanent firemen shall be given the preference.

The President started to refer the resolution to a special committee, when the questinon about the rules was raised and President Bryant said that the rules said committees "May" be appointed.

The question was settled for the time being by the resolve being laid on the table. Later it was taken from the table and rejected on a rising vote of 9 yes and 12 no.

The two matters in the calendar relative to fire and police were referred to the special committee appointed at the last meeting.

Councilman Richards offered an order for $3,500 for rebuilding Liberty street from Centre street to the new freight yard, referred to a special committee.

Councilman Richards offered an order for $4,000 to rebuild Vernon street to the new freight yard, referred to a special committee.

Councilman Bailey offered an order accepting Chapter 334 of the Acts of 1912, relative to the regulating the use of buildings for the protection of the public health and morals. Adopted.

Councilman Little offered an order for lights on Buckley street. Referred to the Executive.

Councilman Duffy offered an order for lights on Washington street between Beacon street and Germain avenue. Referred to Executive.

Councilman Devaney offered an order changing the street lights on Washington street between Temple street and the bridge to cluster lights To Executive.

Councilman Griffin offered a resolve for the better lighting of the approach to the Quincy depot, and requesting the Mayor to take the matter up with the railroad officials. Adopted.

Councilman Little offered an order for $100 for a retaining wall and guard rail on Kent street opposite the residence of G. M. Miller. To Executive.

Councilman Griffin offered an order requesting the Mayor to have the City Engineer prepare a map of the city showing the location of all fire and police boxes. To Executive.

Councilman Bailey offered an order changing the betterment assessment on certain streets and reassessing them to another party. Referred to the City Solicitor as to the legality of the order.

Councilman Ross offered an order for $3500 to build a street in front of the new Adams school building. Referred to a special committee.

At this point President Bryant referred all street matters that came over from last year and all street matters introduced this year to a special committee consisting of Councilmen Bailey, Whiton, Richards, Sandberg, Ericson, Little, Cunningham, Hadlock, Johnson, Griffin, Gilliatt.

The order granting the Electric Light Co., a location for poles was read and placed in the calendar.

The order granting the Gas Co. a location for mains was read and passed under suspension of the rules.

Adjourned at 10.33 until Feb. 17.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN

superintendent, a most fortunate selection for we cannot over-estimate the powerful influence in the society of our Sunday School built up by the efforts and the ability of Mr. Page and his faithful corps of teachers. These words of praise entered on the Church records on our 10th anniversary for the Sunday School organization mean even more today than they did then as Mr. Page is still our superintendent.

July 11, 1888 the ladies met and formed a Ladies Aid Society for charitable work and for aiding the Church Society, socially and financially with Mrs. Wm. P. Chase as its first president. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon the members of this organization for the work they have performed. With untiring zeal and fidelity they have labored constantly, never refusing any call for assistance, and it can be truthfully said that whatever success this church has attained, has been due in a great measure to their efforts.

One of their first works was the holding of a fair in the hall in Oct. 1888 at which $500.00 was realized to be used as a building fund.

Services were conducted by various clergymen until Rev. Wm. S. Key was installed as pastor of the society Jan. 15 ,1889.

On Jan. 28, 1889 the first Children's Floral Service was held in the hall and 7 children Avery Lowell Bennett, Wallace Cherrington Bennett, Evelyn Cummings, Ray Faunce Weston, Louis Bailey Weston, Wm. Ellis Weston ,Maria Waterhouse were christened.

In Sept. 1889 a lot of land costing $400.00 was purchased at the corner of Beale and Farrington streets, with funds furnished by the Ladies' Aid Society. In Jan. 1890 a committee of 9 was appointed to see what could be done towards building a church on the lot of land already purchased and in June, the following Building Committee was appointed with authority to build:—Dr. Geo. B. Rice, Chas. T. Baker, Chandler W. Smith, Walter M. Hatch, Walter J. Wellington, Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, Mrs. Chas. T. Baker, Mrs. E. F. Taylor, Mrs. Wm. S. Key.

Boynton & Russell's hall having been let for other purposes, services were held in the Wollaston school house from Sept. 1890 to June 1891. This school stood at the corner of Beale street and Winthrop avenue, but was torn down in the fall of 1912.

The corner stone of this church was laid Sept. 18, 1890 and among the contents of the copper box placed beneath the stone were the following:

Abstract of the history of the Wollaston Unitarian Society.

List of members.

Copy of the By-laws.

List of officers and members of the Ladies Aid Society.

Year Book for 1890 of the American Unitarian Association.

Copy of the Christian Register.

Copy of the "Sounding Board."

A copy of the constitutions of the Knights of Honor, the Woodbine Lodge Knights and Ladies of Honor, the John Adams Council Royal Arcanum and the Wollaston Lodge Royal Arcanum.

Half cent 1828.

Copper cent 1814.

Gold quarter dollar 1854.

Current coins of all denominations, a copy of the life of President Garfield written by Rev. Wm. S. Key. The service was conducted by the pastor assisted by Rev. Daniel M. Wilson, Rev. Geo. H. Hosmer, Rev. John F. Moors.

There was singing by the choir composed of Mrs. Geo. B. Rice, Mrs. Frank A. Page, Mr. Chandler W. Smith and Dr. Geo. B Rice, and a poem written for the occasion by Mrs Mary A. Ela was read by the pastor.

The church was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies June 15, 1891, addresses being made by Rev. Grindall Reynolds, Rev. Daniel M. Wilson, Rev. Edward A. Horton, Rev. Robert Collyer, Rev. B. F. Eaton, Rev. Mr. Fowler, Richard C. Humphreys and Wm. H. Baldwin.

The total cost of the building was $10,598.00. This amount was raised by subscriptions from members of the society $2,515.00. Subscriptions form individual Unit. Q. and B. $610. Subscriptions from individuals not Unitarians $180. Subscriptions from Norfolk Conference $529. Subscriptions from Unitarian churches $360. Fair and entertainment $1,242. Mortgage $5,000.

In Oct. 1891 a pipe organ was placed in the church at a cost of $1,500. which was raised by subscriptions and various entertainments.

In Jan. 1893 Rev. Wm. S. Key severed his connection with the society and in Oct. 1893 Rev. James E. Bagley was installed as its pastor.

On April 9, 1896 the Woman's Alliance, a branch of the National Alliance of Unitarian and other Liberal Christian Women was formed in this church and in June 1898 the Ladies Aid Society and the Woman's Alliance combined under the name of the Ladies Aid Alliance and the ladies have continued to deserve the praise bestowed on them and spread upon the records of the church fifteen years ago.

On March 1, 1899 occurred the death of Mr. Bagley who had been our Pastor for over five years and it became necessary to find a new minister. A number of candidates having been heard a special parish meeting was held in November to see what action should be taken to settle a pastor over the society and it was voted to hear more candidates. In December an adjourned meeting was held and it was unanimously voted to extend a call to Rev. Frank W. Pratt of Walpole, N. H., to become our pastor. Mr. Pratt accepted, and was installed January 2 ,1900.

The Unitarian Club was organized by Mr. Pratt October 23, 1900, its purpose being to stimulate an active interest in questions of the public welfare and to promote general intelligence and pleasant social relations. Frederick H. Bishop was its first president.

The Young People's Religious Union was organized Oct. 19, 1902, its object being to cultivate a devotional spirit, to help one another as far as possible in pure and noble living, and lend aid and support to the church. Fred M. Rollins was its first president.

At the Annual Parish Meeting Jan. 26, 1903 the question of making all seats free was presented and it was voted that for one year the seats be made free to all. The system of free seats is still in force.

The annual report of the treasurer Jan. 25, 1904 showed that the church mortgage had been reduced to $2,169.00.

Mr. Chas. T. Baker having served continuously for 16 years as clerk retired from the office and was given a vote of thanks for his faithful service. On Sunday Jan. 25, 1905 Mr. Pratt read his letter of resignation in which he stated that he had received an invitation from the Hopedale Memorial Church to become its pastor and after careful and serious consideration had accepted it, the resignation to take effect March 1st.

At the annual parish meeting the following Monday, Jan. 26, his resignation was accepted and in March Mr. and Mrs. Pratt were tendered a reception.

In April it was voted to extend a call to Rev. Ernest W. Hunt for one year. It was at this meeting that resolutions of appreciation of Mr. Pratt's services were presented and adopted. A copy suitably engrossed was later sent to Mr. Pratt. Services for the installation of Mr. Hunt were held Friday evening May 5, 1905.

The matter of a Parish House first appears in the church records of the meeting in January 1906 when it was voted that a committee be appointed by the chair to consider the matter and report at the next annual meeting. If this committee was appointed there is no record of any report being made. Mr. Hunt's year would be up May 1st a special meeting was called in April to act upon the continuance of Mr. Hunt as pastor for the ensuing year and after an informal discussion it was unanimously voted that the Wollaston Unitarian Society re-engage Mr. Hunt for one year.

At the annual parish meeting in January 1907 the following addition to the By-laws was presented and accepted:—"The Sunday School shall be placed under the direction of an executive Committee of three members, one to be elected annually by the Parish, one to be appointed annually by the parish committee and one, other than the superintendent, to be elected by the officers and teachers of the Sunday School."

The Church Mortgage by Jan. 1, 1907 had been reduced to $1,084.00.

On May 11, 1907 the Earnest Workers Lend-a-Hand Society was organized, its first president being Ednah Sanborn.

At the annual Parish meeting Jan. 27, 1908 the president read a letter from the pastor stating that it had come to his knowledge that his services were not acceptable to some and offered to vacate his position July 1, if the society saw fit. It was voted to lay the letter on the table for future action and in March a special parish meeting was held to see what action the Society would take regarding the continuance of present pastoral relations. After the matter had been discussed it was voted that the pastoral relations existing between Rev. Ernest W. Hunt and the Wollaston Unitarian Society be terminated.

The Parish Committee was authorized to supply the pulpit until such time as a new pastor could be chosen and at a meeting in November 1908 Rev. Carl G. Horst of West Upton, Mass., received the majority of the votes and it was unanimously voted to extend him a call to be pastor of this church.

Mr. Horst accepted but before moving here was taken with a severe illness and did not recover until Spring. He was installed March 14, 1909.

At the Annual Parish Meeting in January 1910 a revision of the Constitution and By-Laws was presented by the Committee and adopted by the Society.

The Unitarian Church-Helpers organized January 27, 1910 with Mrs. Wm. E. Rowe as their first President and in November the Junior Lend-a-Hand Club was organized with Priscilla White as its first President.

The question of a Parish House again coming up the chair was instructed to appoint a committee of six to investigate and report upon the feasibility of providing a Parish House. The chairman of the Parish House Committee reported at the Annual Parish Meeting January 23, 1911, that the matter had been discussed and called attention to Mr. Page's minority report favoring a Community House for the combined use of the four local churches. On hearing this report it was voted to appoint a large committee to study the subject and to confer with delegates from the three other churches in regard to building a Community House to be supported by the four churches and used by them jointly.

On Sunday May 28, 1911, at the close of the morning service of worship, this Society unanimously adopted resolutions expressing heartfelt approval of the action of President Taft in declaring for International Arbitration and especially for his timely efforts to promote a treaty of arbitration between our country and Great Britian. It was also voted to send copies of the Resolutions to the President, our Senators in Congress and to Earl Grey, Secretary of Foreign Affairs of Great Britian.

At the Annual Parish Meeting in January 1912 on the recommendation of the pastor it was voted to take up an annual collection on Easter Sunday for the good of the church. Mr. Theophilus King a well known citizen of Quincy celebrated his sixty-eighth birthday early in December by placing the sum of $15,000 with the Granite Trust Company for the benefit of the thirty churches in Quincy each church to receive annually on Mr. King's birthday the interest on $500. amounting to $25..

As there was no interest available in December Mr. King sent each church a check for $10.

The Sunday School started with forty-five members but the present membership is 145.

It may be of some interest to know that the expenditures of the Society for its first year were $689.00 and for its 25th year $2,998.00.

This Society has had for its Presidents:

Dr. George B. Rice 1888-1892.
Sylvester Brown, 1892-1894.
Walter E. Simmons, 1894-1901.
Frederick H. Bishop, 1901-1907.
Charles T. Baker, 1907-1908.
Dr. Chas. S. Adams, 1908-1913.

Eugene H. Sprague has just been elected for our new President.

The church mortgage was paid off in 1910.

Since this Society was organized three papers have been published in the interest of this Church, first the "Sounding Board" published monthly in the interests of both the Quincy and Wollaston Unitarian Churches was founded January 1889 by Rev. Daniel M. Wilson and edited by him and Rev. Wm. S. Key our first pastor.

This paper was succeeded by the "Angelus" founded by Rev. James E. Bagley in September 1894. On January 9, 1899 the Dial our present weekly Church Calendar was established by Rev. Frank W. Pratt.

Up to within a very short time no workable plan for a Community House had been formulated but it can now be stated that the original plan for the local churches to co-operate in erecting such a building has broadened into a Community affair. A fund has lately been started and indications are that a public building for the use of the entire community will be erected in the near future.

This history would not be complete to date without mentioning the record of Walter J. Wellington our Treasurer, he having served continuously for twenty-four years and having just been re-elected for another year. A record of faithful arduous and unselfish service for the good of the Society and only the older members can fully appreciate what he has done for the little church on the corner.

The hope is to secure legislation to regulate the sale of lands, stocks, bonds and other securities, with the exception of those listed by certain stock exchanges, and generally to prevent citizens of the state from investing their money in "wild cat" ventures.—Taunton Herald.

RICHER BY $10,000,000

Rockefeller Gets Large Slice of "Melon" Carved by Standard Oil

New York, Feb. 4.—John D. Rockefeller is $10,000,000 richer than he was twenty-four hours ago. Of a special dividend declared by the Standard Oil company of New Jersey this amount approximately represents his share of a total distribution of $39,332,000 on the company's capital stock at the rate of $40 a share.

This huge "melon" comes as a result, it was indicated in a statement given out by the company, of the supreme court's dissolution decree. This necessitated the payment to the parent company of vast sums owed to it by former subsidiaries.

SILVER JUBILEE OF REV. FR. COAN

Double Celebration May Be Held at St. John's Church

Although it is not generally known that Rev. Fr. Coan has been a priest for 25 years, the anniversary of this event will take place in June. It is thought that the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the church and the 25th anniversary of the pastor will be celebrated at the same time. If this is so, then the biggest Catholic event ever held in this city will occur during June. Rev. Fr. Coan was graduated from Boston College and Brighton Seminary. He was procurator at Brighton for a number of years, coming direct to Quincy from there.

MILD INTEREST IN THE HOUSE

Over Presidential Amendment of the Constitution

IT MAY FAIL ALTOGETHER

Inclination to Let It Lie Till Next Session—Few Democrats Express Any Opinion on Proposed Change—Baltimore Platform Pledges Them to One-Term Presidency

Washington, Feb. 4.—The house is in no hurry to pass the six-year presidential amendment to the federal constitution, which went through the senate on Saturday. The bill came from the north end of the Capitol yesterday and it was referred to the committee on the election of president, vice president and representatives in congress. William W. Rucker of Missouri is chairman of this committee. The ranking member is Michael F. Conry of New York.

The house, as a house, is not enthusiastic about the proposed amendment, and it has been viewing with but mild interest the prolonged debates in the senate over the same. The present disposition seems to be to let it lie till the next session, and then to take it up only if there seems to be a big enough public opinion outside of Washington urging its passage.

Such a course naturally would mean that the senate would have to vote on the amendment all over again, the action of Saturday becoming null and void on March 4 unless the house ratifies the bill and the president signs it. In this event it is felt by many here that the amendment would not be adopted so easily, as it was last week and might even fail altogether.

The house is in a curious position. It is Democratic and as Democrats the members are by the Baltimore convention pledged to a one-term presidency. Few, if any, prominent Democrats have expressed themselves either way on the Works amendment.

There is a disposition on the part of many to let it hang fire until Woodrow Wilson shows his hand. Should he split with the party leaders it is not at all unlikely that they would bring up the amendment as a criticism, just as some of the senate Republicans, though not all, have brought it up as a criticism of Roosevelt. It is also suggested that if the house touches the Works bill it will with it take up another amendment to change the constitution so as to provide for a three-year term for representatives. This would cut down the number of elections, should the six-year presidential term be adopted.

In order to consider the Works amendment it will probably be necessary for the rules committee to bring in a special rule. Representative Henry, chairman of the committee, is disposed to take his time about calling his committee together for this purpose.

GOVERNMENT CLAIM UPHELD

Evidence Concerning Patents Ruled Out of Cash Register Trust Trial

Cincinnati, Feb. 4.—Judge Hollister, in the United States district court, upheld the contention of government attorneys that evidence concerning patents held by the National Cash Register company could not be admitted in the trial of officers and employes of the company, charged with violation of the Sherman act.

This ruling will prevent the defendant company from attempting to prove it held patents on all cash registers known and on that account had exclusive right for the sale of registers.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

SYNOPSIS

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

Meanwhile a disturbance down the road had attracted the attention of the group. They now saw that it was caused by the approach of a squad of men bringing along a prisoner in disarranged Confederate uniform and who evidently had not been captured without putting up a desperate resistance.

"It's Thornton, by"— was Kerchival's astounded exclamation.

"Then the little witch has been communicating with the enemy, after all," said General Buckthorn.

"I don't deny that," replied Gertrude calmly. "They are not my enemy. But I wish to say that when I went across the lines I did not know that the Confederate officer I was to meet would be Captain Thornton."

"Miss Ellingham," said Kerchival, "If you will give me your parole of honor until next we meet you may be excused now."

"You have my word. I am your prisoner," she replied, turning to cast one scornful glance upon the glowering Thornton as she entered the house.

"Now we shall probably find the dispatches we have been looking for, general," said Kerchival.

Two of the guard held Thornton's arms, none too gently, while the corporal threw open his coat and began a minute search. He found first a paper, which he handed to Kerchival, who gave it to his general.

"The corporal began a minute search."

"General Rosser will rejoin General Early with all the cavalry in his command," read the old warrior eagerly.

"A portrait of Mrs. Haverill!" muttered the young officer with a start. He motioned the corporal to retire and, taking his place, asked Thornton in a low voice, "How did this portrait come into your possession?"

"That is my affair, not yours."

"Anything else, colonel?" called General Buckthorn, who had seated himself on the garden bench to pore over the captured dispatch.

"Nothing," answered Kerchival, putting the miniature carefully away in his breast pocket.

"Curse you, you'll give that back to me yet," hissed Thornton, "and we have an old score to settle before I'm through. Don't think you are going to escape me so easily as this!"

"Corporal, take away your prisoner," was Kerchival's only reply.

"Just as I thought," said General Buckthorn, reading. "The enemy has a big movement on foot. Listen to this: 'Watch for signal from Three Top mountain.'"

"We are still in hopes that we may be able to read that signal ourselves," said Kerchival.

"Yes, I know. It is pretty near time for Barket to be back with some tidings of the expedition. Be on your guard here. I will speak with General Haverill and then ride over to General Wright's headquarters. Keep us informed."

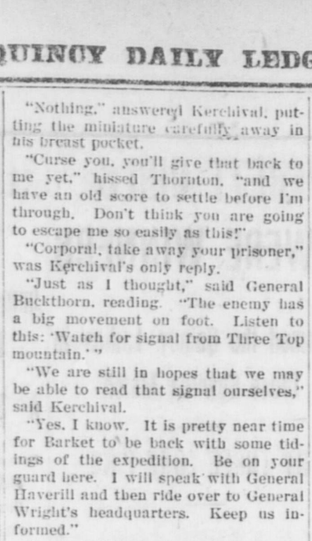

It was twilight—the soft, lingering, caressing twilight of that idyllic valley clime—when next the anxious heart of Kerchival West was thrilled with the sight of Gertrude.

"You are still on guard, Colonel West?" she said, but her tone had something of the old delicious, friendly intimacy in it. "I am giving you no end of trouble."

"I like it, if you don't mind, Gertrude," he replied, somewhat languishingly for a stern jailer. "I am posted here, you know. The signalmen will report to me at this spot—may be along any minute. We are watching for signals from the mountain."

"Your men might not have caught me this morning if I had had Jack, my own pet horse. But I lent him to Brother Robert for a cavalry mount, and the enemy captured him at Winchester."

"If he is in our cavalry ill get him back for you, Gertrude. I'll give one of my own horses to the government or I'll buy him outright at any price and bring him back to you. Anything that is mine, dear Gertrude, you know"—

"Oh, thank you, my dear Kerchival I could almost"—

"Almost confess that—that you don't hate me?" he cried joyously, grasping her hand. "Oh, Gertrude, I have dreamed of a meeting like this. You are silent?"

"Kerchival," she began, with pathetic half yielding—"oh, is this your whole regiment coming up?"

"It's the signalmen. Don't go, I command you!"

"I must go now, but I'll be back if you insist. I am your prisoner. Only don't read that letter for the world."

Before the signalmen reached the house Corporal Dunn came hurrying ahead of them to announce that his prisoner, Captain Thornton, had escaped.

"He had a knife hidden in his boot sir, and he slashed two of the guard and got away while my back was turned for a minute. He's like a mad dog sir."

A flash of fire on the dusky mountaintop was the "call" or opening of the enemy's long awaited communication. It brought Captain Lockwood up precipitately.

While they were watching the signals through their glasses General Haverill arrived, accompanied by two staff officers.

"Can you make anything of it, captain?" he asked.

"Nothing, general, until we get the key," was the reply.

"It should be here, if Lieutenant Bedloe has succeeded."

A shot rang out from the direction of the gate—followed by a cry of "Halt! Who goes there?"

"Pass on!" called the sentinel.

"He didn't give the countersign," said Kerchival. "Must be news from Lieutenant Bedloe."

"Here's the papers," panted Barket, running up, covered with dust and with one arm limp.

Captain Lockwood took the code book he brought and hurried up the elevation back of the house.

"What of Lieutenant Bedloe, sergeant?"

"Badly wounded, sor, an' in the hands of the inimy. But he fit off the whole gang until we came up an' got the papers."

"And Captain Heartsease?"

"Shot down at his side, sor. May be dead—I dunno. But please don't say anything to Miss Jenny yet. She'll found out soon enough. Och! Me arm is hurted. Sure, I forgot the sentry entirely, but he didn't forget me."

"12—22—11!" a signalman on the knoll called, reading the torch wigwagging on the distant mountain top.

CHAPTER XV.

"It's Only a Battle!"

"COLONEL WEST," said the general, "we must get Lieutenant Bedloe in exchange at any sacrifice if he is still alive. Let's see—why, there is Colonel Robert Ellingham, our prisoner. We might offer him in exchange if he would go."

"Surely! Bob will go in a minute; I know he will. I will find him and ride to the front with him myself, general."

"At once, then! Can you follow the dispatch, Captain Lockwood?"

"11—22—1—12!" shouted the signalman.

"'General Longstreet is coming!'"

"Longstreet! I feared that."

"1—21—37"

"'With 18,000 men.'"

"Longstreet with his corps!"

"2—22—11—1—12—1."

"'We will crush Sheridan's army.'"

"Aha!" cried General Haverill, stirred to deadly energy. "Now, men, signal that dispatch up the valley to our own station. Tell them to send couriers and catch Sheridan with it at Front Royal. They must catch him, so that he can hasten back with the cavalry. Major Burton, order our horses. We will ride to General Wright's headquarters at once."

General Haverill, while awaiting the horses, watched Captain Lockwood and his men lighting pine wood torches attached to long poles to flash their signals up the valley. Another minute and Barket returned with Robert Ellingham, the two supporting between them Kerchival West, white faced and with his coat thrown open, a crimson stain on his shirt front.

"There, Bob, I'll be all right now," he was murmuring faintly. "It's only the loss of blood that upset me. I got a scratch of the knife, that's all."

"Go for a surgeon, somebody," said Colonel Ellingham as they helped Kerchival to the seat. "The fellow has knifed him. But they've got the wretch!"

Corporal Dunn and his guard dragged in Edward Thornton for the second time that day.

"We were leaving the house together," explained Ellingham, "when this wild beast sprang out upon us from the bushes."

"This is murder, not war!" exclaimed General Haverill, turning to Thornton, who, in his shirt sleeves, torn and dishevled, looked a fearsome picture of diabolical malice. "If you have killed him"—

"Oh, do what you like with me. My account is settled," retorted Thornton, watching with an evil smile as Ellingham handed to General Haverill a wallet and a miniature case, saying:

"I took these from Kerchival's breast pocket when he fell."

"My wife's portrait!" muttered the general, with an involuntary gesture of despair.

"You recognize the precious keepsake, general?" sneered Thornton. "So, you see, if I have killed him, your honor will be buried in the same grave."

Gertrude Ellingham ran out from the house. She had come to bid her brother Robert goodby. She saw him

"I love you! I have loved you all the time!"

now in the lurid glare of the pine knots, bending over the prostrate form of the wounded Union officer.

"Robert!" she cried. "I heard them calling for a surgeon. Who is hurt? You are safe, aren't you—ah, Kerchival!" With a scream she fell on her knees by his side, uttering wild, tender words as she stroked the dark hair from his pallid forehead.

"Oh, Kerchival, dear, I never meant those bitter words I said to you. Forget them and forgive me, won't you? Do you hear me? I love you! I have loved you all the time!"

General Haverill heard no more. He did not look around as Thornton was hustled away in irons, but sprang into his saddle and dashed off down the black road after the staff officers, who at his own impatient order had preceded him.

Certificates for subscriptions will be issued up to that hour, and Daily Ledgers with coupons may be obtained as long as they last, at the Ledger office.

The prize winners in the contest will be announced as soon after Feb. 18 as possible, probably in the Daily Ledger of Feb. 20, giving the winner of the first prize over a week to make arrangements to attend the Inauguration at Washington.

DATES TO REMEMBER

Feb. 8—Last day of coupon.
Feb. 18—Polls close.
Feb. 20—Prize winners.
Feb. 28—On to Washington.
Mar. 4—Inauguration of Woodrow Wilson as President.

It has been decided by the Contest Editor to give third and fourth prizes in the Washington Inauguration contest, and possibly other prizes. The first four today are Fred D. Williams, Sturgis H. Hunt, A. R. MacKay and Mrs. Emma Marnock. Next in line is Galen Bowditch, who is still hopeful that "the committee" may send him to Washington.

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

MAUDE OUSTED FROM QUARTERS

Must Find a Place in the Board of Health Stable in Future

"Municipal Maude" the horse that has done service in the Health department for several years has changed her abode from the Water Department stables at South Quincy to the Health Department stable near the Poor Farm, and thereby hangs the tale.

Maude's driver has been the Sanitary Inspector Edward Lennon who resides at South Quincy and for his convenience Maude has been kept at the Water Department stable at South Quincy. It made it handy for Inspector Lennon, who mornings would drive Maude to City Hall. Commissioner Tupper of course made a charge against the Health department for board and lodging Maude and the bill was sent to the Health department. It has however never been paid for the reason that the Health department did not have the wherewith-all to pay the bill. Late last year the City Council was asked by the Board of Health for an appropriation for miscellaneous expenses in order that this and other bills might be liquidated. The Council however turned a deaf ear to the appeal and no appropriation was forthcoming.

Commissioner Tupper finding that he could get no money for Maude's board, decided that the Board of Health should look after her sustenance and therefore Saturday had her transferred to the Board of Health stable near the Poor Farm. Of course Inspector Lennon does not like the new arrangement and Saturday it is alleged after he was through using Maude he left her standing in front of City Hall for someone else to take to the new stable.

FAVORABLE CONSIDERATION

Looked For on the Bill Offered By John D. Mackay

(Special to the Ledger)

Representative Michael T. Sullivan was the only one to appear before the committee on judiciary in support of the petition of John D. Mackay, of Quincy, in which it asked that legislation be enacted whereby a judge of a lower court be not informed of any court record of a prisoner until trial until his case had been tried. It was explained by Rep. Sullivan, that Mr. Mackay had found it impossible to be present at the hearing and since the matter had already been once postponed, that Mr. Mackay had simply asked that Mr. Sullivan present the petition and request the committee to give it a thorough consideration.

LATE TRAIN ON FIRST TRIP

Well Patronized---Will Undoubtedly Be Popular

ELECTRIC CARS NEEDED

"When the midnight choo-choo leaves for Campello," and other popular ditties and song parodies filled the South Station with their resounding echoes as the first party of theatre patrons took advantage of the 12.03 train for suburban cities and towns on its first run, Monday night.

Four coaches were taxed when the "extry" puffed by the semaphore yard signals, and the passenger list gradually depleted as each station was reached. At Wollaston 22 belated patrons stepped onto the frosted platform and about the same number were looking for carriage accomodations at the Quincy station.

Late trolley cars were not on hand to carry the midnight crew to their fare points. A special meeting of the committee on transportation of the Board of Trade will be held this evening and arrangements will probably be made with the Bay State Street Railway Co., whereby commutters will be accomodated.

As the train rumbled out of the Quincy station a brakeman locked the rear car, extinguishing the lights and went forward to enjoy the companionship of about thirty more who were gripping tickets as far as Campello.

The possibilities of the additional service becoming very popular are bright.

INCOME TAX IS NOW CERTAINTY

Amendment of Constitution Is Voted by States

DELAWARE GETS FINAL HONOR

Wyoming, New Mexico and New Jersey In Hot Race to Be State Clinching Amendment—Four States In Opposition—Measure Will Bring Revenue of $100,000,000

Washington, Feb. 4.—The action of the legislature of Delaware in ratifying the income tax amendment to the constitution makes it part of the federal organic law.

There was a lively race for the honor of being the pivotal state in the ratification of the amendment. To make it effective, the approval of three-quarters of the states was required. Up to yesterday morning thirty-five states had acted favorably and it was expected New Mexico would have the honor of "clinching" the amendment, as its legislature was expected to take affirmative action yesterday.

New Jersey was a close rival, and President-elect Wilson was very desirous that his state should swing first into line, but the fact that the New Jersey legislature did not reassemble until last evening put it at a disadvantage.

In the meantime Delaware, which had not been in the limelight, got busy and ratified the amendment, beating out both New Mexico and New Jersey.

Shortly after the news of Delaware's ratification was received a Cheyenne dispatch announced that the Wyoming legislature had also ratified the amendment.

The income tax issue was submitted to the states by unanimous vote of the senate and a 317 to 14 majority of the house on July 31, 1909. The amendment submitted was as follows:

"That congress shall have power to levy and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several states and without regard to any census or enumeration."

Alabama led off the procession of ratifying states on Aug. 19, 1909, and by the end of 1910 the amendment had been approved by eight states. In 1911 the number was increased to thirty. In 1913, Arizona, Arkansas, Louisiana and Minnesota fell into line, making the total thirty-four, ratification by two more states being necessary to adopt the amendment.

The states that have rejected the amendment are Connecticut, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Utah.

Congress will enact a law to levy the tax, probably during the extraordinary session to be called by President-elect Wilson in March. The tax itself, its provisions and its limitations, are all left to congress.

The new law probably would supersede the corporation tax and provide for a tax on all incomes above $5000, although there has been some sentiment in favor of making the limit as low as $4000. Congressional leaders who have been preparing for the final ratification by the states estimate an income tax would bring in about $100,000,000 a year to the government.

Now that the tax is provided by the constitution, the proposed excise tax, framed by Democratic leaders in 1912 to meet the supreme court's decision, which held a former income tax unconstitutional, will be dropped, and some of its provisions may be included in the new law.

MUST STAND TRIAL

Jack Johnson Loses His Case In United States Supreme Court

Washington, Feb. 4.—The supreme court of the United States refused the writ of error in the case of Jack Johnson against United States Marshal Hay, involving his arrest for violation of the white slave act.

The court did not pass upon the merits of his case, on the ground that the pugilist must exhaust all means to test the law in the lower courts before appealing to the supreme court of the United States. Johnson must, therefore, stand trial in the lower court before his case can be reviewed by the supreme court.

FORE RIVER LEAGUE.

The Shipfitters lead in the Fore River bowling league. They have rolled two matches less than the yard however and the result may be changed by tonight's rolloff at the Coliseum alleys. The Government Draftsmen have won 27 and lost 33 points. "Champ" Poehler has rolled in many of these matches. The standing will probably alternate between the two leaders from now out.

WHO'S WHO IN BOWLING.

What constitutes a professional bowler is agitating Quincy fans. If a man rolls a high score or holds a record is he a "pro?" This matter will be thrashed out by the interested parties in the Old Colony league in the near future. The point at variance came into marked prominence Thursday evening when Poehler was substituted in the absence of a Coliseum bowler and rolled a string of 145 following which the Norfolk Downs team left the alleys and forfeited the match.

There is no constitution governing the league and some managers claim that he was eligible when they allowed him to roll one string without objection. Others claim that it was verbally agreed that he was not eligible.

Who knows—what constitutes a "pro" in Quincy?

ALLIES' ATTACK ON ADRIANOPLE

Immediately Follows Ending of Two Months' Armistice

A SKIRMISH AT TCHATALJA

Scutari Reported Already on Point of Falling—Turkish Delegate Says Allies Will Find Themselves Confronted With Redoubtable Enemy—Turks Will Fight to the Death

London, Feb. 4.—The Balkan war has been resumed. The bombardment of Adrianople began at 7 o'clock last night, and a small skirmish occurred at the Tchatalja lines. The armistice has lasted exactly two months.

Bulgaria has turned a deaf ear to the remonstrances of the powers, and unless Turkey yields to the Balkan demands the allied armies will now attempt to drive her completely out of Europe.

According to dispatches from Belgrade Scutari is already on the point of falling. It is reported the Turkish commander has sent two representatives to the Servian commander to propose the capitulation of that town.

Dr. Daneff, head of the Bulgarian delegation, in an interview in Paris last night, said he had promised Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign secretary, that if the Turks immediately accepted the allies' conditions, they would conclude peace, but whatever happened there would be no further armistice.

Sir Edward Grey had a long interview with the king yesterday, after which he attended a brief meeting of the ambassadorial conference, but nothing of importance was transacted, there being no new development.

Osman Nixami Pasha, the second Turkish delegate, will leave London today to resume his ambassadorial duties at Berlin. He said last evening that from information received from military sources he believed the allies underestimated the condition of the Turkish army and they would find themselves confronted with a redoubtable enemy—the best Mussulman warriors, veterans from Arabia, who fought under Izzet Bey, and tried soldiers and good marksmen lately engaged in Tripoli under Enver Bey and Frethy Bey. He added:

"That ambassador was right who predicted that if driven to despair, the Turks would fight like wild animals."

The objectives of the Balkan allies are:

Adrianople, besieged by Bulgarian and Servian armies.

Scutari, invested by Montenegrins.

Epirus, Turkish territory adjoining Greece, in which Greeksc are operating.

THREE BIG FIRMS YIELD

Give In to Demands of Striking Garment Workers at Boston

Boston, Feb. 4.—Three firms, whose employes aggregate 500 men, sent word to the strike headquarters late yesterday afternoon that they were willing to meet the demands of the workers who went out on strike from their establishments.

As soon as their offer of settlement was officially received, the strike leaders sent a committee to each of the three business places to arrange the terms of settlement and sign up contracts. The men returned to work today.

Society matrons and college girls will do picket duty in front of the 180 shops that have been closed by the 5000 members of the striking Garment Workers' union.

BANDITS' TRIAL BEGINS

Twenty-Two Murders Charged Against Band of Paris Desperadoes

Paris, Feb. 4.—The trial of the gang of twenty-two automobile bandits who terrorized the French capital and its environs for many months at the end of 1911 and the beginning of last year has begun. No less than twenty-two murders are charged against them.

Extraordinary precautions have been taken to prevent demonstrations of any kind. Every entrance to the vast palais de justice was strongly guarded, no one being permitted to enter unless able to show he had business in one of the courts, and the police patrolled the streets in the neighborhood, arresting all loiterers.

Atlantic Liner's Officers Strike

Victory For Striking Miners

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 4.—Seven thousand mine workers returned to work in eight of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western mines. The engineers have voted to join the union, the refusal to do so having been the cause of the strike.

$5,000 DAMAGES BY DRAWLESS BRIDGE OVER THE SACHEM BROOK

Stuart and Emery Claim Their Business is Affected By Present Structure

Commissioner Crane Considered $5,000 Light Amount For State

(Special to the Ledger)

The legislative committee on Metropolitan Affairs gave a hearing to those interested in the four bills dealing with the improvement of navigation conditions at the mouth of Sachem brook, Wollaston, and the payment of damages to two business men who have shops bordering upon the brook.

Representative William J. Leslie, opening the hearing, told the committee that two of the four bills were to right an injustice which was a result of the construction of the Quincy Shore Boulevard and the other two bills were designed to prevent any such injustice being repeated. He pointed out on the map, the location of the proposed improvements, and said that the Metropolitan Park Commission in constructing the boulevard had built a drawless bridge over the mouth of Sachem brook, and had planned to build the bridge in such a way that it would allow the continuance of the business that was then in operation and carried on by John Stuart, whose plant is on the westerly banks of the brook, and by Victor J. Emery, who is located on the easterly side. Within a few months after the bridge was built, it became evident that sufficient precautions had not been taken against the shifting of sand and dead sea-weed from filling into the channel under the bridge. In a short while, conditions had become so that only boats with light drafts could get into the brook and up to the shops of Stuart and Emery. Representative Leslie left it to the men themselves to tell the committee how their respective businesses had been damaged. In favor of improvement bills, Mr. Leslie said that one visit to the scene would convince the committee of the necessity of something being done. By first deepening

RELIC OF THE OLD CONSTITUTION

In Form of Gavel Presented to Spanish War Veterans

OFFICERS INSTALLED

The officers of John A. Boyd Camp, No. 2, United Spanish War Veterans, were installed in Grand Army Hall, Tuesday evening by Department Senior Vice Commander Neil T. McDonnell and Master of Ceremonies Merton A. Jenkins, both from the Frederick B. Bogan Camp, Charlestown.

The meeting was attended by many honorary members and eligibles. A letter from Hon. Everett C. Bumpus in which he stated that the condition of his health did not permit his attending was read, but he wished the camp every prosperity and growth and development.

Commander McDonnell presented the camp through Commander Blagden with a gavel made from the original hull of the "Old Constitution." The relic is priceless because most of the wood now in the hull is new stock which replaced the old material as it decayed or snapped under the strain. The presentation was followed by hearty applause.

Informal speeches were made by Department Inspector Pratt of the Brighton Camp, Honorary Member George H. Wilson visiting officers and the new officers.

DRIVEN TO FRENZY BY CANCER HIGGINS COMMITTED SUICIDE

Slashed His Throat and Severed Arteries in Both His Wrists

For Five Years He Had Suffered From Incurable Malady

In a fit of despondency, due to sufferings from cancer of the throat, Thomas F. Higgins, 50 years, slashed his throat from ear to ear about midnight Tuesday in the cellar of his home, 25 1-2 Smith street. He also severed both arteries of the left wrist. Laying beside his body was a razor with which he performed the deed. He probably died instantly.

His son Thomas was on the street floorand heard the thud of his father's body as it fell. He ran downstairs and found them an weltering in his blood. Realizing the horrors of the scene he immediately ran to the police station where he told Acting Sergeant Halloran his story, who immediately telephoned to Dr. Hunting and Rev. Fr. Scannell. Both arrived too late to aid the injured man.

The deceased had been a sufferer from cancer for about five years. The growth was over the carotid artery. Last September he was operated on at the Quincy City Hospital. Since that time his condition has been growing worse and he has been subject to melancholia. When the doctors arrived they found the body on the steps of a closet. When the demented man performed the act he was probably sitting on a large jar and in thrashing back and forward while bleeding he undoubtedly lurched and fell in a heap on the steps.

Both arteries of the wrist were severed and death would have resulted from either of the wounds.

The deceased leaves two daughters and two sons. He was well known in this city. His wife died some years ago.

VERMONT MEN IN CONFERENCE UPON THE BIG CONVENTION

Plans for the Assembling of Interests in Boston Under Consideration

Quincy Men Will Entertain Their Visitors in the Proper Style

Delegates from the Barre, Vt. Granite manufacturers association are in Quincy today for a conference with delegates from the Quincy Granite Manufacturers association and delegates from the Massachusetts Retail Monumental association. The conference is being held in the rooms of the Granite Manufacturers association The object of the conference is to make arrangements for the annual convention of the National retail Dealers association which is to be be held in Boston next August.

John L. Miller, to whose efforts is mainly due the credit for having Boston selected as the place for this year's convention, is presiding.

The New England manufacturers who are members of the association will leave nothing undone that will serve to make this convention one of the most successful of any yet held. Quincy manufacturers will have no exhibit at the convention for the reason that Quincy is so near Boston that the local manufacturers will plan to have all of the delegates visit Quincy where they will be royally entertained and taken about the city for a visit not only to the quarries and cutting sheds but to some of the many places of historic interest in which Quincy abounds.

PRIVATE DANCING PARTY.

This action is in accordance with Mr. Boynton's belief that the committee had no right to expel him.

PURSUER FIRED REVOLVER AT MISS MILNE---THEN DISAPPEARED

Exciting Experience By Young Woman on Lonely Part of Glencoe Place

Later, Girl Heroically Strode Forth to Notify Inspector Goodhue

There was considerable excitement in the vicinity of Glencoe place at 9.50 Tuesday night when a young girl ran to the residence of Inspector Goodhue with the story that a man had followed her from Quincy avenue and finding that she was getting away from him fired a revolver at her. The young lady was Miss Ethel Milne of 26 Glencoe place. She had been to make a call on a friend on Pearl street. On her way home she took a route through Water street to Quincy avenue and then took a short cut across the marsh near Scammell's shop. As she started across she says that she noticed a man following her. This caused her to hurry her steps. About half way across the marsh is a narrow brook which it was necessary for her to jump across.

As she jumped to clear the brook a revolver shot was fired by the man but the bullet evidently went wild. She continued on to her home and then ran to the residence of Inspector Goodhue, on Dysart street. Inspector Goodhue telephoned the police station and then started out to investigate. He was unable to find any trace of the man although neighbors claimed to have heard the shot. The patrol wagon arrived in a few minutes with several officers who made a search but no trace of any strange man could be found.

From what could be learned it seems that the Italians on Water street were having some kind of a celebration Tuesday night and there were several in the street more or less under the influence of liquor, shouting and singing. It is thought possible that the man who followed Miss Milne may have been one of these.

MAT TOO NEAR FURNACE.

The alarm from box 29 at 10.25 this morning was for a slight fire in the basement of the house of John Swithin at 47 Butler road. The fire was caused by a mat that had been placed over the furnace catching fire. There was no loss.

Citizens' Gas Light Company

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO CONSUMERS

NEW SYSTEM OF METER READING AND BILLING

It is the aim of the Citizens' Gas Light Company to give to the Public a service as excellent in every detail as possible and to improve the service as opportunity offers.

To this end the Company will on March 1st, 1913, put into effect a new system of Meter Reading and Billing which has been adopted after careful study of the many systems in use in other cities.

REGULAR METER READERS

Instead of hiring a large number of special men to read all the meters on the last few days of the month (as will still be done up to February 28th, 1913) the Company will in March create a permanent force of regular meter readers, who will be easily identified by the Company's badge conspicuously worn.

CONSTANT SYSTEM

These men will on each working day throughout the month read all the meters in one of the sections into which the accounts have been grouped and, having covered the City, will periodically read the same meters once in about every thirty calendar days, all bills rendered covering gas used during the preceding thirty days.

BILLS PAYABLE WITHIN FIFTEEN DAYS OF DATE

Two days after the reading of the meters of any section, the corresponding bills will be delivered. Each bill must be paid within fifteen days of its date and should a bill become overdue by not being paid within fifteen days, the supply may be discontinued without further notice.

EXAMPLES

The following examples are given on typical cases:

| METER IN SECTION NO. 2 | | METER IN SECTION NO. 7 | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Meter read | Monday, Mar. 10 | Meter read | Wednesday, Mar. 19 |
| Bill delivered | Wednesday, Mar. 12 | Bill delivered | Friday, Mar. 21 |
| Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Tuesday Mar. 25 | Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Thursday, Apr. 3 |

METHOD OF CHANGE FROM OLD TO NEW SYSTEM

As all meters will be read in the last days of February and as the new system will go into active operation about March 10th, it is evident that the first bills received after this latter date will cover periods ranging from two to six weeks. But in future the date of the last state of the meter and the date of the preceding state of the meter will appear on all bills; the period covered by each bill will therefore be evident in the bill and should be considered in connection with the amount of gas used.

For instance, bills rendered March 14th, will cover a period of about three weeks, while bills rendered April 2nd, will cover a period of about six weeks. After these first six weeks of change, customers will find that each month they will receive their bills on or about the same date, and that each bill will invariably cover the preceding thirty days.

LEARN TO READ METERS

We would again urge our customers to learn how to read meters; instruction as to this will be found on the back of the gas bills and will enable customers to check bills rendered.

REMITTANCES BY MAIL

Remittances sent through the mails should be addressed only in the name of the Company to its office, No. 11 Granite Street, Quincy.

We desire in conclusion, to assure our customers that the installation of the system outlined above is to secure uniformity and accuracy in handling their accounts.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The peaceful operations of the Boston Garment workers strikers is a credit to their organization, and to the strikers individually.

President Taft has only one more month of lingering at the White House. He says he is leaving without any regrets. His last few months were not marked by perfect peace and harmony.

Undoubtedly "Big Bill" is doing a lot of romancing. Some of the stuffs he is handing out was rattling around Boston, several years ago.

Make the most of your chances to get in a good sleigh ride while the snow lasts. It cannot hold on too long with the sun up at it's present height.

The fellow who has the $5000 may not be so willing to dig up on the income tax business, but a good many would like to be able to lay their hands on that amount annually.

Vice-president Marshall is learning the game of golf. Is there to be a golf cabinet, a tennis cabinet and numerous other cabinets during the next four years.

The City Council deciding to let the people decide on the charter are in the right. Even if the people should fail to take interest in the matter that is no reason they should be deprived of exercising the right which belongs to them.

The Arson trust has flourished in Chicago as well as New York. Its hard to find people in whom one can honestly put trust now-a-days.

The United Shoe Machinery Company has one round in its legal battle.

If the firemen strike on the railroads that will mean some big tie up. Maybe the storm will blow over before the high tide of disaster is reached.

The City Council did not seem to take kindly to that dock commission bill in the form it was presented.

The millionaire Hobo has lost his job. He has been repudiated by his followers. Did he use a napkin and manicure his finger nails that he became ineligible?

Now the discussion has started as to just what service Gen. Sickles accomplished for the Union. It is safe to say if he did not have officers who were brave and fearless and better than all, privates who walked right up to the common mouth there would be little record of glory to him or any other military leader.

Colorado has the thinnest man in the senate in the person of Thomas, but the record for the smallest man will not be announced until all the letters, documents and the like which were secured have been made public.

Will Mr. Cady reconsider and produce the evidence. Thus far his tremendous speed has been reduced to a walk and all because he was asked to back up some of the things he is charged with saying.

Better to go a little slow and be sure of your ground than to take flights which bring a speedy fall.

TITANIC MEMORIAL.

The suggestion that the Titanic Memorial take the form of a Hospital ship on the fishing grounds of the North Atlantic meets with general commendation and approval. It seems to be most appropriate that the greatest marine disaster of the ocean history should lead to the establishment of something humane and useful, for the benefit of the hardy fishermen who go down to the sea in ships at all seasons of the year. No doubt such a ship would prove of inestimable benefit and a great blessing to the mariners. Other countries, support ships of this kind. France, sends out from Europe a hospital ship which is stationed on the Grand Banks for the relief of the French fishermen who come over and spend many months on the fishing grounds before they return to their country with their vessels laden to capacity. Many an American fisherman has had occasion to offer up thanks for the generous aid which the French hospital has been ever ready to administer. It would be fitting that the American Memorial to the Titanic, to the heroism, self sacrifice and splendid bearing of those Americans who met death so bravely that the weaker might survive, should be in some such form. If the idea is carried out the promoters will not be making any mistake.

THE NEW RULES.

The new rules of the City Council are just like any piece of any machinery, just a little stiff at first. It will take some little time for the kinks to be straightened out by this new system of doing business. The untanglement can be made hard or it can be made easy, just according to the disposition of the members of the Council. If any member should desire to become an obstructionist, it would seem that some opportunity is afforded for such a course under the new rules. This would mean, long filibustering sessions, without having accomplished much. This would be a rather unfortunate condition oof affairs, and lead to unnecessary unpleasantness, and bickering and snarling for the balance of the year. under such circumstances there would be little accomplished. On the face of it and at the start it looks as though the rules as amended might have been further treated in the same direction to good advantage. Of course the board can change the rules at any time by a certain number of votes, but their service to the city is too valuable to be using up all their time in revising rules to meet every condition which arises. It is to be hoped that all misunderstandings with regard to the rules will be cleared away and that the Council members will be thus able to devote all their energies and time to a consideration of City's business.

AFTER GILMORE FOR BANQUET

No Response to Invitation Received By Board of Trade

Secretary Hall of the Board of Trade desires to remind members that they should make prompt return to him of the number of tickets sold for the annual banquet of the Board in order that proper arrangements be made to accommodate the party. The indications at the present time are that the affair will be well attended. Lieut. Gov. Walsh and Mrs. Norton have been secured as speakers up to the present time. The committee is also trying to get Congressman Gilmore but he has not been heard from as yet.

LATE TRAIN A CONVENIENCE

For Brocktonites at Manet Clut Hurley Girls In It

The last dance before Lent was given by the Manet Social Club at Music Hall, Tuesday evening. The members, most of whom are numbered among the most popular young men of the city were busily engaged in assisting the large number that attended.

Delegations from surrounding cities and towns attended in large numbers, particularly from Brockton. Those from the Shoe City returned home on the new theatre extra train which leaves Quincy about 12.20.

A feature of the dance was the number especially dedicated to a ladies orchestra the identity of which was secret, although it is generally known that the club at a previous dance surprised the city by engaging seven female musicians with benign smiles.

The Misses Maude and Mary Hurley of Brockton entertained for a short time with a platform sketch which concluded with an exhibition of "That Grizzly Bear Cat Dance." They rendered several popular songs and were the hit of the evening.

The floor was in charge of Russell Gomez with Leo Howley as the assistant. The aids were Murray Kerr Peter Buzzi, Dan Mahon, Frederick Hayden and Clarence Frazier.

PRIZE DIAMOND IS SECURED

It's a Beauty Too, with Very Pretty Setting

IN DAILY LEDGER CONTEST

Mr. Bowditch had it pretty much his own way today in the Daily Ledger contest. He added 395 votes, making his total 14,440. Smaller gains were made by Richard Larkin of the High school, Dan Scouler of the shipyard, and George Powers of the Fore River office.

SECOND PRIZE.

Although a valuable diamond ring was offered as the second prize in the contest, it has not figured to any great extent thus far, but Mrs. Marnock says she prefers the ring to the Washington trip. The diamond selected is a gentlemen's ring, subject to change. It is a beauty, and was secured this week from Sandberg Bros., the local diamond merchants, who will place it on exhibition in their show windows in City Square. It is a white diamond, of good size, in a very pretty setting. Candidates and their friends should visit Sanberg Bros. and carefully inspect the diamond and the ring. They are guaranteed.

All the leaders in the contest are making every possible effort to get vote certificates for subscriptions, and vote coupons as well.

A story is being circulated as follows. A vote collector thinking perchance that the laundry man might have a Ledger taken into his place of business asked the Chinaman to save the votes for Fred Williams and explained to the collar polisher the details of the excursion. The Oriental, replied as follows:

"Me slave votees fo Fled Williams sewer, Fled glood feller much smalt glood yep me slave votees and Fled go for slee Pleasident me wash shirt extla fine polish fo Fled fo no charge extla. Sewer."

Every little helps.

LAST DAYS OF CONTEST.

As already announced, the last coupon in the contest will be printed in the Daily Ledger of Saturday, Feb. 8. Positively none will be printed after that day.

That there may be an opportunity to gather in the coupons from all parts of the country, the polls will remain open until Tuesday, Feb. 18, at 12 M. Certificates for subscriptions will be issued up to that hour, and Daily Ledgers with coupons may be obtained as long as they last, at the Ledger office.

The prize winners in the contest will be announced as soon after Feb. 18 as possible, probably in the Daily Ledger of Feb. 20, giving the winner of the first prize over a week to make arrangements to attend the Inauguration at Washington.

DATES TO REMEMBER

Feb. 8—Last day of coupon.
Feb. 18—Polls close.
Feb. 20—Prize winners.
Feb. 28—On to Washington.
Mar. 4—Inauguration of Woodrow Wilson as President.

It has been decided by the Contest Editor to give third and fourth prizes in the Washington Inauguration contest, and possibly other prizes. The first four today are Fred D. Williams, Sturgis H. Hunt, A. R. MacKay and Mrs. Emma Marnock. Next in line is Galen Bowditch, who is still hopeful that "the committee" may send him to Washington.

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

POTATO FARMERS WORRIED

Aroostook Railroad Officials Declare Freight Is Being Moved

Bangor, Me., Feb. 5.—In response to published complaints from Aroostook county to the effect that no food potatoes and few seed potatoes had been moved since the beginning of the strike of engineers and firemen, the Bangor and Aroostook railroad gave out this statement:

"Since the strike began, the road has hauled to Northern Maine Junction and to Stockton 606 carloads of potatoes, or approximately 424,000 bushels, of which about two-thirds were for seed and one-third for table use. About 75 percent of this freight was moved in the past week, and the volume of traffic is daily increasing. On Monday 108 cars of potatoes were moved."

The small towns are in urgent need of supplies, and from practically all of the neighboring towns teams have been sent here and to other central points in Aroostook county for loads of the necessities of life until local freight traffic is resumed.

UNITY CIRCLE.

The annual meeting of Unity Circle King's Daughters, was held in Bethany vestry, Tuesday evening, a large number being present to participate in the festivities.

At the business meeting which began at five, the devotional services were conducted by Mrs. Blanchard. The election of officers, reports of the secretary and treasurer were read, followed by the very beautiful service for new members, rendered by Mrs. M. Wheatie Farley, state president and Susan Brokenshire, state treasurer.

A delicious supper was served at half past six to which ample justice was done. The supper was in charge of Mrs. Franklin Horton, chairman. The leader of each ten presided over a table as follows: Miss Alice Hatch, Mrs. S. I. Wood, Mrs. John Roberts, Mrs. F. L. Curtis, Miss Esther Beckford, Mrs. Frank F. Prescott, Mrs. J. Percival Sears, Mrs. Albert M. Thompson, Mrs. Alfred C. Bean, Mrs. Joseph Prout, Miss Emma Spaulding, Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, Miss Addie J. Park, Mrs. Everett Crane, Mrs. F. Sargent, Mrs. H .W. Beattie.

After supper ,Mrs. Marion Miller vice leader, welcomed the guests. "Sometimes people were born great, sometimes they became great and sometimes greatness was thrust upon them .I feel tonight in taking Mrs. Shaw's place, she being unable to be present owing to the illness of Mr. Shaw, that greatness is thrust upon me. We regret that Mr. and Mrs. Shaw are not with us tonight, for both have taken an active interest in the work of the King's Daughters.

First on the program was Miss Catherine Stone who rendered a violin selection ,ably accompanied by Miss Agnes Ruggles, organist of Bethany church. Miss Stone responded to repeated applause.

Mrs. Edith Carey Page and Miss Mabel Drew sang a duet, accompanied by Miss Florence Olney. "Across the Dim Lagoon" and responded with "Nearest and Dearest."

Miss Alice Hatch, treasurer, read her annual report ,and Miss Addie J. Park corresponding secretary ,submitted her report.

Mrs. George L. Badger, recording secretary, gave a brief sketch of the King's Daughters as follows: "Twenty years ago, two small circles, the Every-day Sunshine and the Whatsoever, united and called themselves Unity Circle, King's Daughters, which today with its membership of 140 active, 22 honorary members and Junior King's Daughters is one of the largest in the state.

"The Tens, of which the circle is comprised, have as a rule worked for some special cause this year besides carrying on their share of the general work. The Day Nursery, District Nurse, Hospital, Churches, the Associated Charities, Ingleside, South End Settlement, Children's Hospital, Salvation Army, Floating Hospital, and Pond Home have been the especial charge of the whole circle. Through the Distributing Ten clothing and provisions have been sent to the needy and at Thanksgiving and Christmas many have been remembered by a bit of cheer. Through the Flower Ten, beautiful flowers and plants have brought sunshine to many homes.

"The Junior's have been active and interested, by presenting an entertainment, last May, under the leadership of Mrs. Moore, whereby $30 were netted, $15 of which were given to Pond Home. The Home Helpers, true to their name, have done many kindly deeds. The devotional exercises at the monthly meetings, are arranged by Devotional Ten, and Music Ten provides special music; Membership Ten, has presented eight names for active membership, and three honorary members.

"Among the gifts from various Tens, was a clock to the woman's ward at the Hospital; a clock, chair and directory for the use of the secretary of the Associated Charities, a quilt for the Hospital of Incurable children, Boston, a quilt for Pond Home, clothing for the Children's Hospital, Boston.

"We hold in loving remembrance, Mrs. Fred E. Drake, who has been called from our circle by death. She was a member for many years and always deeply and actively interested in the circle's work. We remember Mrs. George W. Morton, her generous gift has made it possible to increase our good work.

Mrs .Page sang a group of songs, "The Honeysuckle," and "A Birthday," accompanied by Miss Olney, followed by Miss Stone violinist, accompanied by Miss Ruggles. The musical program was especially pleasing, and much enjoyed and elicited much applause. Rev. Mr. Willmott introduced the speaker Rev. Clarence A. Vincent, D. D., of Roxbury whose subject was "The Up-to-date American."

"It has been said, "that the government is for the people, and by the people," but of recent years we have allowed ourselves to be overrun by graft and greed, until our old democracy is almost a failure. We were forgetting the welfare of the general public and instead of town government, ward bosses were controlling . We were permitting the saloon and the stench of petroleum to overcome us. And the great fundamental principle underlying our government seemed to be forgotten. Our country should have a rebirth. What Jesus taught us should be at the root of what a self governing and what the future American citizen ought to be. Let every American look to himself and not shirk his responsibility. The average man is too apt to plead a business engagement or an automobile accident as an excuse to keep from the polls, while the ward boss is paying two dollars a vote to elect some undesirable official.

"Let us as Americans look to ourselves, our schools, our colleges our libraries, our churches ,and educate our children to the proper American standard. Make your schools, teach it, make your churches, preach it. Work and live for it. Why is it so much of graft and sin? See to it how the parents are bringing up their children. Study the problem of the town, and make it the best. Lift your working people out of impure conditions, and their children will get the idea of better sanitary living. Look up the foreign element. Thousands are growing up around you in ignorance of the fundamental idea of our government. Lawlessness and freedom from restraint their ruling passion. Carry out the principle of our fore fathers, emulate their spirit of courage and wisdom .

"When I was in the West, I had an overwhelming desire to visit Plymouth rock, and at my earilest opportunity on coming East, I paid a visit to Plymouth. As I stood on the rock I felt the thrill of exultation, but my real inspiration came when I visited Historical hall and saw Elder Brewster's chair and realized the trials and tribulations through which he passed. I could see him kneeling by that chair and gripping its arms, as he prayed, 'Oh! God, led by Thee, we came to this land, we remain, until Thou givest success or take us home.' This kind of faith is what we need to-day. Shall we let the ship of state saved by Lincoln strand on a mud flat? We say we are represented by the people, but our attitude changes like the tide of the sea which comes and goes. In this American land of the free we must face the question. When we see our duty, hold on to that great and holy task. Get on to our ideals and hold to them through thick and thin. As the sky is full of stars it is the duty of every American citizen to see those stars and walk in the light of them through all the coming generations."

Mr. Vincent related many amusing stories to illustrate certain points in his address which kept the audience in sympathy with him. A round of applause was given and a rising vote of thanks.

The new officers are: Leader, Mrs. Emma S. Moore; vice leader, Mrs. Marion Miller; secretary, Mrs. Mabel Badger; corresponding secretary, Miss Addie J. Park; treasurer, Miss Alice S. Hatch.

Leaders of Tens are:
Bethany—Mrs. John Roberts.

ON ECONOMICAL GROUNDS

"No Battleships" the Slogan of Democrats Opposed to Big Navy

Washington, Feb. 5.—With "no battleships" as their slogan, members of the house opposed to a big navy secured a sufficient number of signatures to a petition for a Democratic caucus on the question of how many battleships shall be authorized this year.

Congressman Sherwood of Ohio started the movement for the caucus on the ground that economy demands such a stand by the Democrats.

It has been generally conceded that the naval affairs committee would report a provision for two battleships.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

PARTS OF CITY ARE IN FLAMES

Bulgarians Continue Their Bombardment of Adrianople

TURKS MAKE FEEBLE REPLY

Forty Thousand Men Defend Beleaguered City Against Force of Over Hundred Thousand—Village of Tchatalja Fired by Bulgarians—Foreign Warships Near Capital

London, Feb. 5.—The Turks remain on the defensive at Tchatalja and Adrianople. The Adrianople fortress replies only feebly to the Bulgarian bombardment and apparently no attempt has been made in the way of a sortie. Parts of the city are in flames.

Official quarters in Constantinople breathe a spirit of great confidence in the new regime, and declare the condition of the country and the wintry weather precludes serious operations along the Tchatalja lines for the present.

Meanwhile, diplomacy has made no step forward since the resumption of hostilities and the porte has made no further communication either to the powers or to the allies. Should it turn out that Adrianople can resist for any considerable time, diplomatic negotiations are likely to remain at a standstill, although in the European capitals a settlement by diplomacy rather than by arms is still hoped for.

There is no confirmation of the reported occupation of Scutari by the Montenegrins.

A terrific bombardment of the forts surrounding Adrianople was continued all day by the Bulgarians and Servians surrounding the city to the number of over 100,000. It is believed that not even the residential portion of the city was spared.

Shukri Pasha still has, according to estimates of competent authorities, some 40,000 men, a number which is considered quite sufficient to man the forts and hold at bay the much greater besieging force.

The Bulgarians are said to have no fewer than 550,000 men in the province of Thrace, with 45,000 Servian soldiers and perhaps a few divisions of Greeks assisting them. The greater part of this force, however, is compelled to remain in front of the line of fortifications at Tchatalja and Gallipoli to hold the Turkish armies concentrating at those places.

British and German warships passed through the Dardanelles yesterday for the protection of the foreign residents of Constantinope and a fleet of warships belonging to other powers is anchored in Besika bay at the entrance to the Dardanelles, ready for any emergency.

Although no serious fighting has occurred along the Tchatalja lines, the Bulgarian troops are not idle. The village of Tchatalja, which has hitherto marked the limit of the Bulgarian lines, is in flames. Its destruction was apparently decided on for tactical reasons by the Bulgarian commander.

PULLS HATCHET ON JUDGE

Suffragette Creates a Lively Scene In a London Court

London, Feb. 5.—In the police court here a severe penalty was imposed upon Margaret Morrison, who was convicted of assaulting a policeman. During her hearing the woman drew a hatchet which she was carrying concealed in her clothing and began chopping at the railing about the magistrate's desk.

When policemen interfered a fight began and the woman and the officers rolled over the floor, upsetting tables, desks and chairs. During the scuffle the railing about the magistrate's desk was smashed.

The woman kept screaming "Give us votes!" She was sentenced to thirty days' imprisonment and fined $100 for the damage she had done.

TROUBLES ACCUMULATE

Two More Executions Against Sickles In Hands of New York Sheriff

New York, Feb. 5.—Two more executions against General Daniel E. Sickles, which must be satisfied out of his property before the state's claim for his shortage in the monument fund can be collected, were received by the sheriff yesterday afternoon.

The executions are in favor of August Heckscher for $8015 and the National bank of Orange county, N. Y., for $542.

"LOAN SHARK" BILL A LAW

President Signs Measure Limiting Charges to One Percent a Month

Washington, Feb. 5. — "Loan sharks" in the capital, credited with doing an enormous business among government clerks, received a blow when President Taft signed the "loan shark" bill limiting their charges and also those of pawnbrokers to 1 percent a month.

Passage of the bill had been fought for years in congress and the money lenders appealed personally to the president to veto it.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

PEACE MEETING.

The Federation of Women's clubs recognizes the supreme importance to the civilized world of the great movement to establish law in place of war for the settlement of international disputes. To further this great cause, it is holding in Tremont Temple, Boston, February 11, a large Peace meeting at which Mr. Samuel McCall will preside, and Governor Foss, Hon. Joseph Walker and Dr. Charles Brown of Yale will make addresses.

Whether, as individuals, we are asleep and therefore unaware of the progress of the world about us, or whether our minds are so crowded by personal interests that we do not see the significant trend of affairs of our times, this great international movement must imperatively arouse us and arrest our attention today.

The earliest attempts at better international relations began as far back as 1603 under Henry IV of France. From then until today, there has been a continuous growth of the effort to accomplish for the nations what civilization has already established in the relations between individuals and states, i. e., law, not fighting, for the settlement of disputes.

Wars have intervened and retarded the movement, but it has steadily grown through the efforts of great men and women, and of the many Peace Societies in America, Europe, Japan, and even China.

The most significant achievements in the history of the movement are the Hague Conferences in 1898 and 1907.

At the first conference where there assembled 100 delegates from 26 nations, they would not pledge themselves even to voluntary arbitration of international disputes. Seven years later when there were 256 delegates representing 44 nations, they all endorsed compulsory arbitration—though the necessary unanimous adoption of this measure lacked a few votes hereby postponing its hoped for accomplishment until the 1915 Hague Conference.

Two of the most important results of these conferences are: the establishment of a Hague Court to decide international disputes, and the decision to hold regular conferences every seven years. Since then, by arbitration treaties and by the mediation of neutral powers, wars have been altogether averted in many cases; in other cases wars have been stopped (for example by the Peace of Portsmouth.) Also one hundred and forty-five bipartite treaties have been listed since the decisions of these conferences.

There are two vital things to consider in determining our attitude as individuals or as a country towards this great change in our world system. 1. What is the moral obligation? 2. What is the material result?

Not to mention the ethical teaching of all ages, good citizenship alone demands an international mind; that is, the ability to recognize foreign nations as co-operative equals in aiding the progress of civilization. For nations to use methods for settling disputes which would be punished by death or heavy penalty if employed by individuals or states within their boundaries, is unworthy of both our civilization and our intelligence.

The facts in regard to the material results are startling. The most striking features of the 19th century are the rise of the Banking Houses of Europe and the increase of national debts. It is the House of Rothschild, the acknowledged head whose silent nod often determines war or peace for the nations of Europe. It is the invention of the postponement of payment of national debts which has made modern war possible. The United States, without an enemy in the world, and carrying the smallest debt of any of the large powers, spends over 70 per cent of her revenue yearly for her army and navy and war pensions. The huge national debts will never be paid while nations support armaments. National bankruptcy must follow the continuance of war for any nation.

Then comes an even more startling revelation from Norman Angell in his remarkable book, "The Great Illusion," at present in its third edition, and already translated into fourteen languages. He proves that even a successful war is of no real material advantage to a country today; still more, that war between civilized nations is a detriment even to the victorious country!

And yet nations and individuals are slow in recognizing these great facts. Only public opinion aroused and expressed will put an end to the present system of war and establish law in its place; to be followed gradually by disarmament, and mutual confidence and respect among the nations.

The Federation of Women's clubs has joined the ranks of ardent workers for the accomplishment of this world movement.

THE PERSONAL NAME.

Mrs. Philip N. Moore answers the question of the use of either personal or married name in Federation Bulletin, in response to a query that came from a lady from indiana. She says in this regard:

"Never for a moment have we expected a woman to sign other than her personal name to a letter, or to a communication, or other than her legal name to any legal document, such as the copyright indicated in the history mentioned and many others. This rule has been uniformly followed

"The point made was with reference to letter headings, to public communications which must in some place bring the woman before the world, to communications to strangers, when both names might well be signed,—and an official signature to an official document, where an official heading is not given.

"Taking the directories of the General Federation for many years we find in the early issue four married women out of the 15 directories giving their personal names, leaving a large majority using the names they have taken before the world. In the same issue 30 state presidents gave their names as they should be reached through city and telephone directory.

"This changed in the next directory to two widows and one married woman out of the 15 using their personal names; and so on to the present year, when three out of the 15 express their preference, for the personal heading. Among the chairman of departments all with one exception (and she is, I think a widow), have their proper social address, with which they are known to their home and national organizations.

"Forty-three state presidents use their social and public address, three others are unmarried, two are widows.

"It has come to be the generally recognized usage for widows to keep their husbands' names, simply as their preference; so that one may do as she pleases before the world.

"Letters have come to me frequently from state presidents, expressing their great interest in the trend of opinion toward recognition of social usage before the world and by vote their boards have decided on such procedure.

"Now some interesting points come to mind: the first is the one, made in a previous issue, that searching in a telephone directory for a name prominently before our minds failed to bring the proper name and address; another is a frequent experience of a former treasurer where for example "Mary Smith" (often Mrs. Mary Smith), was very properly the signature on a check, but with no address. Receipts mailed to the city were returned, "not found," and in many cases the names were fully distinctive if the personal name had been in the postoffice directory. There are some cases so entirely amusing that they would be ludicrous if cited, such as using by others the wrong social name on stationery, or in introduction showing the unknown connection with an actually great personality.

"A gentleman once asked concerning a lady of personal name, of social service inclination, "Tell me something of Mr. Smith; is there such a man? What does he do?" 'Oh, yes,' was the response, 'he is a business man of Boston, but, like yourself, and my husband,—not so well known as your wives but each having interests of your own!' The The verdict of the world if asked, would place these two men equal, if not superior to their wives.

"National organizations and government or public officials have expressed great satisfaction in the growing tendency to use the one name officially which they can recognize,— and which they can find at once when coming to the city.

"The lady from Indiana will realize this is an argument only, and in the main I think we agree, with the exception of the letter headings, and the acknowledgment to the world of the man, whose name we took before the altar."

Too Good Looking For Her Role

VEGETABLE PIES.

VEGETABLES are nice served in pies. Not all vegetables, of course, are suited for this purpose, but those which are most easily digested may be used. If you prefer, meat cut in small pieces may be added to the vegetables. Either fresh or cold meat may be used. This makes the pies richer.

Novel Pastry.

Onion Pie.—Slice six onions and put them into a frying pan with butter enough to fry them. Add a cupful of milk and cream combined in equal quantities. Thicken with flour moistened with cold milk and add half a teaspoonful of salt and a saltspoonful of pepper. Bake a pie crust in a pie plate. Fill the crust with the onions and set in the oven until the top is brown. No upper crust is used.

Sweet Potato Pie.—Take one pound of mashed potatoes which have been rubbed through a colander, one-half a pound of butter creamed, two cups of white sugar, six eggs, whites and yolks beaten separately, one lemon squeezed into the potato while hot, one teaspoonful of nutmeg and one teaspoonful of mace. Mix and bake same as ordinary pie. This makes a nice dessert.

Mushroom Pie.—A delicious pie is made of cold sliced potatoes and mushrooms. Put them in alternate layers in a dish, season well with pepper and salt and cover with puff paste and then bake.

Savory Side Dishes.

Potato and Onion Pie.—Take six potatoes and boil in salted water. When done mash fine and while hot add a lump of butter, half a cupful of sweet milk, a spoonful of minced onion, half a spoonful of powdered sage and a little pepper. Mix all together, adding more salt if needed. Rub the sides and bottom of the baking dish with butter and pour in the mixture, smoothing carefully. Dot the top of the pie with bits of butter, or thin slices of bacon may be used instead. Bake until of a nice brown color.

Nut and Vegetable Pie.—Take a cupful of lima beans, one cupful of almonds and peanuts mixed, one cupful of thin white sauce, two hard boiled eggs, two onions sliced, six potatoes and salt and pepper to season. Wash and peel the potatoes, cook the beans and potatoes and blanch the nuts. Place a layer of beans in the bottom of the baking dish, then a layer of nuts and egg, followed by a layer of diced potatoes. Repeat until the materials have been used. Pour over all the white sauce, cover the top with the mashed potato, brush over with egg and milk and bake for thirty minutes in a hot oven.

CHEESE FONDUES.

THE old idea that cheese is very hard to digest has been exploded, and now even government cooking experts are advising us that cheese combined with other foods makes the latter more nutritious. Cheese fondues are dishes in which melted cheese is a constituent. If they are baked it is a good idea to send them to the table right in the baking dish.

Nutritious Fare.

Plain Cheese Fondu.—Take a cupful and a third of soft stale breadcrumbs, one and one-half cupfuls of grated cheese, four eggs, one cupful of hot water, one-half teaspoonful of salt.

Mix the water, breadcrumbs, salt and cheese. Add the beaten yolks. Into this mixture fold the whites of eggs, beaten until stiff. Pour into a buttered baking dish and cook thirty minutes in a moderate oven. Serve at once.

Boiled Cheese Fondu.—Take a cupful and a half each of cheese which has been broken into small pieces, breadcrumbs and milk, one egg, two tablespoonfuls of butter and six ounces of cracker crumbs. Soak the bread and milk. Melt the butter and add the cheese. When the cheese has melted add the soaked crumbs, the eggs, slightly beaten, and the seasoning. Cook a short time and serve on toasted crackers.

Served With Toast.

Rice and Cheese Fondu.—Take a cupful each of grated cheese and boiled rice, four eggs, three tablespoonfuls of milk, a half teaspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of some meat sauce. Heat the rice in the milk and cook slowly, adding the other ingredients. When the cheese is melted it is done. This may be served on crackers or toast.

Rich Fondu.—Take a pound of cheese and grate or chop it fine. Put in a saucepan with one tablespoonful of butter, a half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne, one teaspoonful of tomato ketchup, a half teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, two well beaten eggs and a half cupful of cream. Stand over a slow fire and stir until the cheese is melted. Pour at once over thin slices of hot toast and serve on hot plates.

SYNOPSIS

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

"Stonewall" Jackson is killed. Grant takes supreme command of the Federal armies, and Sheridan invades the valley of Virginia.

General Haverill, not knowing Bedloe is his son, sends him on a dangerous mission. Gertrude is captured by West's soldiers.

West takes Mrs. Haverill's miniature from Thornton. Bedloe is wounded and captured. Haverill plans to exchange Ellingham for Bedloe. Thornton stabs West. Haverill finds the miniature on West's person.

The night of Oct. 18 was full of in quietude and alarms for the inmates of Belle Bosquet. A Federal guard was posted there, and Barket served as courier. Neither Jenny nor Madeline West would think now of going on to Winchester, with Kerchival West in a precarious condition and the fate of Captain Heartsease still uncertain. General Haverill did not return to the house, but joined General Buckthorn at the front, where, it was understood, General Wright was making every possible preparation pending the return of Sheridan, for guarding against and resisting an attack upon his right, which was the only point at which he apprehended immediate trouble.

Before daybreak on the morning of the 19th Madeline and Gertrude, who occupied a room together, were awakened by firing in the distance up the valley to the southward. Jenny Buckthorn, in an adjoining chamber, heard their voices and joined them for companionship and sympathy. Alas, what a changed, subdued Jenny within the last twenty-four hours!

"You love me?"

The girls dressed hurriedly in silence and came downstairs. Already Kerchival West, haggard and excited looking, was pacing the veranda like a caged animal. Barket had been down to the pike for reconnoissance and now came back with startling news.

"It's a battle, sure!" he said. "An' Sheridan away, the divil only knows where. Begob, they must have attacked by surprise before the screech o' dawn, judgin' from"—

"Who has attacked? Who is surprised?" demanded Kerchival with furious impatience.

"The inimy has attacked us, sor, an', what's more, they seem to be drivin' things before 'em. By the direction of the firin' it should be our left flank they have pounced upon instead of the right, where they were dacintly expected. Sure, thim rebels have no politeness nohow"—

"Do you mean to say our troops are falling back?"

"Well, sor, I did hear some cavalry gallopin' down the pike, but whether it was ours or theirs or only Mosby's gorillas, that I can't tell yez."

"Then I'll go and find out for myself!" Kerchival cried fiercely, making a move into the hallway for his hat. The sudden exertion proved too much for him, and he sank into a chair, clutching with one hand at his breast.

"Hark! There is the firing again, worse than ever, and it is coming nearer," said Gertrude, unconscious of a certain exultation in her tone. "If General Longstreet only has—I mean, if really he"—

"He can never drive General Sheridan back—of that I am certain," spoke up Madeline with unwonted spirit.

"Let us go—oh, pardon me, Gertrude—ladies—I beg," said Kerchival, starting up, then at once seating himself again.

But they all had risen, as impatient as he was, and hurried out.

Kerchival and Gertrude took the path up the elevation to where the big cottonwood tree overlooked the valley. Jenny and Madeline lingered on the veranda.

"Go on, go on!" muttered Kerchival, instinctively feeling for his sword and looking loweringly in the direction from which came the roar of the guns. "Fight to a finish and have it over. Keep the battle to yourselves. I'm out of it."

"Kerchival," said Gertrude, "your sister Madeline says that now she must pray for the man she loves, enemy or no enemy."

"And she is right. Anything else would be worse than treason. I can't pray. Can you, Gertrude?"

"Yes. Ah, Kerchival!"

He leaned against the tree, his hand clutching at his breast again.

"Your wound! Let me call the surgeon, Kerchival!"

"Wound! I have no wound to bother about now. You love me?"

"Look! There are soldiers running through the woods. Oh, what shall we do?"

The firing, very close now, was faster and more furious than ever. It seemed to have given Kerchival West new breath of life.

"Never mind that!" he cried deliriously. "It's only a battle! Say that you love me!"

"Be quiet, Kerchival, dear. I do love you. I said so last night before every one, only you didn't hear me. I said the same thing at Charleston when first we met. And some one I told wrote it in a letter—that letter which General Buckthorn gave you and told you not to read unless I became unruly. I am not unruly, am I, dear?"

"No, my precious girl! Nothing can separate us now. That letter"—he searched in his pockets, but could not find it. "Ah, I remember! They must have taken it when I was laid out by Thornton's dagger. And—a miniature I had—that's gone too!"

"Miss Gertrude, Marse Bob be done get a gyard aroun' dis house, but 'tain't no use now, for de Yanks is runnin' away. We's got 'em licked, missy; we sho' has!"

"Begob, the naygur's right," confirmed Sergeant Barket. "The gray-backs divils have sprung up out of the ground. They're pourin' over our left flank like Noah's own flood. Our camp is wiped out, an' they've got our guns an' wagons an' wounded an' prisoners, an' the whole Union army is a-startin' to beat it down the pike for Winchester, worse luck! Colonel West, yonder is your own regiment in full retrate!"

"My regiment!" roared Kerchival, jumping up. "Great God, no! Get my horse, Barket! I'll stop that or"—

"Yer harse, is it? Hooroo! I'm wid ye, colonel! There's a row at Finnegan's ball, an' we're goin' to be in it!"

"Kerchival," pleaded Gertrude, throwing her arms around him, "you must not go! You may be dying!"

"Dying nothing! I'm all right now, Gertrude, my life! My regiment won't retreat any farther unless it retreats over my dead body!"

"Goodby, Gertrude, darling! Tell Madeline! Pray for us!"

And two flying figures hurled themselves down the hillside into the roaring maelstrom of battle that filled the valley.

President-Elect Says He Has Confided Names to No One

BRYAN SURE TO BE MEMBER

General Opinion of Democrats at Washington—Palmer of Pennsylvania May Be Strong Link Between White House and Congress—Old-Line Democrats and Progressives Expected to Break

Washington, Feb. 5.—President-elect Wilson has put the unofficial cabinet makers out of business again. Speculation was checked by the declaration of the president-elect that he has confided to no one the names of the men who are to go into the cabinet. During the last week the cabinet guessers have been unusually busy. Several stories from Trenton pretended to speak authoritatively as to the makeup of Wilson's official family. Now it turns out that these forecasts were merely guesses.

Even those Democrats who are in some measure in the confidence of the president-elect do not know who is to go in the cabinet. The expectation here is that Wilson will make public the names of the men to go into his cabinet shortly before he is inaugurated. A few of the Democratic senators have an impression that the names may be given to the public within the next two weeks, but they admit they have no reliable information on which to base this assumption.

Whatever the facts may be about the situation as it affects Bryan, the Democrats in public life have accepted his entrance into the cabinet as a fact. The best evidence that Bryan is to go into the cabinet and knows it is perhaps the fact that recently he has been receiving men prominent in the party at his winter home at Miami, Fla., and discussing with them important matters that will come up for consideration by the new administration.

The prevailing view among the Democrats in congress is that Wilson is not likely to draw on either the senate or house for members of his cabinet, unless he shall make an exception in the case of Representative Palmer of Pennsylvania. Palmer could be of more use to the new president in connection with tariff legislation than any other man.

Democrats in Washington are expecting that when the cabinet is announced the selections will indicate clearly the lines of cleavage along which the party may split before the end of Wilson's administration. That it will split is assumed generally, but exactly how or when is a matter of speculation.

It may be that the selection or the rejection of Palmer will have much to do with holding the Democratic ship of state together. Palmer is a member of the ways and means committee and is in close personal touch with Representative Underwood. Palmer has been recommended to the president-elect by Underwood. Should Wilson place Palmer in the cabinet he would have a strong link between congress and the White House. Palmer seconded the nomination of Wilson for president.

One of the younger Democrats in the house who will be sure to be found on the bandwagon is responsible for the foregoing theory. He himself is certain that the old-line Democrats and the progressives will divide into hostile camps before the tariff session is adjourned. And it may be said that Washington observers expect as violent an insurgent movement among the Democrats as they predicted for the Republicans last spring.

One possibility of peace lies in Oscar W. Underwood, and there is a chance that he may be able to preserve harmony.

$5,000 DAMAGES

and widening the channel and then by the construction of a retaining wall, that all future trouble of this kind would be minimized if not entirely done away with.

Frederick Foster, a Boston lawyer, representing John Stuart, informed the committee that his client had been a boat-builder at Wollaston for more than twenty years. He had established the plant on Sachem brook and operated it ever since. The plant now occupies 42,00 square feet of land on the westerly banks of Sachem brook, and the business consists of a boat building shop, joiners shop and two large storage sheds. The location was formerly used for a coal wharf and vessels of large proportions had been known to dock there. Since Mr. Stuart had been in business he has built a business up to the point where he has a world wide patronage. The building of the bridge had brought about conditions in the channel of brook, that made it practically impossible to get sizeable vessels up to his yard.

To show how his business had suffered by these conditions, Mr. Stuart's counsel submitted letters of inquiry and proposals, that had to be "turned down" because the size of the boats concerned made it too hazardous to attempt to get them through the channel and under the bridge so that the necessary work could be done on them. Pictures and blue prints of boats that had been built before the boulevard bridge was constructed were shown to give the committee an idea of the size of the craft that Stuart had been building before the bridge made it impossible for him to accept contracts for like vessels.

Victor J. Emery's counsel George H. Brown of Quincy testified that Mr. Emery had also been obliged to discontinue his work on big boats and although the business in small boats had increased still the fact that he had refused contract after contract because he did not dare risk getting the boat up to his yard for fear he couldn't get it out again or because the bridge made it an impossibility for bringing the boat in, had operated against the furtherance of his business. Before the boulevard was constructed, hearings were held by the Metropolitan Park Commissioners and the Harbor and Public Lands Commissioners and at these hearings, Mr. Brown said, strong objection was made by Mr. Emery to the bridge as planned. He had been assured that the bridge would be so constructed that no interference would be made to Mr. Emery's business interests. Not wishing to appear to stand in the way of what seemed to be wanted by the public, Emery had not carried the matter further.

Mr. Brown quoted Chairman Hugh Bancroft, of the Port of Boston Commissioners as saying that he thought something ought to be done to reimburse the two business men. Mr. Emery himself was present and told the committee that he is willing to leave the whole matter to any body of fair-minded men. If after a thorough investigation ,such body of men should decide that nothing was due him, he would accept that as final. He invited the committee to withhold any decision they might make until the conditions at Wollaston had been investigated.

Richard R. Freeman, a former representative, told the committee that he sat on a similar committee and heard the first arguments for the bridge boulevard. He gave it as his opinion that a retaining wall built straightaway for 200 feet from the bridge would prevent conditions from becoming so bad again. One mistake that had been made by the Park Commissioners, he said, was the removal of a natural barrier that stood out to sea to the north of the outlet of Sachem brook, and which prevented sand etc. ,from drifting into the brook. That had been removed on the excuse that it interfered with the artistic contour of the beach and boulevard. Had this barrier been allowed to remain, there would have been no necessity for the present retaining wall.

A point brought out by Frank Fessenden Crane, dock commissioner of Quincy, was that the Metropolitan Park Commissioners had tacitly agreed to always provide an 18 foot clearance under the drawless bridge. Had they lived up to the agreement, the conditions that prevail now would have been considerably better. In speaking for the reimbursement bills, Mr. Crane said that if the State could get out of it by paying Messrs. Stuart and Emery only $5000 each, that he would consider it a good trade for the Commonwealth.

Others recorded in favor of the bills were Representative Michael T. Sullivan, President John Hamilton and Secretary John O. Hall of the Quincy Board of Trade. No opposition appeared and the committee closed the hearing ,taking the matter under advisement.

STRIKERS MAKE BIG GAINS

Thousand Boston Garment Makers Ready to to Return to Work

Boston, Feb. 5.—Four of the largest firms yesterday signed the final agreement for a settlement, and twelve others accepted the terms offered by the striking men's garment workers and signed this morning. This means that over 1000 of the 5000 men and women now on strike will be back at their machines and benches before the end of the day.

The second day of the strike ended with such big gains for the strikers that they decided to insist upon their full demands in every instance.

Unlike the strike of the garment workers in New York, no trouble of any kind has occurred. Pickets were posted at many shops where it was thought that attempts would be made to do work, but none of them opened for business.

MANSFIELD NOT IN THE RUNNING

Visitors Had Few Flashes in Pan which Died Out

GAME ONLY ORDINARY

Quincy High easily defeated Mansfield High at the local gym Tuesday, 28 to 9. They did not outplay them except in occasional spurts.

The visitors displayed a crude knowledge of the game. They attempted considerable passing and oftentimes were uncovered. Their shooting eye was in the repair shop however.

The game on the whole was not well played, and was not an interesting contest to watch. A dash of real live spirit, intelligently displayed, with the necessary good fortune on poorly thrown shooting and Quincy could have kept Scorer James Martin quite busy changing his figures.

The first period closed with Quincy leading 19 to 2. The lone basket was shot by mistake. Several good shots were made in this half. Captain Larkin, securing the ball in a corner, with no opportunity of passing to an uncovered man, shot for the net on a straight line and scored for the feature play.

Andrews also threw a difficult basket and received fine applause from the royal rooters. Jenkins was in the game at every opportunity and "Bull Moose" Brown, while not conspicuous was able to outplay his man. Safford, at centre, excelled throughout the game. His quick getting away of the ball after receiving it, the inevitable score, was appreciated.

In the second period both teams scored seven points. The substitution of Sam Prout and Crane did not materially assist Quincy. They played well however but their shooting eye was dulled somehow.

Mansfield tried to liven up the closing moments by what might be termed a sprint, but, they seldom finished a good start by a score. Jenkins or the "Bull Moose" managed to interrupt and pass back to Quincy territory. The summary:

| Quincy High | | Mansfield High |
|---|---|---|
| Andrews rf | | lb Vernon |
| Prout | | |
| Larkin lf | | rb Hallihan |
| Safford c | | c Horton |
| Crane rb | | lf Kennedy |
| Brown | | McGinn |
| Jenkins lb | | rf Huston |

Score 28-9. Goals from floor Andrews 2 Prout, Larkin 3, Safford 7, Vernon 2, Horton, Houston. Goals from fouls Andrews, Prout, Horton. Referee Gordon. Scorer Mansur. Time 20 and 15 m. Timer Atwood. Attendance 300.

JANITOR CLEARS UP BOMB MYSTERIES

Calmly Admits Being Responsible For New York Murders

New York, Feb. 5.—John P. Farrell, a janitor, confessed that he sent to Bernard Herrera last Sunday the bomb which resulted in the death of Mrs. Herrera and the serious injury to Herrera and Miss Fughtman, a boarder.

Then Farrell astonished the police by calmly reciting that he sent the bomb which killed Mrs. Helen Taylor a year ago, adding that Mrs. Taylor was his daughter. Next Farrell solved the mystery surrounding the sending of a bomb last year to Judge Rosalsky. Finally, he explained the death of "Kid" Walker.

He slew Mrs. Taylor, he said, because she had gone wrong. "Kid" Walker was killed, he declared, by a man named Le Strange because Walker had caused Mrs. Taylor's downfall. The attempt on Rosalsky's life was made because the judge had sentenced a criminal, unnamed, to twenty years' imprisonment. The bomb was sent to the judge by a man known to Farrell only as "Tony." Herrera's life was sought, Farrell declared, because Herrera had said he would discharge him from his job as janitor. Farrell was employed at the apartment house where Herrera is superintendent.

POLICE SHAKEUP LIKELY

Crime Rampant In Cleveland While "Golden Rule" Chief Is Absent

Cleveland, Feb. 5.—While Fred Kohler, Cleveland's "golden rule" chief of police, is absent in Panama on a vacation trip, trouble brewing in the police department reached such a stage that Mayor Baker announced that "rumors which have been abroad for some time are sufficient to necessitate action immediately on the chief's return."

The mayor did not state what action would be taken regarding Kohler. There have been half a dozen murders and innumerable thefts and holdups in Cleveland in the last few weeks. It is charged that conditions in the police department are responsible for the small number of arrests that followed.

KELIHER MAKES GOOD HIS THREAT

He Names Grafters In the New York Police Department

INTERVIEWED BY PROSECUTOR

Whitman's Assistant Will Not Give Out Names Mentioned by "Big Bill"—Intercession of President Necessary to Take Convicted Gambler to New York to Give Testimony

Boston, Feb. 5.—"Big Bill" Keliher is making good his threat to show up the alleged grafters in the New York police department who, for a share in the spoils, protected the faro gang while they were fleecing victims in the metropolis. He laid bare the whole story to Deputy Assistant District Attorney Groehl of New York, Receiver Bates of the National City bank, and his law partner, Frank May.

The interview took place behind the walls of the state prison, where "Big Bill" is scheduled to remain for eighteen years. The conference lasted an hour and a half.

What was said by "Big Bill," what charges he may have made gainst any New York officials, or what questions were asked him, the New York assistant district attorney would not divulge.

"I will say nothing of what took place," he stated, but he grudgingly admitted "Big Bill" had mentioned the names of several New York policemen during his conversation, but who these were Goehl refused to say.

When Groehl, Bates and Nay arrived at the state prison, "Big Bill" was brought up from the shop in which he works to the enclosure used by the prison clerical force, in one corner of the big guard room. There the four men, accompanied by the guards, held their conference.

It was learned from Warden Bridges that District Attorney Whitman cannot get Keliher to New York city to testify before the grand jury there unless the President of the United States pardons or paroles him. Keliher is a federal prisoner and the intercession of the president is necessary before he can be taken out of the state.

Keliher could be brought out of the state prison to any place within the boundaries of Massachusetts to testify by an order of the state supreme court. To get him out of the state, however, is a matter that the federal laws provide can only be done by the president.

According to those supposed to be on the inside in the Keliher case the net result of Groehl's visit here is negative. The wise ones say that at best the statements credited to Keliher involving prominent and well-known names are the unsupported charges of a convicted felon, and as such would not carry much weight as evidence on which to base a legal action.

It is probable that whatever talking Keliher may do from now on will not reach the public directly. Governor Foss called Warden Bridges on the telephone yesterday and expressed the opinion that Keliher was being allowed to do altogether too much talking. But there seems to be some question whether the number of visitors permitted to see Keliher can be limited strictly by the prison rules as Keliher is a federal prisoner.

DOCK QUESTION MAIN TOPIC

Com. Crane Would Amend Bill to Make it Satisfactory

BOARD OF TRADE SESSION

The first meeting over which President John L. Hamilton of the Board of Trade presided did not adjourn until 11.35 o'clock Wednesday night. Committee reports were made and general business discussed. The dock proposition came in for its share of comment.

The following new members were elected; Hans M. Hanson, shoe manufacturer, 72 Baxter street, John Stuart, 56 Bromfield street, boat and engine builder, Robert D. Smith, musician, Edward O. Woodward, 34 Elm street, lawyer, Walter M. Jackson, quarry superintendent, Alfred O. Beale, physician and Frederick H. Chase and Nathan G. Nickerson real estate.

John R. Richards of the Public service committee reported the fare reduction between Brewers Corner and Milton Village.

Albert Whitman reported progress for the banquet committee.

William H. Teasdale of the Transportation committee reported that the promised schedule had been again indefinitely postponed because the commissioners demand three minute intervals between trains leaving and entering the station yards. He said that trolley cars would probably meet the late train and that decisive reports would be forthcoming from the railway officials within a week.

J. Winthrop Pratt of the New Industries committee reported that efforts were being made to assist a brick company to locate here. He said the committee was also trying to arrange interviews with a prospective firm and hopes to report within a short time on the attitude of a company recommended by President Hamilton.

It was the sense of the meeting and so voted that the intitiation fee be remitted until April and that all members try and increase the membership of the board.

John R. Richards introduced the subject of suitable approaches to the proposed South Quincy freight yard. He mentioned a street skirting the ward three playground, commencing at Water and connecting with Roberts street as being the solution of the teaming problem. He pointed out the disadvantages of several up hill grades.

A lengthy discussion as to why the betterment act should apply to the proposed street followed, the opinions being about equally divided. It was voted that a committee of nine be appointed to forward a resolution to the proper authorities asking the cooperation of the city with the railroad officials in the fulfillment of the railroad plans. The committee will be later announced.

President Hamilton, Albert Whitman and Harry G. Studley were delegated to the Associated Boards of Trade of Norfolk County.

It was voted that a committee be appointed to assist in a Quincy representation at the New England Industrial and Educationad Exhibition.

Frank Fessenden Crane explained his bill calling for the creation of a dock commission. He said the bill was considered at a meeting of the council Monday evening and that he was not invited to be present. He said that while in the first instance the wording may be ambiguous, the bill certainly stipulated that no money should be expended except by the permission of the council.

He was willing to allow and anxious for the introduction of amendments that would clarify the so called doubtful phrases and read several amendments designed to cover the question.

Under cross examination by Peter T. Fallon he admitted that he had asked Herbert T. Whitman if he would serve as a member of the commission and that Mr. Whitman said that he would not say he would or wouldn't. Mr. Crane felt that the statement was openly made because of the presence of four witnesses and that if Mr. Whitman would act it would be to the city's advantage.

When Mr. Fallon said the commission was now picked Mr. Crane denied any such movement within his knowledge and to balance his open question put to Mr. Whitman, to allay the feelings of his cross examiner, he asked him if he would serve and Mr. Fallon modestly declined.

Mr. Fallon later accused Mr. Crane of being one sided in the selection of a site, of importing men who gave one sided opinion on the proposition and said that the thing throughout was eminently unfair.

A passage of friendly retorts followed between both men and ended by Mr. Crane saying that he would father the bill and support it and if defeated would draw another and work for its passage.

Mr. Foster favored the board endorsing the bill. He said that the main trouble was that every man on Town River had a piece of land to sell and that every councilman cannot see money appropriated without having a finger in the pie.

John R. Richards said he believed in a dock but did not approve hasty measures. He thought other things of more importance than the dock should be now considered. He said with regard to the auditors objection that the power of controller did not go with the office, that he did nothing but foot bills and keep an eye on the proper expenditure of appropriations.

Mr. Crane told that a commission was necessary in order to develop the proposition, that he favored his site because of expert opinion furnished him and that while the Point playground offered good opportunities, it was not equal to the Town River site.

It was voted to extend to Community House Committee, and to Chester I. and Edward Campbell the compliments of the board and its moral support in the new adventure.

McDEVITT CHARGED COMMITTEE MEN BIASED ON GAS REDUCTION BILLS

Openly Declared That Lobbyists of the Company Had No Doubt Fixed Things with Committee

Dwyer of Weymouth and Committee Members Angry at the Imperturbable Duke. Dwyer Says Weymouth Satisfied with Present Rate

(Special to the Ledger)

Senator John J. McDevitt, in supporting his bills for eighty cent gas in Quincy, Weymouth, Brainfree and Hyde Park, before the committee on Public Lighting at the State House, made the unusual statement that he knew certain of the members of that committee to be antagonistic to measures of the kind and anticipated an adverse report. Some of the committee took offense at the language of the senator and one of them made a motion that since the petitioner knew the outcome of the hearing, the committee declare the hearing closed. It was only by the intervention of cooler heads that order was restored in the room and the hearing continued. Senator McDevitt was admonished to stick to facts in pleading his case. As far as Quincy is concerned, the senator said that there seems to be no apparent reason why the citizens of that city should not have eighty cent gas. He declared that the neighboring town of Milton is supplied with the same gas, coming in pipes from the same company as Milton gets. Milton with a population of 5000 gets her gas for eighty cents, while Quincy is obliged to pay $1.30. He quoted the city council as unanimously in favor of the reduction and charged the Citizens Gas Light Co., with repeated attempts to transgress the laws regarding tearing up streets etc. He declared that the lobbyists of the gas company had worked on the committee to defeat the bills and then made the assertion that no doubt those lobbyists had "fixed the thing" with the committee. He said he supposed the bills would be defeated.

Representative John F. Dwyer, of Weymouth, said that Senator McDevitt had not mentioned the matter of 80 cent gas for Weymouth to him, and that few, people in Weymouth have been even approached on the subject. There is no agitation in that town for lower rates in price of gas and Representative Dwyer said he candidly and honestly thought that everybody who takes gas in Weymouth is satisfied that the company is selling it as cheaply as it can afford to do under the circumstances. While he wanted cheaper prices if the company could afford it ,he gave it as his opinion that they have not been there long enough to know what amount of gas will be used in the town. He called the bill an outrage and refused to answer questions that Senator McDevitt wanted to put to him. In answer to a question from the chair Representative Dwyer said he had never heard one word of complaint about the service, quality or price of gas in Weymouth.

John L. Hamilton, president of the Quincy Board of Trade said he deQiuncy Board of Trade said he deprecated the remarks and attitude of the board of trade thinks that gas should be lower in Quincy, still Mr. Hamilton thought it a very much better proceeding to take the request to the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners which has the power to order reductions rather than to ask the legislature to act over the board's head. This was upheld by the committee. Mr. Hamilton said that while Quincy gas-consumers pay more for their gas than do the people of Boston still he thought they get a much better quality of gas. If a reduction in price means a proportionate lowering of quality then he said he would rather see the old price remain.

A. L. Whitman, of Quincy, claimed that he is as much to blame as anyone for the agitation towards cheaper gas. When the Consolidated Gas Companies of Boston took over the Citizens Company Mr. Whitman said they paid a fabulous price for a poor equipment and a poorer company. However, an immediate reduction in price of gas was made and since then several reductions have been made. However, if the Consolidated is selling gas to both Milton and Qiuncy and sending it through the same pipes, Mr. Whitman could not see why crossing the boundary line should make such a difference in the prices of the commodity to the people of the two towns. He told the committee that Mayor Stone and City Solicitor McAnarney were unaware that this hearing was to be held today. In fact he said that they both had arranged to be present at a conference with the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners tomorrow to arrange for a hearing on this same subject.

Representative Michael T. Sullivan, of Quincy spoke for the bill and Representative William J. Leslie was recorded in favor.

In opposition, Arthur A. Ballantyne counsel for the Citizen's Gas Light Company said that the difference in the prices of Milton and Quincy gas is easily explained. Milton is served as a part of the Dorchester district which is very thickly populated and the company can serve them much cheaper than it can Quincy. He said it was already provided that citizens of a community who are dissatisfied with the rate of gas can have their cases heard before the Gas Commissioners. He declared that bringing in a legislative petition was ignoring a remedy for just such cases and that he thought the committee could not reasonably grant the petition anything but "leave to withdraw."

The committee took the matter under advisement, but it was evident that most of the members were decidedly ruffled and it will be a surprise to all if they report favorably upon the matter.

QUINCY YACHT CLUB TO ELECT

Several Amendments Also Offered at Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Quincy Yacht club will be held tonight in Electa hall at 8 o'clock. In addition to the election of officers for the ensuing year there are several amendments to by-laws proposed.. These in brief are as follows: To provide that six of the members of the Executive committee, other than the club officers on the committee, shall hold office for two years, except that when first elected the three receiving the highest vote shall serve for two years and the other three for one year, to provide that the House committee, shall consist of eleven members instead of twelve. That six members of the committee other than than the officers shall hold office for two years except that when first elected the three receiving the highest vote shall serve for two years and the next three for one year. Thereafter each member elected shall be for two years.

The next amendment is the important one and is in relation to the House committee. It is proposed to amend this by striking out the words "subject always to the Executive Committee." In other words it gives the House committee full charge of the club house and property, etc., and for which the Executive committee will have no voice.

The last amendment is to Article V, paragraph 2, which reduces the number of members of the House committee from seven to six.

There is practically no contest for any of the officers to be voted for.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Not to be out done by "Big Bill," Brer Becker is telling the New York public something about crookedness from his prison cell.

Being a crook and murderer has its compensations after all, a greater field of publicity is offered this particular class.

That New York bomb thrower has been too long at large. He should be placed under restraint.

The person who sues for $5000 on finding a steak bad may be able to create an improvement in the brand hereafter.

An $18,000 craft to pursue mufflerless motor boats. What's the matter with waiting on the shore until they come in and save the state that amount and the future maintenance of the craft.

The Garment workers strike in Boston apears to be a most properly conducted affair.

Will Helen Gould and her husband be able to secure a little home like quietude abroad?

The first straw hats have arrived from the Orients, but there has been no great demand for them along the state boulevard as yet.

Edison has passed up a $1,000,000 for his new talking moving picture machine. Edison is lucky that he is not in the same position of a good many poor inventors of former days who sold the products of their brain and industry for a song and others grew rich on the proceeds.

The young ladies have made the usual pledges of abstaining from candy, ice cream, the theatre and a few other things during the lenten season. How long will they last?

Mayor Fitzgerald is now busying himself about the Harvard-Dartmouth football game. He is busy all the time, but one has to look hard for public results.

AN $18,000 BOAT.

There is a resolve before the legislature authorizing the appropriation of $18,000 by the state to build a boat for the enforcement of the so-called muffler law on small motor boats. In the name of all that is reasonable where is the necessity of such an outlay to say nothing of the subsequent annual amounts which will be necessary for the maintenance of such a craft? It is not a launch that is contemplated but an ocean liner.

Why should the state police have a launch for this purpose? It is hardly necessary to chase every motor boat out to sea to get the owner for violation of the muffler law. The boats hardly make trips across the ocean. When they get beyond the harbor bar the skipper and owners have reached what they consider the limit of their powers and endurance. Any one can go around any place in this state and in half a day pick up all the boats, with the names and owners of the same who are violating the muffler law.

A person could sit on the capstan of a wharf and check off all such boats as they puffed their way to their landing place. This resolve is nothing more or less than a means of providing a summer pleasure cruising craft for some officials at the expense of the state.

It is a joke to consider that a boat costing $18,000 is necessary to round up the owners of motor boats operating without a muffler. A trip around to the various ship yards at this time would clean up all the information necessary on the subject. It would be too bad to inflict upon officials the rigors and hardships of daily trips in an $18,000 motor boat. If they are prone to the influences of mal de mar, the hardship would be greater. No indeed the state legislature should be more considerate of state officials. It would be a cruelty to ship them out in an $18,000 boat for cruises along the shore in the summer time. No such cruelty should be permitted.

SWAPPING JOBS.

According to all accounts Gov. Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald have indulged in one of their periodical love feasts. All their meetings and greetings have not been of the lovey-dovey kind. They have been known to throw left handed compliments at each other in a way which looked as though the harmony game was unknown to them. Yet they have come together in peaceful numbers after each little war dance. Once Fitz was so peeved that when the Governor said "now old boy," Fitz is credited with chippily retorting, "don't you old boy me." But they have patched up. And now they are seriously considering the project of swapping jobs. The Governor to slide down to the chair of the Mayor of Boston and Fitz to make an aviation to the Governor's chair. Nice little arrangement indeed. But there are a few politicians, a few office holders and numerous thousands of private citizens who have not yet been deprived of the right to exercise the right of franchise who may have a word to say upon the subject when the swapping bee is entered into with full vigor and understanding.

THE LENTEN SEASON.

The Holy season of lent was formally ushered in Wednesday, and the event was marked in some way by most of the churches all over civilized world. This particular period of the year when pleasures are supposed to be cast aside for the time being and a more serious consideration is given to the religious side of life is so well understood that no explanation is needed for its existence and operation. Christian people the world over accept it and the checks and restraints which are engendered by its limitations. People observe the period in different ways. The Catholic church more particularly draws attention to the fasting and prayer which should be followed as part of the lenten exercises. In olden times, the rules and regulations of lent were more rigid than they are at the present day. Practices which are a danger to health and strength are not countenanced at the present time and the old and extremely youthful are not included in the list of those who should fast. Neither are the hard working people. But all churches appeal for a time of better living, which cannot fail to have an effect on the habits of people during the balance of the year. Right living during the Lenten season paves the way for an acceptance of that condition and makes it easier for people to keep up this state for the entire year, or at least as near it as possible and they are the better for the influences which the lenten season wields.

CONGRESSIONAL TARDINESS.

The annual banquet of the Board of Trade, will be held next week. The committee has been hard at work planning for the event. Congressman-elect Edward Gilmore has been forwarded an invitation to attend. Up to yesterday, the committee had not received any reply from him. The committee from necessity must have some advance notice of the guests who are to be provided for. If the Congressman-elect does not care to attend the banquet he should apprise the community of his intentions in the matter. If he plans to come he should perform a similar service in that event. At any rate, the committee having sent an invitation to the member elect from this district should receive some acknowledgement. Failure to receive acknowledgement of the invitation by the committee, might at the last moment cause some little inconvenience in the caring for an arrangement of guests. No doubt the tardiness of Mr. Gilmore is an oversight which he will probably remedy.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

Editor Daily Ledger:

The records of Warren S. Parker, published a few days ago, woke memories of a century ago. The same Ebenezer Green that ploughed thirty acres in January, 1815, owned the first string of sleigh bells and the first buffalo robe that made their appearance in Quincy. Neither did he forget his mother who lived in Chester, N. H., for when good sleighing came, and farm work could rest, he took his good horse and sleigh, with wife and uncle Solomon Nightingale and his wife Sally, and drove ot Chester to see his mother. They started in the morning before sunrise ,and stopped in Dorchester for breakfast and to rest the horses . They took dinner further on, and rested again. At Sunset they were at Chester, sixty miles from Quincy, and took supper with Mother Green. A long distance to travel in one day a century ago.

NEW SYSTEM HELD IN FAVOR

Gas Consumers Think It More Satisfactory Than Old

SAME MEN ON THE JOB

From what can be learned the subscribers of the Citizens Gas Light Co. seem to be taking kindly to the new system of meter reading which is to go into effect the first of March believing with the officials of the company that it will bring the subscribers into closer touch with the company and be of benefit to both parties. As one lady expresses it she never has the same man come to read her meter twice and with the many sneak thieves that are constantly trying all sorts of schemes to get into houses that they may ply their trade, she has to be constantly on guard to see that an imposter is not admitted. Up to the present time it is seldom that the same man comes twice to read the meters. According to the company's statement when all meters have to be read within a few days it is necessary to employ men from the Boston company to do the work. These men have no interest other than to get the money that goes with the work.

With the new scheme however the same set of men will be regularly employed so that subscribers will become familiar with the meter reader. Another thing is the matter of complaints. It often happens that when complaints are made to the meter readers who come from out of town the complaint goes into one ear and out of the other. With a regular employed man however subscribers may be assured that their complaint will reach the proper authorities and be attended to.

CHOIR CHAPTER GAVE MUSICALE

A most successful musicale was that held in the Park and Downs church, Wednesday evening by the Choir Chapter. The affair was under the direction of Ernest Leslie Mehaffey, organist of the church.

The artists were many and talented, a most acceptable program being presented.

Miss Zelma Hicks opened the evening with a reading of the fourth act of "Mary of Magdela" a translation from the German made for Mrs. Minnie Madden Fisk.

The meditation from "Thais" by Massenet was the contribution of Mrs. Marguerite Pearson Moss, the violinist and was followed by a group of three baritone solos by Thomas Nelson Shufelt, "Ah, Tis a dream," by Hawley, "Trankadillo" by Malloy, and "Until" by Sanderson.

With fine soprano voice Mrs. Louise S. Reynolds sang "'Jar pleure en reve" by Hue. Mr. Shufelt followed with "My dreams" by Tosti.

"Les Adieux" by Sarasate sung by Mrs. Moss preceded a very pleasing duet by Mrs. Reynolds and Mr. Shufelt, entitled "The passage birds farewell" by Heildach.

"Hennessey and Dooley" one of the famous Dooley stories by Dunne as read by Miss Hicks was given a fine reception.

As ushers were the following young ladies: Mabel Atkins, Mabel Doring, Miriam Breen, Geraldine Scott, Hazel Henry, Ethel Axberg and Mabel Stewart.

The Choir Chapter is an organization of members of the choir and has been active in raising money for the new organ to which fund the proceeds of this entertainment will be applied.

BOSTON'S MEN OF PROMINENCE

The lecture "Whos' who in Boston" by Bishop John W. Hamilton, the first in a lecture course of four entertainments, proved a great attraction at the Wollaston Methodist church, Wednesday evening.

The bishop's wide acquaintance with Boston's prominent people of a quarter century and more ago gave the lecture a personal touch that added greatly to its charm.

The poets and politicians as well as the authors and educators came in for bits of personal description that were highly interesting.

The rise of the Adams's was pictured by Bishop Hamilton and the proposal of John Adams to Abigail Smith and the resultant sermon preached by her father a clergyman of Weymouth were among the amusing stories told.

Nursery rhymes and their impression upon American public, the degradations of tourists at home and abroad were other points touched upon by the speaker.

The story of Mary and her lamb was simply told and an intimate description given of the original Mary who was Miss Sawyer of Sterling.

The great peace jubilee at Boston was vividly described and the entrance of President Grant and his staff in the Coliseum to the tune of "See the conquering hero comes," sounding from ten thousand throats.

The evening closed with the singing of America and benediction by Bishop Hamilton.

NEW GAS LIGHTS.

The new arc gas lights that were installed in the Council Chamber at City Hall were lighted for the first time Monday night at the Council meeting. At the same time the electric lights were also burning the two making the chamber almost as light as day. There are four of the new gas lights . They give an exceptionally brilliant white light and are a great addition to the lighting system of the Council Chamber. The lights are operated by a push button near the desk of President Bryant. This button operates a little air pump which turns on the gas which is ignited by the pilot light. The lights are extinguished by the same operation.

SECOND PRIZE.

Although a valuable diamond ring was offered as the second prize in the contest, it has not figured to any great extent thus far, but Mrs. Marnock says she prefers the ring to the Washington trip. ## WALTHFR CLASS IN COMBINATION

Of Church Social and Ladies' Night Gathering

A combined church social and ladies night of the Walther class was held in the chapel of the Wollaston Baptist church Wednesday evening.

John Thomas, humorist , and the Stratford quartette were the entertainers. The latter composed of Oliver Langille, E. G .Adams, John Bone and Avard L. Walker was much appreciated

John Thomas with his screamingly funny facial contortions and eccentric mannerisms kept his audience in gales of merriment during his appearance.

Their songs included a vocal march "The trumpet calls away" by Dow, "Reveries" by Storch and "In Absence" by Buch.

A social hour and refreshments followed. John L. Miller presided during the entertainment.

AGAINST WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE.

Many of Washington state's lately enfranchised women are figuratively up in arms over a statement made by Mrs. Hugh Fraser, sister of the late Marion Crawford, the novelist, and herself a writer of note. Mrs. Fraser, who lately went to Spokane to live, said that the idea of women aspiring to political prominence is "wholly distastful and utterly ludicrous," adding: "A woman is simply not fitted temperamentally to take two proposals and balance one against the other. She is creature of impulses and intuitions, not a creature of reason. She is incapable of passing judgment on the great national questions that agitate society, to decide upon great policies, to make peace and war. Her vision of the future ends with Saturday night. Yet there are places in civic affairs which the women are fitted to fill capably. She must deal with the vice question. Men will not do so. She must have the care of children. On hospital boards, on charitable commissions—this is woman's field in politics."

SCHOOL NOTES.

As bearing upon the bill which comes before Massachusetts Legislature this year providing for the continuation school of children between 14 and 16 who have left school to go to work, it is of interest to note that nearly two years ago the legislature of Ohio required all children between the ages of 14 and 16 who had not completed the elementary courses to attend school for not exceeding 8 hours per week. Employees are compelled to give such employees time for that purpose. This is no doubt the beginning of what is apt to become a national movement. The argument of Supt. Maxwell of New York in favor of such schools is as follows:— "After observing and studying these schools for 3 years, I am now convinced that the attempt to give instruction in the ordinary elementary branches in the evening to boys and girls of from 14 to 16 is a gigantic blunder. Those who are employed during the day with unusual physical strength and unusual mental energy can no doubt attend evening schools for four evenings a week and benefit by it. Most boys and girls who are employed during the day need the evening for exercise and recreation. That they need instruction for their own sakes and for the sake of the community goes without saying. How and when are they to get it? It has been demonstrated over and over again that they do not get it advantageously when the school time is taken out of their time for recreation —the evening hours.

It follows that if they are to get it at all, they must get it out of their employer's time. I recommend therefore, that in lieu of the evening elementary schools for minors, a system of continuation schools from 7 to 9 a. m. and from 4 to 6 p. m. be organized. that legislation be sought to require employers to give to each employee under 19 years of age four to six hours a week for 40 weeks each year and to constrain young people between these ages to attend such schools regularly."

The regular monthly meeting of the Quincy School Masters' club was held in the library of the High school Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Ivan J. Smith, sub-master of the High school led the discussion. There was the usual large attendance at the meeting.

The school department is now preparing its annual budget which will be ready for consideration by the Committee before the middle of the month. It is already certain that the opening of two new schools last year together with the increased number of teachers required for the High school will entail a heavy increase in the fixed charges of the department. The Montclair school alone has called for eight additional teachers.

The half yearly supply of fuel has all been delivered at the school buildings and the chemists test of the coal taken for analysis has been received. In accordance with the terms of the city contract based on this test, a rebate of approximately $100 will be received on the soft coal order while the hard coal will be paid for at the rate of $6.50 for furnace and $6.95 for egg coal which is considerably below the current retail price. As all the coal is now subject to test, payment is made on the basis of a specified number of heating units per ton.

The School Committee report is now in the hands of the printer and delivery is expected early next month.

A large number of pipes and valves at the High school have started to leak recently requiring plumbing repairs.

The lunch room at the High school is having a very successful year, its receipts averaging from $15 to $18 per day, easily covering all expenses.

Although Feb. 12 is not a public holiday all the schools of the city will observe it with some form of special exercises.

At the Wollaston school, the exercises will be held in the assembly hall with a speaker to address the children and parents assembled.

MASSACHUSETTS FIELDS.

Ernest L. Collins, Head Master, Quincy High school, is the speaker at the Parents' Teachers' meeting this evening.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

Soloist, Miss Victoria M. H. Zeller. A report on the school Lecorations will be given.

There will also be a candy sale by the Class of 1913 to raise money to purchase a picture as a class gift.

All are welcome and it is hoped that a large number will be present.

The pupils of Grade VII accompanied by Miss Shyne are having a sleigh ride this afternoon. Grade VIII is planning a ride for Friday evening.

Because of a number of cases of measles, Grade IV was not in session Wednesday. The room has been thoroughly fumigated.

Remember the Dramatics by the Wollaston Free Kindergarten to be given in Assembly Hall next Thursday and Friday, Feb. 13 and 14. Tickets are on sale by the school children. It promises to be a very fine entertainment and a large patronage is desired.

TOO MANY DESERTERS

American Steel and Wire Strike Comes to an End

Pittsburg, Feb. 6.—The strike at the Rankin and Braddock plants of the American Steel and Wire company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel corporation, has ended. Thomas Flynn, a national organizer of the American Federation of Labor, last night advised the men still on strike to return to their positions if they could secure them.

Desertions in the ranks of the strikers had left less than 200 men out. Flynn condemned the deserters, alleging the strike fell flat because of the action of skilled workers "who were afraid of their positions and returned to work."

KILL BILL AIMED AT WOMEN SMOKERS

"Leave to Withdraw" Reported on Greenwood Measure

Boston, Feb. 6.—The committee on public health filed in the house leave to withdraw a report on the bill of Representative Greenwood to prohibit women from smoking and to prohibit the sale of tobacco to them in any form.

The Greenwood bill provided a penalty of $50 for violation of either section and under its provisions a woman seen smoking in her home could be haled into court and fined.

At the public hearing held by the committee on his bill Greenwood declared that a woman who smoked "was either immoral or would be."

DOUBLE MURDER IN PARIS

Ex-Official and Nurse Killed by Supposed Uncaptured Auto Bandit

Paris, Feb. 6.—A double murder, supposed to be an act of vengeance by an uncaptured accomplice of the gang of automobile bandits whose trial is now going on, was committed here when Edouard Peltier, formerly chief of the bureau of pardons at the ministry of justice, was killed in his home, together with a woman nurse in attendance.

Peltier was a man of considerable wealth. He was found strangled in a chair in his library, and the nurse's body lay in another room, where she had, from all appearances, been hacked to death with an axe.

An investigation by the police of her past has given rise to the theory that she and the murderer were associated with the "Demon Chauffeur" Benot and his gang. It is thought she admitted the murderer to the house and he, after strangling Peltier, made an end of the sole witness. About $1000 in cash was stolen.

THREE WIVES IN COURT

All Plead For Bigamist, Who Gets Year and a Half Sentence

New York, Feb. 6.—Although all three of Isadore Steinberg's wives pleaded for him, he was sentenced to a year and a half in prison for bigamy.

Sternberg had admitted the possession of two wives, but he explained he had married the second so that he might use her dowry to send his first wife back to Russia. The first Mrs. Sternberg, he said, was homesick and consented to this plan.

An officer who investigated this story told the court it was untrue, but he unexpectedly found a third wife who was in court yesterday with the other two.

Wives numbers two and three said they did not blame Steinberg for seeking a new mate, because his former marital experiences had been so unpleasant.

REBELLIOUS KROOS ARE SLAUGHTERED

Sharp Defeat Administered Under American Officer

Monrovia, Liberia, Feb. 6.—A crushing defeat with heavy slaughter was inflicted on the Kroo natives of Liberia by Major Ballard, one of the American officers loaned some time ago to the Liberian government.

Dispatches just received here state that Ballard, with a force of Liberian troops, razed the Kroo stronghold at Rock Cass after a severe fight. Ballard's force lost eight killed and fifteen wounded.

The government here declares the recalcitrant Kroos were responsible for the recent arrival of the German gunboats Panther and Eber off the Liberian coast, the German residents in Liberia having represented to the German government that their lives and interests were in danger.

RESORT TO VIOLENCE

Mill Strikers Storm Electric Cars and Barricade the Tracks

North Providence, R. I., Feb. 6.—Electric cars were stoned and rails blocked by strikers at the Esmond cotton mill. The cars which were attacked contained operatives from another mill. Several people were cut and bruised.

The strikers pulled down a stone wall near a cemetery and used the stones to erect a barricade across the car tracks. Attempts are said to have been made to cut down telegraph and telephone poles.

The guard around the mill, where a strike has been in progress for about three weeks, was increased and preparations were made to provide a larger force to protect the property and the employes who are working.

Jury Finds Priest Was Falsely Imprisoned In Insane Asylum

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Feb. 6.—Fifteen thousand dollars damages for false imprisonment was awarded by a jury here to Rev. L. A. Klauder after a trial lasting ten days.

The defendants in the action were Bishop Gabriels of the Catholic diocese of Ogdensburg, Coadjutor Bishop Conroy and Drs. W. B. Hanbridge and W. G. Cooper of the Ogdensburg state asylum for the insane.

The plaintiff alleged the defendants had caused him to be placed in the asylum upon his refusal to relinquish his parish at Faust, near here.

TEACHERS' SALARIES.

In connection with the present agitation of the matter of increasing the salaries of Quincy school teachers it may be of interest to read what William Ellery Channing had to say as to the pay of teachers. He said this almost eighty years ago, but his ideal is still, sad to say, far from realization. In his essay on "Education" he says:—

"One of the discouraging views of society ..... is, that whilst much is said of education, hardly any seem to feel the necessity of securing to it the best minds in the community, and of securing them at any price. A juster estimate of this office begins to be made in our great cities, but generally it seems to be thought that anybody may become a teacher. The most moderate ability si thought to be competent to the most important profession in society. Strange, too, as it may seem, on this point parents incline to be economical. They who squander thousands on dress, furniture, amusements, think it hard ot pay comparatively small sums to the instructor, and through this ruinous economy, and this ignorance of the dignity of a teacher's vocation, they rob their children of aid for which the treasures of worlds can afford no compensation.

There is no office higher than that of a teacher of youth. No office should be regarded with greater respect The first minds in the community should be encouraged to assume it. Parents should do all but impoverish themselves to induce such to become the guardians and guides of their children. Here they should be lavish, whilst they straighten themselves in everything else. They should wear the cheapest clothes, live on the plainest food, if they can in no other way secure to their families the best instruction. No language can express the cruelty or folly of that economy which, to leave a fortune to a child, starves his intellect, impoverishes his heart. There should be no economy in education. Money should never be weighed against the soul of a child. It should be poured out like water for the child's intellectual and moral life."

BELATED CELEBRATION.

A supper and dance in honor of Robert Burns was given Wednesday evening in Clan McGregor hall by the Bicycle club of Quincy. The affair was attended by the whole membership. President George W. McKenzie delivered a short address. The following committee had charge: George W. McKenzie, chairman, John Hackett, Thomas Riley, Charles McKenzie, H. Smith, J. Robinson. George Craig, C. McDonald, M. McDonald, William Elrick and James Watson.

MUFFLING OF MOTOR BOATS

Underwater Exhaust and Display of Name or Number Required

A new motor boat muffling bill is before the legislature and another provision calls for the expenditure of $18,000 for the construction of a boat to enable the state police to enforce the law against those who do not have mufflers on their boats.

"It shall be unlawful to use a boat probelled in whole or in part by gas, gasoline or naphtha, or any other method of internal combustion unless the same is provided with an underwater exhaust or a muffler, and unless the same be duly licensed and carrying its number or name displayed as required in this act. An underwater exhaust within the meaning of this act must be a device permanently affixed to the hull of the boat in such a manner that its opening shall be at all times at least two inches below the water line.

"The district police shall make and publish rules and regulations for the effective muffling, in accordance with section one of this act. Said regulations may determine the maximum distance at which the exhaust of a reasonably muffled motor boat should be heard. The district police shall issue from year to year licenses good till the first day of the next January to all who apply who have complied with statute law and said rules and regulations. The fee for such license shall not be more than twenty-five cents. Each boat so licensed shall display in a conspicuous position upon both sides of its bow and upon its stern its license number in figures not less than three inches high, and of a contrasting color from the color of the boat, and well spaced out; provided, however, that the district police or agents may permit the use of the name of the boat instead of its license number.

"The chief of the district police may designate official or officials of any city or town who shall have the power to grant the licenses.

"Violations of this act or of the rules and regulations shall be punished by a fine of not more than twenty-five dollars. The act will take effect 30 days after approval by the governor."

"EXPOSURE" OF ALLEGED GRAFT

Keliher Won't Give Details Unless He Receives Payment

WHITMAN MUST COME ACROSS

Message Brought by Assistant District Attorney of New York to His Chief, Who Will Not Pay For Information of Doubtful Value—Boston Prosecutor's Opinion of "Big Bill"

New York, Feb. 6.—William J. Keliher, the confidence man now serving a term in the Massachusetts state prison, wants District Attorney Whitman of New York to pay him money before he will furnish further information in support of his declaration that he purchased protection from the police while running a "pool room" in this city.

Deputy Assistant District Attorney Groehl so reported to Whitman on his return from Boston, where he had an interview with "Big Bill" at the prison. Keliher told Whitman's representative that he had paid graft to the police in New York, but refused to go into the details.

Keliher said Whitman would either have to "come across" with the money or the Massachusetts authorities would have to grant him "concessions that will make it worth while to tell what I know."

He added, however, that he would consult with counsel in the matter and would let Whitman know by Saturday just what his "terms" would be.

The district attorney will not under any circumstances pay Keliher, but if Keliher is willing to talk on any other basis he will send Groehl back to Boston for another interview with him on Monday.

United States District Attorney French of Boston, who convicted Keliher of complicity in the looting of the National City bank of Cambridge, told Groehl that the man had "a passion for sensationalism" and was "wholly unworthy of belief."

"I doubt very much," said Whitman, "that Keliher will give us anything that we can rely upon. He told Groehl a lot of sensational stories about police graft in New York, but refused to give names, dates and places.

He said, for instance, that the police helped him to make fake raids on his pool room and that they supplied him with police uniforms which his own employes frequently used for the purpose. This is important, if true. I doubt it."

RETAINED TEN PERCENT

New York Policeman Gathered In $75,000 Graft In Five Years

New York, Feb. 6.—Eugene Fox, the self-confessed graft collecting policeman who will tell the extraordinary grand jury a story of graft levied by the police in Harlem, made a confession to the district attorney, supplementary to the one he first made, in which he figures he handled $75,000 in five years in graft money for certain superiors in the department.

Ten percent of this Fox told the prosecutor he retained for himself. The rest was divided between his captain and men who represented the inspector responsible for his precinct. Some of the money found its way "down town" to police headquarters, according to Fox.

PARDON IS HELD UP

Promoter King Must Remain In Prison at Least Another Week

Boston, Feb. 6.—Cardenio F. King must wait at least another week for his freedom. The expected liberation of the promoter was not effected at the meeting of the governor's council yesterday, although a discussion was held on it lasting two hours.

The delay was a surprise to everybody. It was accepted as a foregone conclusion that some form of pardon or parole would be determined upon and that King would be granted his freedom last evening.

LOCKS ARE BARRED

New York, Feb. 6.—If you send your traveling bag by parcel post be sure to leave it unlocked. A New York traveling man learned this lesson when the postman brought him a grip he had left in Pittsburg and for which he had wired.

The parcel bore 64 cents in stamps, but because the bag was locked it came as first classs matter and the owner had to pay $6.40.

Youth Spanked In Court

Fat Dividend on Tobacco

New York, Feb. 6.—More than $6,000,000 will be distributed among the holders of the common stock of the American Tobacco company from a 15 percent lividend just declared.

Certificates for subscriptions will be issued up to that hour, and Daily Ledgers with coupons may be obtained as long as they last, at the Ledger office.

The prize winners in the contest will be announced as soon after Feb. 18 as possible, probably in the Daily Ledger of Feb. 20, giving the winner of the first prize over a week to make arrangements to attend the Inauguration at Washington.

DATES TO REMEMBER

Feb. 18—Polls close.
Feb. 20—Prize winners.
Feb. 28—On to Washington.

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

LED IN SOCIETY FOR MANY YEARS

Bradley Martin, American Capitalist, Dies In London Home

SERIES OF SOCIAL TRIUMPHS

Began Shortly After Death of Mrs. Martin's Father, Who Left Vast Fortune to Her—Became Famous For Magnificence of Dinners and Balls, Bringing Forth Censure

His daughter Cornelia was married in 1893 to the Earl of Craven. Mrs. Bradley Martin and the Earl and Countess of Craven were present at the time of Martin's death.

The funeral will take place after the arrival of his son, Bradley Martin, Jr., and the dead man's brother, Frederick T. Martin, from New York. It will then be decided where the interment will be made.

For many years the Bradley Martins were in the forefront of New York society leaders. Of late they have spent most of their time abroad, either in London or at their Scotch estate, Balmacaan.

Their social triumphs began in 1883, about two years after the death of Isaac Sherman, Mrs. Martin's father. Except for an annuity to his widow, Sherman left his entire fortune, estimated at $6,000,000, to his daughter. They threw open their Twentieth street home to society at a series of elaborate dinners in 1883 and 1884, at which so lavish a display of wealth was made that even New York was impressed.

In 1885 they gave a notable ball at their New York residence. A temporary supper room was built over the rear grounds of the house, and its rich appointments, with the handsome favors, established the Bradley Martins as entertainers of the first rank.

It was on their famous ball given in 1897, however, that their chief fame rests. No less than $250,000 was spent on this event, which caused an international stir. Clergymen censured the expenditure from their pulpits. The costumes were the most magnificent ever seen at a costume ball in New York, and in addition to the big ball room of the Waldorf, where the affair was held, fifteen rooms of the hotel were set apart for the guests.

The Martins had three children, two of whom, Bradley Martin, Jr., and the Countess of Craven, are living. Although Martin spent the last ten years of his life in London, and the family figured in the news, principally through controversies with United States customs officials over payment of duties, he declared on a visit to New York a year ago that he not forgotten the city, but preferred the repose of English life to the striving characteristic of America.

FARRELL'S "CONFESSION"

Bomb Man Repudiates Story He Told Under Alleged Pressure

New York, Feb. 6.—John P. Farrel, janitor and confessed bomb constructor, was arraigned before the coroner and remanded to await the action of the grand jury.

Farrell made to an assistant district attorney a sweeping denial of all the statements credited to him Tuesday. He declared he knew nothing regarding regarding the Rosalsky, Taylor or Herrera bombs.

He admitted having made a "confession" at police headquarters, and explained that he had been "hounded" until he decided to "get it over with."

The police have confirmed the prisoner's placing the Herrera bomb but they have not established whether he lied or has hallucinations with reference to the bomb which killed Mrs. Helen Taylor and the bomb sent to Judge Rosalsky.

DECLARED INSANE

Man Who Threatened King George and Actress Goes to Asylum

London, Feb. 6.—Percy W. Collins, who sent threatening letters to King George and to Lillah McCarthy, an actress, demanding money, was found insane at the Old Bailey court, and sent to the asylum at Brookmoore.

It was admitted by the prosecution that Collins was in an insane asylum from October, 1907, to March, 1909, but Prosecutor Muir said he would not assume the insanity of the defendant until it should be proved.

Bill to Guard White Women

Winnipeg, Feb. 6.—A bill to prohibit the employment of white women or white girls in any place of business owned or managed by Chinese or Japanese has just been introduced in the legislature by the government of Manitoba.

Hobo's "Graft" Is Revealed

Liverpool, Feb. 6.—John Kelley, hobo, spent much time at ease in Cirencester hospital until suspicious doctors discovered his ability to display symptoms of mumps at will.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

VEAL PIES.

RICH and nourishing are veal pies. For these pastries ends of the meat, which are inexpensive, may be used so they are useful when economy is to be practiced.

Cold veal may be utilized when baked pie is to be made. Fresh veal is required to give richness to the potpie.

When cooking the potpie do not take off the lid until the dumplings or dough is done, for it may then be heavy.

A Delicious Baked Pie.

Baked Veal Pie.—Take a pound and a half of stewing veal, wipe with a wet cloth, cut the meat into small pieces, put into saucepan, cover with boiling water, add two tablespoonfuls of cut onion and boil slowly one and a quarter hours. Add one tablespoonful of salt, one-quarter teaspoonful of white pepper and two cupfuls of diced raw potatoes. Boil twenty minutes and add one teaspoonful of finely chopped parsley and one tablespoonful of flour mixed with a little cold water. Boil two minutes.

Place between crust made as follows: Two cupfuls of flour sifted into a bowl with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one teaspoonful of salt. Rub in two teaspoonfuls of shortening very lightly and add just enough cold water to hold together. Divide and roll out.

Line a pan with the dough and put in the veal and potatoes, leaving a little of the gravy to put over the top. Roll out the other half of the dough, put over the veal and brush the crust with the gravy. Put in a hot oven and bake twenty minutes.

A Nice Potpie.

Veal Potpie With Potatoes.—Wash a knuckle or brisket of veal and put into a kettle with boiling water more than will cover it. Take off the scum as it rises. When the meat is nearly tender add two teaspoonfuls of salt and half a teaspoonful of pepper and a tablespoonful of butter. When the meat is almost cooked add five potatoes which have been peeled and cut into halves.

For the batter take three cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a saltspoonful of salt and a cupful of sweet milk. Drop this batter, a spoonful at a time, into the kettle with the meat. Then do not take off the cover for half an hour or the batter will be flat. When done take out on a platter.

For the sauce wet two teaspoonfuls of flour with cold water. Rub until smooth and then stir into the gravy. Then put in another teaspoonful of butter and cook until it thickens. Pour over the potpie and serve.

SOME STEAMED PUDDINGS.

A STEAMED pudding is generally wholesome. The steaming may be done by cooking in a steamer and by contact with the steam, or it may be done by cooking the pudding in a double boiler by means of the heat from the steam in the surrounding vessel.

Fruit Puddings.

Lemon Pudding.—Butter a small pudding dish, fill it with slices of thinly cut stale bread and butter sprinkled with sugar and grated lemon peel. Make a custard by mixing half a pint of milk with two well beaten eggs. Pour this over the bread. Let it soak for an hour. Cover with buttered paper and steam for an hour and a quarter. Turn out and serve with fruit or lemon sauce.

Date Pudding.—Take a quarter of a pound of stoned dates, half a pound of suet, half a pound of breadcrumbs, one tablespoonful of sugar, two eggs and one cupful of milk. Chop suet and dates and add other ingredients. Place in a buttered baking dish and steam.

White Pudding.—Take the yolks of three eggs and beat until light. Add gradually one cupful of granulated sugar, stirring all the while. When very light add two tablespoonfuls of milk, one cupful of flour and stir again. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth. Add quickly to the batter one teaspoonful of baking powder. Fill well buttered cups two-thirds full and steam for twenty minutes. Roll in powdered sugar and serve.

Sweet Desserts.

Sirup Pudding.—Take two eggs, two ounces of moist sugar, two ounces of butter, one-half pound of flour and a little milk. Beat all together, butter the baking dish well, pour in one-half pound of sirup, then fill the dish with the mixture. Steam two and a half hours. When done the sirup will form a brown crust.

Caramel Pudding.—Take three eggs and make a custard with two ounces of sugar, half a pint each of milk and cream and six drops of lemon essence. Into a mold put the juice of a lemon and two ounces of sugar. Stand the mold on the stove till the contents turn a golden brown. Then move the mold round that the sides may be covered with the caramel. Stand the mold in cold water till the caramel is set. Pour in the custard and steam slowly for twenty minutes.

URGES JAIL TERM FOR LABOR LEADERS

Report Severely Scores Gompers, Morrison and Mitchell

Washington, Feb. 6.—"Our legal annals contain no such precedent of wilful and defiant disobedience and contempt of the court's authority as existed in this case."

With these words the "committee of prosecutors" concluded a brief filed in the District of Columbia court of appeals, urging that Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison, officers of the American Federation of Labor, be forced to serve the jail sentences imposed by Justice Wright in the Bucks Stove and Range company case.

The brief is confined chiefly to arguments on the legal points involved.

New London, Conn., Feb. 6.—During a gale off Bartlett's reef the barge Annie R., which was being towed by the tug Sarah F. McWilliams, foundered, and it is believed that Captain John Driscoll, his wife and their two small children were drowned.

The barge was the last in a tow of three and the loss was not discovered until the tug reached New London light. The tug immediately commenced a search for the missing boat, but no trace could be found. The search continued all day without success.

The barge was loaded with coal and was bound from New York to this port.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. ### CHAPTER XVI.

"Tell how I died, not how I lived."

BUT before the events of the preceding chapter—before the avowal of Kerchival's love and his dash into the battle—had ensued a scene which threatened to change several lives, a scene which made West's rash deed rank insubordination against his commanding officer.

Bright and early the morning after the exciting combination of events at Belle Bosquet—the reading of the signals, the exchange of Colonel Robert Ellingham for the wounded Lieutenant Bedloe and the murderous attack of Captain Edward Thornton of the Confederate secret service upon Colonel Kerchival West—a turmoil of action manifested itself in the Union regimental camp at that point. As a result of the night's conference of Generals Buckthorn and Haverill with General Wright Colonel West's regiment had been ordered to the front.

"Ah, Haverill," said General Buckthorn as that officer came out on the veranda, "maybe Sheridan is right, after all. The reconnoissances this morning show no hostile force on our right, and Crook reports that Early is retreating up the valley. But General Wright is making some changes in our line this afternoon, and in the meantime I want to warn you to order General McCuen to go into camp on the right of Meadow brook, with the Second division. Jenny, girl, don't bother me about Heartsease now. Order the Third brigade of cavalry, under Colonel Lowell to occupy the left of the pike. We'd better hold Custer on the second line at Old Forge road, until further instructions. That is all for the present. Goodby, Jenny, my darling. General, I bid you good day."

General Haverill, who had carefully written the foregoing orders in his notebook, watched General Buckthorn off, then asked Jenny as she re-entered the house if she would send Gertrude to him.

"Gertrude, my child," he said with unwonted gravity, "the surgeons tell me that Kerchival West will get on well enough if he remains quiet; otherwise not."

"That is what is worrying me, general," Gertrude replied. "Colonel West insists upon preparing to join his regiment at the front. I hope you will order him to remain here—compel him to be prudent."

"He should not look for the honor of death on the field under present circumstances," muttered the general, with peculiar significance.

"What do you mean, sir?" inquired Gertrude uneasily.

"You have a right to ask me that as your father's old friend, once your own guardian, Gertrude, child, you have a warm, true heart. I could not bear to see your happiness destroyed through very loyalty to your heart's affection. Listen. Last night I saw you kneeling beside Kerchival West, speaking to him, ministering to him with all the tender passion of a southern woman. You told him that you loved him. But those fateful words fell upon unconscious ears. Tell me, has he ever heard those words from your own lips? Have you ever confessed your love to him before?"

"Never—since you ask me. But why, General Haverill, do you ask?"

"Never mind. Only do not repeat it. Keep your heart to yourself, my girl."

"But, general, at a moment like this, when his life"—

"Leave that to me—hush!"

The voice of Colonel West himself, heard outside, giving orders to a sergeant to get his horse ready, silenced them. He then came up in full uniform and wearing his sword and saluted. His face was pale, but he presented a brave front.

"Are there any orders, general, for my regiment," he asked, "beyond those given to Major Williams in my absence this morning? I am going to the front to resume my command."

"It is my wish, colonel, that you remain here under the surgeon's care," said the general quietly.

"Oh, my wound is a mere trifle. I could not rest here. I must be with my men at this perhaps critical moment in the campaign."

"I have told you my wish is to the contrary," repeated General Haverill.

Kerchival knew only too well that ominous, quiet reserve. He knew the inflexibility of that proud, intolerant mood. He could not wholly fathom its cause, but a troublesome recollection suddenly occurred to him.

"General," he said, with grieved earnestness, after looking around to see that Gertrude had silently withdrawn, "I was unable to keep my appointment with you last night for an unforeseen reason, which you know. I am ready and willing to explain certain matters, as you requested me to do yesterday. But meanwhile a crisis has developed, and whatever there may be between us personally you are now in the position of interfering with my duty and my privilege as a soldier. It is my right to be at the head of my regiment so long as I am physically able."

"You have my positive order, sir!"

"Then I protest!"

"You are under arrest, sir!" said the general without changing his tone.

Kerchival started as if he had been shot. Then in a deliberate, dazed way he unclasped his belt and offered his sword.

"No; keep your sword. I have no desire to humiliate you," the general continued in a low voice. "But you will hold yourself subject to further orders from me."

With these inexorable words he turned away, while Kerchival, as if suddenly a sick man again, started to reenter the house. He met Gertrude at the door, all gentleness and commiseration.

"Did you hear what the general said?" he asked feebly.

"No matter what he said or what any one says now, Kerchival," was her impulsive response. "You have my perfect faith—there! Now you must go to your room and rest until the surgeon comes again."

He obeyed in silence. What words could he find?

Looking out from her window a few minutes later, Gertrude was startled to see a number of men emerging from the woods by the path leading up from the ford. Then she perceived that they were Confederate soldiers under a flag of truce, following an escort of Union troops and carrying some burden. It proved to be a stretcher, on which lay the unconscious form of a young man, evidently a wounded Federal officer. A surgeon walked beside the stretcher, giving directions to the bearers, who rested a short distance from the veranda steps. Gertrude ran to the door, followed by Madeline West and Jenny Buckthorn. Sergeant Barket also stood, wonder struck, on a sort of improvised sentry guard.

"I am Major Hardwick of the Confederate service," said the surgeon, hat in hand and losing no time. "Is General Haverill here?"

"He left but a moment ago"—

"He's just after mounting his horse," put in Barket, "an' I can cut across an' stop him for yez."

"Please say to him that we come from Colonel Robert Ellingham, who instructed me to bring this young officer in exchange for himself, as agreed upon between them last evening."

"Is he unconsious or sleeping, sir?" asked Gertrude, looking with tender solicitude upon the pallid face on the rude rustic litter.

"He is between life and death, I fear. The removal has been too much for him, yet it seemed for the best under the circumstances. He was so anxious—ah, he is waking! Here we are, my boy," placing his canteen to the lips of poor Lieutenant Bedloe, for he it was in such grievous plight. "We have reached the end of our journey."

"My father"— gasped Frank.

"He is thinking of his home," said Major Hardwick.

"I have obeyed General Haverill's orders," murmured the young man faintly, "and I have a report to make."

"He will be here in a moment," answered Gertrude.

"Is not this—Miss Gertrude Ellingham?" he asked, looking wistfully into her face.

"Yes, yes! You have seen me before?"

"Long ago. You know Mrs. Haverill, the general's wife?"

"She is one of my dearest friends on earth."

"Then you can give her a message for me, to my poor little wife. She will know. Will the general be here soon? I—somehow I feel that I have not much time left. Doctor, my notebook!"

The surgeon took the notebook from an inner pocket, and at the same time a blood stained handkerchief fell out. The dying soldier saw it and with an effort said:

"Ah, yes; a message from Captain Heartsease. He was by my side—he had a Confederate uniform—so they didn't send him back with me."

Gertrude, kneeling by his side, took the handkerchief and silently handed it to Jenny Buckthorn, who turned suddenly pale as she saw it, then hid her face in her hands and hastened away.

Still General Haverill did not arrive.

"Please write!" Frank whispered to Gertrude. "To—my wife—Edith. Tell our little son, when he is old enough to know, how his father died, not how he lived. And tell her who was a mother to me that my father's portrait of her, which she gave to me in Charleston, helped me to be a better man. And—don't forget to tell them—I haven't it with me now—it was taken away from me while I was, a prisoner in Richmond by Captain Edward Thornton—Confederate secret service. Let—me—sign—that"—

"Tell our little son how his father died."

Gertrude, with tears streaming down her cheeks, held the poor boy's hand while he made a feeble scrawl on the page, then fell back lifeless. The surgeon gently laid the fold of the blanket over his face. He was dead.

"Present arms! Carry arms!" commanded the officer of the Federal guard as General Haverill came up, returning the salute as he passed.

"Am I too late?" he asked.

"I'm sorry, general," replied the Confederate surgeon. "His one thought, as we brought him through the lines, was to see you before he passed away."

"Poor boy—brave boy," muttered the general, turning back the fold of the blanket a moment to gaze upon the calm, sleeping face. "I am in the place of your father today. We will carry him to his comrades at the front. He shall have a soldier's burial in the shadow of the mountain where he sacrificed his young life in the purest valor of patriotism. Yonder mountain shall be his monument."

The Confederate soldiers stood in embarrassed silence for a little space. Then Major Hardwick said:

"Pardon me, general. We Virginians are your enemies—in the field. But you cannot mourn or honor this gallant young soldier more than we do. If you will allow us the privilege, now that we are here, we will carry him and accompany you to his last resting place."

General Haverill bowed his assent in recognition of the touching tribute. Then, with bared head, he knelt on the ground beside the bier for a minute or two in profound silence. Rising again, with his old military mask of stolid self possession and with reversed sword, he made a sign to the officer of the Federal guard.

"Left face! Forward—march!" commanded the lieutenant. The Confederate soldiers again gently lifted their burden, and the pitiful cortege moved off slowly in the direction of the lengthening shadow of Three Top mountain.

Not a man in the whole army would have ventured a word to General Haverill, either at that moment or later, when he wrote a dispatch to the government, which was carried throughout the length and breadth of the land and enrolled in deathless history. And the name he wrote was that of "Lieutenant Frank Bedloe."

"The movement upon which our immediate hopes of success in this campaign are founded," he declared, "would have been impossible without the bravery and sacrifice of this young officer. His name must take its place forever on the roll of fame which his countrymen are proud to honor."

Clothing Man Kills a Girl and Injures Three Other Persons

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 6.—Bloodshed marked the continuation of the garment workers' strike here. One girl was killed and three persons were wounded late yesterday afternoon, when Valentine Sauter, proprietor of a clothing shop, fired a charge from a shotgun into a crowd of strikers who were engaged in a demonstration in front of his place of business.

Sauter employs about forty machine hands, and in the neighborhood of 700 strikers went to his shop to attempt to persuade the workers to walk out. Stones were thrown and Sauter shot from a second-story window.

DANGER IN GENERAL ASSAULT

Bombardment of Stronghold Continues Without Interruption—Nothing Is Known to Outside World as to Exact Situation at Present.

London, Feb. 6.—It is a military maxim that an isolated fortress unsuccored from without eventually must fall to an engineering siege, or to famine. If the defenses of Adrianople have been scientifically constructed, one series of forts commanding the other, as was the case at Port Arthur, and the garrison be not too enfeebled by wounds, disease and hunger, it is difficult to believe they can be taken by assault.

Just what is taking place behind the screen which the allies have drawn about their operations in Thrace is not known. It is perfectly safe to assume, however, that they have been utilizing the time since the signing of the armistice to gather material for digging their way to the key of Adrianople's defense, if such there be.

They are too poor in numbers to waste men as did Japan without avail on the slopes of Port Arthur. Adrianople may be destroyed as a city by the fire of the siege guns but properly constructed forts can stand a tremendous amount of pounding.

The bombardment of Adrianople, which opened on Monday, proceeded on all sides without interruption yesterday, according to a semi-official telegram from Sofia. A message from Belgrade speaks of the "heroic conduct" of a couple of Servian regiments of infantry, which are said to have participated in an attack on the outer circle of forts, but there is no means of verifying this or any of the reports, as such fighting as may be in progress is taking place behind a screen, so far as the outside world is concerned. Dependence has to be placed on the more or less biased stories given out by the respective army headquarters, for only on extremely rare occasions can a newspaper correspondent succeed in circumventing the censorship.

The Turkish newspaper Tanin asserts that Adrianople has sufficient provisions for four months and other Turkish reports declare the fortress certainly will be able to hold out for several weeks.

Forty new Servian 7-inch guns are bombarding Adrianople, says a dispatch from Belgrade. A Bulgarian aeroplane dropped proclamations into Adrianople, inviting the surrender of the town.

The Bulgarian government has refused to grant the appeal made some time ago by the German empress to the Queen of Bulgaria for permission for a German Red Cross expedition to enter Adrianople to attend to the Turkish sick and wounded in that fortress, according to The Tageblatt.

After the German minister at Sofia had tried in vain to induce the Bulgarian war authorities to allow German medical help to pass through their lines the German empress telegraphed Queen Eleonore to use her influence, but the Bulgarian government now says that tactical considerations make it impossible for it to grant the permission.

Diplomacy has made no step forward since the resumption of hostilities, says a Constantinople dispatch, and the porte has made no further communication either to the powers or to the allies. Should it turn out that Adrianople can resist for any considerable time, diplomatic negotiations are likely to remain at a standstill.

ALBERTO IS PARDONED

Wife Slayer Who Made Violins For Singers Leaves State Prison

Boston, Feb. 6.—Charles Alberto, a prisoner at the state prison in Charlestown, on a life sentence for killing his wife in Holyoke in 1901, was pardoned yesterday afternoon by the governor and council. He left the prison today.

Alberto has been a model prisoner. He organized the prison band, of which he was leader. He is a skillful manufacturer of musical instruments, the value of which has been shown by letters written by Mme. Tettrazini and Enrico Caruso, each of whom possesses one of his violins.

Alberto lived with his wife for four years. Then she left him and taunted him about her other acquaintances, and said she had found a better man to support her. Alberto killed her with a razor. At the trial he admitted his guilt.

Leaves Million to His Partner

New York, Feb. 6.—Carrying out a compact made four years ago, that whichever of the two died first should leave the other $1,000,000, the will of the late George W. Crossman, a leader in the coffee market, leaves to his partner, Herman Sielcken, the sum agreed upon.

"IN A BAD WAY"

Many a Ledger Reader Will Feel Grateful for This Information.

If your back gives out;
Becomes lame, weak or aching;
If urinary troubles set in,
Perhaps your kidneys are "in a bad way."

Don't delay—use Doan's Kidney Pills.

Here is good evidence of their worth.

Mrs. S J. Mortimer, 9 Woodville St., Roxbury, Mass., says: "Kidney trouble made me miserable about six years ago. I had severe pains in my back and sometimes I could hardly move. It was next to impossible for me to do any housework. When I attempted to get up in the mornings, the pains were so bad that I had to roll out of bed on my hands and knees. If I moved quickly or brought a strain on my back, I would almost scream with the pain. Doan's Kidney Pills were so highly recommended to me that I got a box and began using them. The first few doses helped me and in less than a week, the trouble was gone. Whenever a cold or strain brings on an attack of kidney complaint, Doan's Kidney Pills cure it."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

BRIEFS

The Quincy A. A. and the North Dorchester teams of the Greater Boston N. E. A. A. A. U. League will play basket ball at St. Mary's hall this evening. Both teams will appear. Because of the Lenten season a reduction in the price of admission has been made.

Mrs. Blanche P. Bagley, widow of the late Rev. J. E. Bagley, who came on to Wollaston, accompanied by her son, for the 25th anniversary exercises in the Unitarian church who since her return from abroad three or four years ago, has been living in Toronto, Canada to be near her aged father, is still in Wollaston, renewing acquaintance with her numerous friends there.

FAIR SKATING.

—"Has the old man a right to live?" A medical research society in St. Louis recently discussed the question. The principal speaker stated that old men were being poisoned with a long administered course of indifference, neglect and filial disrespect. He believed that the man who does not honor his father and mother cares little for his moral obligations to them, but he does fear that some day his friends will find out and that he will be put in the class in which he belongs. This man never wishes his friends to know that the old man who wears shabby clothes and sleeps in the garret is his father. When a man makes a debt the laws of the land enforce its payment. But no law makes the man with money in the bank pay the debt he owes his old and needy father. The son should do his duty willingly. If he will not, there should be a law to compel him. —Milford, N. H. Cabinet.

LENTEN SERVICES.

Rev. George A. Barrow of St. Luke's church, Chelsea, delivered the sermon at the lenten services at Christ church, Wednesday evening. He urged the observance of lent in a proper spirit, and believed in sacrifices, but not from a mere sense of custom, or duty, but an honest conviction that it was the true Christian course. Wednesday and Friday during the lenten season, there will be evening prayer and sermon, at the former and Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock, children's service and address.

Special services will be held Holy Week. The speakers for the Wednesday evening services are as follows:

Feb. 12,—Rev. James A. Thompson, Church of the Epiphany, Walpole.

Feb. 19.—Rev. John Matteson, Church of the Messiah, Auburndale.

Feb. 26,—Rev. Henry M. Saville., Church of the Ascension, Waltham.

March 12,—Rev. Frank D. Budlong, St. Mark's Church, Dorchester.

SUICIDE VICTIM BURIED.

The funeral of Thomas F. Higgins took place this morning. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. Fr. John J. Casey. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Higgins died at his home Tuesday night from self inflicted throat and wrist wounds. It is thought that despondency because of a cancer on the carotid artery prompted him to perform the deed.

LENTEN SERVICE.

Appropriate sermons were held in all Catholic churches Wednesday evening with benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament. Music was furnished by the regular choirs, Friday evening there will be the Stations of the Cross devotions.

A YOUTHFUL FIREBUG

Admits Starting Two Big Fires to See Horses In Action

Lewiston, Me., Feb. 6.—To gratify a desire to see the fire horses in action, Willie Harvey, 12 years old, set two fires which caused damage aggregating nearly $20,000, according to a confession made to the police.

Several days ago the four-story McGillicuddy block was damaged by a fire believed to be of incendiary origin. Nothing developed at the investigation.

Yesterday a fire, starting in much the same manner as the first, caused heavy damage to the Sands block, a three-story brick structure.

Harvey gave the alarm. According to his confession, he threw cigarets in a closet in the first case, and yesterday in a pile of excelsior. Harvey had frequently run away from home and was known to the police, who detained him after he had given the alarm.

NO TRAFFIC AGREEMENT

But Grand Trunk Officials Admit That One Was "Proposed"

Montreal, Feb. 6.—An official statement issued at the offices of the Grand Trunk railway declares that there never has been any traffic agreement between the Grand Trunk and the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, but admits there was a "proposed agreement."

The statement says the Providence extension of the Central Vermont railroad has not been finally abandoned, and points out that the Providence line has nothing to do with the proposed extension of the Central Vermont to Boston.

—At Stevens pond in the eastern section of Manchester, N. H. a man and his wife were seen enjoying two entirely seasonable sports. While the man was fishing through the ice, which by the way, is not over three inches thick, his wife passed the time in gathering mayflowers on the shore and it is a fact that she was far more successful in number at least than was the fisherman.—Concord Patriot.

PLAYED ON MEN'S CUPIDITY

Polish Jews Had Really Neat Fraudulent Scheme Which They Employed for Years.

There was a certain engaging novelty in the swindle practiced successfully for many years by four Polish Jews, who have recently been caught by the Parisian police. They worked on the cupidity of their victims in view of the desire that most people cherish of getting something for nothing.

The four swindlers first marked their man with care. They then approached him with the alluring suggestion that he should join them in the manufacture of banknotes by an electrical process of their own invention. The thing was simplicity itself. All one had to do was to place two two-pound notes—the dupe's, of course—in a square box, and a sheet of blank paper between them. After a suitable interval for incubation—twenty-four hours as a rule—the box was solemnly opened in the presence of the dupe, and "Hey, presto!" there were not two, but three banknotes.

To the dupe, of course, it appeared a royal road to riches, and he was easily induced to contribute a couple of 40-pound banknotes to his benefactors so as to have them subjected to the same clandestine process. Needless to say he saw neither notes nor box nor Poles again. The whole trick was worked by a false bottom and clever sleight of hand. Sooner or later it was bound to happen. The four swindlers made a litle mistake in physiognomy or psychology, and fell upon a man who was both shrewd and honest, with the result that they are now in the hands of the police.

Questioned by M. Guichard, they at first pretended to be entirely ignorant of French. The magistrate had to resort to a Machiavellian strategem. Having discovered two banknotes at the bottom of the magic box, he turned suddenly to the prisoners and demanded, "To whom do these belong?" "They're mine, sir," replied the quartette with one voice and in excellent French.

Wicked Imagination.

Proverbs says one of the six things that is an abomination to the Lord is "a heart that deviseth wicked imaginations." It is also an abomination to everybody. And there is much of it going on. Some people seem to enjoy the fancy that a certain person is living a mean and deceitful life. No fact back of it; nothing but a dislike or low suspicion. When a person can harbor such imaginings he himself is guiltier than the one he suspects.

When a man's heart gets to breeding suspicions, all noble emotions are excluded. It would be ten times better that he thought well of a man, even if he were mistaken than to think ill of him, even if he were not. These wicked imaginations are mean things to have in a man's heart, even if there is some warrant for them, for they spoil the tenderest and swetest sentiments. No, no; a man wants a clean, open heart all the time; he wants the sunlit breezes to blow through and freshen it up and kill off the wild and poisonous vermin that get in there.

That is the better life. We don't want men coming to us with their hearts full of venom and spurting it into our face.—Ohio State Journal.

Making a Luxury of Sorrow.

The happiest and the best of us have "fits of the blues" once in awhile. Sometimes we make a luxury of sorrow; we pet and nurse and dandle the real or supposed affliction and make it our coddled darling, our spoiled child.

We actually resent the efforts of any one to clear away the fog and show us that the sun is shining and that if we are blue, so is the sky.

When we have "the blues" we are as anxious to be let alone as a traveler drowsily perishing in a snowbank.

Yet if we had the courage every time the spell came on us we would sit down, as Robinson Crusoe did, and put in parallel columns our reasons for joy and our causes for repining. And then we would find how far the first overlapped the second.

When we feel "blue," if we look hard, we will discover nothing there but the dreary, melancholy color.

If we would look up we would see that it isn't the world that is blue; it is only the sky.

If we must have "the blues" let us have the heavenly blues.

Rank Shown by Cheese.

The English, the Germans and the Norwegians are great consumers of cheese, but the people of Switzerland surpass them all.

The cheese of Zermatt is so hard that one is obliged to scrape it or cut off chunks with a hatchet, and its use is considered most important on all ceremonious occasions.

The rank of a Swiss family is known by the age of its cheese, and the more affection or respect a guest inspires the harder is the cheese which is cut in his honor.

It is said that there are families in Switzerland whose cheeses date from the first French Revolution, and these are served only at baptisms, weddings and after funerals.

Upon the birth of a new heir a cheese is made that takes the name given him or her, and that particular cheese is never in any circumstances cut until the boy or girl grows up and is married.

On such occasions each of the guests takes a piece of cheese from the bridegroom and from the bride and drinks to their felicity, the cheese being held aloft.

CLOUDS HAVE ROLLED AWAY

No More Trouble in the Old Colony League

POEHLER ELIGIBLE

Two matches in Old Colony league and a regular meet of the Wollaston Tennis league were the bowling schedules for Wednesday evening. The Tennis league have added two new teams to their regular showing and have assigned the letters F. and G. to them.

It appeared during the past week that the Old Colony league would disband because of a question as to the eligibility of Paul Poehler rolling with the Coliseum team. He was substituted in the absence of Grant, a regular man and when he rolled a string of 145 the Norfolk Downs team left the alleys and forfeited the match

The question is now probably settled. Manager Forbes of the Coliseum alleys believed he was right in allowing Poehler to roll because he was not aware of any talk between the other managers in which it was agreed that Poehler would be barred.

It was said at the time that the Norfolk Downs team did wrong in allowing Peohler to start his string and when they did they should have finished the roll off and protested afterwards. However, the rumored withdrawal of the Coliseum team will not take place. All bowlers now understand that a house man can roll at any time according to the opinion of alley experts.

Weymouth beat the Coliseum 4 to 0, at the Coliseum alleys. Norfolk Downs and the City Squares at the latters alleys were tied at two points.

McLean was high man in the Tennis league with a single of 106. Green nestled into high place with the best total of 276.

$15 FOR A TOOTH.

Harry E. Eaton one of the foremen at the Fore River got into a dispute with Rainan t Newback one of the workmen in his department Wednesday afternoon during which it is alleged that Eaton struck Newback breaking one of his teeth. He was arraigned in court this morning for assault and fined $15. He appealed.

DSTRICT COURT.

Louis Rosenberg was arraigned for assault on Fred Towne at Quincy. Complaint dismissed on payment of $2.10 costs.

BOOST A LITTLE.

Do you know there's lot of people
Settin' round in every town,
Growlin' like a broody chicken,
Knockin' every good thing down?
Don't you be that kind of cattle,
'Cause they ain't no use on earth;
You just be a booster rooster,
Crow an' boost for all you're worth.

If your town needs boostin', boost 'er,
Don't hold back, an' wait to see
If some other feller's willing.—
Sail right in, this country's free;
No one's got a mortgage on it,
It's just yours as much as his;
If Foxboro is short on boosters,
You get in the boostin' biz.

If things don't just seem to suit you,
An' the world seems kinder wrong,
What's the matter with a boostin',
Just to help the thing along?
'Cause if things should stop a goin'
We'd be in a sorry plight;
You just keep that horn a blowin';
Boost 'er up with all your might.

If you see some fellow trying
For to make some project go,
Can't you boost it up a trifle?
That's your cue to let him know
That you're not a goin' to knock it,
Just because it ain't your "shout,"
But you're goin' to boost a little,
'Cause he's got the "best thing out."

If you know some feller's failin's,
Just forget 'em, 'cause you know
That same feller's got some good points;
Them's the one's you want to show;
"Cast your loaves out on the waters,
They'll come back," 's a sayin' true;
Mebbe they will come back "buttered,"
When some feller boosts for you.

Need Not Be Drudgery.

Young American women would do well to heed the words of a recent lecturer on household economics, who said that housework need not necessarily be drudgery. She says it is not drudgery, once its technique is mastered, any more than dancing or piano playing or acting or singing are disagreeable tasks, once the girl has mastered the basic principles of each of those arts. Housekeeping is relatively simple when one knows how. The difficulty is that few take the trouble to learn how. If the same intelligence and persistence are used as are employed in mastering any of the other accomplishments, after the learning period is over, the practice is comparatively easy. There is a period of drudgery in acquiring any art, no matter what it is, and no one can expect to master housekeeping or music either who is not willing to submit to the necessary period of training. But ease comes with knowing how and disposing of the duties in a clear-headed, systematic, scientific manner.—Exchange.

40 GALLONS OF OIL WITHIN FEW FEET OF LIVELY CELLAR BLAZE

Murphy Family Driven From Copeland Street Tenement By Dense Smoke

Early Martin Played Prominent Part in Stirring Scenes

The West Quincy fire apparatus made a remarkable run last evening, checked a blaze in the cellar of Lamb's block, Copeland street, when it was within a few feet of a 40 gallon oil tank, and when the firemen had accomplished their task a sigh of relief escaped those who had watched the play of the flames and knew of the proximity of the tank and its dangerous contents.

The basement was occupied for storage by William Callahan, who conducts a grocery and provision store on the street floor. He had closed up for the night shortly before the fire was discovered.

The fire was discovered by Early Martin who was passing. He ran into a shop next door and sent a boy to pull box 46.

George Hebert immediately ran up to the second floor and found Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Murphy aware of the fire because of the smoke filled apartment and were preparing to leave. All reached the street in safety.

The boys who sounded the alarm did not pull the hook completely down and only the first round sounded. Early Martin ran to the box and sounded the full call when he learned the condition.

The fire was in a pile of empty packing cases. It also worked through a partition dividing the cellar in halves. The actual fire damage was but slight, although the smoke filled the house completely.

The origin of the fire is unknown but it is thought that a match was thrown down carelessly in the afternoon and the fire smouldered until discovered in the evening.

The alarm came in at 6.15 and the all out sounded at 6.55 P. M.

TWO BABES FOUND DEAD IN BED SIMILAR AND NATURAL CAUSE

Extreme Sections Visited by Same Disease at Same Time With Fatal Results

One Child Six Months Old, the Other One Only Three Days

Two babes were found dead in their cribs Thursday morning by their parents. The discoveries were made at about the same time and according to Medical Examiner Dr. Fred E. Jones, both died from oedema of the lungs. Because of the ages it was impossible to place how long they were ill.

The other was Harriett, the three-day-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Pitt Eaton of 274 Beach street, Wollaston.

Both families are popular in their respective sections and the sympathy of their large circle of acquaintances are extended to them.

Both children were dead but a short time when discovered by the parents.

Oedema, from which they died, is a swelling of the lungs caused by an effusion of water.

VICTIM OF DIPHTERIA.

Georgianna, the eight year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank O'Brien of Copeland street, died at the Homoepathic Hospital Thursday morning from diphteria and was buried Thursday evening in St. Mary's cemetery.

She was in the fifth grade of the Willard school and was ill for at least ten days. During that time she did not attend the class.

The Board of Health will fumigate the room and all its contents Saturday morning.

QUINCY MEN PLAN BIG EXHIBIT AT NATIONAL GRANITE SESSION

New England Delegates Enter Upon Plans for Boston Convention in August

John L. Miller of Quincy Elected Chairman of Delegation

Delegates from the New England granite centres of the Massachusetts Retail Monument Dealers' Association met in Quincy on Wedneseday to formulate plans for carrying on the great convention of the National Retail Monument Dealers, which is to be held in Boston in August, and the great exhibition of memorial work and machinery used in the industry, where it is expected there will be from one to two hundred thousand dollars worth of these goods on exhibition.

They met with a full realization of their great responsibility, for they had promised the National Retail Monument Dealers' convention at Detroit, through John L. Miller, that if the 1913 convention was held in Boston that the New England monumental interests would provide free convention hall, exhibition palace, automobile rides to places of interest around Boston, a deep water excursion, and other things too numerous to mention, so the delegates feel it is up to them to make good. Mistakes have been made in these exhibitions in the past, but the managers of this one must profit by past experiences.

HOSPITAL STILL KEEPING PACE

With the March of Progress in Treating Cases

MATERNITY WARD ADDED

In keeping with the development of the Quincy City Hospital, which during the past few years has shown great strides, a maternity ward has been established and a long felt need in the city has been complied with. During the term of Miss Blanche M. Thayer, as matron, many cases of this nature could not be accepted because no accommodations could be held out. Since the erection of the Nurses Home which is a most popular addition, the change of residence from the hospital proper to the new building left apartments that are now utilized for a maternity ward.

Although the number of patients that will be admitted are limited, it is possible that convalescents will be treated in the other sections of the hospital when cases require immediate attention. Miss Grant who succeeded Miss Thayer as matron has arrangements completed so that patients will be extended treatment in this ward equal to that extended throughout the rest of the institution. The physicians are highly pleased with the establishment of the ward and feel that its popularity will add to the ever growing prestige of the Quincy City Hospital.

THOUSANDS OF BOYS IN RANKS

Shouting With One Voice, "the Saloon Must Go"

WHITE RIBBON A POWER

The W. C. T. U. met in the parlor of Bethany church Tuesday afternoon to hear Mrs. Phoebe Clifford of Plymouth, president of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U. speak on temperance. The president, Mrs. Mattheson ,presided. Mrs. Clifford said in part:

"I am glad to be with you this afternoon, the white ribbon binds us together, it has laid an obligation upon us to work courageously until we achieve success and although we sometimes feel sad at the misery caused by "intemperance" we realize our purpose concerning it and are richer in experience because of our work for it.

"At the close of the civil war so many men came home with the liquor habit contracted in the army that the women of our land formed a crusade against the traffic, and with the widening of Woman's horizon the W. C. T. U. is doing a wonderful and glorious work.

"In 1858 a movement was started in the West. Rev. Anna Shaw ,a young girl in college, started out with the pledge, and was made exceedingly happy by obtaining one hundred signers, but at the end of two weeks' she was very unhappy, for nearly all had broken it. So we found that signing the pledge did not reform, that we must begin with the young, instil it into their minds. Miss Willard said we must agitate, educate, organize. So the Loyal Temperance Legion was formed which has resulted in thousands of boys marching and singing, the saloon must go.

"We want to increase our work, we want it taught in the public schools, the Sunday schools. Teachers must not shirk their responsibility.

"Next to the mother, the child loves his teacher, and the teacher must realize the welfare of children depends upon their faithfulness. Children look back upon their school days and remember some kind thought or loving word experssed by the teacher. Then why not impress upon their young minds the evils of intemperance and cigarette smoking? A teacher told me recently of one of her pupils who are behind in their studies, his hand shook when he attempted to write and sometimes he would fall asleep during the session. She visited the boy's mother and was met at the door by a sad faced woman who burst into tears, when she told her errand. This is only one instance of many. So we hope that instructors wil ltake up this work, they teach history and algebra, why not devote a few hours a week to the temperance cause.

"We are prevailing upon physicians to stop prescribing whiskey to young men patients ,we know of one young man who became a habitual drunkard from taking whiskey prescribed by the doctor in a case of typhoid fever. When I was a child our mothers used sulphur and molasses, but now it is the custom for many of us to take some Spring tonic ,but the W. C. T. T. U. is issuing pamphlets showing the amount of liquor in these nostrums.

"A friend was one day talking with Gen. Phil Sheridan, and as they were sitting on the piazza ,the dog cart went by filled with children. His friend said 'Phil, what pitfall do you most dread for your children?' He said, the liquor habit, I would rather my boy be brought home dead than drunk.'

"The white ribbon has a good influence over young men, so friends always wear it. A lady sat at a table in a restaurant, same young men were at the next table. One of them said, 'Let us order some beer with our dinner?' 'No, said another, that lady is wearing a white ribbon,and my mother wears one.'

"The liquor traffic os our great work and we must work and work until we have prohibition in the good old state of Massachusetts."

HARRY S. CRANE COMMODORE AND OTHER OFFICERS QUINCY YACHT CLUB

Treasurer Morse Aroused Enthusiasm at the Annual Meeting By Financial Report

Committee to Re-classify and Re-organize Racing Classes

HARRY S. CRANE,
Commodore.

EDGAR W. EMERY,
Vice Commodore.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Yacht club was held Thursday evening in Electa hall. Commodore Ira M. Whittemore presided and there was an attendance of about 50 members.

Although there were several amendments to the by-laws proposed there did not seem to be much interest in them, and when they were put to vote there was not a voice in favor, so that they were unanimously defeated.

Reports of the secretary, treasurer, house and executive committees were read and accepted. The report of the treasurer George S. Morse was enthusiastically received, every member uniting in words of praise for his work in behalf of the club.

JOHN O. HALL,
Secretary.

His report showed the receipts of the year from all sources with the exception of the American flag fund to have been $5,924.70.

The general expenses of the year including unpaid bills of the previous year incidental to the improvements to the club house amounted to $5,917.05, leaving a balance on hand of $7.65. The report also showed that there was a note of $500 due the bank for dredging.

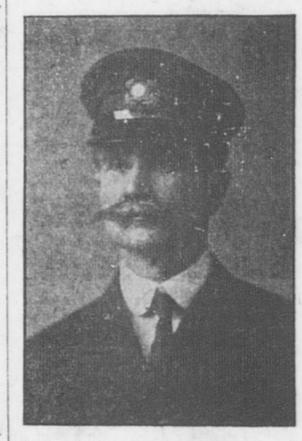

The officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows:

Commodore—Henry S. Crane.
Vice-Commodore—Edgar W. Emery
Rear-Commodore—Chas. W. Laing.
Secretary—Hon. John O. Hall.
Treasurer—George S. Morse.
Measurer—Ralph E. Winslow.
Executive Committee—Frank F. Crane, Herbert W. Robbins, Hon. Eugene R. Stone, I. M. Whittemore.
House Committee—Andrew F. Burrill, William H. Huy, George H. Newcomb, Frank K. Patch, Edgar P. Plummer, Fred E. Tupper, Harry E. Winslow.

Commodore Crane was authorized to appoint a committee of five, to include a power boat owner to reclassify and reorganize the racing classes of the club so as to provide local and club racing for boats that are not now classified.

A handsomely framed picture of the Marie L., winning the first Bermuda cup race on Labor day 1911, and a picture of her crew was presented to thec lub by Hollis Burgess, the owner of the boat. Mr. Burgess was given a rising vote of thanks for his gift, which will be hung in the assembly hall at the club house.

IRA M. WHITTEMORE,
Retiring Commodore.

Commodore Crane also appointed ex-Commodore Herbert W. Robbins as delegate to the Y. R. M. A., of Massachusetts, and Joshua P. Holbrook as delegate to the Interclub Yacht Racing Association.

Commodore Crane has always been interested in yachting, and there have been but few races of the club during recent years in which he has not actively participated. He was for several seasons the main sheet man in the crew of the Sphinx of Arthur Adams and later held the same position for ex-Commodore Fred B. Rice, sailing with him in the Recruit at Marblehead and other places. For the past three years he has sailed as one of the crew on the Dorothy III, and Iris in the Interclub races.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

And it all turns out that "Big Bill" is still seeking "easy money." From this out he should receive the retirement and obscurity he deserves.

The Brockton policeman who was 25 minutes late will have to make it up at the rate of 16 to 1, a little higher than the 16 to 1 game.

New York policemen seem to be stricken by a wave of remorse. The city would do well to clean them from the roster.

And the house is in favor of the state credit for $5,000,000 for the Boynton railroad. What is the matter with private capital taking hold of the matter as private interests will control the enterprise?

The snail can exist without oxygen. It was always supposed there was something lacking in this bird and now the whole thing is cleared up there is no need of further inquiry.

The method of handling the King pardon is the essence of cruelty not only to the prisoner but to the family of the unfortunate man. If he is to be pardoned let it come along. If not let the suspense be ended.

The Buffalo may be slow, but his strength and endurance make up for this deficiency in a long haul.

Gov. Sulzer has set down on the state spending money for troops to attend the inaugural. At the start the new governor of New York has put a crimp in one department of useless expenditure.

Bradley Martin of New York is dead in London. New York while it furnished the coin could not furnish the repose for the society leader.

THE BOYNTON RAILWAY.

Despite the fact that the committee submitted an adverse report on the subject the house of representatives by a voice vote, Wednesday, rejected that report and substituted the bill to lend the credit of the state to the extent of $5,000,000 to the Moody Boynton Boston, Quincy and Fall River Railway. The committee gave a hearing on this bill some time ago. It is true no one appeared in opposition to it, while at the same time it could not be seen that any one favored the proposition except those who were directly interested in the enterprise. Probably the members of the house of representatives are more keenly in touch with the public sentiment upon this enterprise than the members of the committee. Has the house witnessed a practical and successful demonstration of the operation of this bicycle railroad? Aside from any merits of the case, it seems that the state is assuring quite a burden to lend its credit to any such enterprise to any such amount. Just at present it might seem as though the state has burdens enough in handling enterprises which should more truly come under private financing and are certainly very much under private control.

Lending the credit of the state for the mere sum of $5,000,000 may be a very light thing for some people, but to the men who pay the freight, who watch each year the increase of the state budget, it is somewhat of a serious subject and one which is liable to set them thinking. $5,000,000 is not an immense sum for the construction of a railroad. Therefore it only seems reasonable that such a sum would be very readily secured by private subscription under certain conditions. Judging from the past, the state has not been overpowered with the flow of gold, that has found its way into the treasury from the financing of other public service movements.

Even if the house has placed itself on record as favoring this pledging of the state to that amount, may be the senate, or even Gov. Foss may take a different view of the situation. If the practical demonstrations of the railroad demonstrate its success and the public necessity is keen for another railroad over the route planned, then the public should receive more enlightenment on the subject. Just at present the public is somewhat in the dark as to possible results and that $5,000,000 looks pretty big.

LET HIM REST.

Now that Keliher has revealed the true purpose of his recent romancing, "revenge" and more "easy money" it is about time that he was given a chance to retire from the lime light for the balance of his 18 year sentence. About all that he has delivered so far as Boston and Massachusetts is concerned is only a mess of old gossip, which has been going the rounds for years. The story of the contractor is pretty old. Keliher's reference to two governors which has been known for some few years is nothing new, but the stories were followed down at the time and declared to be mere figments of fancy. Those alleged incidents happened long before Keliher appeared at the bunco steerers Boston rendezvous and he is only mouthing what some one else must have rehearsed to him, as an alleged knowledge of inside political affairs. As we stated some time ago we do not think Keliher has added much to the literature of the world, and has not created any sensation by his mother goose tales. As the public takes no greater interest in him than to feel he is still behind the bars, let him rest.

JUNKET CHECKED.

Gov. Sulzer of New York, has put a crimp in the plan to have the state pay the expenses of troops to attend the presidental inauguration. Some of the organizations which planned to make the trip have decided to go at their own expense. In that event they officially represent the state, but that little matter can be easily adjusted. The main thing is that Gov. Sulzer can save about $10,000 to the state from this little junket alone. If many sums of like amount are saved during the year by the long headed course of the governor, the people of New York will have something to be thankful for. Apropos of the action of the New York governor, "The Old Boy," of the Bay State can save to the Commonwealth nearly twice that sum and an annual expenditure of some thousands of dollars by putting a veto wireless on that proposed ocean liner for the state police to capture violators of the motor boat muffling law.

AN AGONY OF SUSPENSE.

Poor C. F. King has been grilled on the furnace of suspense for a good many days. According to the doctors the man is broken in health and spirit. That his health is gone is believed on every hand. The doctors have not come forward with a six months' tenure of life in this case. For several weeks the Governor and Council have been juggling with the case. The unfortunate man has been in an agony of suspense. How much more trying must be the state of his faithful wife and sons. That they have lacked the theatrical display so often indulged in by people seeking such favors, is to their credit, but even in the face of their repression they should receive some consideration. It is no light task for that poor woman to plod to the State House time after time, only to be again put off. Let the council settle the matter once for all. Either pardon King or let him take his medicine. There are plenty of men walking the streets today who have been far more criminal than he has been, but of course that is no excuse for his case. At the same time, he is a human being and both he and his family should receive humane treatment at the hands of the Governor and council.

WHO WILL HELP.

The Associated Charities and "Relief" makes an appeal which should meet with a quick response from our people.

The Associated Charities in Quincy, among the families known to them could use at one, 50 pairs of shoes, stockings and rubbers for children who need them badly. It is felt that there are many persons in Quincy, who would enjoy giving money for this purpose—to buy these things for children who need them.

Also, especially at this season, there is much sickness among the families, and it often is necesary to provide an especial diet; the Soicety would be glad to receive donations for this purpose, also.

The Secretary, Miss Purchase, is in her office, daily, from 11 to 1 P. M., and donations will be promptly acknowledged. All money given for relief purposes will be carefully used and full information given to those who contribute. The office of the Associated Charities is in the Women's Clubhouse, 148 Goffe street.

MRS. LAMONT HAS 5,620

If R. E. DeNormandie expected to finish No, 7 or Fred J. Kessler expected to finish No. 8, in the Daily Ledger Washington contest, they must get more votes.

Today Mrs. Annie Lamont the candidate of the L. L. O. L. has caused a big surprise among the leaders, having more than doubled her vote, increasing her total from 2,710 to 5,620. She has moved up from No. 9 to No. 7 passing both Mr. Kessler and Mr. DeNormandie. Evidently Mrs. Lamont has a reserved vote for the final spurt. Should she double her vote tomorrow she would pass Miss Morrisett who is only 1550 in the lead. Possible she may finish ahead of Mr. Bowditch.

Today Mr. Bowditch gains 80 and Miss Morrisett 55.

Miss Edith M. Cairns of Germantown, with a gain of 185 today, moves up several numbers—jumping from No. 26 to No. 15, with a total of 485.

Tomorrow the last coupon in the contest will be printed. In all the coupons have appeared in 64 issues of the Daily Ledger, and the grand total printed will be in excess of 160,000, good for over 800,000 votes. As in all elections a large percentage of these votes may never be cast for various reasons. Some object to mutilating their papers, others have no interest in the contest, while thousands have been destroyed. The final vote however may surprise everybody.. How many will the leader get?

SECOND PRIZE.

Although a valuable diamond ring was offered as the second prize in the contest, it has not figured to any great extent thus far, but Mrs. Marnock says she prefers the ring to the Wash-

SCHOOL BOARD UNDER LASH

Of Councilman Beeman on Their Attitude on Schools

RENTAL PROHIBITIVE

In a speech before the Norfolk Downs Improvement Association in Poland hall, Thursday evening, Councilman Herbert G. Beeman severely played the school committee for what he termed its arbitrary rulings regarding the use of school halls.

"The spirit of the act for public school halls" he said "was that they might be used by paying the expenses of lighting and janitor service. It was with this idea that it passed the Legislature and was accepted by the City Council."

Councilman Beeman declared a $15 rental about prohibitive. He read a letter that he had written as secretary of the Ward Six Patriotic Association to the school committee and the reply he had received.

"Of what use is the school hall unless it is used?" he asked. "Is the school committee in touch with the needs of the community. We should watch it and see that it does not lag."

Councilman Beeman also criticised the school committee because it would not allow six pupils of the Quincy school to be dismissed ten minutes early once a week in order to attend dancing school on time.

The street committee of the association urged the repairing and resurfacing of Billings road and the provision for one good sidewalk the entire length.

An overhead traffic bridge at the Norfolk Downs depot and the depression of the railroad tracks were other points discussed. The evening closed with the serving of refreshments.

of Barre, Vt., secretary, James Joss of Quincy as treasurer, and one from each monumental centre that cooperates, as vice-president. The organization is to be known as the Monumental Manufacturers of New England, Convention Bureau 1913. The three first named to be the Executive Committee.

The Bureau realizes they have a big task to perform, but every dealer enters into it with enthusiasm and determination that they will show up the great New England industry of monument making from granite and marble as never before attempted. They propose to raise a fund of at least six thousand dollars. Charles H. Wishart was appointed to visit the different centres in Vermont, and John L. Miller the rest of New England. To enthuse the manufacturers the National Association of Granite Industries started the ball rolling by appropriating $300 for the project, at the annual meeting in Boston last Tuesday. This association is composed of many of the building granite producers, and are not so vitally interested.

It is proposed to hold the exhibition in the Boston Arena, where there will be ample room for the most artistic effect.

The Bureau is already assured of exhibits from Georgia, North and South Carolina, Colorado, Wisconsin as well as the New England states. There will be all manner of machinery used in the quarrying and finishing of granite, all in operation.

There will be 1,500 delegates, or retail monument dealers from all parts of the United States and Canada on hand who buy their goods all made from the manufacturer. They will have an opportunity to see how the work is made, to visit the quarries for there will be side trips for the delegates to Barre, Quincy and other centres.

Quincy will put up the most beautiful exhibit in Boston that they have ever made, because it is so handy, and because the local dealers realize as never before that they must take an advanced stand, that they have the best granite in the world for monumental purposes, but it must be presented to the trade in a more attractive form than heretofore, so when the exhibition doors are opened it will be found that Quincy has not taken a back seat to any other district Quincy has the material, and she has the brains to design and fashion that material in the most attractive form. She will take a prominent part in the entertainment of the dealers, and show them her quarries, the historic places, and the great shipyard, which will be extremely interesting to all.

HEMENWAY AND SOMERVILLE

The Attractions at the Y. M. C. A. Court Saturday

The local Y. M. C. A. first team will have for its opponents Saturday night the crack Hemenways of Harvard University. This game promises to be the biggest game of the season for the visitors have not been defeated this year. While basket-ball is not recognized as an official sport at Harvard, the game has always been played ever since it was dropped in 1908 and if Quincy can get away with a victory the boys can be justly proud of themselves. If they expect to win however, a decidedly different style of game will have to be played than was shown last Saturday night against the Cambridge teams. The Hemenways average about 170 lbs. and four of the players are almost 6 feet in height. Their line-up will be as follows; Brewer and Gilmore, forwards; Anderegg, center; Savage and Slater, backs. Quincy will line up as usual with Parker and Rich as forwards; Trask at center; Jenkins and Kenn as backs.

The second team game will also be a hummer from start to finish for the strong Somerville Y. M. C. A. team will meet the local lads. Quincy has already lost two games to the visitors and the boys are out for revenge. Somerville is going better than ever at present and is now leading the second team league.

The first game will be called at 8.15 sharp.

QUINCY YACHT CLUB

Not to have known Edgar W. Emery the new Vice-Commodore is to have missed something. Edgar is a thorough yachtsman and has been an active racing man for several years and during the past few years has captured many trophies.

His first yacht was the Primrose, a cape cat, which he sailed in 1904. She was a prize winner and was formerly owned by ex-Commodore Henry M. Faxon. In 1905 he purchased the Clara Lee another cape cat, and did very well in her but not enough to please him. He then purchased the Mudgekeewis formerly owned and sailed by ex-Commodore Edwin E. Davis, so that for the second time the Mudgekweewis becomes a flag boat of the club, first as flagship under Commodore Daivs and this year as the Vice Commodore's flag boat.

All local yachtsmen were astounded last season at the work of the Mudgekeewis in the Interbay races, when she appeared with a new sail designed by the now Commodore Crane, and captured the Interbay cup.

Rear Commodore Charles W. Laing is also an enthusiastic yachtsman and is the owner of the 30 foot power boat Micmac. This if anything means that the coming year will see renewed interest in power boat racing. The Micmac was built by her owner in 1908.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN

BOSTON AND VICINITY

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

"Bunty Pulls the String" is delighting a lot of theatregoers at the Majestic Theatre, Boston ,and next week will usher in the fourth week of its engagement at the theatre, and capacity audiences have witnessed this comedy at every performance. Throughout the piece, runs a fund of Scottish humor, which finds its expression in the simple home life of the Scots. The company presenting Graham Moffat's comedy is the same which has appeared continuously in this piece since it was first presented nearly two years ago at the Comedy Theatre, New York, where it enjoyed a run of a year. In her portrayal of Bunty, pretty Molly Pearson charms both the ear by her sweet musical voice and the eye by her delightfulness of manner and excellence of acting. She is equally successful in pulling on the heart strings of her audience as she is in dominating the stage for the entire play revolves around the managerial abilities of Bunty.

The scenes are laid in Scotland and one is transported back to the period when hoop skirts and quaint articles of dress were the style. It was an old fashioned picture, but such a one as the blase theatregoer enjoys. Sanderson Moffat, as Weelum Sprunt, who wants to marry Bunty and is willing is necessary, to be henpecked and "glory in the shame of it," acts a difficult part exceedingly well. Ethelbert Hales, as Tammas Biggar, looks the part of the strict Scotch father and carries it out well. Edmund Beresford as Rab Biggar, makes a lively, exuberant son ,who wants to break away from the strict conventionalities of his father. Mr. McGregor, Miss Nybloc, Miss Pole, Miss Singleton, Miss Davidson and Mr. Booker all measure up to the fullest standards of their roles and aid materially in giving a splendid presentation.

Taken in its entirety, the play provides a good evening's entertainment, and is well worth going a long way to see. This company will not be seen in New England outside of Boston at the Majestic Theatre .

BOSTON THEATRE.

It happens often that when a book has been dramatized, its presentation on the stage causes the audience to look with interest at the name of the author and inquire, "What else has he written?", and there follows a wild demand for his books that makes his popularity look like a contagion. This will not be the case with "The Garden of Allah." "Who," the audience will ask, "is the great genius that saw the possibilities for such an amazing spectacular production in such a book? Who read this book and saw between the lines the opportunity for producing the greatest scenic play the stage has ever known?" "The Garden of Allah" as a book, is the foundation on which has been built a play that every one should see, and when they see it, they will go away marvelling at the wonderful edifice some architect of the spectacular has erected. It is a series of marvelous visions, the like of which has never been produced on any stage. Robert Hichens undoubtedly recognizes the superiority of the scene to the story, for the drama throughout is made subservient to the tales the pictures tell; the great brooding mystery of the desert; the wonderful spell it casts over all who, once beholding it, can never leave it; the secret of its silence and the longing hope of the world-weary that somewhere out in its vast solitudes will be found eternal peace, make their appeals through the genius of the man who devised the scenes.

MISS BILLIE BURKE.

Miss Billie Burke has made a tremendous hit in "The 'Mind the Paint Girl" at the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston. The newspapers are full of her praises and the public is flocking to see her. The play is by Sir Arthur Pinero, one of the greatest dramatists of the day, and it tells an extremely interesting story of the private life of a young actress in London. The girl —Lily Parradell— has forced her way from the humblest origin to a foremost place on the stage. When the play begins she is the principal girl at the Pandora Theatre ,a playhouse devoted to musical comedy. She is pretty, generous, mercenary, quick tempered, forgiving, self-sacrificing—just a girl, like thousands of others. In the play she is forced to choose between two men—one of them a lord. Of course, this being a pleasant play, she gets the man she really loves and everybody is satisfied—except the other fellow and, as Lily's H-less old mather sagely remarks, "'E'll get 'is reward 'ereafter."

Most people are interested in that mysterious region known as "behind the scenes," and in this play Pinero has given a very good idea of it. There is one scene—a supper party at the theatre after the performance—in which are assembled a number of actresses and chorus girls with the "Johnnies" who dance attendance on them. In this group the playwright has presented a large variety of types and each is drawn in a masterly style.

The engagement is for three weeks, with matinees as usual on Wednesday and Saturdays, including one on Washington's Birthday.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Kathryn Kidder, the famous legitimate star, who has made the character of "Madame Sans Gene" known from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast, will make her debut as a vaudeville head-liner at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week. For her vaudeville tour Miss Kidder has selected a one act playlet entitled "The Washerwoman Duchess," based upon an incident in the life of the Emperor Napoleon and Mme. Sans Gene. The engagement of Miss Kidder to play her famous role at B. F. Keith's Theatre is one of the big events of the year in vaudeville. For the past few seasons Miss Kidder has been starring at the head of her own organization in the legitimate, and she has not been seen in the East for several years. The character of "Mme. Sans Gene" is one of the most interesting of the many celebrities who won fame at the court of Napoleon. Walter Wilson will play the role of the great conqueror, and the other roles are in the hands of a carefully selected company of players. Miss Kidder is but one headliner on an all star bill. Professor Ota Cygia, the court violinist to the King of Spain, who has captivated all New York with his wonderful technique and masterly command of the violin, will make his first Boston appearance; Max Hart's Six Steppers, composed of four brothers and two sisters, will present a series of terpsichorean specialties; Jack Conly and Margaret Webb will present their funny comedy, "A Stormy Finish;" the Kitamura Japanese Troupe of oriental entertainers; Zenthos' Canine Comedians; Nevins and Erwood in "The Coal Man and the Maid." Leroy, Wilson and Tom ,comedy acrobate; and others yet to be announced, will complete the bill.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

From near and far multitudes of laughter-loving playgoers are coming to see "Believe Me, Xantippe" at the Castle Square Theatre. It is receiving widespread approval for its ingenious plot and comic situations, and it is being voted the best of all John Craig's prize plays. Its fourth week will begin on Monday, and there will be undoubtedly larger audiences than before. The story of George MacFarland and his escapade, his meeting with the bright Rocky Mountain girl, his falling in love with her, and the ingenious method by which he wins his wager that he can escape the law for a year, holds the attention of the audience from start to finish. The cast is of the best. Miss Young as the heroine is charming in appearance and clever in her acting, and the entire company, including Mr. Craig, Donald Meek, Walter Walker, Wilson Melrose, Mabel Colcord and Laurett Browne contributes no small amount to the success of this production at the Castle Square.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

So many would-be patrons could not gain admittance to the Boston Opera House when Mme. Schumann-Heink sang there in "Ill Trovatore" a week ago, that in response to many requests and in deference to out of town opera goers find it more convenient to attend an afternoon performance, Director Russell has arranged to have the great contralto sing once more at a special matinee on Lincoln's birthday. "Haensel und Gretel," one of the most popular operas in the repertory will be the bill and Mme. Schumann-Heink will take the part of the Witch, in which she is inimitable.

"Djamileh" (pronounced Zham-ee-lay) a one act opera by Bizet will be sung for the first time in America on Friday night and will be the outstanding novelty in the week's repertory. Although it antedates "Carmen" for it was given for the first time at the Opera Comique in Paris on May 22, 1872 ,like the other works of Bizet it has always been overshadowed by the world conquest which "Carmen" made later. As the opera is short it will be followed by "I Pagliacci," in which Mme. Melis will sing Nedda, Zenatello will have one of his greatest roles, that of Canio and Polese and Everett will be the Tonio and Silvio.

Monday evening "Tristan und Isolde" will be given its last performance under Mr. Weingartner's baton. Wednesday evening and again on Saturday afternoon will come repititions of Mozart's melodious "Don Giovanni" which has been the artistic success of the season. On both occasions the same great all-star cast will appear. Saturday evening there will be another special Weingartner performance when popular prices will prevail in the balconies. "Otello," Verdi's masterpiece will be sung. The orchestral concert on Sunday afternoon again will enlist the entire orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Weingartner. The program will consist largely of compostions by the gifted director Mme. Weingartner-Marcel will be the soloist.

PAST MASTERS GIVEN APRONS

Hammond and Kincaide Remembered By Rural Lodge

THIRD DEGREE WORKED

A pleasing incident, not down on the program, took place at the regular communication of Rural Lodge, Thursday evening. It was during the latter part of the business session, when the Master requested Wor. Charles L. Hammond and Wor. Henry L. Kincaide to step to the east. A genuine look of surprise flashed across their faces and for a moment they were at a loss to gather just what was intended. The affair was even more mystifying to them from the fact that a few minutes previous both brothers had spoken on a question under discussion and had not expressed the same views. However with a smile they clasped hands and approached the Master. The object of the summons was soon apparent, when the Master presented them each with a beautiful silk Past Matser's apron.

Wor. Frank A. Read said that the lodge had decided to present all past masters with an apron and up to the present time all but three had been persented with this mark of honor, and it gave him great pleasure at this time to present Wor. brothers Hammond and Kincaide with aprons.

Both Past Masters spoke briefly in reply expressing their appreciation of the gift. They also referred to the time when they held the highest gift in the power of the lodge, which they said were the happiest moments of their lives.

The work of the evening was the third degree which was exemplified on several candidates by the Officers of Rural lodge in which Past Masters Hammond, Kincaide and Prout participated.

The special committee of the Council will probably attend the Dock Commissioners' hearing and oppose its passage.

The girl answers to the name of Ethel McDonald and it is said that her home is in Weymouth. A year ago the girl was in court on the same complaint and placed on probation for a year. It is alleged by the police that the girl has been instrumental in leading young girls astray. This morning she was sent to the girls' reformatory at Sherborn.

TURKS BEATEN IN GALLIPOLI

Bulgars Likely to Meet Stubborn Resistance Before They Advance Much Further—Permission For Foreigners to Leave Adrianople or Establish Neutral Zone Refused

London, Feb. 7.—Reports from the front, although very meagre, indicate that the Bulgarians are bending every effort to prepare the way for the Greek fleet to go through the Dardanelles, meet the Turkish warships in the Sea of Marmora, and then to proceed to the bombardment of Constantinople, which is the ultimate object of the allies.

Dispatches indicate that in the fight yesterday in Gallipoli peninsula the Turks were driven off.

If this is the case the Bulgars have made a long step in their advance but they will still have to negotiate the modern and well defended works at Bulair and across the neck of the peninsula, which ought to offer stubborn resistance.

The fact that the Bulgarians appear to be moving their positions westward along the Tchatalja lines seems to show that they realize there is a possibility of an attempt to outflank them, but so far there is no confirmation of the rumors that the Turks are moving troops by sea to the neighborhood of Rodosto and Midia.

The ministers of the powers in Sofia communicated to Premier Guechoff the request of the consuls at Adrianople for permission for foreigners to leave the town, or for the establishment of a neutral zone for their protection.

Premier Guechoff declined to accede to the request. He said, in explanation, there was no precedent for foreigners leaving a besieged place under similar circumstances and there were weighty reasons why Bulgarian headquarters could not grant such permission.

Nor could a neutral zone be established, as no guarantee could be given that shells would not accidentally fall within the zone, and consequently great difficulties would be created for the troops engaged in the operations.

The main body of the Turkish troops has retired behind the main line of defense at Gallipoli, according to a dispatch to the Daily Telegraph.

A Constantinople dispatch says the Bulgars attacked the Bulair forts; but were compelled to retire to their old positions. The Turkish cruiser Messudieh, with two torpedo boats, has sailed for the Black sea, apparently to cover the landing near Midia of troops from Trebizond.

ABUSED BY HAZERS

Two Worcester High School Boys Faces Badly Burned With Caustic

Worcester, Mass., Feb. 7.—With their faces blackened and burned and possibly scarred and disfigured for life, Charles N. Lawrence, Jr. and Alfred Shaw, members of the junior class of South High school, are compelled to remain out of school as a result of hazing by members of the senior class.

The victims were overpowered and not only were their faces decorated with a strong caustic, nitrate of silver, but the figures "13" in large size were burned on the backs of their hands.

Shaw is perhaps the worst burned, and is obliged to remain indoors. Lawrence has to wear a mask.

HIS SKULL BROKEN

Policeman Probably Fatally Hurt by Fall From His Horse

Boston, Feb. 7.—Robert E. Stewart, with his head split open where he had struck against a stone wall, was found by Officer Sheehan, who came riding along in the same direction shortly after the accident.

MATERIAL NOW IS IMPROVING

Product of the Public Schools is Better Than Ever

Headmaster Ernest L. Collins of the Quincy High school was the speaker at the meeting of the Parents and Teachers Association of the Massachusetts Fields school Thursday evening. He spoke on "The Home and the school," and said in part:

"The school is producing better material today than ever before in spite of the knocks it is receiving in the daily papers and journals.

"The trouble is that the ideals of the home and school are not the same. The ideals of the school are very much higher now than in the home. Much done in the five hours of school is undone in the remaining hours of the day.

"There is a lack on the part of the pupil to do good honest, faithful work the whole time. He is satisfied to just get by and parents are satisfied if pupils are passed on what is not their best work.

"Pupils are apt to select courses that are easy. Students preparing for college should take five years at high school," said Mr. Collins as he explained the different courses. "Boys and girls ought to be brought up with the idea that they must earn their way to success in this life and that there is no easy road. Boys are looking for short cuts which in most cases are bad.

"There is a growing lack of respect on the part of the boys for authority to elders and superiors and toward girls. Punctuality is a lost art. The high school has a great lack of punctuality. There are too many tardy, too many dismissals and the excuses given are very unsatisfactory.

"These lead to two results, the pupil loses his recitation and also the continuity of his subject. Most of the failures in high school are caused by irregular attendance. Some of the growing causes of failure in school are pupils being out nights, their conduct on the streets and smoking on the part of the boys.

"I am often asked if the standing of Quincy High school is as high as other High schools. My answer is "yes." Pupils may enter any college except Harvard or Yale by certificate, without examination.

"A pleasing musical program was enjoyed. Miss Frances Hibbert, M. F. S. '11, accompanied by Mrs. Adelaide Sutherland rendered a violin selection "Adoration."

Mrs. William Spooner contributed two vocal solos "I hid my love" and "Mifanwy." She was accompanied by Miss Gertrude Allen.

S .J. Smith, S. J. Ripley and D . H. Goodspeed were appointed a committee to suggest changes in the by-laws.

By Oswald to the Men and Woman From His Own Town

Wednesday night was Wollaston Yacht Club night at the Motor boat show. About 50 of the members of the club were there with their ladies and looked over the new devices for boating.

Capt. Day's description of his trip to St. Petersburg, Russia, illustrated by stereopticon was an enjoyable feature of the evening.

Another pleasant incident was the reception tendered the members by The Oswald System exhibit. Mr. Oswald is a resident of Wollaston and at his exhibit was displayed a Wollaston flag with the sign attached.

"Gee but it's good to meet a man from your old home town." Cigars for the boys and something for the ladies were on top. Oswald is all right in the estimation of the boys.

The Wollaston Yacht Club will have a Clam bake and Dutch lunch, Feb. 22nd.

DISCOVERS BEAUTY FOLLOWS THE BALLOT

New Fount of Youth Revealed by a Boston Woman

Washington, Feb. 7.—That darning socks makes women "look older and feel older," while the right to vote will renew their youth, was the declaration of Mrs. Elizabeth G. Evans of Boston, in a lecture on woman suffrage at the public library.

"I used to darn socks when I was younger," said Mrs. Evans, "thinking that it was a good method of passing the time. I find that it made me look older and feel older, as the labor did not have the proper elements of interest. Working to better social conditions through the medium of the ballot will bring back the youth of American women where sock-darning and other dull labor will make age come rapidly.

"One friend of mine stated she had been made ten years younger by gaining the vote. Women will continue to be ill-treated and under-paid until they get the vote."

WHERE SICK COWS GO

Chairman of Cattle and Milk Conference Says They Become Bologna

New York, Feb. 7.—"Tuberculous cows don't die; they become bologna," said Chairman North at the Eastern Cattle and Milk conference. Dairymen, cattlemen and health officers from the eastern and middle states devoted yesterday's session to a discussion of bovine tuberculosis. After being told the dangers from sick cows, they recommended uniform state legislation to remedy the situation.

With a view of strengthening the federal and interstate quarantine measures the conference recommended that the sale of diseased cattle be prevented within the state they came from.

LIBRARY GAINS IN POPULARITY

Largest Circulation in History Gain in Every Department

Largest circulation in the history. Large gain in every department.

In the face of the fact that a new Branch Reading Room has been added to the library system of Quincy, the record of the circulation of books from the main library continues to increase. The month of January has been a record breaker in all departments. From the desk in the main hall 6621 books have been issued, an increase of 653 over January 1912 and the largest monthly circulation since the opening of the Children's Room.

The work of the Children's Department keeps growing. This year 1855 more books were given out in January than last year . These figures only show a portion of the work accomplished in this department as during the noon recess there are often fifty children in the room reading as well as others coming and going. It is not an uncommon occurance to have as many as 120 children in the room during the morning.

The branches have continued their splendid work, Atlantic with a circulation of 2157 and West Quincy with 3036. The latter shows an increase of 904 over last January which is the largest encrease that any department has ever made in one month.

When summed up the total circulation of books for the last month has been 14618.

QUINCY SCHOOL HAS FINE HALL

Teachers and Parents Confer as to the Furnishings

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Parents and Teachers' association of the Quincy school was held at the school office Wednesday evening to decide upon furnishings needed for the new hall which is nearly completed. It is a beautiful hall and will seat 600.

This hall will not only be of great value to the school but it will also be a great benefit to the whole community if public spirited citizens are allowed the free use of it for the public conference of all questions affecting the community. Free use of course means the payment for the necessary expense of light also janitor's service.

These school buildings it is claimed that cost the city so much money should be used to the fullest extent for the public good.

Many other cities are now allowing the use of their school halls as places of neighborhood conference in all matters affecting the public.

TEACHERS' BILLS.

Members of Quincy Teachers, Association which some time ago joined Massachusetts Teachers' Federation, are being asked to interest themselves in hearings at the State House, Boston, on proposed teachers' retirement and tenure of office acts. These two bills represent the Federation's first important legislative work.

Friday evening, Feb. 14, has been set by the legislative committee on education for the hearing on the teachers' retirement act. This measure provides that public school teachers of Massachusetts shall be organized under a retirement association in such a way that old age pensions will be given after certain conditions of service have been passed. An essential part of the proposal is that women teachers who have reached sixty years and men teachers who have reached 65 years after 30 years' service of which fifteen shall have been in Massachusetts schools may retire or be retired by the school board on pension of not less than $300 or more than $600 a year and that teachers reaching 70 years must be so retired.

The other provisions of the act, which has been published in leaflet form by Massachusetts Teachers' Federation through its secretary, Howard W. Poor, 27 Mt. Vernon Street, Reading, are details necessary to the working out of a scheme of old age annuities.

In accordance with the plan of old age pensions that is generally preferred in this country the annuities are of the so-called "contributory" type. The teachers will help to provide for their own retirement through a small deduction from the monthly salary. The state will contribute the cost of administration and will make other necessary contributions toward the stability of the funds.

The management of the funds thus created will rest with a newly created retirement board, consisting of the commissioner of education, the bank commissioner, insurance commissioner, three members chosen by the directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation and one person selected by the foregoing who shall be neither teacher nor state officer.

Arrangements for starting the scheme; for taking care of teachers already under local retirement systems; for voluntary acceptance on the part of those now teaching followed by compulsory acceptance on the part of those entering the service after the act becomes effective; for proper acturial determination of the amounts of funds required and accounting systems by which the requisite reserves will be created and maintained—these details as well as the general plan are expected to be the subject of animated discussion at the hearing, Feb. 14.

The act designed to place certain restrictions on the local school board's right to "hire and fire" is designated as "an act to provide a tenure of office for certain teachers in the public schools." It will be considered Monday, Feb. 24, in the forenoon.

The essential point of the tenure of office act is that a teacher who has shown himself or herself efficient and well behaved during three consecutive years in a position cannot be discharged except for "inefficiency, incapacity, conduct unbecoming a teacher or other just cause." Discharge can be made only upon charges made in writing and proved publicly, if necessary, before the school committee which is given power to summon witnesses, administer oaths and otherwise, or this special purpose, to act in a judicial capacity. While the act is designed to prevent the discharge of teachers without cause it is provided that in case of a natural diminution in the number of pupils a school board may reduce the number of teachers to correspond with the altered circumstances.

The need of accompanying the retirement act with a tenure of office act has been shown in the experience of places outside of Massachusetts in which nothing has prevented a school board from discharging a faithful and efficient teacher who was just about to reach the pensionable age and thus to save a sum of money for which the community would otherwise have become liable.

Frim evidences of interest manifested by teachers in all parts of the state it is expected that the attendance at both the educational hearings will be large.

ITEMIZED LIST OF HIS THEFTS

Prepared by Coleman and Handed Over to Receiver Bates

EIGHT MONTHS OF ROBBERY

Bookkeeper Had No Difficulty In Getting Away With From $3000 to $5000 a Week—Keliher Offers to "Squeal" If Government Will Help Him—Officials Clash Over Evidence

Boston, Feb. 7.—How George W. Coleman robbed the National City bank of Cambridge of $160,500 and handed over the proceeds to William J. ("Big Bill") Keliher has just been revealed in an itemized list of stealings which Coleman has prepared and handed over to Receiver John L. Bates. It is called "List A," and is a remarkable document, showing how a $12 a week bookkeeper in a national bank was able without detection to rob the bank of an average of four times a week of from $3000 to $5000 at each time.

The stealings began, Coleman said, on June 2, 1909, and continued every few days until Feb. 5, 1910, when Coleman was able to hand over to Keliher only $1000, apologizing, as Keliher has told in his confession, "that there was no more to steal."

With the publication of "List A," the mystery of Coleman's recent trip to Boston, where he worked over the books of the wrecked bank to aid the receiver, is solved.

Coleman in "List A" accounts for but $160,500 of his stealings. In his bill of complaint Bates states that Keliher received not less than $185,000 of the bank loot from Coleman. Bates is trying to account for the $24,500 difference which Coleman has not accounted for in his gifts to Keliher.

Keliher yesterday made a proposal to the government authorities in Boston to help them bring to justice his accomplices and the men who shared in the loot from the wrecked National City bank of Cambridge.

"I am eager and anxious to tell," says Keliher, "because the justice of the city requires the exposure. All that I ask is that the government treat me like a man, meet me half way, give me counsel and do what it can to help me."

Next to Keliher's proposal to the government authorities the most interesting development was the controversy growing out of conflicting statements from District Attorney Pelletier and United States District Attorney French as to how Keliher and his counsel secured possession of the secret records of the Suffolk grand jury before which Coleman had testified. "Big Bill" read these records, he says, before he was tried. His statement is now confirmed.

Pelletier declared Keliher's counsel was given a transcript of the evidence before the Suffolk grand jury. Pelletier claims that French furnished the transcript.

French denies this flatly. He says he did not give out the copy of the records, but that he does not know where the transcript of the evidence came from.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

"Stonewall" Jackson is killed. Grant takes supreme command of the Federal armies, and Sheridan invades the valley of Virginia.

General Haverill, not knowing Bedloe is his son, sends him on a dangerous mission. Gertrude is captured by West's soldiers.

West takes Mrs. Haverill's miniature from Thornton. Bedloe is wounded and captured. Haverill plans to exchange Ellingham for Bedloe. Thornton stabs West. Haverill finds the miniature on West's person.

CHAPTER XVII.

At the Eleventh Hour.

A SMALL boy hanging about in front of the Logan House in Winchester watched for General Sheridan to make his appearance and then asked:

"Please tell me, general, for my grandma, where you are going?"

With his mind full of the trouble caused by Confederate spies and informers, Sheridan replied gruffly:

Wartime Photograph of General George A. Custer.

"Tell her that I am going to Richmond or Petersburg or heaven or hell."

The boy ran away, but came back half an hour later and called out from the sidewalk:

"General Sheridan, my grandma says you can't go to Richmond because General Lee is there, and you can't go to Petersburg because General Beauregard is there, and you can't go to heaven because General "Stonewall" Jackson is there."

It was the evening of Oct. 18. Sheridan, on his way back from Washington via Martinsburg to rejoin the Federal army at Cedar Creek, had arrived in Winchester late that afternoon.

The couriers who came up from the front to meet the general reported everything quiet at Cedar Creek and the adjacent Fisher's Hill and, furthermore, that General Haverill's brigade of the Nineteenth corps was to make a reconnoissance on the right early next morning. This was sufficiently reassuring. The commander decided to take the night's rest in Winchester and proceed to the front next morning.

When he was called at 6 a. m., faint sounds of irregular firing were heard in the distance to the southward, doubtless the result of General Haverill's reconnoissance. The firing did not cease, however, and after awhile it was more distinctly heard, augmented by cannonading. Breakfast was ordered, and Sheridan's bold black, Rienzi, together with the horses of the staff officers and couriers, stood pawing and champing before the door.

It was nearly 9 o'clock when the general got away. Then he hit the pike at a fairly good clip, not liking the sounds of sudden battle ahead, and somewhat nettled at the jeers and taunts of women in the doorways along the route. It was plain they had heard something by "grapevine telegraph." What they heard soon became apparent as the horsemen went over the rise at Mill creek, a couple of miles south of the town.

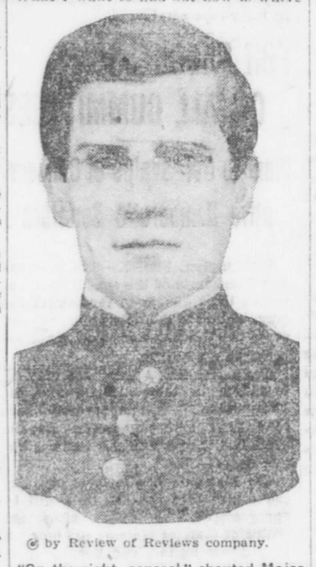

There, as far as the eye could reach, up the long line of the valley pike, stretched and straggled the appalling spectacle of an army in broken retreat. Baggage wagons, wounded men, riderless horses and soldiers without guns told all too plainly a tale of panic and rout.

"Where are you going?" shouted Sheridan. "You should be facing the other way. What has happened?"

They told him the army had been surprised, defeated and all broken up and was in full retreat.

Sheridan did not rip about, swear and threaten—as yet. He was the calmest man of his party as he rode forward, slowly at first, thinking what he should do. The signal message, "We will crush Sheridan's army," recurred to his mind with stunning force. But would the army suffer itself to be crushed, even in his temporary absence? He could not and would not believe it. The stragglers, being hurriedly questioned, described the situation as "awful."

"That means nothing from a pack of cowards who were the first to run away from the battlefield," declared Sheridan. "Come! We'll soon find out for ourselves. This retreat would never have happened if I had been here. What I want to find out now is where

Sending a courier back with a hurried order that the troops at Winchester should be deployed across the valley and that all fugitives should be halted and sent back to the front again, he now gave Rienzi his head. The gallant Morgan colt needed no spur. But the pike was so cluttered up with wagons and convoys of wounded soldiers and groups squatting around fence rail fires cooking coffee as a substitute for the breakfast of which Early's suprise had deprived them that long detours through the fields at one side or the other had to be made.

Nearing Newtown, about halfway between Winchester and Cedar creek, General Sheridan found numerous companies of uninjured and unscared men, with their officers, who needed only a word or the mere sight of "Little Phil," their magical commander, to turn about with cheers and march back toward the enemy. Among the first he recognized was an officer from his own state—Ohio—Major William McKinley of General Crook's staff.

"Where is the Nineteenth corps?" asked Sheridan.

"On the right, general—in the woods yonder," was the reply as the young officer sprang upon his horse, and, with a loud cheer, dashed away to spread the inspiring news of the chieftain's arrival on the field.

CAPTAIN WALSH'S CONFESSION

He Mentions Inspector Sweeney and Two Captains and They Are Suspended—Charges of Policeman Fox Corroborated In Every Detail In Presence of District Attorney

New York, Feb. 7.—Dennis Sweeney, inspector of police, was suspended from the New York police force by Police Commissioner Waldo yesterday afternoon. His name had been mentioned in the graft confession made by Police Captain Thomas Walsh, likewise suspended yesterday afternoon.

Later the commissioner suspended Captain James F. Thompson and Captain James E. Hussey. Thompson and Hussey formerly were inspectors, and each has been in command of the sixth inspection district, which comprises the Harlem precincts, at successive periods in the time covered by Walsh's confession.

The commissioner took action as soon as he had confirmed from the district attorney's office the authenticity of Walsh's confession, which was made on his sick bed. On Monday, if well enough, Walsh will testify before the grand jury, and soon after indictments are expected.

Commissioner Waldo conferred late yesterday with Mayor Gaynor concerning the latest revelations in his much investigated department, steadily under fire since the murder of Herman Rosenthal last July.

The trail of police graft upon which District Attorney Whitman set out last summer is declared by him to have emerged from the thicket of minor exposures to an open road.

Walsh's confession was forced in part by charges by Policeman Eugene Fox, who pleaded guilty to graft collection last Monday and turned upon Walsh as the man next above him. Fearing that a heart weakness with which he has long been troubled might foreshadow his death, and wishing to purge his conscience, Walsh admitted that he took vice graft to the extent of perhaps $100,000 in a single police precinct and shared half of the amount with a police inspector above him.

In the presence of the district attorney and an assistant whom he called to his Madison avenue home, and with Mrs. Walsh and a friend also present, the police captain corroborated in full the charges made by Fox. He said every cent collected by Fox in the East One Hundred and Twenty-Sixth street precinct had been shared with a police inspector. Out of every dollar that Fox brought to him, after deducting 10 percent commission for the policeman, 50 cents had gone to his superior.

Once a month Walsh would meet the inspector in the latter's office and pay him cash, he said. He could not recall off-hand how much the amount paid over was, but he believed it to be between $25,000 and $50,000. He had no knowledge of the amount collected in the four other precincts of that inspection district, but he believed it to be quite as large.

The district attorney was with Walsh for only three-quarters of an hour, but left with the understanding that Walsh would see him again and would place in his own writing the full confession.

To a representative of Waldo Walsh had denied any connection with the graft receiving. A few hours later he made his statement to Whitman

SHINBONE GRAFTED ON PATIENT'S SPINE

Operation Prevents Man From Becoming a Hunchback

Salem, Mass., Feb. 7.—One of the most delicate operations ever undertaken in eastern Massachusetts was successfully performed by Dr. Harvey F. Newhall, who grafted a piece of shinbone on to the spinal column of a man suffering from tuberculosis of the spine, which threatened to make him a hunchback. The operation was performed at the Salem hospital.

According to Newhall, the spinous processes of the vertebraé above and below the site of the disease are split longitudinally and a piece of bone taken from the shin is grafted into the groove made by the splitting of these processes. The grafting is then closed over by the "kangaroo tendon."

The piece of bone lives and makes a solid bone splint down the back over the point of disease, thus preventing the knuckle from growing out and forming the "hump."

In this case the piece of shinbone used was taken from the patient. It is said this will not in any way cripple him.

The investigation is to be made by a joint select committee of ten, who may summon the railroad officials and the employes.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

GILMORE NOT ABLE TO ATTEND

Board of Trade Banquet---Another Speaker Needed

A well attended meting of the banquet committee of the Board of Trade was held Thursday afternoon at the rooms of the Board. The reports of several members were very encouraging and the indications are that there will be as many attend as can be accommodated. Reports from the members who have tickets for sale however are coming in rather slow and the banquet committee want to impress it upon the members that it is absolutely necessary that they should make return to Secretary Hall not later than Monday of what tickets have been sold in order that the committee can make the necessary arrangements.

Word was received from Congressman Gilmore that it would be impossible for him to attend the banquet. While the committee have two good speakers it was deemed advisable that at least one more should be secured, and Secretary Hall was given a list of desirable speakers to confer with today These include James J. Storrow of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, James Martin of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, John Callahan of Cambridge and A. W. Donovan of the Boot and Shoe Recorder of Abington.

Another meeting of the committee will be held Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and it is hoped that full reports from those having tickets for sale will be received by that time.

MANNING CLEANED UP ONE RECORD TEAM ADDED ANOTHER FOR LUCK

Home Team Rolled Up 40 to 0 in the First Period

Quincy A. A. won two games Thursday night at St. Mary's hall by defeating North Dorchester in the Greater Boston basket ball league. The first team won 29 to 15 in an ordinary contest. In the second game Billie Manning hung up a league record of 21 goals from the floor and the team made the highest score ever made in the league by netting 83 points.

A very small gallery watched the game but their enthusiasm outdid the small attendance. A large decrease in the attendance has been noticable during the past month which is quite unusual considering the support generally given basket ball in this city.

The first half of the first game closed with the score 14 to 9 in Quincy's favor. During the half all of the shooting was done by Frank and Joe O'Rourke and Hebert.

The vistiors had a stronger team than on their last appearance, having Nee and O'Connor in the lineup.

"Dan" Duggan played in the second half and his covering of Dacey, Nee were able to score but one goal while he himself made two from his back position.

The passing of the first team was very good and Dorchester were somewhat at sea. "Put" Kelly did the free try shooting and made three points. Boyle was not in the regular lineup because of injuries received in a previous game. He will be out of the game for at least two weeks.

The second team game was a runaway match. Each player scored, with the exception of Frank Harmon, due to the fact "Garm" did the passing to the other players and needed to be covered at all times.

"Boot" made one of the most spectacular shots ever seen on the floor.

In breaking the league record Manning did some very clever shooting.

The score could have been rolled to a larger figure but the boys let up in the closing minutes of play. The first half closed 46 to 0 in Quincy's favor.

WONDERFUL SURGERY FEAT

Shinbone Grafted to Minagon's Spinal Column

PATIENT DOING WELL

A most delicate operation was successfully performed upon William Minagon of Thompson's Cafe at the Carney Hospital ,South Boston, Wednesday by the house surgeon who grafted a piece of the shinbone on to his spinal column. He is resting comfortably. The operation is performed by splitting longtitudinally the spinous processes of the vertebrae above and below the site of the diseased part. The piece of bone is taken from the shin and grafted into a groove made by the spliting of these processes .

The grafted bone lives and performs a splint down the back over the point of the disease and pervents the formation of a hump.

No serious results will follow the loss of the bone taken for grafting. "Billy" during the past three months has been wearing a cast. He has at times felt decided weakness and although he often suffered managed to hide his pain from his associates and customers of the Cafe.

SUPPER AND DANCE.

A turkey supper, entertainment and dance given by the Boston Y. M. H. the committee of Clan McGregor and Loyal Ladies who had charge of the Robert Burns anniversary celebration. The affair was held at Clan McGregor hall and almost the entire memberships of both organizations turned out. Vocal solos were sung by Alfred O. Diack, J. A. Clark and Mr. Cantley and Provost's orchestra furnished the music for the dancing. Angus Martin was in charge of the affair.

NO SCHOOL BOARD RULE BUT LAW

The Citation Which Appeared in Tuesday's Ledger

The citation of school-house law which appeared in Tuesday's Ledger has been mistaken by some for a rule of the School Board.The citation in question is the State law, as it exists today, and was copied literally from Chapter 320 of the Acts of 1912. If you are in possession of a copy of Tuesday's Ledger, you have all the law that exists in this Commonwealth on the question of letting rooms or halls in school buildings for purposes other than regular school work.

PERHAPS HIDING IN HUB

Police Looking For Supposed Slayer of Railroad Construction Foreman

Boston, Feb. 7.—Jack Wren, 25 years old, 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighing 200 pounds, is sought by the Boston police as the murderer of James S. Hamilton, a railroad construction foreman whose battered body was found yesterday in Hinsdale, N. H.

The Hinsdale officials have telegraphed Boston police headquarters to arrest Wren on sight and hold him on a charge of murder. Wren was discharged by Hamfiton a few days ago.

Holbrook, Cabot & Rollins corporation, the Boston construction firm by whom Hamilton was employed, have offered a reward of $1000 for the detection of his murderer or murderers.

RIVETERS GO OUT ON STRIKE

Trouble at Fore River Owing to Assault on Workman

HALF BACK TODAY

About 200 of the I. W. W. hand riveters employed at the Fore River went out Thursday morning. Just what they went out for no one seems to know, even the men themselves, but it is said that the case in court Thursday where one of the foremen was charged with an assault on one of the workers had something to do with it. As far as the Fore River officials know the men had no real grievance. This morning over half of the men who went out returned to work.

BOYS ARRESTED FOR LARCENY

Charged With Stealing Coats from School

QUINCY CONCERNED

Edward Donovan, aged 18 of 10 Ray street and James J. Casserly aged 20 years of 74 Edgewood street, Roxbury, the two boys who a few days ago found the two overcoats in Boston that were stolen from the Quincy High school were arrested by Boston police inspectors Thursday night charged with being the two young men who have been stealing overcoats in several of the cities about Boston. The police found where the young men had pawned coats and Thursday were on the watch for them to again appear. In the afternoon the boys entered a south end pawnshop and attempted to sell some overcoats and were promptly placed under arrest.

Although the young men as far as known have never been seen in Quincy, Sergt. Larkin was instructed by Chief Burrell this morning to go to headquarters and have a talk with them. Something like twenty overcoats have been stolen from school buildings during the past three weeks.

Richard, son of Dr. and Mrs. John T. Ash is now in possession of his overcoat although he was obliged to pay $3 for it and Kelly, a Milton High school basket ball player who was also a loser had his returned upon the payment of $4.50.

CHURCH FIGHTS SUIT

May Affect Every Roman Catholic Congregation In Pennsylvania

Pittsville, Pa., Feb. 7.—A suit involving the control of Catolic church property in Pennsylvania valued at more than $40,000,000 was heard by Judge Brumm here. The suit is based on the petition of St. George's Roman Catholic congregation of Shenandoah, which asks that members of the congregation be legally recognized as trustees of the church property, instead of the late Archbishop Ryan.

This request is opposed by the church at large on the contention that Archbishop Pendergast has succeded to all the rights of his predecessor. If the congregation wins the suit it would affect the status of every congregation in the state.

St. George's congregation has 3000 members, mostly Lithuanians, and has been in much litigation with the archbishop. Court reserved decision.

BOMB WRECKS A SHOP

Policemen Hurt by Infernal Machine Thrown by Garment Makers

New York, Feb. 7.—A mob, demonstrating in the interest of garment makers on strike from shops in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, employed a bomb as a weapon in their renewed warfare that the police tried to check.

Edward Hartman and John Hoppe, two special officers guarding a shop affected by the strike, were seriously hurt by glass and scrap iron contained in the infernal machine, and were taken to a hospital. They were knocked senseless when the explosion wrecked the front of the building, precipitating a panic among the operatives.

A police sergeant and five patrolmen were beaten by the mob. Reserves arrived and dispersed the strikers after a struggle in which five men and two girls were made prisoners.

PROBABLY A SUICIDE

Rich "Perfumed Burglar" Who Escaped From Prison Is Found Dead

San Quentin, Cal., Feb. 7.—The body of Herbert Repsold, known as the "perfumed burglar," who escaped from San Quentin penitentiary Jan. 10 while the state board of prison directors, in executive session, was considering the question of his parole, was found late yesterday on a marsh two miles from the prison. It is believed he committed suicide.

Repsold, who was the son of a Sacramento wine merchant whose estate awaited him when the prison doors opened, was sent to San Quentin to serve a fifteen-year term after he had baffled the police of California cities for many months in the role of society burglar. His work was recognized for its dash and precision and by the odor of a certain perfume.

Repsold made his escape by throwing the entire penitentiary into darkness while he had access to the electric switch as a trusty.

UP TO BULL MOOSE CENSOR

Foss Vetoes Bill to Increase Salaries of License Commissioners

Boston, Feb. 7.—Governor Foss yesterday, in his veto on the bill to increase the salaries of the board of license commissioners, created a brand new precedent which promises to wreck every salary bill in the legislature. He states that salary increases should be passed upon by the commission on economy and efficiency.

This means that all salary increases for Republican and Democratic officeholders are placed at the mercy of the Bull Moose leader, Norman H. White, who is chairman of the new commission. White is the appointee of Foss, and is familiar with salaries in the public service.

FOR PROGRESSIVES ON ALL COMMITTEES

Plan to Get Scalps of Conservative Democratic Senators

Washington, Feb. 7.—The progressive Democrats of the senate have renewed their efforts to force such reorganization of the upper house as will strip the conservatives and reactionaries of authority.

For a few weeks there has been an armistice in this struggle and the "harmonizers" had apparently succeeded in patching up peace. But the armistice is over and the war has begun again.

The plan now is simply to organize the committees so that they will be "progressive," but to go after the scalps of Senator Martin, the nominal Democratic leader, and Senator Simmons, who will automatically become chairman of the committee on finance. The progressives are daily holding conferences and if their plans go through, the senate will be led at the next session by Hoke Smith, Gore or Kern. John S. Williams is being spoken of as the probable selection of the progressive Democrats for the chairman of the important committee on finance. What makes this news of particular significance is that the Wilson men are in the front among the progressives.

ONCE CARNEGIE'S "BOSS"

Estate of Late Elisha Fulton Expected to Reach a Million

May's Landing, N. J., Feb. 7.—While the estate of Elisha M. Fulton, bag and cordage manufacturer, who died in Atlantic City and for whom Andrew Carnegie worked as a messenger boy in Pittsburg, is supposed to be worth more than $1,000,000, his probated will fails to disclose its value.

Mrs. Harriet F. Rutherford, his daughter, inherits three-fourths of his estate. A son, Edward M. Fulton, is left the income of the other fourth, which is thought to be about $250,000. Fulton had already advanced to the son a larger sum than he was leaving to his daughter.

TO EXAMINE ROCKEFELLER

Pujo and His Large Staff Are Off For Jekyll Island

Washington, Feb. 7.—Chairman Pujo of the house money trust investgating committee, with several stenographers and reporters, joined Samuel Untermyer, special counsel of the committee, here and proceeded for Jekyll island, Ga., where they will arrive today and examine William Rockefeller particularly regarding the operations connected with the Amalgamated Copper company.

Rockefeller's health would not permit his coming to Washington for examination, physicians informed the committee.

Bryce on Hague Arbitration Court

London, Feb. 7.—James Bryce, British ambassador to Washington, has been appointed by the British government a member of the permanent court of arbitration at The Hague.

Killed In Elevator Shaft

Augusta, Me., Feb. 7.—Robey Frost, aged 18, was instantly killed while cleaning windows in the bottom of the elevator shaft at the Augusta House, his neck being broken.

DISCARDED HIS RABIT FOOT

Bill Did it in the Exuberance of Joy on Second Round

CRASH CAME IN THIRD

Several good singles were made at the Coliseums alleys Thursday evening by bowlers of the Heptasophs league and in a West—South Quincy special match.

In the Heptasophs Capt. Irving beat Capt. Mackay 3 to 0; Capt. Dackers beat Capt. Gibney, 4 to 0; Capt. Brown beat Capt. Mullen, 3 to 0.

William DeCoste removed his coat and vest after rolling a string of 86, made 121 in the second string and then dropped to 76. Brown made two good strings of 107 and 119 and Wilson 118. Wilson made the best total of 293.

South Quincy beat the West Quincy quintet, 4 to 0. Duggan was high with 121, Welch second with 120, Hanlon third with 119 and Birnie and Kelly next with 105 apiece.

Healey established a new single string match of 130 and a new total of 311.

The Quincy Woman's Team spent the afternoon Thusday rolling at the alleys practicing for the rolloff with the Everett five at Everett this evening. Everett won two of three in a former set and claim the title. Quincy rooters believe however that the local feminine rollers can secure and hold the title so another set was immediately arranged. The results of tonight's match gives the winner one leg in the second race.

ALTERNATING HOPES AND DOUBTS PREVAILING ON THE ICE CROP

Local Prospect Not of the Most Encouraging With Only a Few Inches of Thickness

Continued Cold Snap of Ten Days Would Relieve Situation

The prospects of getting anything like a nominal crop of ice in Quincy the present winter are somewhat doubtful although for the past few days the cold weather has given the ice men a little more encouragement, for if the present cold snap will only continue for a little longer they may get at least a part of their crop. So doubtful are some of the dealers however that they have begun to look about as to prospects of getting a supply from Maine or New Hampshire.

The fact remains however if the supply has to be purchased in Maine or New Hampshire the householder may make up his or mind to pay at least forty cents per hundred pounds next summer, which will be ten cents higher than the summer of 1912.

The Meadow Brook company have two ponds. One at South Quincy and one at Quincy Neck in what is known as the old Wendell quarry. At the present time they have on hand less than one hundred tons which would hardly be a drop in the bucket toward a season's demand. Measurements at the South Quincy pond last night showed about four inches of ice. The ice this year is very clear and free from foreign substance and as it has frozen quickly it is very solid. At the pond however it was said that they would want at least seven inches before they commenced to cut.

Once a sufficient thickness is secured no time will be lost in cutting and getting it into the houses.

At the Wendell quarry pond, it is somewhat sheltered and while the ice from this pond is of exceptional quality it does not make as fast as the pond that is in open. On this pond according to the company there is but a little over two inches, and unless the weather holds good the prospects are slim for cutting much here.

In weather such as we have had for the past week the ponds can not be depended upon to make much more than half an inch a day, and once the desired thickness is obtained it will require several days to cut the pond once over, and even this will not fill the houses.

The pond of the Eaton Ice Co. is located off Adams street near the junction of the Furnace Brook Parkway. It is in a very much exposed locality and ice here makes very fast. Friday afternoon it was said at the company's office that they then had about six inches on their pond and they would not begin to cut until the ice was from nine to ten inches thick. The company say that they need two cuttings on their pond to fill their houses. They however felt very much encouraged by the present cold snap and say that while a week ago the prospect of getting any ice in Quincy was very slim, that the chances today are very much better and they now have strong hopes of filling their houses or at least of making one cutting of their pond. They have very little ice on hand at the present time.

J. F. Sheppard & Sons get their supply from two ponds in Braintree, one pond being at what is known as Pond Meadow and the other at South Braintree. Mr. Sheppard said this morning that they had now about four inches of ice on the ponds. As to whether they would be able to harvest any crop was an open question. If the present cold snap should continue it was probable that they might get a small crop. Ice at the present thickness makes at the rate of about half an inch a day. When it gets a little thicker however it makes much slower so that even should the present cold spell continue for another ten days it would be impossible to get ice as thick as they would like to have it.

Citizens' Gas Light Company

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO CONSUMERS

NEW SYSTEM OF METER READING AND BILLING

It is the aim of the Citizens' Gas Light Company to give to the Public a service as excellent in every detail as possible and to improve the service as opportunity offers.

To this end the Company will on March 1st, 1913, put into effect a new system of Meter Reading and Billing which has been adopted after careful study of the many systems in use in other cities.

REGULAR METER READERS

Instead of hiring a large number of special men to read all the meters on the last few days of the month (as will still be done up to February 28th, 1913) the Company will in March create a permanent force of regular meter readers, who will be easily identified by the Company's badge conspicuously worn.

CONSTANT SYSTEM

These men will on each working day throughout the month read all the meters in one of the sections into which the accounts have been grouped and, having covered the City, will periodically read the same meters once in about every thirty calendar days, all bills rendered covering gas used during the preceding thirty days.

BILLS PAYABLE WITHIN FIFTEEN DAYS OF DATE

Two days after the reading of the meters of any section, the corresponding bills will be delivered. Each bill must be paid within fifteen days of its date and should a bill become overdue by not being paid within fifteen days, the supply may be discontinued without further notice.

EXAMPLES

The following examples are given on typical cases:

| METER IN SECTION NO. 2 | | METER IN SECTION NO. 7 | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Meter read | Monday, Mar. 10 | Meter read | Wednesday, Mar. 19 |
| Bill delivered | Wednesday, Mar. 12 | Bill delivered | Friday, Mar. 21 |
| Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Tuesday Mar. 25 | Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Thursday, Apr. 3 |

METHOD OF CHANGE FROM OLD TO NEW SYSTEM

As all meters will be read in the last days of February and as the new system will go into active operation about March 10th, it is evident that the first bills received after this latter date will cover periods ranging from two to six weeks. But in future the date of the last state of the meter and the date of the preceding state of the meter will appear on all bills; the period covered by each bill will therefore be evident in the bill and should be considered in connection with the amount of gas used.

For instance, bills rendered March 14th, will cover a period of about three weeks, while bills rendered April 2nd, will cover a period of about six weeks. After these first six weeks of change, customers will find that each month they will receive their bills on or about the same date, and that each bill will invariably cover the preceding thirty days.

LEARN TO READ METERS

We would again urge our customers to learn how to read meters; instruction as to this will be found on the back of the gas bills and will enable customers to check bills rendered.

REMITTANCES BY MAIL

Remittances sent through the mails should be addressed only in the name of the Company to its office, No. 11 Granite Street, Quincy.

We desire in conclusion, to assure our customers that the installation of the system outlined above is to secure uniformity and accuracy in handling their accounts.

Over the Community House Project Entered Upon

CAMPAIGN NOW ON

The opening gun in the whirlwind campaign for a Community house in Wollaston was fired Friday, when every voter in the district received by mail a full description of the project and an appeal for help when the time came. The campaign proper will begin Monday, when ten teams of six meneach will start the canvas of the neighborhood.

The teams have set themselves to the task of raising the fund to $25,000 within the week. With a nest egg of nearly $5000 raised at the mass meeting of Jan. 24, for a starter they are confident of accomplishing the desired result.

During the week the teams will meet for supper each night before starting out on their evening's work, They will meet Monday evening in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church.

The team captains will hold a meeting at the rooms of the Samoset club this evening to perfect plans. The captains are:

Team One—Thomas Lacey.
Team Two—Louis S. Cleaves.
Team Three—Harry G. Campbell.
Team Four—A. L. Whittemore, Jr.
Team Five—Albert N. Murray.
Team Six—Arthur W. Rohn.
Team Seven—William J. Leslie.
Team Eight—Ames T. Leavitt.
Team Nine—William Murphy.
Team Ten—Felix Favorite.

The committee has adopted for its slogan "The Wollaston Community House—A social home where all may meet, not a private enterprise, but cooperative, to be built 'by the people of the people, and for the people' of Wollaston."

While the Wollaston Community house will incorporate with a capital of $50,000 divided into 5000 shares of $10 each, $25,000 will be needed before the construction of the building is started. To raise this the whirlwind campaign has been inaugurated.

In its announcement the committee brings forward eight possibilities of such a building:

First. A civic meeting place where all matters pertaining to the community may be discussed. The large main hall will accomodate 500 to 600 people.)

Second. A lodge room to give adequate quarters for the various fraternal orders.

Third. Lectures, musical entertainments etc., may be held by the corporation, which would produce a profit that would contribute in no small way to the support of the building.

PUBLIC DOCK PLAN FOOLISH IDEA ARGUMENT ADVANCED BY SULLIVAN

Mr. Crane Offered Amendments to Meet Objectionable Features of Bill

Council Committee Recorded Its Protest Without Reservation

(Special to the Ledger.)

The committee on cities heard the bill on the petition of Frank Fessenden Crane calling for the appointment of a dock commission for the city of Quincy Friday at the State House. The hearing was slimly attended and only a few speakers took part in the discussion of the bill. Mr. Crane explained the bill to the committee and told them that since the original bill was drafted there has been some complaint about the wording of it and to meet these objections he has gone over it and corrected the parts that were complained over. He submitted the new draft. The most important change was made, said Mr. Crane, at the suggestion of City Auditor Fairbanks and with those changes, the bill is endorsed by that gentleman. Another change to meet the objections expressed in the City Council, was to the effect that the commission shall not become operative until the money for the dock and site for its location were determined upon by that body. With these changes ,Mr. Crane claimed there is no valid objection to the bill.

REP. MICHAEL T. SULLIVAN.
Who Opposed Dock Commission Bill.

He spoke of the developments that have been made along the water front and of another that is dependent upon the building of the dock. This latter improvement is that for which the state last year appropriated $25,000 to be spent in widening and deepening Town River, but not an inch of the work can be begun until the dock is completed.

The matter is too large for the supervision of it to be delegated teo one man, and Mr. Crane said that was one of the reasons for asking for a commission. At the suggestion of a member of the committee, Mr. Crane said that perhaps it would be better to further amend the bill by providing that the members of the commission be appointed for two, four and six years, instead of all for five years. Then when their term expired they could be reappointed or their places filled for a six year term. This would prevent the commission from retiring all at one time.

H. O. Fairbanks, city auditor, spoke in favor of the bill, saying that all the changes which he desired had been made in the redraft. He thought, however, that the members of the commission should be placed under bonds, since they would probably handle considerable sums of money.

Mayor Eeugne R. Stone and John O. Hall, secretary of the Board of Trade also spoke briefly in favor and Representative Leslie was recorded as favorable.

The committee from the city council consisting of councillors James H. Cunningham, Stephen B. Little and John R. Richards, appointed by the council to oppose the bill at this hearing, all spoke against the bill. The committee attempted to bring out what possible objection there could be to the bill in the counicl when by the new draft of the bill all the power is vested in that body. It was pointed out by members of the committee that by the bill as it now stands, all the city council has to do if it doese not want th dock built or the commission appointed is to not vote an appreopriation for the same.

The councillors were obdurate, however, and said that since htey were delegated to oppose the bill that that was all there was to it. They were recorded in opposition.

City Solicitor McAnarney said that with all due respect to the members eof the city council present, still he thtought the whole body was not properly represented. The members that were heard, he said, gavbe the committee the impression that the city government was unalterabbly opposed to the whole matter. This he claimed a wrong impression and offered to submit evidence in the way of records of meeting to show that what he said was true.

Henery M. Faxon and J. Q. A. Fild of Quincy, alco opposed the measure. Mr. Faxon said he had opposed the

Former Quincy Man Performed Delicate Operation at Salem

Reference was made in Friday's Ledger to a difficult surgical operation that had been performed in Salem which was similar to that performed upon William Minagon of Thompson's cafe a few days ago, which was the grafting of a piece of shinbone upon the spinal column. The operation at Salem was performed by Dr. Harvey Field Newhall who is a nephew of Sheriff George Harvey Field of this city, and a son of a former Quincy woman. This is not the first difficult surgical operation performed by Dr. Newhall, for he has many others to his credit. Dr. Newhall has offices at Salem and Lynn, and is house surgeon at a Boston hospital.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

If all people agreed what a paradise this world would be.

Some people perceive the barbs of criticism before they have left the shield, because there is ground for the flight of the arrow.

About time that Fourth of July Committee banquet was coming along and giving every one a chance to have a word to say to boom the affair.

The Missouri legislature is maintaining its standing as the freak law producer.

The man who framed a bill to have women's dresses button up the back with buttons the size of a dollar would not be missed if the recall was exercised in his case.

It is such exhibitions that offer an excuse to the women to demand equal suffrage.

The brain of many an intelligent canine would fit better in some human heads than the piece of alleged mental machinery already doing duty.

By all means drop the tariff which keeps a cancer cure beyond the reach of the humblest.

Having credited Gov. Wilson with saying everything under the sun which he did not say about his cabinet appointments, the newspapers with charming consistency now call him the Sphinx.

Thank goodness there is one man in public life who can get along without senseless frothings, which make his rarer sayings more valuable and pungent.

Who furnished those grand jury transcripts? And echo answers who?

HALF HOLIDAY.

All the clerks of Reading will have a half holiday on Wednesdays of each week, for nine months of the year, The off months are, November, December and January. This is the first place in the state to permit such an extended period of the half holiday to clerks. Its operation will no doubt be watched with interest by other places. During the summer months the Quincy clerks have Wednesday afternoon off each week, except of course where it comes before a holiday. An effort was made last year to inaugurate the Wednesday afternoon closing for the entire year and give it a trial for the longer season. For some reason the movement lacked the energy to carry it to success or even a trial. Maybe if the Reading movement operates to the advantage of all and the mutual benefit of both parties, Quincy will fall in line and eventually the half holiday on Wednesday may become a fixed institution the year round.

EARLY ENGAGEMENT.

Out in St. Louis a girl and boy were born to different families, in the same building on the same date. The parents were rather struck with the coincidence and immediately pledged the engagement of the two little mites who were not in a position to agree to or protest against the arrangement. The children provided they both grow up are to be reared with the knowledge and understanding that they are an engaged couple. The case is another illustration of the parents being to previous. It is too early to predict the mental or physical condition of those youngsters as they grow along through the various stages to manhood and womanhood. Then again they have to feel that they have something to say about the arrangement of their affairs, all other things being equal when they decide to enter upon a matrimonial career.

JUST GIRLS.

The Wellesley college girls, many of whom are members of wealthy families and leaders of society, in different parts of the country, have shown, that with all the wealth and society, which in a measure produces exclusiveness and to some the necessity of putting on masks to hide their real feelings or sentiments they can be real girls, girls who can enjoy a romp, a turn at play and are free and open and pleasant like any other every day jolly girl who can be a good sister and chum to her grown up brothers and a good fellow with their brothers' friends.

The girls invaded the square when the snow came this week, and boarded pungs and sleighs in a hearty good natured tom boyish way which gained them many a ride around the block. They were out for a good jolly, care free time, unfettered by the usages of society. Some of them may not be "out" yet, but they were certainly in the swim on those pung rides and they did not require a formal introduction to the driver with whom they rode. They were "good fellows" and every one accepted the spirit in which they acted and tried to be a "good fellow" with them.

UP TO WHITE.

Gov. Foss revealed another shade of his known versatility when he vetoed the bill to raise the pay of the license commissioners, and likewise established a new precedent which promises to wreck every salary bill which may come up this year. The Governor states that the salary increases should be passed upon by the new commission on economy and efficiency Under this understanding all salary increases will come under the eye of Norman H. White, Bull Moose leader, chairman of the commission. Another reason ,and one which undoubtedly meets with general approval, advanced by the goveernor against the bill, is that the commissioneres are not required to devote all their time to the duties of their office and this should be determined in the fixing of their salary.

His solution of the way out of the present labor unrest is the principle of co-operation and co-partnership in the fullest and fairest sense.

BOYNTON'S COMMUNICATION

Delayed Prayer Meeting at Park and Downs Church

A protracted meeting of the standing committee over a letter received from Chester A. Boynton delayed the regular Friday evening prayer meeting of the Park and Downs church for nearly half an hour. Although the clerk of the church, Charles A. Richardson would give out no statement it is understood that this letter was the subject of discussion.

In the letter Mr. Boynton protests the action taken Sunday by the Park and Downs church in dismissing him from membership and refusing him a letter of transfer to the First Congregational church of Revere.

The matter will probably be referred to the church at the meeting next Sunday, and it is generally thought that the calling of a "mutual council" to reconsider the action will be refused. Should this obtain Mr. Boynton's only recourse will be to call an "ex-parte council" to be made up of ministers of the Suffolk South Conference.

While this cannot compel a church to make any move, its action in favor of restoring a deposed member is sufficient ground for the admission of the member in question into any other congregation.

No action was taken nor was any public mention made of the Boynton letter at the Friday evening meeting.

THE CHORAL MADE MONEY

Gratifying Results Reported at Meeting of Executive Board

The executive board of Quincy Choral society held a meeting last evening at the home of President Thomas B. Pollard and after a general settling up and accounting of funds from the recent concert all were delighted and gratified to find that the season closes with a large surplus in the treasury.

It can be said emphatically that this season has been the most successful of all both from a musical and financial standpoint. At first the chorus seemed small in numbers, but the good fnllowship shown at rehearsals and the exquisite quality of tone far surpassed that of other years; and the culmination, the concert of last week which was enjoyed by the largest audience in the history of the Society certainly cast great credit on executive board, Conductor and all concerned.

The Anneual meeting will be held on Tuesday evening, Feb. 18th, when a fine musical program will be presented with refreshments and a social time for the pleasure of members and their friends.

BETHANY CHURCH.

The pastor will give the second address in the series for young people "The Oldtime Wreckers." The singing by the congregation led by the Young Ladies Chorus is very inspiring.

Stenographer Has a Sewing Machine Installed In State House

Denver, Feb. 8.—State Auditor Kenehan was astounded when he saw an expressman installing a sewing machine in a private chamber of a supreme court justice.

"I don't have anything to do about four days out of the week," explained the girl stenographer, "and I thought I might as well sew up here."

Within an hour the sewing machine left the state house.

BRAINTREE PHILERGIANS.

Last Tuesday evening in Cochato hall the club held its annual gentlemen's night, which proved a most delightful event. Miss Jane F. Edgcomb, the first vice president extended a gracious welcome to the guests, saying that this is the gala meeting of the year, when the club plans to have its choicest number.

Under the direction of the social committee, with Mrs. Weldon H. Reynolds, chairman, the hall was tastefully decorated with jonquils and palms; at the door, each guest was presented with a jonquil for a boutonniere —the club colors are gold and white.

The entertainment was furnished by an Indian girl of the Chippewa tribe, "Pe-ahm-e-squeet" (Floating Cloud,) she wore a bead trimmed buck-skin dress which her grandmother made for her ,and a bright colored scarf, and beaded moccasins; her hair hung over her shoulders in braids and she wore a beaded band around her head. She played many Indian melodies on the harp; first, one that is popular with her people because it simulates the drum, which is a favorite instrument of the Indian; then followed a ceremonial choral, a wolf song to frighten the wolf from the door when the Indian is hungry, a song the women sing when gathering fuel, a chipmunk song ,a gift-begging song, a flute melody, which is a love song, a war song, and an invocation at a birth ceremonial. Among the legends told is one of a woman whose loyalty saved her tribe (her death song was played on the harp,) another is a sweet myth of the birth of the waterlily, another of the thunder bird, each accompanied by a song, or a melody, on the harp, there are over one hundred tribes of Indians in the United States, speaking as many languages, so the tribes have a common sign language of which Min "Pe-ahm-e-squeet" explained some of the signals the blanket playing an important part in some of them.

For the quaint dancer, she was accompanied at the piano by Guy Mair of Boston, they were: a maiden dance, green corn soup dance, drum dance, rain dance, ceremony of planting corn, and a war dance. Mr. Mair played several piano solos, of which a rollicking number, called "Puck" seemed to be the most popular with the audience.

After this most pleasing program, the members repaired to the supper room, where ices and cakes were served by Carroll C. Whittimore of Boston, assisted by the hospitality committee of which Mrs. Edwin R. Olin is chairman. Those who presided at the tables were: Mrs. Albert E. Avery, Mrs. Harold M. Gage, Mrs. Gordon M. Keating, and Mrs. Ralph B. Woodsum.

There will be an extra meeting next Tuesday afternoon, February 11, at 2.30 o'clock in Cochato hall, at which will be given the annual dramatics of the club. Members are requested to bring no guests to this meeting.

On Monday, February 10, at 2.30 o'clock, Mrs. Albert E. Avery, 265 Commercial street, East Braintree, will entertain the class in Modern Literature; Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney who is conducting the class, will speak on Maeterlinck, reading from "Ardiane and Barbe Bleue," "The Blue Bird," and "The Sightless."

But Polls in Contest Will Close February 18

GAIN BY MISS MORRISSETT

Evidently Miss Nellie Morrissett does not propose to relinquish her grip on sixth place in the Washington contest to Mrs. Lamont or anyone else, and she has not yet given up hope of passing Mr. Bowditch. The vote of 535 today for Letter Carrier Cole shows that some of those who have not been considered as winners may have surprises for the leaders in the final spurt.

Mr. Bowditch gains only 25 today, while Richard Larkin adds 50.

GAS CO. WISE ABOUT CHANGES

New Meter Reading System to Be Started Right Away

TO GET USED TO IT

Changes of any kind in the routine work of a corporation is a large undertaking and not easy to make in any event. Not only does it involve quite an expense, but a general disturbance all along the line which naturally causes some confusion not only to the office of the company making the changes but to their customers as well. It is for this reason that the Citizens' Gas Light Co., have commenced a month ahead to notify gas consumers of the proposed changes in the way of meter reading that they may be prepared on the first of March when the new plan goes into effect. For the first six weeks it will probably be a little confusing, for some consumers will get bills covering a short period while others may get a bill covering a six weeks period.

Once the scheme is in full operation however consumers will get their bills once every thirty days, although the date may be anywhere from the first to the last of the month, although once established however blils for gas consumed may be expected, and will be received on the same date every month.

THE ICE CROP

That is a average of ten inches, which is the most economical to handle.

When asked as to his supply on hand Mr. Sheppard said that his firm had but very little. He further said that they would not probably wait until the ice made as thick as ten inches but would cut when it became seven or eight inches thick.

Frank S. Patch, proprietor of the Meadow Brook Ice Co. returned this morning from Lake Winnepesaukee in New Hampshire where he had been for the past two days looking to see what the prospects were of getting his supply from that section. He says that Friday they were cutting some fourteen inch ice on a part of the lake. On other parts of the lake the ice was much thinner, but there did not seem to be an over abundant supply. Friday morning the themometer was 4 below zero on the lake so that of course ice was making all of the time but slowly.

Mr. Patch made some arrangements for getting his summers supply from this quarter as it is hardly expected that he will under the most favorable weather he able to get much ice from his own ponds.

According to the weather sharps and the weather maps the present cold snap is to continue for another ten days, and if these predictions hold true it is more than probable that the local dealers may be able to get a small supply at least While the local men did not state for fact that cutting would be commenced when the ice reached a thickness of six inches the chances are very much in favor of their doing so.

THURSDAY CLUB EXPECT TREAT

J. Bird 89 Years Old Looks Forward to Riper Age

TOBOGANING POPULAR

A regular meeting of the Thursday Evening club was held in the rooms Thursday evening. The members anticipate a spirited address on Feb. 15 from Rev. Ernest Marriett, rector of the Episcopal Mission of Our Saviour. He has not announced his topic.

Lenten services will be held in the Mission throughout the season. A communion service ushered in the period. Visiting rectors will address the members at the evening services.

One of the most active residents of East Milton is J. Bird of Beale street. With 89 years hanging over his head he manages to look as young and appear as lively as the majority of younger residents. He has made his home in East Milton for a long time and believes that despite his advanced years he can shoulder a few more.

Milton academy and the Milton High school meet in one of the regular hockey contests at the rink this afternoon. In former years, when large sized boys attended the academy, the High school was not in a position to compete because of the difference. Of late years the average size of the academy student favorably compares with the high school pupil and most of the athletic contests that have been played have resulted in the high schools favor. One points with pride however to the renowned athletes developed at the academy, many of whom were All American team men after their Harvard seasons. The high school on the other hand has developed good athletes who did not usually continue education after graduation but who are now prominent in athletic circles, many being affiliated with the B. A. A., South Boston A. C. and the North Dorchester A. A.

Milton, by defeating Wellesley high at basket ball Tuesday put a crimp in that team. Coach Hazelton adopted a new line in the game and did not use his best men. He scented victory from the start and Kelly was in the lineup but eight minutes. Hern played but a short period and both were instrumental in assisting in the scoring.

Tobogganing enthusiasts from surrounding cities and towns have enjoyed the toboggan slide at the Cunningham park the past few days. New guards were placed along the sides early in the season and all needed improvements made in the slope. To add to its attractiveness a building was erected that will accommodate a large number. It is heated by a large stove, contains racks for the toboggans and hooks for clothing. It is kept in spic and span condition by Superintendent Simpson who has charge of the whole park. It is estimated that during the past three days over 300 have taken advantage of the slide. Many express the wish that the open winter continue no longer because of the pleasure derived from tobogganing. On the other hand, those who do not take to the quick dip of a heavily loaded toboggan have recourse to skating. The pond is flooded and ready for the attention of all who don the steel runners. The only division in sentiment is between those who think snow will cover the ice and ruin skating and those who dislike skating but take to tobogganing. The rink is in perfect condition and while only a few games have been played this winter the individuals are organizing teams in the hopes of securing dates with fast aggregations.

IN MEMORY OF ALLEN FAY SPEAR

Library Presented Indianapolis by Boy's Parents

At the recent graduation of the grammar grade class of thirty-five, School 57, Indianapolis, Indiana, with which Allen Fay Spear, late son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Ray Spear, formerly of Randolph, would have graduated had he lived so to do, Mr. and Mrs. Spear presented to the school a beautiful "Allen Fay Spear Memorial Library," a mahogany case with a capacity of four hundred volumes and containing one hundred and thirty-two volumes, embracing many choice reference books suited to the eight grades; a set of seventeen volumes of Nature Study, also twenty volumes International Encyclopedia (partly the gift of the class) all carefully selected as the best by the school board and teachers, and accepted in behalf of the city by one of its school commissioners as the first gift of its kind to the city, and by speeches of acceptance by the president of the Mothers club, and by the president of Butler college, supplemented by dedicatory exercises by the graduating class. Mrs. Spear will be remembered by Quincy residents as Hattie Maude Fay, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Fay who resided for many years on Greenleaf street, during Mr. Fay's connection with the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co.

BRIEFS

During the Lenten season the Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostom's church will meet every Wednesday at 10 A. M. in the parish rooms to sew for benevolent purposes. Basket lunches are planned for. Next week at two o'clock Miss J. F. Bumstead of Cambridge will speak on the work of the Mass. branch of the Woman's Auxiliary in charge of the Latin-American work in Mexico, Brazil Haiti and Cuba.

The evengelistic services held a Memorial church the last two Sunday evenings were well attended, and the music appropriate. The usual call for expressions in such meetings has been omitted and in its place the closing appeal of the sermon has been to make a right decision.

The parish committee of the First church announce an interesting series of sermons by Rev. Adelbert Lathrop Hudson at Stone Temple on Sunday mornings during Lent. The subject for Sunday will be "The Present Significance and Practical Value of Lent."

Subscriptions to the Quincy Daily Ledger are going to play an important part in the Washington contest trip the next two weeks. A thousand votes more or less will count big when the polls close. Ten subscription means 10,000 votes, 25 means 25,000 votes and so on. A canvass of the city is being made by some of the contestants and the ultimate result of the votes cannot even be predicted.

FIREMEN VOTE TO STRIKE

Means That 52,000 Miles of Railroads Will Be Tied Up

New York, Feb. 8.—The committee of managers of the eastern railroads announced last night that their 30,000 firemen had voted almost unanimously to strike, thus tying up over 52,000 miles of railroads.

A statement signed by Chairman Lee for the committee says:

"If the firemen announce that, as a result of their strike vote their committee will call out the men, the railroads will, of course, take steps immediately to prepare for the operation of trains under strike conditions.

GARMENT INDUSTRIAL WARFARE AT BOSTON

Ten Thousand More Expected to Go on Strike Next Week

Boston, Feb. 8.—Ten thousand makers of women's garments in Boston will go on strike next week if their demands, to be presented the manufacturers Monday or Tuesday, are not accepted.

The women's tailors are affiliated with the International Ladies' Garment Workers and the A. F. of L. They have wired for their international president to come to Boston to take charge in case a strike is called. Their demands have been sent to the international officers for ratification. They will be returned, probably, today. They are to give the manufacturers twenty-four hours in which to act on the demands. If they are not conceded they will strike.

The raincoat makers who went on strike yesterday are affiliated with the Industrial Workers of the World. They are a separate organization. Their leaders declare they struck because they faced a lockout of 350 of their members.

WAITED A YEAR IN VAIN

Hub Dockmen Promise Real Strike Unless Demands Are Granted

Boston, Feb. 8.—Unless the mediatory offices of the mayor of Boston and the big influences of the civic federation are effective, Boston on Monday will see a strike of the longshoremen, the like of which has not been in the city for a generation, if ever.

The longshoremen say if they strike it will be no child's play. They threaten to use all the means within their power to win and win decisively.

The men say they are willing to compromise and that they have waited a year for the increase that was promised them if they abandoned their strike that last year tied up the port of Boston and cost the transatlantic steamship corporations more than a million of dollars. The men ask 10 cents an hour increase.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

"Stonewall" Jackson is killed. Grant takes supreme command of the Federal armies, and Sheridan invades the valley of Virginia.

General Haverill, not knowing Bedloe is his son, sends him on a dangerous mission. Gertrude is captured by West's soldiers.

West takes Mrs. Haverill's miniature from Thornton. Bedloe is wounded and captured. Haverill plans to exchange Ellingham for Bedloe. Thornton stabs West. Haverill finds the miniature on West's person.

A couple of miles further on, in the rear of General Getty's division near Middletown, a whole bunch of regimental flags seemed to rise up out of the ground. These proved to be the colors of the main body of Crook's troops, which had not retreated at all but reformed after the surprise of early morning and were now holding the line to the west of the turnpike. In one of the brigade commanders here Sheridan recognized another stanch Ohioan, whom he knew. This was Colonel Rutherford B. Hayes.

The meeting, in quick succession, of McKinley and Hayes under such momentous circumstances naturally impressed the general as of encouraging portent. Yet how little could he, or they, guess that within the span of a single generation both of these promising young Ohio soldiers, fighting shoulder to shoulder with countless others of equal or more promise, were to become presidents of the United States of America.

Far other and more immediately pressing concerns occupied them on this day of the battle of Cedar Creek. Colonel—or was it already general—Hayes was able to answer more definitely the oft repeated inquiry for the Sixth and the Nineteenth corps.

"Here are two divisions of the Sixth corps intact. General—and on their right are Haverill's and Ruroy's divisions of the Nineteenth. General Crook is on the extreme left with Merritt's cavalry. All that they want is to know that you're here."

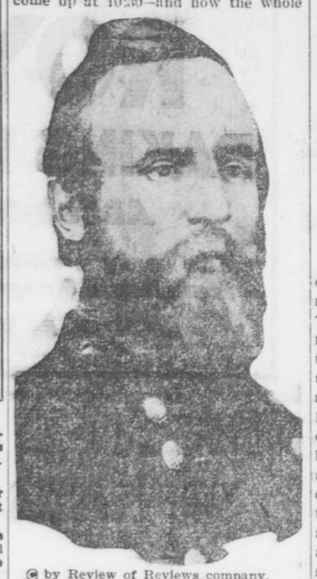

"And all I want, by ——," cried Sheridan, "is to get those men up that went to the rear. We'll whip those rebel rascals back and sleep in our old camps tonight."

He now came full upon the newly forming Federal line of battle. It was as if an electrical thrill had been shot through the entire army from the moment of Sheridan's arrival on the field. Cheer after cheer rang out, to be taken up front and rear and far around before the real cause was known. Had reinforcements come? Yes. Little Phil was scorching down the pike, and he was a host in himself. Sure enough, there was his energetic small figure on the big horse, his eyes flashing and his face glowing as he galloped along, hat in hand, just to show himself to the troops.

The general rode on with his staff and escort, and in a minute more they were a distant, confused mass of dust and flying hoofs. Suddenly from the westward came another rolling cloud with a thunderbolt in its midst—the yellow haired, boyish Custer, the youngest general in the whole Union army, a dashing cavalry leader whom the enemy hesitated to shoot at, declaring that if he was not a southern cavalier he rode and fought like one. Custer, now at a tearing gallop, flew up to Sheridan, threw both arms around him and kissed him on the cheek in an irrepressible burst of boyish enthusiasm, then was off again like the wind.

It was not yet noon—Sheridan had come up at 10:30—and now the whole stream of men on Winchester turnpike was flowing southward instead of the other way, full of fight again. Another tense hour sped by—two hours—and still Sheridan was busy reforming and rearranging his lines, passing the whole front of his infantry in review, until satisfied that their shattered morale was sufficiently restored to be relied on once more for aggressive work. The enemy's fire had noticeably slackened, but this was a sign to be acted upon with extreme caution until its significance could be definitely ascertained.

General Sheridan was still obsessed with the idea that Early's aggressiveness must be accounted for by heavy re-enforcements and that possibly Longstreet had joined him, after all.

When toward the middle of the afternoon the Confederates made a bold, though unsuccessful, sally against General Haverill's division and the right of the Sixth corps, commanded by General Buckthorn, the suspense became unendurable. Buckthorn received a note from the commanding general conveying an order, which he promptly transmitted to General Haverill, as the latter occupied the position from which the movement could be most effectively made: "Send Lowell's cavalry after that exposed battery at the edge of the woods, with the object of bringing in as many prisoners as possible.

"Colonel Lowell has just fallen. Will send his command under new leader, to be chosen at once."

A cavalry officer with haggard face and bloodshot eyes, bareheaded, jacketless, his shirt open at the throat, rested in a field to the east of Middletown after a hurried inspection of his troopers to the left of the Union line. The colonel of a New York regiment rode up, proffered a flask and said:

"Colonel West, have a drink with me before you go in again. You seem to need it, and I expect at this rate you'll be either in hades or in glory before another hour passes."

Contrary to his reputation, habit and principle, Kerchival West accepted the kindly offer and swallowed a full sized man's drink, known in trooper parlance as a "slug." Then, as if suddenly possessed by a demon, he swung out his saber and, turning to his men with the signal cry of "Now for the charge!" led the cavalry in a brilliant sortie across the fenceless meadows and at the line of straggly woods where the advanced Confederate battery still belched forth defiance.

There was no withstanding such impetuosity. The charging troopers came back with flying colors, several captured guns and a score of prisoners—first herald of the turning tide of victory. But now their wild leader was not riding at their head. No one had seen him fall. Whoever knew what had happened to the individual forgot it in the jubilant excitement over the general result achieved.

The Federal line was now invincibly re-established. At 4 o'clock Sheridan ordered the grand charge, which was begun under his personal direction by the Nineteenth corps on the right and taken up by the successive commands along the line to the left, the cavalry on the flanks charging at the same time. Then the Confederate batteries opened up, and the roar of artillery and the splitting crash of exploding shells mingled with the fierce roll of the musketry.

Nag and Keep on Nagging, Advises a Hubbite Suffragist—The Nagging Female of the Species Seems to be Able to Use Her Deadliness to Advantage—Bay State School Teachers Will Move on Legislators for Pensions and Tenure of Office—Two Momentous Hearings at the State House—Sale of Fake Masterpieces to Back Bay Highbrows Gets a Setback—Boston May Lose Reputation as Champion Easy Mark Town.

Boston's reputation as the champion easy-mark town for questionable masterpieces may get a set-back "Works of old masters" have long found an apparently limitless field in the Hub. Newspapers hesitate to attack the collections of ancient and modern paintings which are frequently put up for sale in some auctioneer's gallery, for fear of bringing libel suits about their heads. A recent and peculiarly impudent imposition on public credulity, however, aroused the art critic of one Boston daily to a column and a half of sarcasm pure and simple, aimed at the gullible person who sees an alleged Goya masterpiece which should be worth $25,000 if it is worth a cent, but which is offered at the tempting price of $160 or thereabouts. Think of a genuine Coret or Daubigny, Millet or Romney being offered for public sale for a few hundred dollars and grasped by a believing collector with more money than brains as the real thing. The perpetrators of the latest fake masterpiece sale, as a result of the column and a half of satire largely, have had about twenty-five thousand dollars' worth of their sales returned to them, and the end is not yet. Some day people in cultivated Boston will learn that masterpieces are not sold for a song. The gratifying point is that at least one of the metropolitan newspapers dared run the risk of libel suits for the good of the cause.

Nag and keep on nagging, advocates Mrs. Maude Wood Park. Mrs. Park, well known as one of Boston's leading suffragists, does not have the appearance of a nagger herself, being a remarkably attractive, gentle, butter wouldn't melt-in-her-omuth sort of Radcliffe graduate who is as prominent socially as suffragistically. Nagging, however, is declared by Mrs. Park to be the great advantage women have in their fight for suffrage, helping them to just naturally keep the legislators constantly on the watch. Home nagging, presumably, is not included in Mrs. Park's advocacy as this would have no particular effect in getting votes for women, and one cannot imagine the gentle lady herself as a domestic nag artist. Suffrage having been attained, Mrs. Park declares that the nagging propensities of women will do more toward the enforcement of laws than any other one feature of their enfranchisement.

"Are you familiar with Spanish?" is a question which is taking the place of the time honored query regarding the French language. This is particularly notable in high grade employment agencies, where an increasing demand for persons capable of taking care of business correspondence with South American houses indicates the tendency toward Pan American commercial development and the important place which the Spanish language will have in this business. The wise youth is he who with a view to commercial success learns the Spanish language well, for innumerable openings are arising for traveling salesmen and South American agents in many lines of business.

Hearings at the State House which will interest all Massachusetts public school teachers are announced for the present month. On Friday, Feb. 14, in the evening representatives of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation will explain to the legislative committee on education the provisions of a proposed retirement law under which the benefits that now apply to a few teachers in a few places will be made state wide. This measure contemplates in essence a contributory system of retirement under which women teachers at age 60 and men teachers at age 65 may be retired (and all teachers at age 70 must be retired) on pensions of not less than $300 or more than $600. These old age annuities are to be provided, not entirely out of public taxation after the fashion of the British old age pension system, but rather as in the German system by contributions of the workers themselves supplemented by appropriations from the commonwealth for administrative and other expenses. The bill for retirement allowances has been drawn very carefully by a committee of the Teachers' Federation. Its provisions, as set forth in a leaflet issued by the secretary, Howard W. Poor, 27 Mt. Vernon street, Reading, are already exciting much discussion. Accompanying the proposed retirement law is a n act to provide, "a tenure of office for certain teachers in public schools." This measure, which will be the subject of a hearnig on Monday, Feb. 24, in the forenoon, aims to make it impossible for school boards to discharge efficient teachers as they approach the pensionable age. It provides that discharge may be made only for good and sufficient cause and that the dismissed teacher may have public hearings before the school board. So far reaching proposals as these will doubtless bring a great crowd of educational people from all over Massachusetts to Beacon Hill. The vigor with which the measures are being pushed must attract further attention to the remarkable growth of the newly organized Massachusetts Teachers' Federation which already is composed of forty-three local associations with a total membership of more than 7,000 teachers, and which is likely to receive several important accessions in the near future.

NO MATERNITY WARD IN SIGHT

Trustees Would Be Only Too Happy Were It Possible

The Ledger was evidently misinformed with regard to the establishment of a maternity ward at the Quincy City hospital, as no such ward has been installed and there is little likelihood of its being done under the present conditions for some time.

The later statement is made on the authority of Dr. John F. Welch, a member of the Board of Trustees of the Hospital.

Dr. Welch, said nothing would be more gratifying to the trustees than to be able to equip such a ward or do anything else that would add to the efficiency of the hospital, but as such a ward had not been installed, an announcement to that effect might cause inconvenience and discomfort to many people. In order that people might not misunderstand the situation he deemed it necessary to make this correction.

NEW MOTTO BY SQUANTUM CLUB

Digging For Members' Names In List of Charades

The Squantum Women's club held a regular meeting Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. S. H. Adams Park avenue. The club adopted this motto "Everything to help, nothing to hinder."

After a short business meeting a pleasant social hour was spent. Mrs. James Hagan reviewed Marie Corelli's book "Holy Orders," in a very interesting manner. Mrs. Adams made up this list very cleverly and awarded three prizes, Mrs. Matthew McGrain, won first, a dainty silk bag; Mrs. James Hagan, second, a leather blotter and Miss L. B. Young, third, a small leather blotter.

Among those present were Mrs. William A. Reed, Mrs. Edward Eagar, Mrs. Matthew McGrain, Mrs. Frank Anderson, Miss L. B. original bill by which the city has the authority to borrow mony for dock purposes and he was opposed to the whole idea. He claimed the sentiment in the city to be against ite. There is no haste anyway, said Mr. Faxon, and the matter can be allowed to rest without burdening anybody.

Mr. Field said that he had beeen in businss in Quincy for 65 yearse and nver yet has seen any need of a public dock.

Representative Michael T. Sullivan opposd the bill and called it "a foolish idea." He said there is no public demand for the dock and few people in Quincy would be benefited by its construction. He was asked if he would favor the incorporation in the bill an article providing for the referendum to the people before the measure could bemome operative. He said he certainly would, and felt that the voters of the city would answeer in no uncertain voice whether theye want the dock or the dock commission.

The committee tried sveral times to draw out the speakers why they opposed the matter, but finally gave the matter up and took it under advisement.

GIVE UP FIGHT FOR $3,000,000

Mrs. Eddy's Sons Agree to Accept One-Tenth of That Sum

BITTER STRUGGLE AT AN END

Money For Which Glover and Eddy Contested Goes to Church Founded by Their Mother—Five Trustees to Administer About $2,700,000—Victory of Church Is Complete

Boston, Feb. 8.—After two years of litigation the fight over the $3,000,000 estate of Mary Baker G. Eddy has been abandoned by her sons.

In place of the big estate left by the founder of Christian Science, the two men resigned themselves to be satisfied with one-tenth of the sum.

The bitter struggle which cast the whole question of the Christian Science faith into the courts, and called upon the law to pass upon it as a religion, was closed yesterday when Mrs. Eddy's son, George W. Glover of Lead, S. D., and her foster son, E. J. F. Eddy of Waterbury, Vt., agreed through their counsel to abide by an agreement made before Mrs. Eddy's death, by which between them they get less than $300,000.

The Church of Christ, Scientist, will now become possessed of about $2,700,000 left it by Mrs. Eddy two years ago. A statement given out by the trustees of the church specifically declared that the contestants of the will neither received nor will receive any money in connection with the disposal of the litigation.

The agreement between counsel provides that the sons shall surrender the immensely valuable rights in the renewal of Mrs. Eddy's copyrights for the sum of $5000.

All allegations in the sons' pleadings, reflecting upon Mrs. Eddy, or upon the religion of Christian Science, as founded and taught by her, or upon the integrity and good faith of her associates, counsel, and trustees, are to be expunged from the court records.

The victory of the Christian Science church over its founder's relatives is complete.

The five trustees who will administer the immense sum which has thus been surrendered into their hands are Archibald McLellan, Allison V. Stewart, Adam H. Dickey, John V. Dittemore and James A. Neal.

Last night they refused to make any statement in addition to that given out officially from the Christian Scence headquarters. The agreement for the final disposition of the Eddy fortune was made between Herbert Parker of Boston, representing the sons, and Frank S. Streeter of Concord, N. H., representing the administrator of the church. The preliminary agreement was made Jan. 17 and was re-executed Jan 25. It provides that there shall be judgments entered against the sons on all pending litigation.

Yesterday's agreement leaves Mrs. Eddy's own son, George W. Glover, with $120,000 in cash and $125,000 in trust from her estate, and her adopted son, Ebenezer J. F. Eddy, with $45,000 cash.

The agreement ends sensational litigation which was being fought simultaneously in three courts, the superior court of Merrimack county, New Hampshire; the supreme court of Massachusetts and the district court of the United States for the district of New Hampshire.

The only concession made to the sons that is apparent in the agreement is that the trustees holding the $175,000 fund for the benefit of the family of George W. Glover shall not further claim that the rights of Glover and his family are forfeited by their action in the other court proceedings.

Matches were rolled in the Fore River and Quincy City Leagues Friday evening. No alarming scores were made although several good individual strings were rolled.

The Quincy Women's team went to Everett for another match with an aggregation representing that city. Quincy secured the second string and total pinfall ,losing the third string by two pins. This is the fourth match and while Everett managed to beat the local team two out of first three the series will continue. Quincy now leads in points, the score in the four matches being 9 to 7.

The royal rooters to the number of 30 accompanied the girls to the alleys and defied snow ball throwers from the car stop to the alleys. The party reeturned on a late train.

At the City Square alleys the Melonchopee five took three from the Granites, the losers winning only the first string. Johnson's string of 97 was high single and the high total of 275 was made by Gillis.

At the Coliseum alleys the Machinists Floor beat the Electricians 3 to 1 and the Shipfitters beat the Hull Draftsmen 3 to 1. Both were matches in the Fore River league.

The Geldings under Sweeney's superb coaching were as steady as my old work horse when up against the Colonials whom they beat by three points to one and a total score of 1275 to 1211.

Duggan and Welch acting as leaders while Merrill, Rooney and Conley followed on the pole pulling the team up a stiff hill with a victory of 64 pins. The Colonials under the management of McPherson were a trifle batty on account of the rooting on the side lines, Givey Elcock and McPherson led their team. ## WHO WILL WIN IN THE FREE WASHINGTON TRIP?

Sturgis Hunt Makes a Big Spurt on Last Day Standing Will Be Printed

But Fred Willams Has a Lead of Nearly 20,000

The last vote coupon has been printed!

The last summary of the standing of candidatee previous to the final results is printed today!

There are only eight days in which to canvass for Daily Ledger subscriptions, and gather in the coupons which have been printed in the Ledger of late.

Fred D. Williams has a handsome lead of 19,100 today, but it is not as large as Saturday and ft is not a dead sure thing that he will win the capital prize.

The only one of the four leaders to make a big gain today was Sturgis Hunt, the Y. M. C. A. candidate, who has greatly improved his standing. He gained 5,600 votes and is now only 19,110 behind Mr. Williams. At the same time he leads Mr. MacKay by 9,795 votes.

Mr. MacKay's committee did not put in any votes today, but a Wollaston friend forwarded 65 for him.

Friends of Miss Morrissett are showing increased activity and she gained 1,940 more today, carrying her total into five figures—10,460. Mr. Bowditch gained 760, but is only 4,945 ahead of the West Quincy young lady.

Mrs. Lamont of the L. L. O. L. made a gain of 420 today, and hopes to win No. 7 or better.

Mrs. Emma Marnock is holding some very successful coupon whist parties and is sure to increase her vote largely. Whether she will get 100,000 remains to be seen.

The contest bids fair to eclipse any ever attempted by any paper in this section.

There is still a chance to help somebody win this contest. The winner will have a trip to Washington with all expenses paid on the week of the inauguration of President-Elect Woodrow Wilson. The winner of the contest has the privilege of taking a companion on the trip and the expenses of both will be paid by the Daily Ledger.

The trip will be a magnificent one and the winner will have a chance to

SCOTT AND PARTY MET DEATH AFTER REACHING SOUTH POLE

Were on Their Return From the Successful Quest When Overtaken By Blizzard

Their Dead Bodies Discovered Later By Searching Party

Capt. Robert F. Scott, o fthe British navy, explorer, and a party reached the South pole, Jan. 28, 1912. They were on the return trip of their successful quest for the pole when overtaken by a frightful blizzard in which the entire party perished.

Capt. Scott's ship reached New Zealand, Australia today and reported the finding of the pole and the subsequent calamity.

Those on the vessel, waited as long as their instructions demanded for the return of the party from their dash for the pole and after a short search found the bodies of the entire party where they had perished in the storm. Thes hip then immediately started for civilization.

COMMITTEE REFUSES APPEAL

Of Boynton to Reconsider His Dismissal From Church

SUIT OFF TRIAL LIST

The standing committee of the Park and Downs Congregational Church of Wollaston, after due deliberation, Sunday voted unanimously to refuse further consideration of the appeal entered with them by Chester A. Boynton, who a week ago was dismissed from the membership list of the church society and refused a transfer letter to the First Congregational Church of Revere.

Boynton's suit for $25,000 for alienation of his wife's affections against the Rev. William B. Ayer, pastor of the Wolalston church, was taken off the trial list of the Suffolk superior court last week.

"Many people are under the impression," said a committeeman, who desires his name withheld, "that Boynton's dismissal from the church society is the result of his bringing suit against our pastor. This is not a fact. About a week before the suit was begun the standing committee had Boynton before them. He was given to understand that if he persisted in his efforts to bring trouble upon the church and its pastor that his withdrawal from the church would be welcomed. He agreed not to bring any action, and work with the church instead of against it. When he broke his word with us we immediately took action."

In Tenement Over Quincy Adams Railroad Station

EMPTIES ON CANAL STREET

Inspector Goodhue and a squad of police raided the tenement over the Quincy Adams railroad station Sunday afternoon and seized twelve bottles of beer and an empty beer keg and 100 empty bottles. The tenement is occupied by John Carini and Tony Leon ,two section hands employed on the railroad. Later in the day the same officers raided the premises of Carmine Dimondi at 81 Canal street and seized two cases of empty beer bottles and an empty jug.

PARCEL POST SYSTEM WORKING NICELY IN LOCAL POST OFFICE

Over 5,000 Packages Handled Here During the First Month's Operation

Expect That Christmas Will Witness a Big Change

Dispatched—1523 packages.

Received and delivered—4038 packages.

The above figures represent the number of packages handled in the Quincy Post office since the installation of the parcel post system. In the first month Quincy readily took hold of the latest innovation in up-to-date postal service and 104 parcels were delivered here that were under four ounces in weight. To other points the lighter packages numbered 247.

Jan. 24, the record for the month was reached when 33 parcels were dispatched from the office. These were addressed to six of the eight zones.

The largest number of out of town deliveries are to and from New York state. Boston proper does not do as much through this office as New York.

At the present time Arthur Dunham is the parcel post man. Making one delivery daily he covers a large section of the city. If a light package that a carrier can conveniently handle comes through the office after he has started his rounds it is turned over to the carrier. Promptness is the by word of the office on all such delivery.

Superintendent Charles L. Hammond is pleased with the results of the first months experience. He says that little trouble or delay was experienced and that it is now on a practical working basis. When asked about what arrangements would be made to handle the Christmas rush he said that it was rather early to consider it but in view of the fact that the window was over rushed last Christmas they would naturally be a large increase in the parcel post business.

Some employees at the office say that if they are any judge the office next Christmas season will take on the appearance of a parcel delivery room because patrons are quickly becoming acquainted with the working of the parcel post.

MIDNIGHT TRAIN AT ATLANTIC

Improvement Association Believes It Should Stop There

MORE ON SCHOOL BUILDINGS

The Atlantic Improvement Association met Friday evening at Mrs. Harrington's store, East Squantum street. Several matters of importance were taken up, one being relative to the new midnight train from Boston stopping at Atlantic. A petition signed by many residents was reported having been presented by the Committee to the Railroad Commissioners but was unsuccessful in its results for the present.

In a general discussion much fault was found because the snow was not doing the efficient service it ought to.

The matter of school halls was also taken up. It was the general opinion that they should be used if they are to render the best service to the community.

☞Whose who isn't half as interesting to Quincy people just now as whose going to Washington at the Ledger's expense? That $150 trip to the inauguration is going to be enjoyable to the biggest vote getter and the companion selected to go along. Subscribe to the Ledger and secure 1000 votes for your favorite candidate.

The case for drunkenness was placed on file and on the complaint for carrying a dangerous weapon he was sentenced to three months in the house of correction.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

While Diaz may have been a dictator he knew the secret of keeping peace in Mexico.

February is establishing the fact that she must be reckoned with before the winter period is fully measured.

The Chinese will celebrate their ancient New Year for the last time and then change to the Christian New Year.

The New York suffragettes want $250,000 for a campaign fund. They are learning the ways of politics rapidly.

The young women who report being chased by a pair of walruses should swear off.

A Montclair, N. J. dentist has been ordered to dig up $384 to a patient for digging out the wrong tooth.

Bar Harbor is to no longer bar the automobile as an appeal has been made to the legislature to repeal the law forbidding machines upon the highways of the town.

The German Emporer in an attack on atheism says God has guided his nation and warns his people against straying from the faith of their fathers.

It looks very much as though the United States might be forced to take a hand in settling up the affairs of our neighbors down by the Rio Grande.

FREAK LEGISLATION.

Missouri's reputation for freak legislation is not permitted to grow dim. It has blossomed forth with greater lustre the past few days. One member of the legislature has introduced a bill providing that women button their dress in the back and that the buttons should be the size of one dollar. If Missouri is a suffrage state, the ladies should retaliate by advocating a law which should provide that the framer of the button bill be compelled to wear a hat compatable with the size of his head, or at least the quality of the matter beneath the pan. The amount of cloth needed for such service would be by no means excessive. Another measure which would be probably useful for the button legislature might suggest if he intended all the buttons to be of bone and if the supply was to be furnished by himself. Grafting of shin bones to spinal columns has been accomplished with remarkable success. There may be a means of grafting some of the material conveyed by this reference to buttons.

A STATE NEWSPAPER.

The establishment of a state newspaper is agitated at the present time. This is a movement which on the face of it presents a most intricate problem to deal with. Undoubtedly the idea of the advocates is to have a paper which would give news as plain every day news, without any embellishment, comment, or interporlation of conclusions of the writer, bearing upon situations and conditions prevailing. Such a paper would be rather a dry proposition. It could not afford to present an editorial column, because as a state organ open to the citizens of the state, it could not advocate or condemn any measure, no matter how strongly the editor might feel on the subject.

The very start of such a publication would be a most serious undertaking to say nothing of the difficulties which would later appear on every hand. The handling of the news would mean no small task. As a state institution the people would demand all the news and as much space as possible.

Whenever such a paper was started undoubtedly the political complexion of the party in power at the time would cut some figure. The managing editor, news editor, city editor, heads of all the departments would naturally be appointed. Would they come under the civil service rules would enter into the subject. To handle all the news of the state, such as contemplated would mean a task far beyond the conception of the men who are at present behind the movement. Every organization in the state, social or otherwise would be looking for publicity. The session of one gathering might not be given as much space or even as good a write up as another. What would be the result? Every newspaper man does not gauge things alike. Some might see a good story in one thing. Others might pass it by as of little consequence. It would be a mere matter of judgment.

But the organization which had been slighted would be heard from. The volume of "kicks" and complaints which find their way into a newspaper office at present on just such things as above mentioned, are enormous and take up considerable time in passing upon. In a state paper every one would feel that they were entitled to equal consideration, equal space, the same fine story and there you are, there would be interminable trouble.

There is also the danger of the publication getting into the hands of unscrupulous politicians who would use it for their own ends. There is the possibility of such a thing. Then there is the possibility of libel suits, which come to even the best regulated, most carefully censored and finest edited papers in the world.

All those things offer strong obstacles to the successful and satisfactory publication of a newspaper. The advocates do not assert, but probably they mean that the paper should be issued free. In that case, every citizen of the Commonwealth could demand a copy mailed to his or her residence. The expense would be enormous, the results problematical, the wisdom of such an enterprise doubtful. On the whole it seems a most undesirable thing to undertake and not by any means feasible.

EUROPEAN WAR.

The gravity of the European situation is not overshadowed by the optimistic views which are sent broadcast from one country to the other. The dipolmats and statesmen of every European country realize that they are treading gingerly upon the brink of a volcano which may any moment expolde beneath their feet. The slightest false move, a slip, may precipitate the entire continent into a long and bloody war. The peace negotiations ended in nothing tangible. The Turks and the allies have resumed hostilities. Will one or the other be forced to stop because of lack of munitions of war. It is claimed that the money markets of the world, will decline to advance funds, and in time both sides will have to stop owing to the lack of the sinews of war. If that were true the financiers could have ended the war at the drop of the hat and avoided all this cruelty, ravage, suffering, fgamine and plague which has existed for three months. As long as either side can show assets which insure principle and interest they will get money. This is unfortunate but true. The financiers could have stopped the war long ago if they wanted to.

They could act in this matter with greater boldness and more address than any of the powers. Their measures would be effective. They would be obeyed and there would be no danger of any of the powers becoming involved because of their partisanship or friendly relations or ambitious desires to obtain power or territory.

The men who rule the money market have a great responsibility at this time resting upon them. Will they exercise their powers in the cause of humanity or continue them in the pursuit of the almighty dollar? Which is the stronger, their Christian humanity or their cupidity? The answer has got to develope within a few weeks.

YOUNG HEBREWS ACTIVE.

A meeting of the Young Men's Hebrew Association was held at their rooms on Water street, Sunday afternoon. It was voted to hold exercises in honor of Washington, Feb. 22, also another lecture, March 2.

It was decided to start a Sunday school for Jewish history for the benefit of Quincy Jewish children, the school to be under the supervision of the Y. M. H. A.

Whist parties are to be held every other Wednesday, beginning Feb. 19.

The following were appointed on the entertainment committee; William Wolf and Edward Berman. Arrangements are going forward for the ball on April 1st.

MERRY SKATERS CROWDED PONDS

Young People Out in Force at Butler's and Reservoir

BOTH SURFACES GOOD

Crowds of young people enjoyed skating on the two ponds in the city Sunday. At Butler's pond on Merrymount road the ice was a little rough in the morning but the many skaters soon wore down the rough places so that by afternoon the going was very good. There was a crowd of young people on the pond all day until dark.

At the reservoir of the Fore River Co., on DesMoines road, which the Fore River Co. have kindly allowed the citizens to use as a skating pond, there was a crowd all day. The ice was in excellent condition and the men, boys and girls had a fine time. Under the agreement of the Fore River Co., Mayor Stone had a uniformed officer on duty to see that no damage was done to the company's property.

The young people of the Point district have never had a skating pond until this year. Efforts have been made several years to overflow the brook that runs across Cleverly court that the meadows might form a skating pond but occupants of houses in this vicinity objected as their cellars were flooded. Councilmen Griffin and Duffy than took up the matter and succeeded in having the Fore River Co., grant the use of its reservoir. President Bowles made a formal tender of the use of the pond to Mayor Stone which was gladly accepted, the conditions being that an officer should be placed on duty to protect the company's property.

PRISONER MAKES CLEAN GETAWAY

Locks Officers and Clerks In His Private Office and Flees

Pittsburg, Feb. 10.—While two United States government officers and seven clerks shouted and kicked on the floor of the custom house office in the federal building, George W. Hall, former deputy collector of the port here, walked out and is now a fugitive from justice.

Hall got all the federal employes into the private office, through which the only way to the hall is through the front office. He then stepped into the front office and locked the others in the private office.

On charges of making false entries, embezzlement and conspiracy, Hall had been in jail since Jan. 18. Special Agent Chance of the customs service arrived from Washington and Hall was brought from jail by Deputy United States Marshal Owens. The three went to the federal building. Hall promised to go through the books and explain the entries.

Then he worked his trick and it was nearly a half hour later that the imprisoned ones were discovered and released.

LOCOMOTIVE PICKED UP WIRE

About a Mile Wound Up Around Engine Wheel Axle

TENDER KNOCKED DOWN

There was a peculiar accident at South Braintree Saturday night, as a result of an attempt to rob one of the freight cars at the point. As the locomotive of a Whitman train had reached a point near Union street the wheels passed over the edge of a reel of wire, which had dropped from a freight car. The engineer of the locomotive did not know the wire had become tangled in the wheels and began to unwind from the reel and onto the axle of the engine wheels.

By the time the engine had reached South Braintree nearly a mile of wire must have been tangled about the wheels. Railroad men cut off the wire with some difficulty. A stray piece clung to the rear axle and as the train moved on this piece caught about the legs of Horace Q. Bradley the Pearl street crossing tender. Mr. Bradley was dragged for a few feet and then the wire broke. Pieces of wire were found lodged in switches of the interlocking system causing the employees some trouble to remove it.

Later it was discovered that the reel had fallen from a freight car that stood on a siding next to the passenger tracks. It is thought that thieves had entered the car and had accidentally knocked the real onto the ground.

DENY TAKING GRAFT MONEY

Police Captains Are Questioned by Commissioner Waldo

CHARGES OF GAMBLER PURCELL

District Attorney Claims to Have Witnesses to Back Them—Cases of Walsh, a Headquarters Official and Sweeney to Be Disposed of First—Tammany Head's Brother-In-Law Among the Accused

New York, Feb. 10.—The most drastic investigation of police graft that has been attempted since Police Lieutenant Becker's hired gunmen shot Herman Rosenthal to death last July is declared to be under way as a result of the story told to the aldermanic committee by James Purcell, who played games of stake in many houses under police protection for nearly seventeen years, according to his testimony.

"Purcell's story will be investigated in all its ramifications," it was stated at police headquarters on behalf of Commissioner Waldo, who had before him the four precinct captains still members of the force who were accused by Purcell.

They were questioned regarding the gambler's allegations that they took money in return for protection to Purcell. Each denied in sworn statements the truth of Purcell's charges.

One of the quartet is Patrick J. Cray, brother-in-law of Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany hall. The others are Thomas F. Maude, Patrick Corcoran and Fred W. Martens.

District Attorney Whitman plans to seek, first, the indictment of Police Captain Thomas Walsh, under suspension since confessing he shared in graft collected by Patrolman Eugene Fox, and, second, the indictment of an official at headquarters, a man suspected as the source of a fund raised to keep George A. Sipp, a disorderly hotel keeper, from testifying before the grand jury against Walsh prior to the latter's confession.

Whitman has deferred for the time being his purpose to seek the indictment of Inspector Dennis Sweeney, under suspension since Walsh accused him of having split graft money with him.

After Walsh and the headquarters official have been indicted, if that takes place, testimony of state's witnesses against Sweeney will be heard by the grand jury, which will then take up the allegations of Purcell, who will be corroborated, according to the district attorney, by witnesses whose names have not been disclosed.

This is expected to lead to many more indictments.

The first to go to headquarters was Captain Martens. Then followed Captain Corcoran, Captain Maude and Captain Cray.

Each was subjected to a long and secret examination on the part of the police commissioner with the idea of discovering, if possible, what basis there was for the "graft" charges of Purcell.

Martens denied positively that he had ever had any dealings with Purcell, indirectly or directly, and he was willing to undergo any kind of an inquiry in court or out.

The other captains likewise entered emphatic denials that they had taken money from Purcell for protection for gambling houses or had authorized any one to do so.

Waldo made no statement for publication. It was said at headquarters it was not probable he would make removals at once without some corroboration of Purcell's testimony.

THREE LENGTHS OF TROLLEY FELL

Fore River Workmen Had to Walk From Chubbuck Street

NO ONE WAS INJURED

Three lengths of trolley wire on the Quincy avenue line came down near Newcomb Square early this morning tieing up this line for a time. The break came at the time the special cars carrying workmen to the Fore River yards were due, making it necessary to send the special cars over the Quincy Point line, so that the workmen had to walk from Chubbuck street to the plant instead of riding to the yard as usual. No one was injured by the falling trolley wire and it was shortly repaired by the emergency car crew.

HOUSE PASSES WEBB BILL

Prohibits Importation of Liquor Into "Dry" Territory

Washington, Feb. 10.—The Webb interstate liquor bill, prohibiting the transportation of liquor into "dry" territory, was passed by the house by a vote of 249 to 65 in the same form in which it was reported by the judiciary committee. Eight amendments to the bill, each one providing some new features in the control of interstate shipment of liquor, were voted down.

Representative Dalzell challenged the Democratic side of the house to show cause why it did not attend to the public business instead of forcing consideration of "minor matters," as he termed the bill.

Representative Fitzgerald of New York charged that the authors of the bill were trying to "hornswoggle" the public.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

HALL PLACE M. E.

Rev. I. Messler of Rockland, at the morning service of the Hall Place M. E. church preached a stirring sermon from the text "And to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge" Eph. 3-19. He spoke first of the boundless love of God through Christ and what it means to us. He drew special attention to two things: "knowable things" and "unknowable things"; "the love of God, which passeth all understanding." We can comprehend the love of God, we can know what it means to us and what it has done for us and yet it is so great that we cannot know it all; we can understand it in part but not wholly, its breadth and length and depth and height are boundless and so boundless that while we can realize it we cannot see its extent. The thought throughout the whole sermon was the great preparations which God through Christ had made for the whole human race, the lowly birth of the Christ yet filled with the Divine, the boy like unto other boys yet still the Divine one, the young man with the temptations and trials of life of His day upon Him, yet He is still Divine, the pain and suffering, the cruel death on the Cross and yet the Divine is evident. And God made these great preparations not alone for us, although we are included, but for the whole human race, all people of the earth and our duty is to "go into all the world and preach the Gospel."

The session of the Sunday School was held in the Auditorium as the repairs on the vestry were unfinished. In the absence of Alexander Stewart who was called away by the illness of his mother, the Asst. Supt. Julius Fuller had charge of the school.

The Junior League met at 3 P. M.

J. Lawrence Martin led the Epworth League at 6.15 on the subject of Mormonism.

At the evening service the pastor preached from the text "And the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh." Gen. 9-15.

This week the prayer meeting will be held on Thursday evening.

The work of repainting and frescoing the vestries and the vestibule is progressing rapidly. Mr. Samuel Richards is in charge of the work which is being done largely by volunteers from the men of the community. It is hoped that the work will be finished before Friday, the night on which the young men hold their social and reception.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

At the morning service Rev. Carl G. Horst preached from the text "Speak unto this people that they go forward." He said: "After our most successful celebration of the 25th anniversary of the founding of this church it seems to me most appropriate that I should preach to you upon going forward. Surely we have a good start, we have a goodly heritage, our lines are fallen in pleasant places. The 25th anniversary however, is not an end. It is only a milestone along the way, showing how far toward the goal we have travelled. We stop long enough to recall the days that are passed, to take account of stock, to see what we have gained and then press onward. Just as God spoke to the children of Israel centuries ago to go forward, so God speaks to this Church this day to arise, to gird itself with truth, to put on the breastplate of righteousness, to take up the shield of faith, the helmet of salvation, the sword of the spirit and go foward.

"Our church has a mission of large usefulness in this community. Good work has been done in the past, more and better work can be done in the future. To accomplish this the hearty co-operation of every one in the parish is needed. The financial burden should be shared by all, who avail themselves of the benefits of this church both for themselves and their children. To support a church means not simply the contribution of money, but of one's self, his interest, his sympathy. People who do not attend divine service to that extent use their influence against the Church. They are putting themselves on the side with those who by their acts and words are doing what they can to break down religious institutions. They are doing what they can to nullify the great truths for which the Church stands, they set at nought the influence of Isaiah and Paul and Luther and Channing.

"Again each one in the parish caring for the welfare of the church should join it. Some say they are not good enough to join. But the church is not for saints, but for all sorts and conditions of men, church membership does not signify the attainment of perfect character, but is an expression of purpose and pledge of loyalty to the things for which the church stands. The church is engaged in an everyday battle for righteousness. Where will you place yourself in reference to it? What do you think of a citizen who does not get registered as a voter? What do you think of a Republican who never stands up to be counted? What do you think of a Democrat who never goes to the polls to vote? The influence of such is negative and therefore strengthens the forces of evil.

"To go forward one thing is most essential, namely a deeply religious spirit at the very heart of the church. The church stands first and last and always for religion. That is its business. Social service, discussions of social, industrial, political questions, socials, luncheons etc. are always secondary, and alas for the church when they usurp the place that should be accorded to things of primary importance. Do not come here Sunday mornings to be entertained or amused or even to be instructed, but come for the purpose of worship, of adoration, of spiritual fellowship. The real success of any church must always be measured by its contribution to the religious life of the community and that contribution depends on the spiritual earnestness and religious zeal of its members.

POINT CHURCH.

The Men's class of the Point church following up its study of topics relative to the study of Social Christianity held a very interesting meeting Sunday evening from 5.45 to 7.15 o'clock. A light lunch was served to about 65 men and the meeting was then addressed by a speaker from Boston on the topic of "Wage slavery and the way out" in which the speaker tried to show the necessity of the co-operative commonwealth, as a solution of the problem. Following the custom of the class in discussing freely all topics participated in, the address was followed by a very animated and interesting debate which proved to be very lively and designed to bring out the truth. The meeting was brought to a close with a prayer by Rev. Sherwin Goodwin in which he pointed out the necessity of frankly taking the problems outlined by the speaker of the evening.

Rev. Sherwin Goodwin who offered the prayer is from Brookfield and is one of the candidates for pastor of the church.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

At the Wollaston Congregational church yesterday morning the pastor, Rev. Dr. Sneath presented a Lenten discourse upon the subject of a true distinction between the Christian and the non-Christian. He said that notwithstanding the spirituality of our age is not as profound as it ought to be, yet men are ever seeking distinctions between those who are avowed and those who are not avowed Christians. He believed that all distinctions which are grounded upon casuistic questions were likely to give a perverted view of a true Christian. He emphasized the need of seeking the highest ideals of character, the spirit of self-sacrifice and the desire for the greater glory of God as grounds of a true distinction between the life that follows Christ and the selfish life.

In the evening Miss Cora Stoddard, secretary of the Scientific Temperance Federation gave an illustrated lecture on "Alcohol in Every-day Work and Play," under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the church.

This evening the bi-monthly rally of the Norfolk C. E. Union will be held in the Church, Rev. J. S. Durkee of Campello speaker.

NOT OPPOSED TO PUBLIC DOCK

Rep. Sullivan Thinks There is Too Much Haste

ABOUT THE COMMISSION

The following communication is self-explanatory:

Quincy, Mass., Feb. 10, 1913.

Editor Daily Ledger:

Dear Sir:—Please allow me space to correct a false impression which may be formed by persons reading the account in your issue of Saturday last of the hearing held at the State House in connection with establishing a Dock Commission in Quincy.

One would be justified after reading the article, in believing that I opposed the establishment of a public dock in this city. I did not express an opinion on that subject and I would not be allowed to at the hearing as that was not the subject under discussion. The hearing was on the petition of the present Dock Commissioner, Mr. Frank F. Crane, that the Mayor of Quincy shall appoint a Dock Commission this year.

I opposed the petition because I believe that it is not for the Legislature to say when the City of Quincy shall appoint the Commission. I believe that when Quincy decides to establish a public dock it is then time to appoint the commission.

The present Dock Commissioner was appointed by the Mayor of Quincy and he should realize that as his appointment is legal, the Mayor has the right to enlarge the commission at will. It appears to me a delicate matter that the present Commissioner should go over the heads of the Mayor and City Council, who have the right to say when and under what regulations the Dock Commission should be appointed and apply to the Legislature insisting that the Commission shall be appointed this year.

Such acts as this will do much to retard the establishing of a public dock by the city.

Why this haste?

Respectfully yours,

M. T. Sullivan.

GRABBED BAG AND SKIPPED

Barry Not Fleet Enough to Escape Williams

HELD FOR LARCENY

Daniel J. Barry of 2 Hill street was arrested near the Quincy Adams station Saturday night by Officer Dhooge on a complaint for drunkenness. According to the story told by Clarence L. Williams he and Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Lillian Muirhead came from Boston on one of the evening trains and instead of getting off at Quincy were carried by their station to Quincy Adams. Mr. Williams carried Mrs. Muirhead's hand bag containing $30 in money and other valuables. It is alleged that as he stepped on the platform he felt a pull at the hand bag and looking up saw a young man running down the street with the bag. He gave chase and coming up with the fellow got the bag back. A little later Officer Dhooge placed the fellow under arrest.

In court this morning Barry was arraigned for drunkenness and fined $10. Williams refused to swear out a warrant against him for the larceny of the bag however. Officer Dhooge then swore out the warrant and Barry was arraigned for larceny and his case continued until Tuesday. At that time Mr. and Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Muirhead will be summoned into court as witnesses.

Officer Qualey of Braintree who was in court this morning thinks that Barry may be the man who relieved his daughter Helen Qualey of $27 a week ago. According to Officer Qualey his daughter who is an orchestra leader in a local theatre came to Quincy Square a week ago Saturday to take a train for Braintree. She had her money in a hand bag over her her arm. As she started across the street from City Hall the bag was closed. As she reached a point opposite the Hancock block she met three young men. One of these stepped one side so that she was obliged to pass between them. When she arrived at the depot she was surprised to find her bag open and the money gone. Miss Qualey will come to court Tuesday to see if she can identify the fellow as the man who crowded her and whom she believes took her money.

This dance was the first of a series of three, the dates of the future being March 14, and April 18. It is hoped that these dances, which are so popular, will be given annually.

It is said that they now realize how much more the match means to fans because the delay has stimulated enthusiasm, and that Boston managers really want the match. The challenge originated here and manager Forbes of the Coliseum has been a consistent developer of bowling events It is hardly probable therefore that Quincy gets left out in the cold in the big match.

THE BALKAN CAMPAIGN

Reports of Turks' Failure to Land Troops Are Confirmed

London, Feb. 10.—Some light is beginning to be shed by the brief official dispatches, which contain almost all the available news, upon the military tactics in the Balkan campaign.

The reports of unsuccessful attempts on the part of the Turks to land troops along the coast of the Black sea and the Sea of Marmora are now officially admitted.

It is now known that the allies are advancing in strength against Bulair, and that the Greek fleet has appeared in the Gulf of Saros, where Servian troops are also reported to have been landed to lend assistance to the Bulgarians.

It now seems clear that the allies have abandoned the attempt to force the Tchatalja lines in favor of an attempt to capture the Gallipoli peninsula, so as to open the way by sea to Constantinople.

Apparently heavy fighting is occurring near Scutari, and the bombardment of Adrianople is still in progress.

COMMITTEEMAN MACKAY REPLIES

Must Endure Flaying as Long as Present Conditions Exist

Editor Daily Ledger:

Under the heading "School Board under Lash" you report that at a public meeting Thursday night, Councilman Beeman ""severely flayed" the school committee for what he termed its arbitrary rulings regarding the use of school halls and that he declared a $15 rental "about prohibitive." Flaying the school committee is innocent and harmless sport and becoming popular hereabouts, but in this case it was indulged in needlessly and unwisely.

In the opinion of the school committee, after investigation, a charge of $15 would be necessary in most cases to reimburse the City for the expense of fuel, light and janitor services; and justice to the people of Quincy required that such a charge be made. If Mr. Beeman or any one else can show the Board that the charge is needlessly high, I have no doubt the charge will be reduced. Until then, I suppose we must endure the flaying and continue to be guided by our own judgment.

John D. Mackay.

RED CROSS OF THE SEA

Saved Thousands of Lives and Millions In Property During 1912

Washington, Feb. 10.—The United States revenue cutter service—the Red Cross of the sea—broke all its previous heroic and humanitarian records during the fiscal year 1912. Thousands of human lives and hundreds of tempest-tossed vessels, valued with their cargoes at nearly $11,000,000, were saved from the perils of storm-swept seas by the little cutters which guard the coast line of the United States.

The annual report of Captain Berthoff, commandant of the service, is a recitation of thrilling adventure of this arm of the federal government. A total of 260 distressed vessels were assisted during the year, and 2212 souls rescued from danger which in many cases seemed impending death. One hundred and six persons were actually saved from drowning.

TWELVE THOUSAND EXPECTED TO QUIT

Boston's Big Garment Strike Scheduled For This Week

Boston, Feb. 10.—The beginning of the second week in the garment industry strike of Boston finds about 3800 workers on men's clothes still out, as well as 1000 raincoat makers, and a walkout of 12,000 men, women and children employed in the making of cloaks, skirts and shirt waists imminent within the next three days.

The United Garment Workers' unions of Boston have sent over 1200 of its members back to work in twenty-six out of 180 shops manufacturing men's clothing. Negotiations started with eight manufacturers controlling twenty-four shops promise to send back an additional 800 men and women by this noon.

The I. W. W. Raincoat Makers' union reports that nine shops have applied to settle in its strike of 1000 members. This would send one-half of the strikers back to work.

MANY ARE SHOT IN ARMY REVOLT

Two Hundred Killed In Street Fighting In Mexico

FIVE HUNDRED ARE WOUNDED

Diaz and His Followers Take Possession of National Palace, Which Is Later Recaptured by Madero Forces—President and Cabinet Besieged and Making Desperate Fight Against Enormous Odds—General Reyes Among the Killed—Area of Few City Blocks Strewn With Bodies of Men and Horses—Many Non-Combatants Among the Victims

Mexico City, Feb. 10.—The army revolted Sunday. The troops took possession of the national palace and nearly all the principal public buildings. Gustave Madero was made prisoner.

After some street fighting, in which about 200 persons were killed and some 500 wounded, the government succeeded in regaining partial control.

Felix Diaz and his followers gained possession of the city early in the afternoon. He took possession of the palace and captured the arsenal by assault. Later the palace was recaptured. Only a few scattered companies of the city garison maintained an appearance of loyalty to the administration.

Reyes Is Killed

General Bernardo Reyes was shot through the head and killed in front of the national palace. Reyes was a strong adherents of Porfirio Diaz and an ex-secretary of war.

President Madera and the members of his cabinet took refuge in the national palace, where they were besieged, but, with some loyal troops at their back, succeeded in defending the palace from the assaults of the revolutionists.

Madero's family has taken refuge in the Japanese legation, and the president is making a fight, desperate in its effort, against what appears to be enormous odds, for retention of his power.

General Diaz, who is the nephew of the deposed President Porfirio Diaz, is now at the head of a majority of the capital troops, including most of the artillery, and is in possession of the arsenal and the powder works nearby.

Madero is relying on the loyalty of General Blanquet, who has been summoned from Toluca, forty miles distant, but Blanquet has only 1000 men under his command, and the rebels are confident of defeating him, should he refuse to join in the movement of revolt.

Four Separate Battles

The day was marked by four separate engagements, the most sanguinary of which took place in front of the national palace; but most important was that which terminated in the formal surrender of the troops in the artillery barracks.

The mutinous troops were led by the students of the military school at Tlalpan, a suburb. They marched to the prison to which Felix Diaz had been transferred for safekeeping and released him. Reyes was also freed from Santiago military prison, there being no resistance in either quarter.

To the army of the mutineers quickly came portions of the First cavalry, Twenty-Fourth cavalry and Twentieth infantry. General Mondragon, retired, was in command, but gave way to Diaz and Reyes.

At 8:30 o'clock the first encounter with the loyal troops occurred in front of the national palace, and Reyes, whose long record as an army officer was broken little more than a year ago, by a farcical revolt, was dead. He was killed instantly by a bullet through the head.

Women and Children Fall

Many fell in this engagement and among the scores of bodies which strewed the streets were those of minor officers, women and boys of the lower classes and members of the great crowd of spectators which had gathered at the firing of the first shot.

General Villar, post commander of the capital, who remained loyal, was among those slightly wounded. The minister of war, General Pena, received a minor injury of the head.

At the first call to arms President Madero took command of a force of approximately 1000, consisting of mounted police, Chapultepec cadets and a small detachment of volunteers. He appeared at the head of this force a mile from the national palace, riding a big gray horse. By his side rode General Huerta.

Several blocks from the palace one of Madero's aides attempted to dissuade the president, and, placing his hand on the horse's bridle, half turned the animal from the line. Madero protested vigorously and continued to lead the advance until the shooting began, when Huerta succeeded in persuading him to enter a building in a side street. This building, by a coincidence, was the same in which Reyes took refuge during his campaign for the presidency eighteen months ago, against a mob of Madero supporters who attempted to stone him.

Revolt Was Unexpected

The revolt, in its unexpectedness, was such as to stupefy the populace, the lower elements apparently not knowing for whom to cheer. This is popularly given as the reason for the lack of pillaging and looting.

The attack on the national palace found the government not altogether unprepared. In the interim between the release of Diaz and Reyes from prison, Gustavo Madero, brother of the president, and Governor Garza of the federal district learned of the plans of the rebels. The minister of war and General Villar made hasty preparations to guard the palace aganst attack.

Riding at the head of their troops, Diaz and Reyes approached from the east into the Zocalo, the big square in front of the palace. Reyes appeared for the first time in many months in the uniform of a general, but Diaz was clothed as a citizen.

A halt of the mutinous forces was was made when Villar, appearing at the door of the palace, raised his hand and challenged them. His answer was an order on the part of the rebels to begin firing.

Palace Replies to Shooting

Quickly the invading forces assumed positions around the square, which soon was clouded with the smoke from their rifles. Immediately from the palace came an answering fire. The defenders of the palace were using rifles and machine guns. From the west could be seen advancing the force headed by President Madero. As it approached the rebels retired into a side street.

Thirty minutes later street fighting began in the neighborhood, but lasted only a short time. Neither side appeared ready to press its advantage, but just before noon Diaz led his command, numbering 1000, on a wide detour in an effort to reach the arsenal.

When the fighting in the Zocale ceased, ambulances of the Red and White Cross engaged in the work of picking up the dead and succoring the wounded. The Plaza, an area of four city blocks, was strewn with the bodies of men and horses. Within the palace there were few victims, but Colonel Morelos, one of the most loyal of Madero's adherents, was killed.

Army Officers Executed

General Ruiz, a retired officer, two captains and three lieutenants were executed in the patio of the nationaf palace. It is officially reported that this was by order of the government, but another story is that they were killed by a detachment of their own men because they opposed their joining in the revolt. Added to this is the report that these mutinous troops were overpowered and disarmed.

The Red and White Cross ambulances carried the wounded to provisional hospitals, where investigation showed there were almost as many victims among civilians as among the soldiers. Outside of the fighting between the two opposing sides these was little disorder, and the streets are patrolled by the rebel troops. During the day only one mob assembled. It attacked the building of El Pais, the only independent morning newspaper printed in Spanish. The building was partly bured.

WILL NOT INTERFERE

But Uncle Sam Will See That Americans Are Amply Protected

Washington, Feb. 10.—First news of the revolt of the federal army at Mexico City to reach Washington came last night in a state department dispatch from Nuevo Laredo.

Inquiry into the situation, based upon the dispatches thus far received, brought forth the assurance that it would not influence the present administration to change the policy that it has pursued for the last two years and that there would be no interference with political affairs of Mexico by this government.

Every precaution will be taken to protect lives and property of Americans in Mexico, which may involve the dispatch of warships to the coast towns of that country and, perhaps, the strengthening of the military force now on the border.

New York, Feb. 10.—Four men drove up in a taxicab to the store of the W. L. Douglas Shoe company at Broadway and Fourteenth street, a busy and brightly lighted corner, and entered the store just as the four clerks were preparing to leave.

With drawn revolvers the bandits ordered the employes to throw up their hands. While three of the four kept the clerks "covered," the other man emptied the cash register of its contents, between $400 and $500. The quartet then ran to the street, jumped into the taxicab and drove south on Broadway.

Hundreds of persons were passing the corner at the time.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

COMMITTEEMAN MACKAY REPLIES

Must Endure Flaying as Long as Present Conditions Exist

Editor Daily Ledger:

Under the heading "School Board under Lash" you report that at a public meeting Thursday night, Councilman Beeman ""severely flayed" the school committee for what he termed its arbitrary rulings regarding the use of school halls and that he declared a $15 rental "about prohibitive." Flaying the school committee is innocent and harmless sport and becoming popular hereabouts, but in this case it was indulged in needlessly and unwisely.

In the opinion of the school committee, after investigation, a charge of $15 would be neeessary in most cases to reimburse the City for the expense of fuel, light and janitor services; and justice to the people of Quincy required that such a charge be made. If Mr. Beeman or any one else can show the Board that the charge is needlessly high, I have no doubt the charge will be reduced. Until then, I suppose we must endure the flaying and continue to be guided by our own judgment.

RED CROSS OF THE SEA

Washington, Feb. 10.—The United States revenue cutter service—the Red Cross of the sea—broke all its previous heroic and humanitarian records during the fiscal year 1912. Thousands of human lives and hundreds of tempest-tossed vessels, valued with their cargoes at nearly $11,000,000, were saved from the perils of storm-swept seas by the little cutters which guard the coast line of the United States.

The annual report of Captain Bertholf, commandant of the service, is a recitation of thrilling adventure of this arm of the federal government. A total of 260 distressed vessels were assisted during the year, and 2212 souls rescued from danger which in many cases seemed impending death. One hundred and six persons were actually saved from drowning.

Boston's Big Garment Strike Scheduled For This Week

Boston, Feb. 10.—The beginning of the second week in the garment industry strike of Boston finds about 3800 workers on men's clothes still out, as well as 1000 raincoat makers, and a walkout of 12,000 men, women and children employed in the making of cloaks, skirts and shirt waists imminent within the next three days.

The United Garment Workers' unions of Boston have sent over 1200 of its members back to work in twenty-six out of 180 shops manufacturing men's clothing. Negotiations started with eight manufacturers controlling twenty-four shops promise to send back an additional 800 men and women by this noon.

The I. W. W. Raincoat Makers' union reports that nine shops have applied to settle in its strike of 1000 members. This would send one-half of the strikers back to work.

MANY ARE SHOT IN ARMY REVOLT

Two Hundred Killed In Street Fighting In Mexico

FIVE HUNDRED ARE WOUNDED

Diaz and His Followers Take Possession of National Palace, Which Is Later Recaptured by Madero Forces—President and Cabinet Besieged and Making Desperate Fight Against Enormous Odds—General Reyes Among the Killed—Area of Few City Blocks Strewn With Bodies of Men and Horses—Many Non-Combatants Among the Victims

Mexico City, Feb. 10.—The army revolted Sunday. The troops took possession of the national palace and nearly all the principal public buildings. Gustave Madero was made prisoner.

After some street fighting, in which about 200 persons were killed and some 500 wounded, the government succeeded in regaining partial control.

President Madero personally led time.

Felix Diaz and his followers gained possession of the city early in the afternoon. He took possession of the palace and captured the arsenal by assault. Later the palace was recaptured. Only a few scattered companies of the city garison maintained an appearance of loyalty to the administration.

Reyes Is Killed

General Bernardo Reyes was shot through the head and killed in front of the national palace. Reyes was a strong adherents of Porfirio Diaz and an ex-secretary of war.

President Madera and the members of his cabinet took refuge in the national palace, where they were besieged, but, with some loyal troops at their back, succeeded in defending the palace from the assaults of the revolutionists.

Madero's family has taken refuge in the Japanese legation, and the president is making a fight, desperate in its effort, against what appears to be enormous odds, for retention of his power.

General Diaz, who is the nephew of the deposed President Porfirio Diaz, is now at the head of a majority of the capital troops, including most of the artillery, and is in possession of the arsenal and the powder works nearby.

Madero is relying on the loyalty of General Blanquet, who has been summoned from Toluca, forty miles distant, but Blanquet has only 1000 men under his command, and the rebels are confident of defeating him, should he refuse to join in the movement of revolt.

Four Separate Battles

The day was marked by four separate engagements, the most sanguinary of which took place in front of the national palace; but most important was that which terminated in the formal surrender of the troops in the artillery barracks.

The mutinous troops were led by the students of the military school at Tlalpan, a suburb. They marched to the prison to which Felix Diaz had been transferred for safekeeping and released him. Reyes was also freed from Santiago military prison, there being no resistance in either quarter.

To the army of the mutineers quickly came portions of the First cavalry, Twenty-Fourth cavalry and Twentieth infantry. General Mondragon, retired, was in command, but gave way to Diaz and Reyes.

At 8:30 o'clock the first encounter with the loyal troops occurred in front of the national palace, and Reyes, whose long record as an army officer was broken little more than a year ago, by a farcical revolt, was dead. He was killed instantly by a bullet through the head.

Women and Children Fall

Many fell in this engagement and among the scores of bodies which strewed the streets were those of minor officers, women and boys of the lower classes and members of the great crowd of spectators which had gathered at the firing of the first shot.

General Villar, post commander of the capital, who remained loyal, was among those slightly wounded. The minister of war, General Pena, received a minor injury of the head.

At the first call to arms President Madero took command of a force of approximately 1000, consisting of mounted police, Chapultepec cadets and a small detachment of volunteers. He appeared at the head of this force a mile from the national palace, riding a big gray horse. By his side rode General Huerta.

Several blocks from the palace one of Madero's aides attempted to dissuade the president, and, placing his hand on the horse's bridle, half turned the animal from the line. Madero protested vigorously and continued to lead the advance until the shooting began, when Huerta succeeded in persuading him to enter a building in a side street. This building, by a coincidence, was the same in which Reyes took refuge during his campaign for the presidency eighteen months ago, against a mob of Madero supporters who attempted to stone him.

Revolt Was Unexpected

The revolt, in its unexpectedness, was such as to stupefy the populace, the lower elements apparently not knowing for whom to cheer. This is popularly given as the reason for the lack of pillaging and looting.

The attack on the national palace found the government not altogether unprepared. In the interim between the release of Diaz and Reyes from prison, Gustavo Madero, brother of the president, and Governor Garza of the federal district learned of the plans of the rebels. The minister of war and General Villar made hasty preparations to guard the palace aganst attack.

Riding at the head of their troops, Diaz and Reyes approached from the east into the Zocalo, the big square in front of the palace. Reyes appeared for the first time in many months in the uniform of a general, but Diaz was clothed as a citizen.

A halt of the mutinous forces was was made when Villar, appearing at the door of the palace, raised his hand and challenged them. His answer was an order on the part of the rebels to begin firing.

Palace Replies to Shooting

Quickly the invading forces assumed positions around the square, which soon was clouded with the smoke from their rifles. Immediately from the palace came an answering fire. The defenders of the palace were using rifles and machine guns. From the west could be seen advancing the force headed by President Madero. As it approached the rebels retired into a side street.

Thirty minutes later street fighting began in the neighborhood, but lasted only a short time. Neither side appeared ready to press its advantage, but just before noon Diaz led his command, numbering 1000, on a wide detour in an effort to reach the arsenal.

When the fighting in the Zocale ceased, ambulances of the Red and White Cross engaged in the work of picking up the dead and succoring the wounded. The Plaza, an area of four city blocks, was strewn with the bodies of men and horses. Within the palace there were few victims, but Colonel Morelos, one of the most loyal of Madero's adherents, was killed.

Army Officers Executed

General Ruiz, a retired officer, two captains and three lieutenants were executed in the patio of the national palace. It is officially reported that this was by order of the government, but another story is that they were killed by a detachment of their own men because they opposed their joining in the revolt. Added to this is the report that these mutinous troops were overpowered and disarmed.

The Red and White Cross ambulances carried the wounded to provisional hospitals, where investigation showed there were almost as many victims among civilians as among the soldiers. Outside of the fighting between the two opposing sides these was little disorder, and the streets are patrolled by the rebel troops. During the day only one mob assembled. It attacked the building of El Pais, the only independent morning newspaper printed in Spanish. The building was partly bured.

WILL NOT INTERFERE

But Uncle Sam Will See That Americans Are Amply Protected

Washington, Feb. 10.—First news of the revolt of the federal army at Mexico City to reach Washington came last night in a state department dispatch from Nuevo Laredo.

Inquiry into the situation, based upon the dispatches thus far received, brought forth the assurance that it would not influence the present administration to change the policy that it has pursued for the last two years and that there would be no interference with political affairs of Mexico by this government.

Every precaution will be taken to protect lives and property of Americans in Mexico, which may involve the dispatch of warships to the coast towns of that country and, perhaps, the strengthening of the military force now on the border.

New York, Feb. 10.—Four men drove up in a taxicab to the store of the W. L. Douglas Shoe company at Broadway and Fourteenth street, a busy and brightly lighted corner, and entered the store just as the four clerks were preparing to leave.

With drawn revolvers the bandits ordered the employes to throw up their hands. While three of the four kept the clerks "covered," the other man emptied the cash register of its contents, between $400 and $500. The quartet then ran to the street, jumped into the taxicab and drove south on Broadway.

Hundreds of persons were passing the corner at the time.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

SYNOPSIS

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

"Stonewall" Jackson is killed. Grant takes supreme command of the Federal armies, and Sheridan invades the valley of Virginia.

General Haverill, not knowing Bedloe is his son, sends him on a dangerous mission. Gertrude is captured by West's soldiers.

West takes Mrs. Haverill's miniature from Thornton. Bedloe is wounded and captured. Haverill plans to exchange Ellingham for Bedloe. Thornton stabs West. Haverill finds the miniature on West's person.

Gertrude tells West she loves him. The Union army at Winchester is surprised and driven back. Bedloe returns, dying. Haverill places West under arrest.

Colonel Robert Ellingham, in the southern ranks, wondered what was happening at Belle Bosquet. In the forenoon he had swept with his men past the old place, facing northward, and seeing everything in flight ahead, capturing prisoners and recapturing their own men who had fallen into Federal hands, including the elusive Edward Thornton. Now the Confederates were passing the same point again, hurrying and still more hurried in the opposite direction, driven from the field they thought they had won, in the worst rout of which poor Bob had ever been a part.

"By the great horn spoon!" said General Buckthorn to General Haverill. "We're going to have as much trouble

General Philip H. Sheridan Wearing the Very Hat He Waved to Rally His Soldiers on His Famous Ride From "Winchester, Twenty Miles Away," in holding our men back from charging the enemy now as we did to stop their retreat this morning."

It had been the intention of General Sheridan to hold back his left after the enemy had been dislodged and by advancing his right to force the Confederates to the east of the valley pike, thus cutting off their retreat to Strasburg and Fisher's hill. But, even as the veteran Buckthorn had whimsically remarked, the troops were so bent upon avenging their reverses of the morning that there was no restraining them, and the whole line pressed on irresistibly until the old camps on Cedar creek had been regained, together with enough prisoners, guns, wagons and battleflags to turn previous mortification into riotous joy and make matter for a rousing dispatch to send to Washington.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Valley of Desolation.

WHILE Early's troops were still running and Sheridan's reveling, the customary sad truce was declared in order to permit the removal of the wounded from the field and the decent disposal of the dead. Not only soldiers, but civilians from far and near flocked upon the scene. From Winchester, Kernstown, Newtown, Middletown, up from the valley and down from the mountains came men and women, searching amid the heaped up horrors where late the battle lines had stood. Some came for love and some—alas—for loot. Sunset reddened the ghastly field; then fell the inky pall of night, and the lanterns of the ghostly minstrants twinkled in the gloom far beyond the circling camps.

Gertrude Ellingham, Madeline West and Jenny Buckthorn, led by Sergeant Barket and followed by the faithful Josephus, made up one of the most indefatigable groups of rescuers. They had ascertained that Kerchival West was not among the living Federal troops, either in the celebrating camps or in the hospital tents. Now at last they sought a pitiful, uncertain comfort in satisfying themselves that he was not among the dead on the field.

"General Haverill told me," said Gertrude, "that although our—I mean the southern—troops were defeated they managed to carry off a considerable number of prisoners. I believe Colonel West is among them."

"I know Captain Heartsease is," murmured Jenny forlornly.

"If nothing worse has befallen my brother than that," added Madeline, "I suppose I ought to be thankful, as at least he will now be out of the awful fighting. But it is a cruel injustice if that wicked wretch, Captain Thornton, is still to be at large."

They rode on in silence—for General Buckthorn had seen to it that they were provided with mounts—until at last Gertrude exclaimed:

"I can't rest anyway. I'm going on. Josephus will follow me. You girls will be all right—won't you, dears?"

"Where are you going?" cried the other two aghast.

"On to the ford, and then to Fisher's hill, or Strasburg, or wherever they have gone. Don't mind me. I'll bring you comforting news, or I won't come back at all. Good night."

And before they could persuade her—that was what she fled from now, as from unbearable torture—she rode off exultantly into the darkness of the mountain shadows like another Valkyrie bearing her stricken warrior's soul to the glorious and blissful Valhalla.

* * * * * * * *

Belle Bosquet was deserted. For miles around stretched the heart sickening panorama of fenceless, trampled fields, ruined farms and empty granaries.

For Sheridan had accomplished only too literally the fearsome task assigned him by General Grant:

"In pushing up the Shenandoah valley * * * it is desirable that nothing should be left to invite the enemy to return. Take all provisions, forage and stock wanted for the use of your command. Such as cannot be consumed destroy."

The same destitution that compelled Early to retreat as far as Newmarket, forty miles south of Cedar Creek, to supply and reorganize the broken Confederate forces prevented Sheridan from following them into this region. His cavalry, however, during this pause in the movements of the main army was set about a campaign against the guerrilla bands of Mosby and Gilmore.

It was not until a fortnight after the battle of Cedar Creek that Gertrude Ellingham and the small party of friends and neighbors who journeyed with her and likewise followed the path of necessity, as well as of duty and affection, in moving southward after the army, came up with the corps that had been General Ramseur's and which included her brother Robert's regiment.

But General Ramseur had been killed, the cavalry was for the most part dismounted, and Colonel Ellingham's precise whereabouts could not be ascertained. He had gone out on a raid with the irregulars who were harassing Sheridan's rear to prevent his carrying out General Grant's orders to cut Lee's railroad communications by which supplies were brought from the south for the Confederate army at Petersburg.

"And what has General Early done with the prisoners he brought here?" Gertrude inquired, with sinking heart.

"Sent them on to Danville, maybe to North Carolina, and the officers probably to Richmond," was the vague reply she got. "You see, miss, it's hard enough scraping now to feed our own men."

Kerchival West was among these prisoners, and so was Captain Hearts ease, and both were seemingly in condition to bear transportation. This much information was elicited on trustworthy authority, and it compensated for the hardships and anxieties through which the dauntless Virginia girl had passed. From Staunton she sent these reassuring tidings to Jenny Buckthorn, who remained with her father at Winchester, and to Madeline West, whom General Haverill had sent with an escort to Washington.

Superior Court. Norfolk, ss.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court next to be holden at Dedham within and for the county of Norfolk. Respectfully libels and represents Harriet R. Morgan of Quincy in said county that she was lawfully married to Ellsworth E. Morgan now of Jersey City in the state of New Jersey at Rutland, Vermont on the sixth day of October A. D. 1888, thereafterwards your libellant and the said Ellsworth E. Morgan lived together as husband and wife in this Commonwealth to wit, at Boston, Massachusetts and in Quincy, Mass. for twelve years in the latter place, that your libellant has always been faithful to her marriage vows and obligations but the said Ellsworth E. Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Ellsworth E. Morgan and that the libellee may be decreed to pay such alimony to your libellant as to this Honorable Court may seem just and reasonable and that the real and personal estate of the said Ellsworth E. ## OVERHEATED STOVE SET FIRE

Caused $200 Damage at A. B. Cutler's House

WORKED BEHIND WALLS

The alarm from box 74 at 8.02 Saturday night was for a lively blaze in the house of A. B. Cutler on Arnold street. The fire started in the parlor from an overheated stove and had worked in behind the walls before the firemen arrived. This made it necessary for the firemen to do considerable cutting away of the walls to get at the fire. The furniture in the parlor was also more or less damaged by fire, smoke and water. The fire was confined to the parlor, although the whole house was filled with smoke Chief Litchfield estimates the damage at $200.

MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN ON

Y. M. C. A. Boys Engaged in Commendable Contest

The membership campaign banquet at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday night was attended by about 60 boys, members of the different teams of workers. The reports of the ten teams were not complete and because of this more opportunity is given to get members.

Mr. Bromley, general secretary, and Mr. Blanchard boys' work director, gave brief addresses and the gathering broke up about half past seven, to convene Monday for reports. Team X headed by Arthur Skinner, had the best report to make. The captain himself had secured four members.

For the juniors, team 3, captained by Henry Erickson was in the lead, and team A, with Sturgis Hunt, captain, led the student teams. Mr. Bromley has offered a special prize to the team making the best report at five o'clock Tuesday.

A fine supper was served by the Women's Auxiliary, consisting of hot rolls, baked beans, cocoa, all kinds of pickles, ice cream and various kinds of delicious cake, to which the boys did ample justice. The ladies take especial pleasure in arranging and providing these suppers.

ICEMEN HAPPY OVER PROSPECT

Of Good Crop Promised by Continued Cold Snap

The ice men are smiling today. The continued cold weather is causing ice to make on the ponds and two more days of cold weather like today will see the big cakes of ice going up the elevators into the ice houses. At the pond of the Meadow Brook Co. this morning it was said that the ice was from 6 to 7 inches thick and that the pond was being marked off preparatory to cutting. Two days more of this weather said Mr. Patch and we will be housing ice. At Eaton's pond the ice is a little thicker and work cutting the pond will be commenced Tuesday.

COMMISSION TO LOOK INTO GAMES

Every Player on the St. Alphonsus Team Protested

SUNDAY SCHOOL LEAGUE

WON AND LOST.

The Basket Ball commission of the N. E. A. A. A. U. will consider the protests forwarded to them on Saturday night's game. Manager McMakin of St. Mary's protested every player on the St. Alphonsus team. Manager Commerford objected to the playing of O'Donnell who last year played with St. Joseph's T. A. S. in the Greater Boston league. Rough playing on both sides marred the game. St. Mary's first team beat St. Alphonsus first 21 to 16 and the St. Alphonsus second beat the St. Mary second 37 to 12. William H. Flynn of the Quincy A. A. is a member of the commission.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LEAGUE.

Two games in the Sunday school baskt ball league Saturday afternoon netted the winners large scores.

Bates ,the Bethany right forward tossed 13 baskets, made a record and helped his team win from the Wollaston Baptist five, 37 to 12. Ela played well for the losers.

QUINCY LOST.

The Hemenway gym team beat the Quincy Y. M. C. A. on the latter's court Saturday evening 29 to 25. The second team played and defeated an all star team 40 to 25 when the Somerville team did not appear.

The Harvard team outplayed the local boys in practically every department of the game, with the exception of shooting. Selbach, who played on the All-Collegiate Southeren team of four years ago and last year played with the Harvard-Iowa professional team was the star of the evening. His work throughout which included guiding ,one hand shooting, passing and all round footwork easily made him the most prominent man on the floor. He probably played the best game that will be seen on the court this season.

Trask at centre put up a game defense. His opponent adopted many characteristic features well known to superior players but despite the experience Trask managed to cling to his man much better than was expected.

The visitors appeared with but four men and Croucher who has been with the second Y. M. C. A. team was substituted. Through his clever work he was instrumental in producing the play which resulted in a win for the Harvard team. His unusual and unexpected showing displayed his eligibility for the first team and without doubt he will prominently appear in future first team games.

Committee on Cities Thought Little Use in Having Commission Without Duties

Mayor Has Power to Appoint Body With Council Exercising Supervision

(Special to the Ledger)

The much discussed dock-commission bill of Frank Fessenden Crane is a dead issue for this year. The committee on cities voted in executive session today to refer the bill to the "next General Court," a polite way of saying that it is not considered important enough to put through the legislature.

The committee felt that with the council opposed to appropriating money for the dock, there was little use in having a commission which would be without duties until the money was available. Again, it was pointed out, that there is nothing to prevent the mayor from appointing a Commission anyway, the only difference being that such a Commissions duties would probably be prescribed by the council.

The report of the committee was read in the House this afternoon.

INDIFFERENCE AND IGNORANCE

Of Parents Lead Many People to the State Prison

FIND THE BEST IN THE BOY

In a masterly speech before the Parents' and Teachers' association in the Wollaston school hall, Rev. H. W. Stebbins, chaplain of State Prison, Charlestown brought home to his audience how easy it was to slip from the right path to be caught in the meshes of the law.

"Why men come to State Prison" was his subject. "Men come to us in State Prison because they have failed to develop the best in them.

"That they have failed is due in some instances to the indifference and ignorance of the parents in that they have failed to search for and find the best in their boy.

"They have failed when they have found it to get the boy to co-operate. A child is not wise enough to discover his own best. It will never be developed in the boy until there is co-operation between the boy and his parents in the home.

"The school sometimes fails to develope the best and the boy comes out into the community having paid attention only to his weaker or worst side.

"This happens because there is a failure somewhere, sometimes all, along the road to co-operate with the proper guide in the home, school and trade.

"He has developed the weak side until he has formed the positive habit of expressing his weak side."

The speaker instanced the case of the mother who picked up the shears and the paper her son had been playing with when she found he would not.

"That mother" said the speaker, "is making a lot of trouble for herself and his teacher. She is making a lot of trouble for that future man's wife.

"No father or mother has the right in training future citizens to look for the good in their boy. They must look for nothing short of the best.

"The habit of failing leads to the gate of State Prison. If you know your boy is doing less well than he

WATER BILLS AND TAX BILLS

Citizens Invade City Hall to Save Extra Expense

The City Treasurers and Tax Collectors offices did a land office business Monday night. In the Treasurers office there was a rush to pay water bills as the time expired for their payment Monday night and if not paid water was likely to be shut off. In the Tax Collectors office there was a rush to pay up as summons are being sent out and as a summons carries an extra expense many want to save this amount.

Commissioner of Public Works Tupper has ordered the water shut off from all public fountains on account of the glanders. There are no cases in Quincy as far as known but there are a number of cases in adjoining towns and as horses from these passing through Quincy use the public fountains there is danger of the disease spreading.

SILVERWARE GIVEN PASTOR

Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Palmgren Completely Surprised

SOCIETY INVADED HOUSE

The Young Peoples' Society of the Swedish Congregational church held a farewell surprise, Monday evening for their pastor, Rev. Gerhard W. Palmgren, at his home 121 Glendale road, The pastor and his family had been invited away for supper and upon returning at about 9 o'clock, found the house occupied by about 50 young people who had gained access by previously arranged means. The surprise was thorough except to his three-year old son, who majestically insisted he knew all about it.

After all had quieted down the vice-president of the society, Carl Gustafson came forth with an explanation speech and presenting the Rev. and Mrs. Palmgren with a set of silverware. The pastor in return expressed his sincere thanks for the gathering and in part said that it will always be a fond memory for him to think of his stay in this city.

During the evening the gathering was entertained by solos from Miss Signe Wilbas and John W. Anderson, together with a couple of songs from the ladies quartet.

During Rev. Palmgren's five years as the pastor of the church, he has gained the love of all, and it is with deep regret that the young people see him leave this city. Though they did all in their power to have him stay, it seeems the elements of this life consist of such unpleasant farewells.

COMMUNITY HOUSE CAMPAIGN STARTED WITH SPLENDID VIGOR

Wollaston Men Out to Raise That $25,000 Within the Week and Will Do It

Movement For Social Club With 200 Members a Possibility

The movement for a large social club of 200 men in Wollaston has sprung out of the campaign for a Community House. At the meeting of the teams, Monday evening, a delegation headed by N. G. Nickerson, Jr., requested that provision be made for an organization in the plans of the proposed building.

The ten teams in the week's whirlwind campaign to raise $25,000 for the Community House met in the Wollaston Unitarian vestry for supper.

The supper was served through the generosity of Eugene H. Sprague and following it a heart to heart talk was entered into at which Chester I. Campbell presided.

This meeting opened the campaign that will be waged by 60 public spirited men for subscriptions until next Saturday night when it is expected the $25,000 mark will be reached.

Rumors that there was a possibility of the subscriber being made liable by an assessment over the amount paid for the stock were set at rest by the announcement that the stock was to be full paid and non-assessable.

Shortly after eight o'clock the teams started out on the war path. They will report at the rooms of the Samoset club this evening, the amount subscribed to date.

That the campaign has commenced in earnest is evidenced by two large signs. One on the building opposite the Wollaston railroad station reads: "$25,000 by Feb. 15. Total to date $4,935. Are you doing your part?" On this sign the total raised will be placed each day.

On the proposed site of the Community House, corner of Beale street and Greenwood avenue appears the following inscription: "Proposed site Wollaston Community House. To be built 'by the people, of the people and for the people.'" Ten teams subscription campaign starts Feb. 10th.

Monday witnessed the inauguration of a campaign that will not only mean much for Wollaston, but for her people as well. Too much stress cannot be laid upon the many beneficial effects that are bound to be the outcome of a Community House as only partially outlined, and which is the object of this campaign. There are a thousand conveniences that will be cared for in the future that are not now apparent. Needs will come up in a growing section like Wollaston and can be cared for in no other way than in a public building of like character.

Practically everybody in Wollaston knows by this time of the needs of such a building, and most are undoubtedly familiar with the agitation that has been for some time made in this direction, but all should know that never before have plans taken such definite shape and the outlook for a successful culmination been so near at hand. Briefly, the idea of a central gathering place is not a new one in the community. For several years past there have been projects by the different sections for a neighborhood place of meeting, and committees have been appointed to look into the proposition for their respective sections, and various ideas advanced towards providing a suitable place, none of which however has assumed the concrete form of reality.

The joint committee for the Community House are:

Chester I. Campbell, Russell T. Anthony, Dr. C. E. Monroe, A. N. Murray, E. H. Ewertz, L. E. Crosscup, W. A. Mann, C. P. Hutchins, A. W. Fay, M.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

For variety, February takes the palm of the present winter.

The ice men are cutting on the principal that half a cake is better than no ice.

Is former president Diaz behind the move that would place his nephew on the presidential throne of Mexico?

The usual headline is that the Turk is suing for peace, but thus far it is only in the imagination of the guessing war correspondents.

And by the way sending first class news of engagments by persons, hundreds of miles from the scene of conflict is on a par with the direction of battles and campaigns from comparatively the same distance, if not even greater.

All honor to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, on his natal day tomorrow.

The grand jury is to probe every thing that Big Bill has said. Much would be wasted time, as he has said a great deal that was mere public gossip, some few years ago.

Boston can rest happy and content, Joe Wood has signed up.

Of all the pole discoveries to date, take it whatever way you look at it Capt. Amundsen's discovery of the South pole is the only one that is verified, but at an awful cost.

The congressmen from the suffragette states have been notified that they are expected to march in the suffragette parade. Will they also be asked to don the uniform?

With the coal shipments for January the highest on record it looks as though that old chestnut of the scarcity of coal as an excuse for boosting prices was pretty well frayed out.

MORMONISM.

That Mormonism is preached right here in Massachusetts in colleges and other institutions is the serious charge which was made at the Federation of Women's clubs last week. It was pointed out that the Mormon church sends out a troup of missionaries every year and they work in a quiet and successful manner. Young women are sent through eastern seats of learning, at the expense of the Mormon church. They are shrewd and clever. They bide their time as to introduction of the faith which is dearest to them, but that they do in time, broach the subject to those of their classmates whom they believe susceptible is the charge made. In some cases where this has been done, effective measures have been taken to check the evil and the Mormon girls found it convenient to take a hasty departure from college. They should be ferreted out wherever they may be and compelled to make themselves scarce as neither they nor their church and its teachings can be tolerated in this section.

A BAD BREED.

The conditions which are daily being revealed as part of the police system of New York, are sufficient to show that a thorough clean up of that department is needed. The graft, roguery, bribery, and other forms of indecency have been going on for years. The police alone are not to blame, but others who hold their heads pretty high in the city must have had some finger in that deporable pie for some time. The conduct of some of the men higher up, are responsible for a condition, which it is difficult to understand in all its enormity. If the officers were willing to go to the extent they are credited with in this hold up game, in what other walks of crime have they flourished. If they shielded the gambler and keeper of disreputable houses, is there not room to believe that they were just as serviceable to the average robber, confidence man and even murderer. New York's police force requires a period of house cleaning which should be thorough and far reaching. Every man in that department who is under suspicion for crooked work should be rooted out. Until that is done, and honest men put on the police force, New York will not be a safe place to live in.

DEATH FOLLOWED SUCCESS.

The tragic death of Capt. Scott, the British explorer, so shortly after reaching the goal of their ambition the South pole, is only another of the many evidences of sacrifice yearly made in the interests of research and science. While Capt. Scott and his party were not the first to reach the pole, as that honor had already been secured by Capt. Amundsen, no doubt the British party secured additional valuable data which will be highly treasured. Probably Capt. Scott found evidences of the earlier visit to the pole by the energetic Norwegian. It seems too bad that just as they had reaped the laurel of success, the victory should be so rudely swept from them by grim death. Their research however has undoubtedly been productive of much that will prove of interest. And so the struggle goes on year by year, and the average toll of death is counted out in the pursuit of science and research work.

ARBITRATION OUTLOOK.

The song of peace is being sung these days by a sturdy male quartet. The first bass is a business man who insists that war does not pay. He enters his protest against the financial burden of an increasing and useless armament. He condemns the policy of spending 71 per cent of our national income on the results of past wars in pensions and upon the preparation for possible wars in the future.

The first tenor in the quartet is a scientific man who points out with telling accuracy the fact that weapons are passing or have passed the point where human nerves will consent to the fruitless task of facing their deadly strokes. Thoughtful men in all the countries of the world are refusing to become the torn and scattered remains for these scientific performances in ruthless slaughter.

The second tenor is a statesman who has been studying the close relations between nations brought about by travel and social alliance, by friendly associations in educational or religious efforts and by community of interest in trade. If one nation suffers, all the other nations suffer with it. The interests of all nations are advanced when any two of them submit their differences to arbitration rather than resort to expensive and demoralizing strife.

The second bass in the quartet is a man who urges those moral considerations which make against the habit of war. The ancient command, "Thou shalt not kill" has behind it the authority of Sinai. When any nation resorts to murder now that the peaceful method of arbitration of any difficulty lies open, it becomes a murderer.

In view of all these conditions and the splendid success already achieved by the Hague Tribunal, the outlook for arbitration is exceedingly bright. Rev. Chas. R Brown, Dean of Yale Divinity School.

MISS BROWN BURIED.

The funeral of Miss Susan Brown was held Monday morning from the home of Patrick Dolan of Walnut street, Atlantic. A requiem mass was celebrated at the Sacred Heart church by Rev. Fr. James McNiff. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery .

There are 10 teams captained as follows:

1—Captain Thomas Lacey; 2—Captain L. S. Cleaves; 3—Captain H. G Campbell; 4—Captain A. L. Whittemore, Jr.; 5—Captain A. N. Murray; 6—Captain Arthur Rohn; 7—Captain W. J. Leslie; 8—Captain Amos T. Leavitt; 9—Captain William Murphy; 10—Captain Felix Favorite.

From the list of names, it seems a foregone conclusion that success is assured. But these gentlemen cannot do it all. They through the Ledger appeal to the public spirited citizens of Wollaston to take an interest in this project and do their share.

One of the Boston daily papers the other day in an editorial referred to the fact that the Boston City Club had in ten days raised the $200,000. necessary to go ahead on their new building. It stated that why that was possible was "Because they were doing something that was worth while." It is surely "Worth While" this Wollaston Community house. It is worth while to have a building that our wives and children can attend, knowing that under the management that must be exercised over its destinies that this confidence will be assured.

The 60 or more gentlemen who make up the various teams on "The Whirlwind Campaign," will shortly be with you, and in a short time you will be proud that you "got on the band wagon."

WEATHER KITE CUT LOOSE

Wire Tangled in Locomotive Came From the Blue Hills

KITE NOT LOCATED

An investigation into the ownership of the wire found tangled about the axles of the locomotive and cars of the Whitman train a few nights ago was made and it was discovered the wire came from a kite which had broken away from the Weather Observatory at the Blue Hills.

These kites are sent up each day, carrying instruments to record the temperature and wind velocity of the upper air. This particular kite broke away and carried with it about 10 miles of fine wire.

Part of this wire was blown to South Braintree and lay across the tracks in the darkness, so that the engineer of the Whitman train did not notice it and about a mile of the wire got tangled around the axles of the locomotive and cars.

As the train passed the Pearl street crossing an end of the wire caught gate tender Bradley around one leg and pulled him several feet.

The whereabouts of the runaway kite has not been discovered yet.

MIDWINTER CHOWDER PARTY

Veteran Firemen Arranging For a Gala Time

The annual midwinter chowder party of the Washington M. French Hose Association will be held Saturday evening at Grand Army hall. The old veterans in answer to a still alarm will gather in the hall at 8 o'clock at which time the festivities of the evening will commence. The first thing on the program will be a chowder and as Asa Pope and Billy Bird have this in charge it is a foregone conclusion that the chowder will be done to a T and will reach the right spot. After the chowder there will be a smoke talk. All of the old spellbinders will be present and have a word to say of the good days when they ran with the machine and will prove conclusively to all that the old saying about being the last to the fire and first to the chowder is a falsehood. The committee in charge of the party inciude President Fred H. French, Frank C. Packard, Asa A. Pope, James E. Maxim and Jesse F. Curtis.

PEACE MEETING.

The Massachusetts State Federation of Women's clubs is to hold a mass meeting tonight at Tremont Temple, Boston in the interests of international peace. Hon. Samuel W. McCall is to preside and addresses will be given by Hon. Joseph Walker, Prof. George H. Blakeslee of Clark university, and Dr. Charles R. Brown of Yale university.

☞Upon payment of yearly subscriptions to the Daily Ledger, certificates good for 1000 votes in the Washington contest are issued in blank, and may be forwarded to any candidate. The vote can be held back.

COMING SILK STYLES.

Crepe-De-Chine to Succeed Satin Brocades and China Silks—Odd Coats and Skirts.

Brocades of all materials are increasingly worn and it is prophesied that crepe-de-chine weaves in silk will replace Charmeuse and other satins that have been standard for several seasons. Brocaded crepes especially are to be used for Spring if these rumors are authentic. At this time of year though, one can never prophecy with any certainty for fashions are made quite as much by buyers as by designers. If the public don't take to a style it falls flat for the time though later it may come back successfully as accordian plaitings are doing now, though last year no one would have them.

ODD COATS AND SKIRTS.

Odd coats and skirts are in evidence wherever the smartly dressed assemble. Coats of silk and wool figured cloth—known as Matlasse are especially well worn and velvet coats with silk skirts are quite the thing. Skirt and coat sometimes match in color, but quite as often are in complete contrast, and coming models will show striped skirts with plain coats as well as the reverse of this. Plush of light weight and short nap has been very popular this winter for suits, street dresses, and millinery as well as for coats. Brocades are scheduled to replace these later. There is a decided trend toward fancy short coats, even Eton styles have appeared, and the sleeveless lace jacket of this cut edged with narrow fur is a favorite device for afternoon getups used by smart dressmakers.

NEW HATS.

While there is no rush to buy hats at this time considerable business is done in small cap shapes, draped after oriental models. White plushes and brocades with a thread of tinsel in their weave are liked for these, and sprays of bleached, dyed, or natural Paradise are a favorite trimming caught with some sort of glittering ornament usually. Fur hats on similar lines come in for wear at this time when if ever we get weather that demands fur for comfort, as well as elegance.

FUR TRIMMINGS.

Fur trimmings appear on everything. Bands at the foot of the skirt, collars and cuffs on coats and jackets. Edges of drapery are trimmed with it, even though the materials used be of most delicate and filmy weave. Evening or day coats are built of fur in the new cut away and draped models, that add not a whit to the bulk of even an over-developed figure. Just now one can do wonders at small cost, securing the best grades and styles in reliable furs at the price asked for medium grades a few weeks since. A chinchilla coat lined with cream white brocaded crepe that I recognized as priced beyond the reach of any but the most plethoric pocketbook, had come down to a possible figure for many women with generous allowances and other more practical garments had been lowered proportionately when I saw them at C. C. Shayne's the other day. There is no doubt that people who can wait until January to buy, save considerable sums, and invest to great advantage for staple furs left over from season to season as do few other dress belongings.

BLOUSES AND NECK FIXINGS

Blouses of brocaded crepe, with very long shoulders, cut kimono fashion, and odd picturesque sleeves ending in frills at the hand are worn in place of the lingerie models. All are loose and bloused at the belt in the rather slouchy fashion that has caught on. Odd collars of Robespierre and allied models give style to these and little trimming touches in buttons, fur edgings, jabots etc., lend the needed color and personality.

MEANS END OF FEUD

Kaiser's Daughter Reported Engaged to Prince Ernst August

Berlin, Feb. 11.—It is regarded here as certain that the engagement of Princess Victoria Louise, only daughter of the German emperor and empress, to Prince Ernst August, son of the Duke of Cumberland, will be proclaimed today, according to a statement published by the official news agency.

It is assumed that the marriage of Princess Victoria and Prince Ernst August would mark the reconciliation of the royal houses of Hohenzollern and Cumberland and solve the question of the succession of the throne of Brunswick, the emperor waiving his objections to the Duke of Cumberland's succession to the throne, now occupied as regent by Duke Johann Albrecht of Mecklenburg, an uncle of the crown princess.

RIOTING IN TOKIO

Mobs Attack Premier, Newspapers and the Police Stations

Tokio, Feb. 11.—Six persons were killed and sixty-five seriously injured in the political rioting here. The situation is serious.

The premier of Japan, Prince Katsura, was stoned by a mob in the streets. His resignation has been demanded by the people. Mobs attacked the offices of the Bureaucratic newspapers and threatened the dwellings of the ministers. They burned and wrecked police stations, tram cars and private dwellings.

Many resent Katsura's attempt to break up the opposition to his ministry by the use of an imperial rescript addressed to Marquis Saionji, hence the popular demand for his resignation.

CLEVELAND'S WIDOW BECOMES A BRIDE

Weds Thomas J. Preston, Who Has Suffered a Breakdown

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 11.—Mrs. Frances Folsom Cleveland, widow of former President Grover Cleveland, and Professor Thomas J. Preston were married at the residence of President Hibben of Princeton university, who performed the ceremony.

The bride was dressed in a white satin gown of simple design. The ceremony, which was very simple, was performed in the presence of only the relatives of the bride and groom and President and Mrs. Hibben and Dean Andrew West, a friend of the couple.

Professor and Mrs. Preston soon after left for Florida, where they will spend the winter in the hope that Preston's health may be benefited. It was his breakdown that caused the substitution of the simple ceremony for the elaborate wedding that had been planned.

PLEAD NOT GUILTY

Five Providence Chinamen Charged With Illicit Dealing in Opium

Providence, Feb. 11.—Pleas of not guilty to the charges of illicit dealing in opium were entered by five Chinese arrested Saturday night in a raid in which $12,000 worth of opium was found. Commissioner Cross ordered bail of $2500 each for a further hearing on Feb. 18. None of the defendants was able to furnish bail.

The raids, which were conducted by Surveyor of the Port Graves of Boston, are said by the authorities to have been the most successful in the east for a long time. Graves believes the places here were the headquarters for opium traffic in this section of the country. Smoking outfits, manufacturing equipment and other contraband goods were seized.

CARS BURNED AT GARAGE FIRE

Mysterious Blaze in Absence of Stearns Family

MAY HAVE BEEN FROM STOVE

The garage of William B. Stearns at 128 Central avenue, Milton was destroyed by fire Monday afternoon together with two automobiles. The garage stood back from the house about 25 feet and in the garage was a seven passenger car owned by Mr. Stearns and a small runabout owned by Edwin B. Hill of Canton avenue. Neither car had been out and as the family was away at the time the fire is somewhat mysterious, although it was thought it might have started from an overheated stove.

When the apparatus arrived, flames were coming through the roof and Chief Choate aided by engine 16 of Boston which had crossed over the river, to render aid, were over an hour in extinguishing the fire. No estimate of the damage could be made as Mr. Stearns, the owner was away.

SPEAKER LIST NOW COMPLETED

It was announced that a third speaker had been obtained for the banquet in the person of John W. Corcoran of Cambridge, President of the State Board of Trade. The other speakers are David I. Walsh, Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Norton.

Returns from tickets sold for the banquet makes it certain of a large attendance as well as making it sure the affair will be a success. All persons having tickets for sale who have not made returns are requested to do so at once in order that the committee may make the necessary arrangements.

WATERWAYS BULLETIN.

In his monthly bulletin to members of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association, Congressman J. Hampton Moore, president of that organization, refers to the defeat of his amendment for the talking over of the Chesapeake and Delaware canal, in accordance with the recommendation of the Government Engineers in their report on the survey of the Intracoastal Waterway from Boston, to Beaufort, N. C. While the necessity of the acquisition and improvement of this important link is demanded by the business interests of the Atlantic coast, yet the bulk of the moneys appropriated for rivers and harbors continues to go into the Mississippi, the Ohio and Missouri valleys. In commenting upon his amendment, Mr. Moore says:

"The debate over the Chesapeake and Delaware item and over an attempt to knock out the Norfolk-Beaufort link showed a disposition on the part of representatives of inland states to make a general attack upon rivers and harbors improvements in the East. The truth is that Eastern improvements are not thoroughly understood in Congress and that the campaign of education must go on. The unfortunate part of it all is that unless the earnest and sincere waterways men of the country come to some better understanding with regard to the commercial necessity of improvements and the reasonable and equitable distribution of rivers and harbors funds, they may find themselves seriously handicapped in obtaining future aid for entirely worthy projects.

The debate on the bill in the House which now goes to the Senate for scrutiny, showed the necessity of a clearer understanding as between the waterways advocates of the various sections of the country. And such an understanding is badly needed unless waterways transportation is to be postponed for an indefinite period.

BREAKING CLUB WINDOWS

Militant Suffragists In London Adopt New Line of Attack

London, Feb. 11.—Militant suffragettes raided the West End district known as "Clubland," smashing windows of the Carlton, the Reform and other political and social clubs in Pall Mall. Windows were broken also at the residence of Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein.

With chunks of lead, stamped "Votes for Women," and brickbats wrapped in "Votes for Women" paper, the women broke out all the windows on the ground floors of the clubhouses.

Three of the women were arrested. Mrs. Grace Branson, charged with being the leader of the club raiders, was sent to prison for two months.

"I'm glad of it," she shouted defiantly. "I did it as a protest against a government by men only."

The other women were sent to jail for ten days.

EDRIS DROPS ANCHOR

San Francisco, Feb. 11.—After 425 days of adventurous voyaging, the eighty-five-foot gasolene yacht Edris, long believed to have been lost along the coast of South Africa, dropped anchor here.

The Edris, the property of Captain John Barneson, a wealthy oil operator, left New York with a crew of six men, in command of Captain Mills. Mills had difficulty in getting through the Straits of Magellan and gave up his command.

He was succeeded by Captain Cameron, who brought the craft to port, the same crew remaining throughout the voyage. The voyagers told of many narrow escapes from death.

STRIKE OF FIREMEN MAY BE AVERTED

Result of Ballot Is Held Back by Head of Brotherhood

New York, Feb. 11.—The action of President Carter of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen in withholding the result of the strike ballot of the 30,000 firemen employed on fifty-four eastern railroads until it can be presented at the meeting today of representatives of the men and the conference committee of railroad managers is taken as indicating that both sides to the controversy hope that an agreement may yet be reached and a strike averted.

It is expected Carter will notify the managers that the firemen have decided almost unanimously to strike if the railroads refuse to submit their demands to arbitration by a commission of three persons, as provided in the Erdman act.

The committee of managers, after hearing the ultimatum of the firemen, is expected to ask for several days' time in which to frame its reply.

"TIS MORNING."

Benjamin S. Parker.

I had a dream of other days:
In golden luxury waved the wheat:
In tangled greenness shook the maize;
The squirrels ran with nimble feet.
And in and out among the trees
The hang bird darted like a flame;
The cat bird piped his melodies,
Purloining every warbler's fame;
And then I heard triumphal song,
"'Tis morning and the days are long"

They scattered roses, strewed the palms
And shouted down the pleasant vales;
I heard a thousand happy psalms,
And laughing, wove a thousand tales
Of mimic revelry and joy;
They mocking well the worldly great—
Each tan faced girl and barefoot boy.
Dear shapers of my early fate—
And then again the aeolin song,
"'Tis morning and the days are long"

Far winding past the storied town,
The river ran through the bosky groves,
Its flood we sailed our vessels down
Full freighted with a myriad loves;
Our souls went floating to the gales,
"With scarlet leaves and shreds of bark
He named them cutters, schooners, sails;
And watched them fade in shadowy dark,
When down the waters flowed the song,
'Tis morning and the days are long."

O morning! when the days are long,
And youth and innocence are wed,
And every grove is full of song,
And every pathway void of dread,
Who rightly sings its rightful praise,
Or rightly dreams it o'er again,
When cold and narrow are the days,
And shrunken all the hopes of men,
He shall rewaken with his song
"The morning when the days are long."

There palpitations wild and sweet,
The thrills of many an old delight,
And dimpled hands that lightly meet,
And hearts that tremble to unite,
Arise upon the rosy morn.
Pass down the lovely vales and stand
The picture of a memory born,
The mirage of a locust land—
A land where once we trolled the song,
"'Tis morning and the days are long."

STATESMEN MUST MARCH IN PAGEANT

Notice Served Upon Those Whom Women Helped Elect

Washington, Feb. 11.—The women in charge of the suffrage pageant, to be held here on March 3, have devised a scheme likely to embarrass at least a score of senators and congressmen.

Each one of the forty-odd members of congress from the suffrage states received a letter notifying him that he would be expected to march in the parade, in a congressional section, headed by a banner bearing the words: "Women Helped Elect These Men."

Some of the two-score men who represent, in part, women voters, have already signified their willingness to take part in the pageant, but it is known that some of them were intending either to be out of town that day or else otherwise engaged upon the public business.

The suffragists therefore have decided to stand on their rights and have accordingly commanded those who are technically defenders of the cause in Washington to exhibit themselves to the world under the equal suffrage flag.

—A curious freak of the parcel post regulations is shown in the rate demanded for books and printed matter. The old rate is still maintained on this merchandise and the manufacturers of the printing preses carry a much higher rate of postage in most cases than is demanded for the transportation of the merchandise produced in other lines of business. Even the delicate merchandise manufactured by the mother hen goes at a lower rate. It would seem that a readjustment is here needed.—Spencer Leader.

SET TWAIN AT "WORK"

HOW GEN. SHERMAN MADE HUMORIST PAY FARE.

Author Compelled to Pose as Famous Soldier While the Latter Smoked Contentedly in His Private Car.

Albert Bigelow Paine tells of the time when Mark Twain on his way to West Point to deliver an address found himself in the same train with General Sherman, who had been attending a dinner in Hartford.

"A pleasant incident followed, which Clemens himself used to relate. Gen. Sherman attended the banquet and Secretary of War Robert Lincoln. Next morning Clemens and Twichell were leaving for West Point, where they were to address the military students, guests on the same special train on which Lincoln and Sherman had their private car. This car was at the end of the train, and when the two passengers reached the station Sherman and Lincoln were out on the rear platform addressing the multitude. Clemens and Twichell went in and, taking seats, waited for them.

"As the speakers finished the train started, but they still remained outside, bowing and waving to the assembled citizens, so that it was under good headway before they came in. Sherman came up to Clemens, who sat smoking unconcernedly.

"'Well,' he said, 'who told you you could go in this car?'

"'Nobody,' said Clemens.

"'Do you expect to pay extra fare?' asked Sherman.

"'No,' said Clemens; 'I don't expect to pay any fare.'

"'O, you don't! Then you'll work your way.'

"Sherman took off his coat and military hat and made Clemens put them on.

"'Now,' said he, 'whenever the train stops you get out on the platform and represent me and make a speech.'

"It was not long before the train stopped and Clemens, according to orders, stepped out on the rear platform and bowed to the crowd. There was a cheer at the sight of his military uniform. Then the cheer waned, became a murmur of uncertainty, followed by an undertone of discussion. Presently somebody said:

"'Say, that ain't Sherman; that's Mark Twain,' which brought another cheer.

"Then Sherman had to come out, too, and the result was that both spoke. They kept this up at the different stations and sometimes Robert Lincoln came out with them, and when there was time all three spoke, much to the satisfaction of their audiences."
—Harper's Weekly.

Climate of California.

"As each man steps his foot on shore," wrote one adventurer of the period of the "Forty-Niners," "he seems to have entered a magic circle in which he is under the influence of new impulses." And, as additional testimony to the extraordinarily stimulating quality of the Californian air, Mr. Henry Childs Merwin tells this delightful tale in his "Life of Bret Harte:"

A popular figure in the streets of San Francisco was a black pony, the property of a constable, that stood most of the day, saddled and bridled, in front of his master's office.

The pony's favorite diversion was to have his hoofs blacked and polished. Whenever a coin was placed between his lips he would carry it to a neighboring bootblack, put first one foot and then the other on the foot rest, and, after receiving a satisfactory "shine," walk gravely back to his usual station.

Even the dumb animals felt that something unusual was expected of them in California.—Youth's Companion.

"Face Value."

Do you ever figure out what you would bring in money if sold at "face value," that is, if the component parts of your body were weighed and measured by a purchaser as "raw material?" Well, a patient German scientist has figured it all out, and here is the result:

"A man weighing 150 pounds comes to about $7.50. He finds in his body about two and a half dollars' worth of fat; while of iron, so essential to health and vigor, he discovers hardly enough to make a nail an inch long. But there is plenty of lime, enough to whitewash a good-sized chickenhouse. Of phosphorus he finds enough to put the heads on two thousand two hundred matches, and there is magnesia enough to make a good fireworks piece for the Fourth of July. There is enough albumen for one hundred hen's eggs, and a small teaspoonful of sugar and a goodly sized pinch of salt."

Love and the Liner.

A sentimental young lady from town was on the steamship quay, where she saw a young girl sitting on a trunk in an attitude of utter dejection and despair.

"Poor thing," thought the romantic young lady, "she is probably alone and a stranger! Her pale cheeks and great, sad eyes tell of a broken heart and a yearning for sympathy."

She went over to the traveler to win her confidence.

"Crossed in love?" she asked sympathetically.

"No," replied the girl with a sigh, 'crossed in the 'Frolic,' and an awfully rough passage, too!"

can look out. Fight it. Remember that your boy is forming a habit."

Chaplain Stebbins told of the boy who was in prison because he lacked sand. "He could be laughed into doing anything," said the speaker. "He was laughed into prison with 23 counts over his head.

"When you say to your older daughter 'Laugh at Charlie and he won't do it.' Look out. Look out for the next girl that isn't his sister. Do not bring up your boys to flinch from ridicule. See that they do right because it is right and keep from wrong because it is wrong."

The chaplain emphasized the importance of teaching boys and girls resourcefulness. The ability to be alone. To read and study. He urged slowness in forming associations.

Mr. Stebbins spoke of the tremendous temptation to steal, placed before the boy of today, and told of some that in order to live within their income had patronized the loan sharks.

"The boy," he said, "who is not taught to live within his income is living on the ragged edge. In some sad hour, over he may plunge taking his family with him and bringing disgrace to his parents.

"It takes but a minute for the man of finances to do the act for which he spends a life time in repenting.

"Boys and girls are bound to be caught in the struggle and stress. Teach them to live within their incomes. Teach them to live lives of absolute honesty.

"Teach them to form habits of honesty everywhere and in everything and there will be happy lives for themselves and for those they love."

In the absence of President Sprague David H. Goodspeed presided. Contralto solos by Miss Victoria M. H. Zeller accompanied by Miss Katherine Follett were enjoyed.

Following the meeting a candy sale was held by members of the class of 1913.

EXECUTIONS AT SING SING

DIAZ HOLDING ARMY IN LEASH

Mexican Capital Surprised by His Quiet Attitude

WIDENING ZONE HE CONTROLS

Guns of Rebels Prepared to Resist Any Move of Federals—Excellent Order Prevails, but Rioting Would Cause No Surprise—Mobs Do Not Know For Whom They Should Shout

Mexico City, Feb. 11.—General Felix Diaz, whose bold stroke Sunday almost overthrew the Mâdero administration, holds his army in leash. Nor have the scattered government forces dared to attack him in his fortified positions in and about the arsenal.

Still hoping that he might attain complete control without further loss of life or destruction of property, Diaz surprised the capital by refraining from turning his heavy guns on the national palace.

The government's position has not been materially altered, although a few of General Blanquet's soldiers—not more than 500—have arrived and a small detachment of rurales have ridden into the city. The forces of Diaz are not materially augmented either, but the proximity of the Zapatistas and the promised early arrival of rebels from the state of Vera Cruz appear to have strengthened his band.

Although almost incomprehensible, it has been impossible for the residents of the capital to ascertain the truth regarding the movements of a general whom the government expects to come to the aid of General Huerta, the newly appointed post commander. Officially it has been announced that both General Blanquet and General Angeles are in the city, but this is denied in quarters equally trustworthy.

No one has been found who has actually seen these generals and their failure to appear in public is taken by many as an indication that either they cannot get here or are unwilling to fight.

The establishment of martial law has served to keep inquirers blocked from the most authoritative sources of information, and the people, keyed to the highest pitch of expectancy, swallow with greediness scores of rumors of a most alarming character.

At one time yesterday Huerta believed he was justified in risking an attack on the rebels, but the latter trained their guns down the streets leading to their positions and prepared to resist. This proved unnecessary, for Huerta's plan was changed. Then a report gained credence that the rebels were about to take the offensive and attack the national palace, but the day closed without a single encounter between the federals and the rebels, lying about a mile apart.

General Diaz is gradually widening the zone he controls. He extended his picket line yesterday afternoon. Some of those who still have faith in the power of the government profess to see in the dilatoriness of Diaz a weakness which will result in his being crushed or starved into submission. Unless, however, the government is able to persuade what undoubtedly are reluctant elements to rally, Diaz, with superior artillery, should be able to resist any attack.

Excellent order prevails throughout the city despite the absence of police. The people, unnerved by the fighting of Sunday, acquired the trick of dodging around corners and accelerating their pace when crossing streets.

All the banks remained closed throughout the day and in the afternoon most of the shops had up heavy wooden shutters, concealing the glass fronts. The streets are deserted, even by the government's sweeping forces and Mexico's asphalt, renowned for spotlessness, is littered with rubbish.

The street car company, sharing the fear of the shopkeepers and bankers, that riots might break out, refused to resume traffic, and public hackmen are reaping a harvest of specially imposed tariff.

That riots may occur at any moment would cause no surprise, yet serious disorders are not regarded as probable until one side or the other has secured a more decided advantage. The lower elements which make up these mobs require a rallying cry, and at present they are in doubt as to which man they should proclaim the popular idol.

Royal Coffins Unearthed

London, Feb. 11.—Two tiny coffins found in the monastic burial ground at Peterborough have been placed in Peterborough cathedral. One is two feet six inches in length, the other two feet eight inches. They are said to be coffins of the two children of King Canute.

A Suicide's Question

Baltimore, Feb. 11.—"What's the use of living if you can't live all the time?" Thus read the only words of explanation left in a note found at the side of Samuel W. Bouldin, who committed suicide by drinking chloroform.

DO IT NOW.

If you contemplate becoming a subscriber of the Daily Ledger, do it now, and make your subscription count.

If you intend to pay your Daily Ledger subscription soon, do it now, and help a friend.

After Feb. 18 it will be too late to obtain one of those 1000-vote certificates when you pay. Do it now.

Today 1000 votes are worth about $3, and 300 Ledgers at 2 cents each are worth $6. Combination price until Feb. 18 only $5. Do it now.

Subscriptions and coupons will be received at the Daily Ledger office right up to the hour of closing.

There is still a chance to help somebody win this contest. The winner will have a trip to Washington with all expenses paid on the week of the inauguration of President-Elect Woodrow Wilson. The winner of the contest has the privilege of taking a companion on the trip and the expenses of both will be paid by the Daily Ledger.

The trip will be a magnificent one and the winner will have a chance to see Washington at its best. The spectacle of an inauguration of a Democratic president is one that has not been seen in Washington for many years and people from all over the country are going to be there. For the first time in history Confederate veterans will march down Pennsylvania avenue in the grand inaugural parade. For four long years these veterans tried hard to capture Washington and march through the streets and on the fourth day of March next they will march down the well known avenue, but this time in peace.

We have received a number of inquiries regarding the subscriptions. Some evidently do not understand. In reply we will state that every subscription paid is good for 1000 votes. If you pay for two years you get 2,000 votes. If you pay for five years you get 5,000 votes and so on. Back subscriptions count just the same as new ones.

It won't cost any more for the Daily Ledger for the coming year to send in your subscriptions at once. Your votes will help someone and will help to give them the best trip in their lives.

A limited number of Daily Ledgers with coupons may be obtained at wholesale or retail until the closing of the polls. Subscription certificates good for 1000 votes will also be issued until Feb. 18.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THREE MEN ARE MADE TARGETS

Walsh, Newell and Foye Indicted by Police Graft Jury

WALSH TOO ILL TO TESTIFY

Sweeney May Become State Witness Should He Be Indicted, on Condition That He Will Reveal "Man Higher Up"—About $2,400,000 Vice Graft Collected by Police Yearly

New York, Feb. 11.—Police Captain Thomas Walsh, Edward J. Newell, a lawyer, and Charles E. Foye, a patrolman, were indicted yesterday afternoon by the extraordinary grand jury which has been investigating the graft situation. Walsh is charged with bribery, Foye with perjury and Newell with inducing a witness not to appear before the grand jury.

The story of an alleged "hush fund" raised, it was said, by the system to stop Fox from continuing his exposures, was reported to be under investigation by the jury. Those interested in preventing Fox from testifying had raised $3000, it was said, to be paid to the patrolman's family on condition that he would plead guilty and go to jail. The fund was to be raised later to $20,000, it was said. The names of the subscribers to the fund were reported to be in the hands of the district attorney.

Walsh, who recently confessed to grafting and involved, among others, his superior, Inspector Sweeney, was too ill to testify before the extraordinary grand jury. If physically able, he will tell his story today.

District Attorney Whitman had planned to attack the "system" by asking for the indictment of Captain Walsh, Charles Dubelier and David Maier, on the charge that they are the "vice trust's" agents, and of Patrolman Foye, a former member of Lieutenant Becker's strong arm squad, and Edward J. Newell, George A. Sipp's lawyer, and probably of Police Inspector Sweeney.

It is not improbable, however, that Sweeney would be accepted as a state's witness should he be indicted. But this would be only on condition that he would reveal "the man higher up" at police headquarters with whom the inspectors share graft.

The three men who control the "system" would then be uncovered. They received their share of the graft collected by the police, according to these agents, who had it from "the man higher up" at police headquarters, to whom it had been turned in from the various grafting inspectors and special squads.

The graft the "Big Three" received annually was approximately $550,000; it is calculated on the basis that the police yearly collect about $2,400,000. The police captains keep half and give the other half to the inspectors. The inspectors' share is $1,200,000. Half of this, $600,000, they turn over to "the man higher up" at police headquarters. He keeps about $50,000.

DIPLOMATIC CHANGES

None Will Be Announced by Wilson Until After March 4

Trenton, Feb. 11.—President-elect Wilson will make no announcement of intended diplomatic appointments until after he takes office. He said last night that applications and indorsements for diplomatic posts were being filed away for the present.

It is considered likely that quite early in the new administration the ambassadorship at London, made vacannt by the death of Whitelaw Reid, will be filled.

SENATE PASSES WEBB BILL

Measure Prohibits All Shipments of Liquor to Dry States

Washington, Feb. 11.—The senate last night passed the Webb liquor bill, already passed by the house. The Webb bill prohibits shipments of intoxicating liquors from one state to another when intended to be received or sold in violation of the law of the state to which the shipment is made.

The amendment excepting liquor intended for personal and for sacramental use was defeated.

DR. WALKER SERIOUSLY ILL

Noted Suffragist Blames Arrest and Fall From Patrol Wagon

Chicago, Feb. 11.—Dr. Mary Walker, the noted woman suffragist, is critically ill at a hospital here from nervous shock, caused by a fall a week ago. Dr. Walker is 81 years old.

The aged suffragist says her arrest a short time ago for wearing male attire was indirectly responsible for her fall, as she says she injured herself in climbing into a patrol wagon.

Town Shut Up by Epidemics

Philadelphia, Feb. 11.—No services are permitted in any of the five churches in Daroy, a suburb of this city, because of an epidemic of diphtheria and scarlet fever. Public schools, moving picture halls and other public gathering places have been closed.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

HORSERADISH SAUCE.

IF horseradish roots are obtainable it is best to make your own horseradish sauce. That which is sold in the shops may be made largely with white turnips. Some inferior brands of ready made horseradish sauce are so made.

If a recipe says the sauce must be cooked stir in the grated horseradish last. It weakens it to cook horseradish.

Favorite Condiments.

Boiled Horseradish Sauce.—Melt a third of a cup of butter in a saucepan and stir a half cupful of flour in it. When this is hot pour in a pint of boiling milk and stir until it forms a smooth sauce. Let it boil for twenty minutes. Season with a pinch of cayenne, a half teaspoonful of salt and strain. Add two stalks of grated horseradish. If a boiled sauce is made stir in the horseradish last.

Horseradish Sauce With Oil.—Take two tablespoonfuls of grated horseradish, a tablespoonful each of vinegar, salad oil and ground mustard. Add a quarter of a tablespoonful of salt and beat these together, then serve.

Horseradish Sauce With Cream.—Scald a pint of sweet cream. Add to it four tablespoonfuls of grated horseradish and a half teaspoonful of salt. Mix and it is ready to serve. This sauce may so quickly be made that it is useful to prepare in an emergency.

For Fish or Meat.

Horseradish Sauce For Fish.—Take a cupful of stock and scald half a cupful of freshly grated horseradish in it. Beat three eggs and stir these into a cupful of cream and cook this with the horseradish and stock. When the spoon becomes coated add half a teaspoonful of salt and take from the fire.

Horseradish Sauce For Beef.—Take a half cupful of fine stale breadcrumbs, an onion stuck with half a dozen cloves, two tablespoonfuls of butter, a half teaspoonful of salt and a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper. Take a double boiler and cook everything but the butter in it for an hour, then take out the onion and cloves and add the butter, stirring it around until it is well mixed. Just before taking from the fire beat in a half cupful of freshly grated horseradish. This is nice for either boiled or roast beef.

COOKING CALF'S LIVER.

LIVER is an economical and useful winter breakfast dish. Calf's liver if fresh and well cooked is really a culinary dainty. Soak the liver about ten minutes in hot water to set the blood; then it will be less unpleasant to handle. Take off the thick skin and the veins.

With Much Seasoning.

Larded Liver.—Take a nice plump calf's liver, rather white in color, and lard it with bacon. Put one-quarter of a pound of butter in a pan. When melted add a tablespoonful of flour, keep stirring until a nice yellow color, then put in the whole of the liver. Turn round now and then until it is a little firm, then add a pint of broth or water and a bouquet of parsley, thyme and bay leaves, a little salt, pepper, sugar and a little finely chopped onion. Simmer one hour. Take the fat off and the bouquet out, dish the liver with the onions around it. Reduce the sauce so that it adheres lightly to the back of the spoon, then pour the sauce over the liver and serve.

Casserole of Liver.—Take two pounds of liver, sliced and larded, three small onions, four small carrots, one-half cupful mushrooms, three sprigs of parsley and two cupfuls of tomato puree. Season with salt, pepper and celery salt and cover with one pint of stock or boiling water. Cook in the oven two and one-half hours. When serving thicken the gravy with two tablespoonfuls of flour and send to the table in the casserole in which it was cooked.

Piquant Viands.

Calf's Liver Saute.—Take two tablespoonfuls of butter and put in a frying pan with a tablespoonful of minced onion. When the butter is quite hot add three-quarters of a pound of calf's liver cut into thin slices, seasoned with pepper and salt and dredged with flour. Fry slowly till cooked through and nicely browned on both sides. Remove the liver and make the sauce by beating the yolk of an egg with a tablespoonful of butter, a dash of cayenne pepper and a little gravy. Heat but do not let it boil. Just before serving add gradually two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice. Garnish with fried croutons of bread and serve this dish very hot.

Liver With Chestnuts.—Parboil liver till tender, adding a slice of onion; then cut the liver into dice. Boil the chestnuts in salted water until soft, blanch and chop fine or rub through a coarse sieve. Mix well. To a teacupful each of liver and chestnuts add a teaspoonful of salt, one saltspoonful of white pepper, two tablespoonfuls of butter. Fill the dish with this, pour over it a cupful of milk, cover with crumbs and bits of butter and brown. Serve very hot.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West Union soldier loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Thornton escapes, captures Lieutenant Bedloe and takes from him Mrs. Haverill's miniature.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

"Stonewall" Jackson is killed. Grant takes supreme command of the Federal armies, and Sheridan invades the valley of Virginia.

Gertrude loves West, but disappears before he reaches Belle Bosquet. West recognizes Bedloe as Frank Haverill.

General Haverill, not knowing Bedloe is his son, sends him on a dangerous mission. Gertrude is captured by West's soldiers.

West takes Mrs. Haverill's miniature from Thornton. Bedloe is wounded and captured. Haverill plans to exchange Ellingham for Bedloe. Thornton stabs West. Haverill finds the miniature on West's person.

Gertrude tells West she loves him. The Union army at Winchester is surprised and driven back. Bedloe returns, dying. Haverill places West under arrest.

Love alone must guide her in her search, Gertrude declared, but she had the courage to resolve that love should win. Her home was broken up, the valley desolated, and the cause upon which all had been staked was narrowing down to a deadly crisis where mere self interest, fortune, even life itself, had to be thrown unhesitatingly into the balance.

While she waited at Staunton for some clew, some enlightenment to determine what direction her pilgrimage should take now that the winter was about setting in, a detachment of the wild mounted troops came up the valley from a successful raid on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad in West Virginia. A bearded savage rushed with a glad cry at Gertrude—and she was laughing and crying in her brother's arms.

"Oh, Rob," she faltered, "I was beginning to think I should never see you again nor any one else I loved!"

"Don't give up, sis!" he enjoined, but his tone was worried and serious. "We are not beaten yet. If we have to leave the valley the enemy can't stay here either. He is trying to prevent us from joining General Lee at Petersburg, but in the meantime we are keeping him and an army bigger than all our forces put together from going to help General Grant, who, after all, is no nearer to Richmond than McClellan was two years and a half ago."

"Oh, never mind the armies now! Where can I find those two poor prisoners?"

Bob shook his head and paced the floor in troubled silence.

"Where is Thornton now?" asked Gertrude anxiously.

"To my certain knowledge he is keeping in touch with Mosby at Leesburg or Upperville. It is not at all likely he even knows that Kerchival was captured at Cedar Creek. But he is such a vindictive devil that I suppose he will always be looking out for the satisfaction of his private revenge before the interests of the service."

In the Federal camps at Kernstown and Winchester the bustle of confident activity and a general air of hopeful expectation were as marked as the spirit of grim, dogged determination was behind the scenes at Confederate headquarters. At the beginning of the new year one of the two divisions of the Nineteenth corps, under General Buckthorn, was sent to Petersburg, reducing the effective force of the Army of the Shenandoah to one division of infantry and three of cavalry, General Haverill's among the latter.

General Haverill's mood of somber reserve was a matter of inquietude to his friends and a puzzle to those of the army who knew him only in his soldierly capacity. He went about his military duties in the silent, dispirited manner of a fatalist. Not a man in the army dared to formulate the question that was in the minds of many. Did the general suspect that the heroic Lieutenant Bedloe, who sacrificed his life at Three Top mountain, was his own disgraced son? Those who knew best declared that he did not—and the famous dispatch to Washington in praise of Bedloe's deed was adduced as confirming evidence.

When Gertrude Ellingham wrote for particulars as to Kerchival West's violation of the order of arrest to participate in the battle of Cedar Creek, the general replied with formal brevity that he must disclaim responsibility as well as any special knowledge in the matter. When Jenny Buckthorn questioned him personally in the hope of getting some clew that might aid in finding Captain Heartsease, wounded and captured in Lieutenant Bedloe's raid upon the enemy's signal station, he was scarcely more communicative, except on one point—that Captain Heartsease, following the practice of Major Young's scouts, had worn a Confederate uniform, which would put him in the category of a secret service officer or spy and therefore prejudice his status as a prisoner of war.

Evidently General Haverill had but little comfort to give to others, and it was certain he kept none for himself. The chain of circumstances, from the unexplained duel of Kerchival West and Edward Thornton at Charleston, to the recent happenings in which Kerchival's name was still coupled with that of Mrs. Constance Haverill, culminating in the damning fact that the telltale miniature portrait given in a trying hour to young Frank Haverill had turned up three and a half years later in the possession of Colonel West, bound a proud and sensitive nature like that of the general to disdainful silence.

General Sheridan's work in the Shenandoah valley was now practically completed. He was now ready to plan a junction with General Grant at Petersburg, convinced that a decisive Federal victory there would open the gates of Richmond and close the war.

Here in the beleaguered capital Bob received the first direct word from his sister Gertrude that had come to him for many anxious weeks. She had left Danville after a long and harrowing search there which disclosed the fact that Kerchival West was among a convoy of sick and wounded prisoners lately "sent on," presumably to Richmond. Thither Gertrude herself was now making her way as best she might, attended by the unshakable Josephus.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Surrender.

It was a lovely Sabbath morning of springtime—the 2d of April, 1865. The church bells of Richmond had rung out the summons to divine service.

At St. Paul's Episcopal church the usual large and aristocratic congregation listened attentively to the earnest discourse of the Rev. Dr. Minnigerode. Jefferson Davis, the chief executive of the southern Confederacy, occupied his pew in the middle of the central aisle, nearly opposite the now vacant one belonging to General Robert E. Lee.

An orderly in uniform entered the church somewhat precipitately, yet without disturbance, and delivered a telegram to Mr. Davis, who quietly rose and went out. The occurrence was noticed, but attracted no special attention among a congregation who during the four years past had grown accustomed to sudden alarms and untimely notice of threatened attacks. It was the day after the battle of Five Forks.

The dispatch was from General Lee, announcing his withdrawal from Petersburg and the consequent necessity for the immediate evacuation of Richmond. "Immediate evacuation" meant getting out by 8 o'clock that night. The news spread as only such news can. Women prayed, men wept and cursed and defied; children wondered, negroes rather enjoyed the excitement, especially after the issue of a proclamation to the effect that all who wished might come to the commissary department and get free provisions.

As for the soldiers, they had their orders from General Lee: Troops were to leave their lines everywhere at 8 o'clock that evening and take up the line of march for Amelia Court House, a small Virginia village on the Richmond and Danville railroad, some forty miles southwest of Richmond.

CAPTAIN R. F. SCOTT

His Expedition to South Pole Ends With Great Calamity

OVERWHELMED BY A BLIZZARD

Explorer Scott and Companions Perish In the Antarctic

WERE RETURNING FROM POLE

Had Reached Coveted Goal Thirty-Five Days After Amundsen's Discovery and Started on Return Journey to Base of Supplies When They Lost Their Way and Froze to Death —Expedition Was Well Equipped

London, Feb. 11.—Captain Robert F. Scott, the famous British Antarctic explorer, and four members of his South Pole expedition perished in the Antarctic after reaching the South Pole.

News of the tragedy was received here yesterday afternoon after the exploration ship Terra Nova, which had gone to McMurdo sound to bring the explorers back to civilization, had reported the death by wireless as she was passing Cape Saunders, New Zealand.

The Scott party had reached the South Pole on Jan. 18, 1912, and were on their way back to their base of supplies when they were overtaken by a blizzard and lost their way. All froze to death.

The victims, in addition to Captain Scott, were Dr. Wilson, one of the scientific staff; Captain Oates of the Inniskilling Dragoons, who was in charge of the dogs and ponies; Lieutenant Bowers of the Royal Indian Marines, and Lieutenant R. E. Evans, in charge of the equipment.

News of the death of Scott and his party created a tremendous sensation here. It was heard with genuine regret by scientific and naval circles, as Scott's exploration achievements in the Antarctic have been highly important. He was an officer in the royal navy.

Scott reached the South Pole thirty-five days after Captain Amundsen, its discoverer. Amundsen reached the point farthest south on Dec. 14, 1911, and remained there three days.

In his accounts he says the weather on the return trip from the pole to his base was excellent. He saw no trace of the Scott party. There are still Japanese and German expeditions in the Antarctic looking for the pole.

Details of the tragedy have not yet become known, but, according to previously announced plans Scott's main traveling party was to consist of sixteen men besides himself. Of these, squads of four men were to return at different stages of the journey, leaving Scott and four others to make the final dash for the pole.

This tended to confirm the dispatches, which said that five men had perished. It was indicated by the manner in which the news was made public that the survivors had recovered the bodies of the dead and that the full story of the disaster so far as it could be traced from external evidences was known to the living members of the expedition.

Further dispatches received late yesterday afternoon from Wellington, N. Z., confirmed the earlier report that Scott and his men were dead.

Captain Scott's party reached the exact point where Amundsen planted the Norwegian flag at the South Pole. They found there the hut constructed and left behind by Amundsen's party. These facts were recorded in the documents found on the bodies of the dead explorers when they were recovered.

The Scott party sailed from London on the Terra Nova on June 1, 1910, but Scott did not join the expedition until it reached New Zealand.

At the time the expedition left, Scott and his second in command, Lieutenant Evans, claimed to have the best equipped expedition which ever set out for the South Pole. Their supplies included a number of motor sledges.

Nearly all the members of the party, except the geologists, were members of the British navy. The royal navy "loaned" Dr. Levick to act as the medical officer for the Scott expedition. Scott was 150 miles from the South Pole when the Terra Nova left McMurdo sound.

Captain Scott was 45 years old and had served in the British navy with distinctions. His previous achievements in the Antarctic earned him many medals. In 1902 he led an expedition into the Ross sea and explored the great Antarctic ice barrier for 400 miles.

Mrs. Scott, now tragically the widow of the British Antarctic explorer, sailed on board the steamer Aorangi from San Francisco Feb. 5 for New Zealand, expecting to meet her husband there. The steamer's first port of call is Papeete, Tahiti. As there is no cable to that point, and as the ship will not touch at any cable point until she reaches the Antipodes, it is improbable that Mrs. Scott will learn of her husband's death until she reaches New Zealand.

Just before her departure, Mrs. Scott said in an interview that she had not heard from the captain in eighteen months but was confident he would reach New Zealand safely.

BEAUTIFUL SNOW BUT LIGHT FALL

February Continues Its Record of Variable Weather

EVERY DAY DIFFERENT

February is keeping up its record for variable weather. The conditions have hardly been the same two successive 24 hours for the past 11 days. The month opened with a light flurry of snow, followed by cold weather. Then came a heavy snow fall on the third followed by a cold snap, with a regular order of about zero weather served out every morning until the climax was reached Monday morning, when from several points, the mercury registered 6 to 8 below zero. On the fourth it was clear and warm, and this marked the turning point to the cold snap. The continued cold weather raised the hopes of the ice men as they saw visions of a crop, even if it was only ice of medium thickness. They made the most of their opportunities and gathered in the crystal squares today.

Last night it was fairly cold but this morning there was somewhat of a change, and a rise of fully 18 points in the thermometer. About 8 o'clock this morning the snow made its appearance. It was of the fine soft kind and did not make much of an impression. Up to noon the fall was not an inch deep and there was no wind so that it fell flat and silently and created little impression as it disturbed no one.

VERY ODD NAME RAISES DOUBT

In Minds of Officials at City Hall as to Child's Gender

Is little Bertey Ginsberg a boy or girl, officially? The child is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Ginsberg of 138 Sumer street, and came into the world Feb. 15, 1912.

Dr. John H. Ash the attending physician made a return of the birth to the city clerks office and stated the child was a female.

The young man who takes the birth census ,and places the sex officially for the city clerk's office reported that he had been told by the fond parents that the child was a boy.

The office is in a quandary as the name is spelled oddly and does not appear in any list of male or female names.

City Clerk, Emery L. Crane states he is anxious to complete his records and therefore he must call for another return of the birth man and doctor.

THE ICE HARVEST.

Both the Meadow Brook and Eaton Ice companies are preparing to commence cutting their ponds Wednesday morning unless today's storm should be such as to make it inadvisable to do so. At the Meadow Brook Co. pond this morning it was said that they had from 7 1-2 to 8 inches of good ice and one cutting of the pond on ice of this thickness would mean from 7,000 to 8,000 tons or about one third the capacity of their houses.

At the Eaton Ice Co. pond they had ice this morning of about the same thickness although it was said that in places the ice was 8 1-2 inches in depth. Their pond with ice this thickness would cut about 4,000 tons or about half the capacity of their houses.

The ice on both ponds is of exceptionally good quality as it is entirely free from foreign substance of any kind.

ALASKA PEOPLE THEIR HABITS

Interesting Lecture on This Northern Possession by Mrs. Baldwin

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Wollaston Methodist Church met in the vestry Monday evening, at 8 o'clock with Mrs. Wesley Wiggin, the president presiding. After the praise service with Miss Mary Cobb as pianist, devotions were conducted by Mrs. Charles Carter. In the absence of Mrs. J. A. Sedgwick, the secretary Miss Eurele was appointed secretary pro tem and read the minutes of the last meeting. Miss Helen Cobb sang "Not a Sparrow Falling" which was greatly enjoyed by all present.

Mrs. William F. Baldwin, a Missionary from Sinuk, Alaska was the speaker for the evening. Mrs. Baldwin is a very interesting and impressive speaker. She said in part: "It was not until 1885 that our Society did anything for the natives. A Home was needed. Our Society built the Jesse Lee Home and Orphanage. There are over forty in the Home. In 1906 our work was enlarged. Sinuk is 26 miles North West of Nome. There are from 150 to 200 people. The people live in log cabins. One room, with no chairs.

"The climate of Alaska is varied Some places it freezes very little. At other places we are frozen in. The natives dress in fur. The themometer runs as low as 42 degrees for a month and a half at a time Every third summer the weather is good. Other summers it is wet.

"The natives are not an affectionate people. They don't show that they like you. If you do for them they will like you. They are a lovable people. Their home life is ideal They live peaceably. They have but one room. They gather drift wood to build their homes and to burn. Some have bunks to sleep in. Some sleep on the floor. In the summer they live in their tents. The men go hunting. They hunt seal in the winter. They walk, four, five and six miles before they come to open water. They are gone all day. They cook the seal for food. They boil it all day. It looks like our corn beef. They sit round on the floor to eat. They have no knives or forks. The hardships of the people wear them out. They are short lived. In the spring time they hunt Walruses. In the summer they fish. They love children. They have religious services, prayer meetings and Sunday services. The missionary speaks through an interpreter. They do not understand English. They do not know Bible terms. We visit them in their homes, give them medicine.

"We have an Orphanage Home. There is an enrollment of 17. Five children are there permanently. We care for the children until they are 17 years old. We make home life for them real. The older boys 16 and 17 years of age come from places where they have no schools. They help in bringing water and doing outside work. We teach the girls to do house work. They are willing to do."

Mrs. Baldwin spoke also of the Reindeer compartments and the work being done. She said they had some 300 there. These were cared for by apprentices and those appointed for such work. Mrs. Baldwin held the closest attention of all present as she graphically told of her work. Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin return in June to take up the new work which is to be opened up in Nome.

SCHOOL HALL AT QUINCY POINT

Crowded School Population Demands More Room

AN ADDITION SUGGESTED

Following up the expressions of interested members of the Washington School Parents-Teachers Association several petitions are now being circulated calling for an assembly hall in the school building.

When the council was considering the plans for the building Councilman Joseph L. Whiton, then a resident of Ward Two, argued at length for a hall, but to no avail.

The opposition developed mainly from councilmen from Ward Six and when the Quincy school building plans and appropriations were being discussed the turn of events left both schools without a hall.

An appropriation was passed last year whereby Atlantic's needs have been taken care of and now the Point district have come forward for their share.

It is the sentiment of many residents however, that an addition with a hall should be made to the building because of the now overcrowded condition. Pupils are taught in cloak rooms and inconveniences have developed because of the growth in school population.

The petitions are being readily signed and will be presented to the proper authorities when a large number of names shall have been secured.

QUARRY FOREMAN BLOWN UP

Meets Instant Death While Tamping Sticks of Dynamite With Pole

Adams, Mass., Feb. 11.—Gregerio Decensi, 35, employed as a foreman in the quarry of the New England Lime company, while placing dynamite sticks preparatory to blasting rock, tamped the sticks of dynamite with a pole used for measuring purposes, causing an explosion which blew him thirty feet into the air and over the side of the shelf of the rock on which he was working to the bottom of the pit, 150 feet below. He was dead when picked up.

Three men who were standing directly behind Decensi were blown against the side of the ledge, sustaining cuts about the face. Their injuries are not serious.

WHY HEAD IS LOWERED

GENERALLY THE ACCOMPANIMENT OF DEEP THOUGHT.

However, One May Take His Choice of Various Scientific Reasons Assigned for This Practically Universal Habit.

It is a regular part of the education of a Mussulman to learn how to balance his head in order to aid his memory, an exchange says. Although the natives of other countries do not make this a matter of training, it is noticeable that the habit of bowing the head when in deep thought is customary with all humans, even when they do not know why they do it.

Closing the eyes can readily be explained by the desire to shut out the sight of objects that might otherwise confuse the brain activities, but the simple act of bending the neck seems to have special significance whether the eyes are closed or not.

Lessening one blood supply and increasing another appears to bring into contact and use an impression on the brain which has not been used frequently or not for a long time.

The innumerable individual mannerisms count for but little, for the habit of contracting the jugulars and carotids and then letting loose the whirlpool seems to be universal and important. The physicians cannot tell us why, for the actual workings of man's brains are still a mystery to a large extent, but men do contract the arteries mentioned and loosen the others instinctively in an effort at concentrated thought.

Bowing the head to conceal thought is also common, although we know of no country where that is a part of one's education. This is doubtless due to a desire not to look a person directly in the eye.

The honest man, searching his brain for truth, thus makes the same obeisance to his instinct as the clever rascal seeking to hide a trick too dangerous for human observation.

Ask the ordinary cheat his price for produce and almost invariably he makes the sign of humility. His head drops forward and frequently his eyelids follow. Intelligent rogues, who do not wish to be found out, avoid thinking of their crimes in the presence of certain people. Instead, they endeavor to concentrate their thoughts upon something distant from the facts, as if they feared a too plain mental picture might be observed by other than their own individual egos.

This fear may be justified in that experience which we all have at some time when a person ransacking his memory for a forgotten thing hears it spoken of by one who has made no effort to think it up, but has merely read it from the brain of the thinker before the thinker himself has put it into words.

Car Men Had Business Instinct.

A trolley car was lost in one of our big western cities for a whole afternoon. It belonged on one of the short runs in the suburbs and had been put in care of an entirely new, but businesslike motorman and conductor.

All went well until noon. After that nothing could be heard of the car. Telephone calls to the car barns revealed nothing, as did frantic calls from the main office to points along the car's course.

In the evening, however, the smiling motorman and conductor pulled the car into its proper place.

"Where in the world have you been all afternoon with that car?" yelled the angry transportation manager.

"Well, we ran all morning to Brook street, but business was poor, so we concluded to go out after more trade, and we got it, too. We went over to the business street that runs through the center of town, and had all we could do all afternoon."—National Monthly.

Shakespeare in the Bible?

And now King James' version of the Bible is to be dragged by the heels into the Bacon-Shakespeare controversy. Sir Edward Durning-Lawrence is doing the lugging in of the scriptures into this vexed controversy. He says in the edition of 1611 we have the "horned sheep," the "P. A. Cornuto," we have "shake a lance at ignorance," we have the peacock with three feathers in his tail after the fashion of the prince of Wales. We have the word "shake" and "spear" in the same place and in the same psalm in the Geneva Bible issued the year before Bacon was born. "Shake" was the forty-sixth word, and "spear" only two further down in the Great Bible published more than a score of years before, and therefore the coincidence in the version of 1611 does not seem to have so much significance.

Wedding Ends Forty Years' Tiff.

Forty years ago George R. Collingsworth, a wealthy manufacturer of New York, sixty-five years old, and Mrs. Zelia S. Van Spoorch, sixty-three years old, were sweethearts in Yonkers. The day for their wedding had been chosen and then a quarrel about something that both have kept a secret all these years, but which both say was trivial, estranged them. They have just been married. Both had been married since their engagement was broken 40 years ago.

Railway on China's Great Wall.

A street railway is projected in Peking, China, which is to run on the top of the great wall surrounding Peking.

BASKET BALL.

Quincy A. A. and the St. Mary's play in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, Thursday evening in the Greater Boston Basket Ball League. Boyle who has been out of the game because of injuries received will probably appear. "Cy" O'Rourke, the latest acquisition will play and beyond doubt will show up as well as in the last three games. "Cy" is a brother of Joe, is tall and slim and has the stamina necessary to a good athlete. Of a willing nature he can wrestle with the smile that won't come off and is a dangerous man to leave uncovered because of his eagle eye.

Daniel Duggan, well known throughout the state is in the game with Quincy A. A. despite the rumors to the contrary. Some of the fans persist in saying that he has signed up with the Cunningham gym aggregation. The rumor must have originated through some misunderstanding as "Dan's" loyalty to the Quincy A. A. champs of last year, which title he was of great assistance in securing, has never been questioned. He is at present living at East Milton, near the gym, but his choice is the champs.

Billie Manning, after a year away from all athletics because of appendicitis blossoms out with a league record for individuals scoring and helps his team mates roll up the largest score ever made in the Greater Boston league.

Frank Harmon, small of stature but quick as lightning has displayed great agility as an offensive player this season, and while few baskets are to his credit, but few have been scored by his opponent. Frank likes to think of last season's games when he was not as fast as now and how he used to ask "Is my game improving?" He has yet to receive a negative answer.

"Charlie" Hebert a base ball player of note, is again in the basket ball game and is making good. He has been showing consistent style in his forwards positions and has shot some of the most difficult baskets ever made in the league.

The Chapman brothers, "Mil" and "Bootus" are enacting a sketch entitled "How it is done" in every game. Both are of the gentle variety until imposed upon and then their basket ball dignity asserts itself.

Scollard of Braintree high, a new face on the local court, has shown stellar qualities so far. He is tall, broad shouldered and has a good eye, a heap of courage and is aggressive to the point where it tells on the other fellow without being abusive. He fills the centre position in an O. K. manner.

"Sid" Duggan is no larger this year than last but that has not affected his game any. To contribute largely to the score is "Sid's" weak point and he shows his weakness in every game by netting his share.

"Joe" O'Rourke, while not in the best of condition has been playing a winning game. He was obliged to retire after a fall received a few weeks ago but will play Thursday evening unless something turns up.

AGAINST ROCKLAND.

This afternoon the basket ball team of the Quincy high are playing at Rockland. Their opponents, one of the best teams on the schedule. It was originally planned to play with Lynn but Rockland being the stronger was given the preference. Friday afternoon they will play the second game of the season at Wellesley with the Wellesley High school. Quincy was defeated here by a small margin, the visitors showing speed and class in passing and shooting. Coach LaRose expects the local team to win since the gradual development has been evident in all players.

PATTERN MEN WON BIG GAME

In Which High Scores Were the Rule Right Through

BOWLING GOSSIP

Monday night was quiet in bowling circles as far as league rolloffs go. In the Fore River league a match between the Pattern Makers and the Machine Gallery produced some large scores. The former won 3 to 1.

Duran of the winners made 135 and secured a total of 317.

Williams, his teammate rolled 130 and got a total of 301. Baker was high man for the losers, rolling 113 for best single and totaling 280.

Sprenkle rolling with the Machine Gallery secured 104. The strings of the other bowlers averaged over 85.

FAT MEN'S CLUB.

The Fat Mens Club are attempting to arrange a series of bowling matches at the Coliseum alleys, and Manager Forbes is very desirous of having them meet in Quincy. President Quinby of the club weighs over 330 pounds. He has played base ball and has been known to bowl, but it is said that his satisfaction is complete when he is in the audience watching others perform.

The other members also tip the beam at over 300. Some of them are large for their size and some of them are just large. The proportions vary from the tall square built man to the man with the abdominal protuberance that makes it hard to keep his coat buttoned.

The members can, they believe make a record at the alleys, but they neglect saying whether they refer to bowling or heavy crowds.

The results of a conference on the matter will be known within a few days.

FAMILIES OF BOWLERS.

Paul Poehler, world's record holder in candle pins, isn't the only star performer in his family. Mrs. Georgine Poehler McLellan, a sister of the famous Paul, is the popular captain of the Everett girls bowling team and her mystifying "curved ball" on the alleys can play havoc with the pins down at the other end. Toppling over 100 of them in a game is a common feat for her and that is more than some of her male friends can do.

Mrs. Paul Poehler, wife of the player, is the captain of the all-star Quincy girls' team, which was beaten 3 points out of 4 last week on the Everett alleys by the local girls' team.

This match bowling series between Everett and Quincy now stands a match apiece. Everett was trounced at Quincy at their first meeting and thereupon administered a similar beating when they entertained their rivals at the Broadway alleys in Everett Tuesday night. The deciding game will be rolled off some night this week, probably in Everett.

The Everett girls are head over heels in love with the sport and play the game for all it is worth, being frequent visitors at the local alleys. "We would rather roll than eat," at least so declared Miss Beatrice Moorhouse, who apparently expressed the sentiment of the other girls. The Everett girls are out with a challange to meet any girls' team in the state.

The Everett team includes chums of Mrs. Poehler McLellan. The five usually chosen to roll outsiders are Miss Margery McLellan, Mrs. William Ferguson, wife of Alderman William Ferguson the youngest man ever to reach the upper branch of the local city government; Miss Beatrice Moorhouse, Miss W. Hopps and the captain, Mrs. McLellan.

GREAT ECONOMIC PROBLEM

(Special to the Ledger.)

As a representative of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Frank F. Crane, of Quincy, was before the committee on railroads at the State House Tuesday in advocacy of a bill which allows an appropriation of $500,000 and the appointment of a commission to superintend the disbursement thereof in development of the Harbor of Fall River. Mr. Crane told the committee that a study had been made of the possibility of establishing an inland water way from Buffalo to Boston via of Fall River. He charged that Massachusetts is not alive to her immense possibilities in the way of water traffic and ascribed that condition as the reason why the western part of the United States recently obtained an appropriation of more than $240,000,000 for river development while this state gets little or nothing from the government.

MRS. TORREY DEAD AGED 92

Braintree's Oldest Resident Passed Away Tuesday

Mrs. Lucinda Torrey, aged 92 years probably the oldest resident of Braintree, died Tuesday night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John E. Arnold, 1024 Washington street, Braintree.

She was the widow of Dr. Noah Torrey, for many years a member of the School Committee, for whom a South Braintree school building was named.

Mrs. Torrey was a native of Braintree and always lived there. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Thayer, who celebrated their 75th wedding anniversary about 18 years ago. She is survived by three children, Mrs. J. E. Arnold, N. Gleason Torrey and W. Austin Torrey, the latter being postmaster at South Braintree. A sister, Miss Susan Jane Thayer of South Braintree and a brother, Edward C .Thayer of Hanover, also survive her.

BOSTON OPPOSES NEW BRIDGE OVER NEPONSET RIVER ON COST

President Hamilton of Board of Trade Pointed to It as Menace to Traffic

Congestion Story of Engineer Emerson Soon Exploded

(Special to the Ledger)

There was the same old question of dividing the cost before the committee on roads and bridges at the State House on the Neponset bridge and also the argument as to whether a new bridge is needed. All in all, it was merely a repetition of last years hearing except for a suggestion of Representative Leslie. He said that while he favored a new bridge being built, he would much rather the committee would wait until it could obtain some information from the Metropolitan Park Commission as to whether the commission is going to build a bridge across the Neponset to connect the Quincy Shore drive with Boston. If they are going to do so, then Representive Leslie said the matter of making a new bridge in place of the old one might be made to serve both projects.

Rep. Leslie said that he thought the mayor of Boston is showing considerable partiality in favoring the building of bridges to the north of Boston but frowning on all propositions for new bridges to the south of that city.

That the present structure is not a bridge but a very poor substitute for a bridge, was the statement of John L. Hamilton of the Quincy board of trade. "The thing which now serves as a bridge, is a menace to the traffic" said Mr. Hamilton.

Representatives Buckley and Benson of Neponset and Sullivan of Quincy spoke in favor and all the speakers emphasized the poor accomodations now afforded the ever increasing traffic between Boston an dall the towns to the south.

Judge Joseph J. Corbett, corporation counsel for the city of Boston urged the committee not to report favorably on the matter.

John A. Sullivan, of the Boston Finance Commissioners and Guy Emerson, engineer for that commission opposed the bill. The latter said that Boston now maintains the draw bridge in the old bridge at a cost of $1500 and it would cost five times that to maintain a draw such as the new bridge bill contemplates. Mr. Emerson attempted to show that the congestion of trafic on the bridge is caused by electric cars being stalled at the bridge while shifting passengers. It was pointed out, that the cars that cause any congestion would not do so if there were accommodations for double tracks on the birdge, so Mr. Emersons chief argument fell flat.

J. Q. A. Field, of Quincy opposed the bill on the ground that a new bridge is not a necessity.

A. L. Whitman of the Quincy board of trade favored but said that Plymouth county should be made to pay a goodly share of new bridge costs because fully a third of the traffic that crosses the bridge comes from that county. The committe etook the amtter under advisement .

—The superintendent of the workhouse at St. Louis objects to having the United States flag used at that institution washed, declaring such treatment a desecration, which is never thought of at regular army posts Some one has suggested that as the atmosphere of St. Louis is much more smoky than that of the average army post, perhaps it is the city that needs washing instead of the flag. How would the vacuum cleaner do as a compromise?—Milford Gazette.

STONE'S BILL IS NOT LEGAL

Attorney General Reports Adversely on Mayor's Highway Measure

(Special to the Ledger.)

Attorney General Swift informed the committee on cities that the bill by which Mayor Eugene R. Stone seeks to prohibit the laying out of streets in Quincy without the approval of the mayor would be unconstitutional legislation. This is the matter over which City Solicitor McAnarney and the committe on cities had the argument recently. All of the cities of the Comomnwealth have the same problem and the committee would like to have reported a bill built on the lines Mayor Stone suggested.

AVE MARIA LED IN K.C. TOURNEY

Landed Place By Good Playing in Closing Round

The last meet in the Knights of Columbus tournament took place at the rooms of the Quincy Council Tuesday evening. Ave Maria beat the Quincy Council and won the first place in the league. The schedule was made up for four councils but Braintree dropped out and Weymouth Ave Maria and Quincy filled the dates.

Throughout the playoffs the enthusiasm has been running high. Individuals have been chosen by the gallery as being superior in their respective lines but the titles of champ have not been held long.

The only man really entitled to the title of champ is Napoleon Grigon who is one of the strongest checker players in this city and greater Boston.

James E. Parker who has been one of Quincy supports in a two man whist team was unable to be present being confined to his home on Upland road with pneumonia.

The final score is as follows:

|---|---|
| Ave Maria Council, | 20 points. |
| Weymouth Council | 12 points |
| Quincy Council | 10 points |

Tuesday evening the play was close and exciting. In pool Edward Desmond of Ave Maria beat Joseph Keating, 50 to 35 and John J. Buckley of Ave Maria beat Al Thompson, 50 to 46.

In whist John J. King and John Minihan lost to Keating and Ford of Quincy, 38 to 10. McDermott and Bliss of Quincy beat McGilvray and Reinhalter 48 to 26 and John and William Mahon of Quincy beat Thomas J. Shortle and James White 2 to 0.

In cribbage O'Dowd and J. McDonald beat Edward J. Parker and Russell Sullivan, 5 to 4, and in checkers Napoleon Grignon of Ave Maria beat Edward Duran, 3 to 0.

Refreshments were served and an entertainment enjoyed by a large number of visiting Knights.

HAD APPENDICITIS.

Ernest Wilding, 26 Baxter street was operated upon for appendicitis at the Quincy hospital, Tuesday. He was admitted Monday and is reported doing well. Wilding is employed as a clerk at the Fore River yard and is popular in the forge department.

—Only a year ago California was indignant at a candid fruit-grower who expressed doubts as to whether a good deal of the land now given to oranges and lemons should not be planted to something else because of the risk of frost. But the present year, though it comes to vindidcate his pessimism, is not a fair test because conditions are abnormal everywhere. For two years the world has been passing through a strange weather cycle, and the end is not yet.

LINCOLN'S MEMORY HONORED BY ADULTS AND SCHOOL CHILDREN

Exercises Appropriate to His Birthday Held in Every School of the City

All Unite in Tribute to That Wonderful Figure in American History

Today marks the 104th birthday of Abraham Lincoln, the martyred president of the United States, who after freeing the slaves, and bringing the nation out of a conflict the like of which the world had never witnessed before had hardly tasted the fruits of his great victories when he was shot down at the hands of an assassin. It was undoubtedly through the intervention of a guiding Providence who marks the destinies of individuals as well as nations, that he was not cut off before he had rounded out the splendid achievements and great historical events of the country, which will ever be connected with his name.

In many states of the Union the day is a holiday. While not officially designated as such in this state, yet every one pays honor to his memory. The patriotic societies held exercises and special programs appropriate to the day will be presented in all the schools. This plan will be carried out in Quincy. The schools with halls will hold exercises on a large scale in the assembly hall. In the other schools the program will be less elaborate and held in each room.

The Cranch and Adams school will hold short exercises and on Feb. 21 will hold monster exercises on both Lincoln and Washington.

JUNIOR CLASS SECRETARY

Margaret Magee to Succeed Dorothy Edwards Who is Leaving School

A meeting of the Junior Class of the Quincy High school was held Tuesday and Miss Margaret Magee was chosen secretary to fill the vacancy caused by Miss Dorothy Edwards resignation. Miss Edwards will not continue as a high school pupil.

Miss Magee received 37 votes. Miss Florence Crowell who was also a candidate received 17 and Miss Cathrine Reed received six.

Miss Magee is one of the most popular members of the class and while the pupils regretted accepting the resignation of Miss Edwards they feel they have chosen a most competent young lady as her successor.

THE HOMELESS AND THE TRAMP

Dual Subjects of Much Moment to Social Workers

THE WAYFARERS LODGE

"The homeless and the tramp" formed the subject of a very interesting lecture delivered by George L. Warren of the Associated Charities before the Wollaston Unitarian club Tuesday evening.Mr. Warren has spent much time the last five years in social work among the tramps and has slept in many of the very cheap lodging houses. His stories of the latter would have been amusing if they had not been pathetic.

"The public," said the speaker, "has always attempted to provide for the poor. Private organizations have sprung up and the Associated Charities is attempting to get all organizations working together in order to corelate their action.

"When I started five years ago no one knew about the homeless man. An effort has been made to find out something about him and see what can be done for him. Mr. Warren told of the Wayfarers Lodge, a wood yard where tramps may cut wood for their meals and lodging.

A typical cheap lodging house, with bunks at 10 cents of which there were 146 in one room with only one narrow window open four inches for ventillation, was described. Drunkenness and evidence of tubercular afflictions prevailed. The bed coverings were beyond description. In New York and Chicago conditions are a great deal worse.

"The real tramp" said the speaker, "is always travelling from one city to another for no special reason. There are various kinds of tramps. One of the lower grades is the 'moocher' who gets his living out of waste barrels and sleeps anywhere. He is the fellow that wears two undershirts and three vests. When one gets dirty he throws it away and wears two until he gets another one.

"The 'tomato can bag' is even lower than the 'moocher.' From these there are grades all the way up. Some are pretty clever. They pride

PITCHED INTO TICKET AGENT

When Latter Objected to Mitchell Taking Newsies Pennies

A young man giving his name as Robert Mitchell was arrested at the Quincy depot shortly before 8 o'clock this morning by Officer Phillips charged with larceny and assault on the ticket agent, William H. Walker. According to the story of the ticket agent in looking out of his office he saw Mitchell helping himself to the pennies that had been placed on the news stand by people who had taken papers. He went out to stop the fellow who turned on the ticket agent and made an assault on him. There was quite a rough and tumble scrap until Officer Phillips took Mitchell in charge. There was another young man mixed up in the assault whose name is said to be Hayden ubt he succeeded in getting away before the officer arrived.

It seems that the news agent at the depot is not always near his stand and it has become a general custom for people desiring papers to help themselves leaving the money on the pile of papers. It was this money that the ticket agent detected Mitchell taking.

Mitchell was called in court this morning and his case continued until Thursday morning.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

It is a case of "now you see and now you do not see" in the Mexican situation at the present time.

If President Wilson gets through one half he has planned for the special session of congress there will be a remarkable curtailment of long and needless speechifying.

Mr. Underwood arises to ask if the child christened Oscar Underwood Kidd in his honor, will be greeted with the poular phrase, "O. U. Kidd?"

Congressman James M. Curley is making an energetic fight for more battleships. "Jim" always was a hustler.

Japan is having a share of internal troubles. Does that mean the people have a sneaking idea of following in the wake of China.

The firemen will be performing a humane act if they avert the proposed strike so long that it will not be a necessity to in the long run.

Lincoln's memory is as fresh in the hearts of a grateful people as it was more than 50 years ago.

The strangest part of the New York police disclosures are the non-chalance with which they are looked upon by citizens, as though the whole thing was a matter of course and in keeping with the existing conditions and part of the municipal program.

Mr. Wilson's brother is causing some worry among the party leaders at the present time as he will persist in being a candidate for office at the hands of the senate.

It has become a habit for the New York grand jury to indict a few policemen every morning.

Dr. Friedmann presists in his claim that he has produced a cure for tuberculosis. If he has he has performed a service to humanity which is beyond measure.

With Kaiser Williams putting more trust in Divine Providence there may be a let up in the armament race now on between Germany and England.

The president must have had some sentiment towards smokers who made cigars when he signed the bill permitting them to smoke 21 of their own make without paying a tax.

OVERCROWDED SCHOOL.

The people of Quincy Point have entered into a movement to have a hall installed at the Washington school. They claim that this hall should have been a part of the original school building plans, but as they were omitted at the time, an effort will be made to remedy this present lacking.

On top of this comes the report that the Washington school is overcrowded, that recitations are conducted in the cloak rooms and other places not intended for such school work and it is pointed out that if a hall had been added to the original plans, much inconvenience which now exists would not be in evidence.

Councilman Joseph L. Whiton then a resident of Ward Two advocated the hall as part of the school plan, but his suggestions were not carried out. He evidently looked far enough ahead to see the necessity. It is claimed that members of the Council from Ward Six, were opposed to the hall in the Washington school. Be that as it may, when the Quincy school was built in Ward Six the hall portion was left out of consideration. It is claimed that if the plans as originally drawn had the addition of the hall to them, this extra construction would have added but $2,500 to the original cost of the building. Finally conditions reached such a stage that it was deemed necessary to add a hall to the Quincy school. This later addition and improvement cost $7000. Somewhat of a difference between that sum and $2,500. Another indication that some one did not look far enough ahead.

The Quincy Point people contend that what is needed to the Washington school now is not only a hall, but an addition which will include a hall. This they claim is rendered necessary to accommodate the increased school population in that section of the city. Petitions are being circulated and as soon as perfected will be submitted to the proper authorities for consideration.

The claim that there is a lack of accommodation at the school to meet the school population is centainly a subject which demands immediate attention and a remedy should be applied as speedily as possible.

THE PRESIDENT'S DILEMMA.

The judicial mind of President Taft will never have better opportunities for exercising that desirable condition than in his treatment of the present immigration bill which is now before him. The president has been importuned to vetoe the bill in its present stage as it is hurtful and in a way pernicious. The president has not revealed to any one just what his attitude will be in dealing with the measure. He is in a position where he can exercise his personal judgment without fear of being misunderstood. Whatever his position it is hardly conceivable that any one can at this stage accuse the president of playing politics. Those who are closest to him in official life claim that they do not know his sentiments with regard to the bill. That the president is seeking enlightenment is quite evident from the inquiries he has made. The bill embraces a restriction on immigration. It is not believed that the president hardly considers that a restriction of immigration is a good thing. If that is his mind then a vetoe of the bill may be expected with possible suggestions which may be carried out so that he may still have a chance to act upon the measure before retiring from office.

LACKING PATRIOTISM.

Undoubtedly it is due wholly to thoughtlessness, but there should ever be a true sense of nearness or reverence whenever the Stars and Stripes are displayed and especially at a large assembly. Recently a veteran's orchestra performed in this city, the closing number being the "Star Spangled Banner." As the inspiring strains of the most delightful music to American ears reverberated through the building an immense flag was dropped. It should have been the signal for an outburst of patriotic zeal. In some instances even passing notice was hardly accorded the flag. The eagerness of the average American audience to get beyond the portals of a theatre during the progress of the last number was as much in evidence on those occasions as if the act was a mere common place one with nothing of a stirring or inspiring character. Many of the audience arose, adjusted their hats and wraps and were moving towards the street while the flag was displayed and the music going on. Several of those who have a deeper sentiment and feeling for the flag and the national air were outspoken in their condemnation of this lack of respect to the flag and the song.

SISTER OF POPE PIUS DIES OF PARALYSIS

Rosa Sarto Passes Away In Rome at the Age of 77

Rome, Feb. 12.—The pope's sister, Rosa Sarto, died in Rome of paralysis. She was 77 years of age and had been ill for some days. Pope Pius could not leave the Vatican to see her, but sent a special representative to administer the last rites.

When Cardinal Sarto was chosen pope, ten years ago, both his sisters moved to Rome to be as near as possible to their brother, for whom they always entertained the deepest affection. They bore a striking facial resemblance to the pope, as does also their elder brother, who is a post-office official in a country town near Rome.

Despite the exalted office held by their brother neither the sisters of Pius nor his brother have departed in the least from the simple religious lives to which they were always accustomed.

NEW SYSTEM OF METER READING

Now Being Inaugurated By the Gas Company

MEANS ADVANCEMENT

Changes of any kind in the routine work of a large undertaking are not easy to make in any event, involving as they do a considerable expense, disturbance of the routine as in the presence instance with the change in the system of meter reading by the Citizens Gas Light Co. In this case it is necessary to notify the customers of the company in advance of the changes proposed that they may be fully informed of the character and extent of the changes. For this reason it will be fully understood why the Gas Co. is doing its best to prepare its many consumers for the change that is to go into effect March 1. It will seem a little odd at first for customers to get their statemennt of gas used at other than the first of the month but once the system is in full working order, which will be in about six weeks it will be seen how the new system will be advantageous to all parties. Not the least of these advantages is the fact that the man who reads your meter this month will be the man who a month hence will call for the same purpose. In this way the consumer becomes acquainted with the official representative of the company and will feel sure that any complaints, or suggestions they may make for the betterment of the service will find their way to the office of the company and be investigated, and if found to be as thought adopted.

Comparative Digestibility of Food

Made with different Baking Powders

From a Series of Elaborate Chemical Tests:

An equal quantity of bread (biscuit) was made with each of three different kinds of baking powder—cream of tartar, phosphate, and alum—and submitted separately to the action of the digestive fluid, each for the same length of time.

The relative percentage of the food digested is shown as follows:

100 Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with phosphate powder:
68¼ Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with alum powder:
67¾ Per Cent. Digested

These tests, which are absolutely reliable and unprejudiced, make plain a fact of great importance to everyone: Food raised with Royal, a cream of tartar Baking Powder, is shown to be entirely digestible, while the alum and phosphate powders are found to largely retard the digestion of the food made from them.

Undigested food is not only wasted food, but it is the source of very many bodily ailments.

MORE CHANGES IN WEATHER

Variety the Spice of the February Distribution

Although but 12 days of the shortest month of the year has passed it has produced every gamut in the whirligig of weather and is no doubt planning innovations for the balance of the month. Each day of the dozen has produced a different element or a combination of different elements. The cold snap gave way to rain and snow, Tuesday, with a clearing at night, and moonlight with a tempest of wind during the late hours of the night and early hours of the morning which made houses rock on their foundations. Another cold wave set in and this morning the highways were well nigh impassable with the glossy surfaces of frozen snow and ice. Those who were forced to be abroad early found the travelling most treacherous. Horses had to be pretty sharp to get along wtih any degree of safety. Pedestrians sought the middle of the road, but this movement afforded them little relief. The arrival of the sand men relieved the situation somewhat and the noon day sun, softened the frozen covering and there was less danger in travelling.

STEEL LATE IN ARRIVING

Caused Hold-Up of the Work on the Adams School

RELIEF IN SIGHT

The delay in work on the new Adams school building which has been suspended for some weeks started inquiry as to cause. Commissioner Tupper when asked about the delay stated that it was due to the non arrival of the steel frame work ofthe building. This was ordered early enough so that under ordinary circumstances it would have arrived so that the work could have gone along without a hitch This steel was ordered from the firm who it appears had the contract for the steel for the large dock being built in Boston which caused some delay in forwarding the material for the Quincy job. Commissioner Tupper said this morning that he had just received a telegram from the company stating that steel had been shipped and that it should be in Quincy not later than Saturday.

She also spoke of the widowed mothers pension bill.

An announcement received with loud hand-clapping was made by Mrs. Chandler W. Smith of the Philanthropy committee. She said her committee had received a letter announcing the gift of $120 in memory of Mrs. John Shaw, from Mrs. Aline Delano. Mrs. John W. Sanborn and Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann, to be used for a club home for Quincy young women. The money was raised by a Russian afternoon recently held at Mrs. Pfaffmanns.

The Program committee announced that the dramatics had to be given up April 8 but in their place Leland Powers would read "Lord Cholmondeley."

The standing committees for next year are to remain the same with the exception of the Hospitality and Reception, which will be combined.

Information having come to the executive board that the building of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co., was to be moved across Coddington street side of the new court house, members were asked to protest as it would be detrimental to civic beauty. A protest had been drafted by the Board which was endorsed by the club.

Miss Almira Simmons put in a plea for a forestry committee in the club, which will be discussed by the Board later, as it is an important work.

The musical program which preceded the lecture was a suite by MacDowell for the piano the selections, A Haunted Forest, Summer lydll, Shepherdess Song and Forest Spirits, being beautifully interpreted by Mrs. Walter P. Emery and Mrs. Turtelot, receiving frequent encores.

Mrs. Murray in introducing the speaker announced that her committee had arranged to have a speaker along the line of Visiting Nursing but that Rev. W. H. VanAllen was unable to come and the committee had been fortunate in securing Rev. Alan A. Stockdale who would lecture on the "Message of James Whitcomb Riley."

Dr. Stockdale paid a tribute to the nurses for their good work. Before giving the message of the Hoosier poet he thought there would be a better appreciation if he told something of the man.

In the old days of the log cabin back in Indiana the latchstring hung out the inmates being glad to welcome any guest that chose to come. If by chance the latchstring was not out and the guest knocked for entrance the response was Whose there? This spoken rapidly or carelessly had gradually become Hoosier hence the term as applied now to the native of Indiana.

As a boy young Riley did not care for schooling being a dreamer. As a young man he traveled with a patent medicine man and saw many odd characters in the groups about the man when he lectured and sold his medicine. When he began to write poetry he had the usual luck of most poets in having them returned.

It was after he had submitted some of his poems to Longfellow who appreciated them that the public began to know him. This appreciation on the part of Longfellow probably made Riley the friend and help he has always been to other young writers. Although he never married he was wonderfully sympathetic and a father to all children. His intimacy with Bill Nye undoubtedly had an influence on him.

What is the message of this Hoosier poet in child life in poetry? Riley's child is country bred, western country bred, under school age, for Riley never cared to go to school. His is a natural child. Dr. Stockdale read "Little Billy and his base drum" "Making faces," and "Fool Youngs'uns," showing by his interpretation how Riley really loved and understood children. The little going to bed song was a gem, also the "Elf child." Riley had the power that knows how to put the real child into poetry.

Riley's message was to interpret nature after he saw it, to put it into words that others might see, as told in "South Wind and the Sun," the "Approach of a Shower" and "Knee Deep in June" one of the laziest bits of poetry ever written. People in this world of life need the people who have the time to dream and need the poetry of life.

Riley's is a message of hospitality. When the latchstring was out and all gathered about the big fireplace one had to be good natured or freeze as there was no other place to go. In our heated house when we have a grouch we can go to our rooms and get over it. The dialect poem "Griggsby Station" was a fine illustration of country and city living.

Riley finds the heart and soul of things, his characters have hearts—sincerity is the fine art of living.

Loud and prolonged applause at the close of Mr. Stockdale's lecture testified to the appreciation and enjoyment of his "message from James Whitcomb Riley" and surely no poet ever had a more sympathetic interpreter..

FOR EDUCATIONAL INQUIRY AND STUDY

Carnegie Adds $1,250,000 to His Foundation Fund

New York, Feb. 12.—Andrew Carnegie presented $1,250,000 in 4 percent bonds to the Carnegie foundation, to be devoted to the endowment of a "division of educational inquiry and study."

The gift makes permanent provision, it was announced, for studies hitherto conducted by the foundation out of its general funds, such as the recently completed studies on medical education. The publicity given to these studies resulted in the closing down of many poorly-equipped medical schools.

The trustees of the foundation plan to make first use of the additional funds in taking up at once "studies upon legal education and its relation to the supply of lawyers and the cost of legal process."

By Scott's Message When He Realized Farty Was Doomed

HIS APPEAL WILL BE HEEDED

Moving and Pathetic Utterance Asks England to See That Those Who Are Dependent Upon Men Whose Lives Were Lost Are Properly Provided For

London, Feb. 12.—Grief and pride in the simple narrative of high courage, endurance and sacrifice, given in Captain Robert F. Scott's farewell message to the world, written with the knowledge that he was doomed to death with his companions in the Antarctic ice and snow, strive for dominance in the feelings of the British public.

The tragedy of Scott's Antarctic expedition was referred to in the house of commons by Premier Asquith. Speaking with evident emotion he said:

"We all at this moment are under the deep impression created by the reading of the last message to the world left by Captain Scott, one of the most moving and pathetic utterances in the annals of discovery. It is the message of a brave, enduring man in the face of the most tragic end to a career of self-sacrifice and devotion to the service of his country. We can only say that his last appeal will not fall on deaf ears."

Mr. Asquith's statement indicates that the British government will take care of the dependents of the dead members of the expedition. Otherwise a Mansion House fund will be opened. Of the five explorers who perished, Captain Scott, Dr. Edward A. Wilson and Petty Officer Evans were married. Captain L. E. G. Oates and Lieutenant H. R. Bowers were single.

A number of details of the disaster in which Scott and four of his men perished in the Antarctic are brought here in special dispatches. Oates evidently set out from the tent in which the four men had all but succumbed to starvation and exhaustion to face death alone in the blizzard which overwhelmed them.

After a brave struggle for weeks, with his hands frost-bitten, Oates declared to his companions that he was going to set out in the storm and didn't know when he would come back. He left the tent and he was never seen again. The others later tried to push on, but were forced into camp again March 21, after nine days' struggle in the blizzard. Food and fuel were both exhausted.

According to the special dispatches the Terra Nova relief party, which found the bodies, read a simple burial ritual over them. A cairn was erected over the bodies. The relief party then set out in search of the body of Oates, but they discovered no trace of it.

It was with great difficulty that the party brought back all of the records, including Amundsen's letter to the king of Norway, and a large quantity of geological specimens. Scott's last message to the public is believed to have been written only four days before death overtook the party.

Probably realizing that his party was doomed, Scott entered in his diary on the 25th of March "a message to the public." In this he declared that the disaster was not due to faulty organization but to misfortunes. He said nobody in the world could expect to successfully encounter such temperatures and storms as they had met on the barrier, which so retarded their progress.

When they arrived within eleven miles of One Ton depot they only had fuel for one hot meal and food for two days.

The closing words of Scott's epic have had an electrical effect. They were: "Had we lived I should have had a tale to tell of the hardihood, the endurance and the courage of my companions which would have stirred the heart of every Englishman. These rough notes and our dead bodies must tell the tale, but surely, surely a great and rich country like ours will see that those who are dependent upon us are properly provided for."

Captain Scott's interest in the welfare of his men was emphasized by practically the last business he transacted before he left to join the expedition in New Zealand. This was the sale of his story. He declined to make any private profit from the transaction and decided that the total receipts should go to increase the financial reward of the men who had undertaken to share with him the dangers of the Antarctic region. It was therefore arranged that all sums paid by newspapers throughout the world for the story of the adventure should be distributed among the members of the crew as a surprise bonus on their return to England.

A memorial service for Scott and his companions is to be held in St. Paul's cathedral on Friday. Many flags in all parts of London are flying at half-mast. Telegrams from all parts record the profound regret mingled with pride felt throughout the British empire.

President Madero, His Wife, and General Diaz

ARTILLERY IN STREET BATTLE

Scene Never Before Witnessed on the Western Continent

BLOOD RUNS IN MEXICO CITY

Number of Dead Will Reach Hundreds —Neither Side Gains Advantage After Fight Lasting Seven Hours—Lives of Non-Combatants In Jeopardy—Regulars Joining Diaz

Mexico City, Feb. 12.—The federals and rebels fought a seven-hour drawn battle with heavy artillery in the heart of the city yesterday. When darkness put an end to the fighting neither side appeared to have gained any marked advantage.

Estimates of the casualties run as high as 1000, although accurate information cannot be obtained at this time. The dead certainly will be counted by the hundreds.

Foreign residents for the most part kept under cover, but three Americans are known to have suffered injuries from stray bullets.

All through the night the federal commanders were placing men in position. Twenty cannon had been brought in from the outlying districts. Rurales were engaged in transporting ammunition.

From above the captured arsenal, General Felix Diaz floated his red flag of defiance. The rebels appeared no less ready for battle than the federals. Orders were issued to the detachments guarding all approaches to the arsenal to retire on the appearance of any armed force. But Diaz did not rely entirely on his forces in the arsenal district. He detached a few hundred men with artillery to a point on the northwest of the city.

These guns dominated Chapultapec, but instead of shelling the old castle they were held in readiness to strike the federals in the flank or rear.

The American ambassador, Henry L. Wilson, published a warning to all Americans urging them not to go unnecessarily in the danger zone. From hundreds of buildings floated the flags of foreign nations.

The struggle of Diaz to overthrow the power of President Madero resulted in the most remarkable scene ever witnessed on the western continent. Street fighting has occurred in Mexico in times past, but a battle in which the contending forces employed heavy artillery at a range frequently of less than a half a mile in a densely populated city was a new and startling spectacle.

Beyond that issued by the American ambassador, practically no warning was given to non-combatants to retire to a place of safety. As a matter of fact it was impossible to mark out the limitations of the danger zone.

As the battle proceeded shells intended for the enemy four blocks away often found lodgment in houses a mile or two miles distant. Rifle bullets flew from the centre to the circumference of the capital, making safety in any quarter only a relative term.

To the offer of Senor de la Barra to mediate, if he thought that course advisable, the president replied that he had no desire to deal with the rebels except through the medium of shot and shell.

Regular Troops Deserting

Washington, Feb. 12.—Confidential dispatches from Mexico indicate that the regular army in the state of Chihuahua has deserted President Madero; that it needs but a touch of the match to revolution, and that it is prepared to go over almost to a man to Felix Diaz.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

Quincy Alliance held its regular meeting in First church parlor, Monday afternoon, the president, Mrs. George G. Saville, who has been quite ill, presiding. After the reading of the reports and discussion of business, Mrs. Saville introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Claude U. Gilson of Wellesley Hills. Mrs. Gilson, who took for her subject, "A Look Forward," said in part:

"The gift of prophecy is a hazardous undertaking. To predict each individual point of view, or any special feeling of responsibility, of the various activities of our Alliance women in all parts of the United States, would be a gigantic task, but we will sketch the outlines of what the Allinace women have accomplished in the past and they remain undaunted, unwearied and optimistic for the future.

"It is said of our Alliance women, we are the back bone of the church. About this matter we can only say, 'not gales but the set of the sails, indicate the way we are going and we shall endeavor to press on with courage and strength, avoiding pitfalls and take an active interest in whatever conduces to the welfare and advancement of for what it stands in the community.'

"I am visiting forty Alliance branches around Boston, keeping a bird's eye view over them, and I find much of interest and much of enthusiasm Our Alliance was organized 25 years ago, and it is not only significant but vitally necessary.

"One of our great dangers is our unwillingness to change our officers. That is one reason the younger women will not join and take their share in the work of the Alliance, because they do not get a chance.

"The Alliance is worthy of its name, worthy of its cause, but it should stand on its own feet and make its own speeches. So we become wide awake, active, more spiritually alive. We found the point of view of ministers and the point of view of the Alliance differed ,and instead of being a prop to the church it was a drain on the church unless we did the work ourselves. There are 19,000 women connected with our Alliance, but so many of them stay at home, that the work depends upon a few.

"What shall we do about the problem of recreation? A Unitarian minister in Rochester, N. Y. has taken upon himself, the welfare of the boys and girls. He says if the dance hall is not decent it shall be made decent. He looks to it himsedf personally and his suggestions are carried out effectually.

"We are all seeing the necessity of this more and more. Mr. Forbes, pastor of Meeting House Hill church, says the community has changed, not six or ten fold but a thousand fold, and it is the duty and responsibility of a minister to see to it that the recreations of the young are clean and wholesome.

"Another question to consider is that all denominations should meet together and study the great questions of the day. We are too prone to keep by ourselves. At a recent conference of women we had all denominations, Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, etc. The largest number present were the Presbyterians. There were ninety, and sixty Unitarians. It is good to be together.

"It is a splendid privilege, the interest and pleasure are so infectious, the enthusiasm is so fervent. We find they have thes ame perplexities, the same problems to confront that we do, and to hear another's views and other opinions is helpful in the truest sense of the word. One good Baptist lady said to me, "I shall return to my work with renewed zeal because of my being with you all at the Church of the Disciples.

"Unitarian Alliances must take up the work of the unsanitary conditions of babies. I remember once I was going to speak on that subject and a dear bookish lady asked me if I had read Ibsen and Browning. I told her yes, so she seemed to think then I was competent to speak upon the subject in question.

"Our Alliances are also doing a good work in the missionary field. We must not let our interest relax. We have much to encourage us. We must keep or influence sweet, distinct and far reaching. We have the greatest reason for courage, joy and hope. I thank you all for the pleasure of being with you this afternoon."

Refreshments were served, the hostesses, Mrs. Robert Smith and Mrs. Charles Johnson, presiding at the chocolate urns and Miss Hattie B. Pierce and Mrs. W. B. Nichols assisting.

STATE FEDERATION.

By invitation of the Charity club of Boston, the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs held its mid-winter meeting at the Arlington Street church today. The morning session was called to order at ten o'clock and a gracious welcome extended by Mrs. Esther F. Boland, president of the hostess club, to which Mrs. Henry C. Mulligan, president of the Federation, responded. Certain legislative measures were presented by Mrs. Nellie K. Rich, chairman of the Legislative committee, for action by the Federation. The general subject of the morning was continued in an address by Hon. Joseph Walker, who spoke on "The Making of a Law."

The afternoon session at two o'clock was preceded by an organ recital by John Marshall, organist of the Boston Symphony orchestra. A group of songs was sung by Miss Evelyn Blair after which the address of the afternoon was given by Professor Charles Zueblin, on "Saving and Spending." The program was of unusual interest and the church was taxed to the limit of its seating capacity.

Mr. Zueblin said: "Thrift, if it means saving and pinching to the exclusion of everything else, narrows the mind and life and is much to be avoided. The thrift and economy which often are born from hardship and deprivation are most unfortunate, but the thrift which comes from spending wisely will mean saving wisely. Saving is more dangerous than spending. The French peasant who can live decently on nothing a year, and Markham's "Man with the Hoe," are not individuals to be emulated. Thrift leads often to a life that is not admirable.

"The condition of the early dwellers in New England made the splendid qualities of Puritanism, but it also created qualities which were a menace to society, and the Puritan conscience was one of them. Too much saving is for the individual advantage but for the public disadvantage. If all the people put their money away, investments would be of no account. There is always danger when the saving propensity becomes paramount that niggardliness may result, and that over-thrift may be a serious menace to the character. Even he who begins with saving to protect his family, may end with neglecting his family to save. We must save something, but it is a constant danger. The thrifty individual is in danger of becoming a miser.

"There must be some other way of saving. More attention must be paid to collective thrift. And the best method of this is the building association and the insurance company principle. We are just crossing the threshold of insurance possibilities. Insurance is founded on a sound scientific principle, and is much better than individual saving, in that it is more social in its nature. There is insurance protection against accident, sickness and other conditions, which is admirable, but there should be a nationalization of insurance. The question of pensioning old people has been considered, and is one of the things to be desired in the future. The objection usually raised against the old age pension is that it destroys incentive. People leave by inheritance to their children enough wealth to damn them, but object to the small old-age pension on the ground that it destroys incentive. Labor insurance protects the man during the industrial crisis for which he is in no way responsible.

"One of the principal tenets of expenditure is to "prefer durable goods to perishable." So in spending one should stop and think if he is putting his money into something that will produce the best results. The very rich don't know how to spend their money. Of course they have a right to "frivol" the same as a poor man has a right to his more modest means of enjoyment, but there is always a question as to the real enjoyment one gets from the expenditure of money. The money spent on balls, etc., produces nothing durable, serves no social end, gives vent to no true expression of individuality. This sort of expenditure is not confined to the rich, but can be translated into our everyday life. There should be a sensible adjustment of saving and spending.

"The great problem, after all, is how to distribute income. One man may spend a million a year wisely, but it will not do so much good as the same amount of money spent by a thousand ordinary individuals. We must seek to distribute income. There are two things necessary for the adjustment of this problem—proper taxation and public ownership. It is the expenditures of the multitude that determines our economic and social conditions; bt the public goes on contributing to the tax budget, and they do it through the butcher and the grocer , unconscious that they are our representatives in the tax office.

"Ruskin's statement, "There is no wealth but life," emphasizes the thought that the great problem is to secure the fullest life possible for the great mass. This can be accomplished by a greater social expenditure and consumption, by the erection of more and better public buildings for the use of the entire people, libraries, baths, etc., by laying out of magnificent park systems, by the enlargement of our public schools, so that not only the child may be reached by them, but the father and mother as well—all of which will be made possible by the influx of the vast public moneys when problems of taxation are solved, and the burden placed on those who should bear it. The saving and spending for things that will lead to the proper balancing and uplifting of the greatest number is true thrift."

VALUABLE BALLOT BOX.

A unique and valuable ballot box is soon to become the property of the Massachusetts Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution. It is composed of 280 pieces of wood, each of historical value.

For over a year and a half the pieces of wood for the box have been collecting. The wood, in large and small bits came from 60 chapters of the D. A. R. and from 10 individuals. It was gathered in all parts of Massachusetts and in many other states. A piece from some old house erected in 1670, a sliver from an antique clock frame, a splinter from an historic tree, a shingle from a meeting house roof, a scrap of flooring from a ship o'war—piece by piece the 280 fragments came to Mrs. Charles H. Masury of Danvers. As honorary state regent, Mrs. Masury had been appointed a committee of one to receive the contributions. It was Capt. Charles H. Masury, however, who designed the box—a very laborious, intricate task .

The box will be presented publicly March 3 to the Massachusetts D. A. R. at the new headquarters in Ashburton place, Boston. Its christening will doubtless come during the same month at the election in Worcester of the state regent. There is one bit of wood from the John Adams homestead in Quincy. Another from a tree in the Whittier garden at Amesbury. Still another from the Merrimac, the Olympia—Dewey's flagship—the Gen. Israel Putnam house in Danvers, the old Daggett house which stood at the corner of Tremont and Hollis streets, Boston, and in which preparations for the Boston tea party were made; from the framework of Fort Erie in Canada, the mulberry tree on the Dorothy Quincy estate in Quincy, the old Quincy homestead—which was built in 1635 and burned in 1769—from "Great Onabbin," the golden oak in Enfield; from the Old State House, the house of Dorothy Brewer in Waltham, from the Whiting elm in Amherst—one of the oldest and most beautiful trees in the state.

There is a piece of wood from the Prescott house in Pepperell, this piece being the gift of Mrs. Roger Wolcott. There is a piece from the homestead in Newton Centre of S. F. Smith, who wrote "America," from the parlor floor of the Royal house in Medford from the 200-year-old Ebenezer Leaner house in Whitinsville, from the stair bannister of the John Hancock house in Boston, from the Adams house in Quincy, from the Old South Meeting House in Boston.

One fragment is from the barn of John and Hannah Goddard, where ammunition was secreted for Gen. Washington's army on Dorchester Heights. Old John Goddard put carpet on the feet of his oxen so that their plodding steps might not be heard, and conveyed the arms and ammunition by night in his ox cart to the waiting army. There is a piece from the "Augusta," Lord Howe's flagship, which was sunk in the battle of Red Banks, N. J., in 1777. There is a piece from the Elliott oak of Natick, under which John Eliott preached to the Indians.

The old Concord bridge is represented, and the First Parish Church of Concord, within whose walls the first Provincial Congress was held, the Deborah Wheelock House of Uxbridge, dating back to 1768 ,the British man-o'-war Somerset, wrecked off Cape Cod in 1778, the Longfellow elm, the Washington elm, the Hancock tavern, Boston, which dates back to 1634. Nor has the Holmes House in Cambridge withheld its token— that house which was the headquarters of Gen. Artemus Ward in 1775, nor Massachusetts Hall at Harvard, built in 1719 and used as a barracks in 1775, nor the apple tree on the homestead of Mary Draper of Roxbury, nor the Peck House of Attleboro, dating back to 1700. There is a fine bit from the Jonathan Edwards elm at Northampton, from a clock case—a very rare specimen—which dates back to 1792 and was made in England, from the Paul Revere House, from the house of Abiah Folger Franklin of Nantucket—she who was the mother of Benjamin Franklin—from the houses where Deborah Sampson and Chief Justice Cushing were born, from the frigate Constitution.

There is also a bit from the dower chest of Prudence Wright, which dates back to 1775. Prudence Wright lived in Pepperell, and one day when all the men except one very aged and feeble gentleman had gone to war she learned that a troop of British were preparing to take an important message to Gen. Gage. "We girls must do what the men would do," she said, and persuaded her companions to don their brothers' clothes march with her to a turn in the road, arm themselves with long sticks that looked sufficiently like muskets, intercept the Tories—one of whom was the brother of Mistress Prudence—scare the enemy out of their wits, capture the message and ride with it across country to Gen. Washington at Cambridge.

There is a piece of wood from the "Claremont" and the "Half Moon," which took part in the Hudson-Fulton celebration; from the First Meeting House in Hingham—which was the first public house of worship in New England, its dates being 1664-1581; from the Gen. Benjamin Lincoln house in Hingham, dated 1690; from the famous Charter Oak; from the tree to which Mother Anne Lee hitched her horse in 1758 while she preached to the Shakers. Mother Lee lived in Shirley, Mass., and was one of the brave women who took supplies to the Americans at great risk to herself. There is a bit of wood also from the Eames Garrison House, dated 1693. Eames was one of the children who escaped the Indian massacre at Fore Mayten in Framingham, 1675-76.

From the Abraham Lincoln house in Springfield, Ill., there is a piece, from the old elm on Boston Common, there is another, from the Endicott pear tree, planted in Danvers in 1630 and still bearing, there is another ,and from Parson Paris's witch house in Danvers, which dates back to 1692, there is still another. There is a piece from Jefferson's desk, the wood having been taken from the spot where his arm rested when he was writing. There is a bit of the magnolia planted at Mt. Vernon by Lafayette and of a magnolia planted at Mt. Vernon by Washington. There is a piece of the platform on which President McKinley was inaugurated, from the live oak under which John Wesley preached in Georgia, from the lower panel of the south door of the John Hancock house in Boston—a bit of wood which was doubtless brushed by the dress of Dorothy Q., from the House of Seven Gables in Salem, from the Dean Winthrop house in Winthrop, from King's Chapel, Boston, from the old belfry in Lexington from which the alarm was rung to call the Minute Men to Lexington Green on April 19, 1775, and a bit of the original timber from the Bight Tavern, built in 1690 at Faneuil Hall square, Boston.

Nearly every period of American history is represented in this pot pourri of relics. The ballot box will be not only one of the most precious possessions of the D. A. R. but also one of the most precious possessions of the country.

Senators Are Exonerated

Washington, Feb. 12.—Senators Chilton and Watson of West Virginia were exonerated of charges of corruption in their election, when the senate adopted a resolution discharging the elections committee from further consideration of the allegations against them.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, "Captain Cox."

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

"Stonewall" Jackson is killed. Grant takes supreme command of the Federal armies, and Sheridan invades the valley of Virginia.

Gertrude loves West, but disappears before he reaches Belle Bosquet. West recognizes Bedloe as Frank Haverill.

General Haverill, not knowing Bedloe is his son, sends him on a dangerous mission. Gertrude is captured by West's soldiers.

West takes Mrs. Haverill's miniature from Thornton. Bedloe is wounded and captured. Haverill plans to exchange Ellingham for Bedloe. Thornton stabs West. Haverill finds the miniature on West's person.

Gertrude tells West she loves him. The Union army at Winchester is surprised and driven back. Bedloe returns, dying. Haverill places West under arrest.

Early in the afternoon Colonel Robert Ellingham hastily dismounted from his horse in front of a house in Franklin street and sprang up the front steps. Before he reached the door it flew open and Gertrude, freshly dressed in white lawn, extended both hands in eager welcome. Beside her, in black civilian clothes, stood what looked like the ghost of Kerchival West. In the background appeared another familiar phantom of the far past—none other than Dr. Ellingham of Charleston, now white haired and more aged looking than the lapse of years alone should have called for.

"Sister! Kerchival, old boy! Uncle!" panted Bob, full of excitement. "Were you prepared for the news? What do you think you'll do?"

"Kerchival and I are going to be married right away," answered Gertrude, with the astounding imperturbability of one who had arranged and settled everything.

"Married!" gasped Bob, instinctively clutching the air, as if for support. "Now—at such a time? Don't you know that I am under marching orders and that President Davis and the cabinet are to leave for Danville by the evening train and that the Federal army will be occupying Richmond by this time tomorrow?"

"Yes, Robert. We were in church this morning when the news came. Kerchival and I have figured it all out, and the doctor agrees with us—that as Richmond has fallen and Kerchival has been released from Libby on parole and uncle is here from Charleston the only way for us two to guard against separation again is to get married now so that I can be with—with my husband, whatever happens. So we have sent for the Rev. Dr. Minnigerode, and, now that you are here, the ceremony can be performed and you be off to join General Lee in half an hour's time, for I suppose he will need you now more than ever."

So they were married, Kerchival and Gertrude, and Colonel Ellingham left them immediately after the ceremony radiantly happy together in the midst of the climatic converging of all the storms of war.

President Davis and his cabinet had left Richmond by special train for Danville. Colonel Robert Ellingham had hurried away on horseback in the opposite direction immediately after the marriage ceremony to join the army of General Lee, now marching out of Petersburg up the north side of the Appomattox river toward Amelia Court House.

The only people who remained in Richmond were those who were poor and could not go away, or those who, like the Ellinghams, had home interests to hold them there and no other place to go to should they leave the city, and those others who, like Colonel Kerchival West, were Union soldiers in Confederate prisons or on parole.

At the same time General Grant was riding into Petersburg through deserted streets between rows of closed, silent streets. The next day he started with his army after the departing Confederates, his columns moving south of the Appomattox parallel to Lee's route north of that stream. He had foreseen that Lee in his retreat would endeavor to reach Amelia Court House, where his separate columns coming from Petersburg and Richmond could unite and where he might expect to receive supplies.

Two days later, the retreat continuing, Sheridan descended with a large force upon the Confederate rear guard at Sailor's creek, a small tributary flowing north into the Appomattox, and overwhelmed the commands of Generals Ewell and Anderson, capturing these and several other high officers, including General Lee's eldest son, General G. W. Custis Lee.

On April 7 the Confederates stopped at Farmville to feast, having come up with the first provisions that had reached them since leaving Petersburg, and to fight again. This time they succeeded in beating off Sheridan's cavalry and pushed on another stage toward Lynchburg.

But the once great army of Northern Virginia was now reduced to two small corps of infantry, and the cavalry corps under Generals Fitz Lee, Gordon and Rosser, for the one time commander of the Laurel brigade of the Shenandoah valley had rallied a new mounted force and was now doing yeoman's service in an all but hopeless campaign where laurels were scarce, but where loyalty and courage did not go unhonored.

Colonel Robert Ellingham was with Gordon, whose cavalry corps, after fighting all the way from Petersburg as rear guard for the wagon trains, was now transferred to the front.

"My corps is worn to a frazzle," said the gallant Gordon at the campfire council on the night of the 8th, "but if the force beyond Appomattox Court House is Sheridan's cavalry alone we can hold it until Longstreet comes up and then cut through."

The attack was made at daybreak. There was a moment when it took on the factitious look of a victory as the Confederate lines charged, cheering wildly, and redoubled their fire as the Union cavalry slowly fell back. They did not know that Sheridan already had the game in his hands and was now only skirmishing for a wind-up without incurring any more loss than should be absolutely needful. No sooner had the cavalry disappeared from their front than Lee's troops saw the solid infantry lines of the Army of the James massed before them, ready for an attack. Longstreet, covering the Confederate rear, was at the same time threatened by Meade with a superior force and could not come to until the eleventh hour. They may be forwarded any day with the assurance that no information will be given to other candidates. It is the intention of the Contest Editor to keep all votes, as received, in their original packages, boxes or barrels, until after the polls close, and then to count them in the presence of a disinterested party, who will certify to the correctness of the count. By this method no one could give out any reliable information in advance. The Contest Editor, himself, does not expect to know the prize winners until several hours after the polls close, possibly not until the next day. He has no knowledge today of the reserved vote of any candidate. He wishes all of them success, and guarantees fair play.

Gordon's aid. The firing suddenly ceased. The Confederate line halted, hesitated, then sullenly faced about and fell back upon the confused, forlorn mass of ragged grays that were huddled around Appomattox Court House.

DO IT NOW.

If you contemplate becoming a subscriber of the Daily Ledger, do it now, and make your subscription count.

If you intend to pay your Daily Ledger subscription soon, do it now, and help a friend.

After Feb. 18 it will be too late to obtain one of those 1000-vote certificates when you pay. Do it now.

Today 1000 votes are worth about $3, and 300 Ledgers at 2 cents each are worth $6. Combination price until Feb. 18 only $5. Do it now.

Subscriptions and coupons will be received at the Daily Ledger office right up to the hour of closing.

The contest bids fair to eclipse any ever attempted by any paper in this section.

There is still a chance to help somebody win this contest. The winner will have a trip to Washington with all expenses paid on the week of the inauguration of President-Elect Woodrow Wilson. The winner of the contest has the privilege of taking a companion on the trip and the expenses of both will be paid by the Daily Ledger.

The trip will be a magnificent one and the winner will have a chance to see Washington at its best. The spectacle of an inauguration of a Democratic president is one that has not been seen in Washington for many years and people from all over the country are going to be there. For the first time in history Confederate veterans will march down Pennsylvania avenue in the grand inaugural parade. For four long years these veterans tried hard to capture Washington and march through the streets and on the fourth day of March next they will march down the well known avenue, but this time in peace.

We have received a number of inquiries regarding the subscriptions, some evidently do not understand. In reply we will state that every subscription paid is good for 1000 votes. If you pay for two years you get 2,000 votes. If you pay for five years you get 5,000 votes and so on. Back subscriptions count just the same as new ones.

It won't cost any more for the Daily Ledger for the coming year to send in your subscriptions at once. Your votes will help someone and will help to give them the best trip in their lives.

A limited number of Daily Ledgers with coupons may be obtained at wholesale or retail until the closing of the polls. Subscription certificates good for 1000 votes will also be issued until Feb. 18.

THE PRIZES.

The first prize in the contest is a free trip for two to Washington, during Inauguration week, with all expenses paid.

The second prize is a beautiful diamond ring.

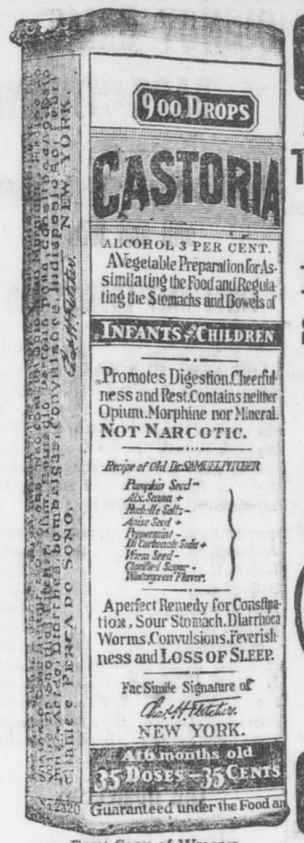

Third and fourth prizes will also be given.

DATES TO REMEMBER

Feb. 8—Last day of coupon.
Feb. 18—Polls close.
Feb. 20—Prize winners.
Feb. 28—On to Washington.
Mar. 4—Inauguration of Woodrow Wilson as President.

Whose who isn't half as interesting to Quincy people just now as whose going to Washington at the Ledger's expense? That $150 trip to the inauguration is going to be enjoyable to the biggest vote getter and the companion selected to go along. Subscribe to the Ledger and secure 1000 votes for your favorite candidate.

BOXING GETS KNOCKOUT

Further Bouts In Rhode Island Prohibited by the Governor

Providence, Feb. 12.—Boxing in Rhode Island has been dealt a knockout blow, in the opinion of those interested in the sport, by the action of Governor Pothier in prohibiting further bouts.

The fight scheduled for last night at North Providence, between Al Delmont and Todd Hubbs, was not held as a result. Authorities of that town also notified Pothier that there would be no further boxing held there.

The attorney general presented an opinion to the governor to the effect that the present system of running bouts in this state is illegal.

Citizens' Gas Light Company

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO CONSUMERS

NEW SYSTEM OF METER READING AND BILLING

It is the aim of the Citizens' Gas Light Company to give to the Public a service as excellent in every detail as possible and to improve the service as opportunity offers.

To this end the Company will on March 1st, 1913, put into effect a new system of Meter Reading and Billing which has been adopted after careful study of the many systems in use in other cities.

REGULAR METER READERS

Instead of hiring a large number of special men to read all the meters on the last few days of the month (as will still be done up to February 28th, 1913) the Company will in March create a permanent force of regular meter readers, who will be easily identified by the Company's badge conspicuously worn.

CONSTANT SYSTEM

These men will on each working day throughout the month read all the meters in one of the sections into which the accounts have been grouped and, having covered the City, will periodically read the same meters once in about every thirty calendar days, all bills rendered covering gas used during the preceding thirty days.

BILLS PAYABLE WITHIN FIFTEEN DAYS OF DATE

Two days after the reading of the meters of any section, the corresponding bills will be delivered. Each bill must be paid within fifteen days of its date and should a bill become overdue by not being paid within fifteen days, the supply may be discontinued without further notice.

EXAMPLES

The following examples are given on typical cases:

| METER IN SECTION NO. 2 | | METER IN SECTION NO. 7 | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Meter read | Monday, Mar. 10 | Meter read | Wednesday, Mar. 19 |
| Bill delivered | Wednesday, Mar. 12 | Bill delivered | Friday, Mar. 21 |
| Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Tuesday Mar. 25 | Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Thursday, Apr. 3 |

METHOD OF CHANGE FROM OLD TO NEW SYSTEM

As all meters will be read in the last days of February and as the new system will go into active operation about March 10th, it is evident that the first bills received after this latter date will cover periods ranging from two to six weeks. But in future the date of the last state of the meter and the date of the preceding state of the meter will appear on all bills; the period covered by each bill will therefore be evident in the bill and should be considered in connection with the amount of gas used.

For instance, bills rendered March 14th, will cover a period of about three weeks, while bills rendered April 2nd, will cover a period of about six weeks. After these first six weeks of change, customers will find that each month they will receive their bills on or about the same date, and that each bill will invariably cover the preceding thirty days.

LEARN TO READ METERS

We would again urge our customers to learn how to read meters; instruction as to this will be found on the back of the gas bills and will enable customers to check bills rendered.

REMITTANCES BY MAIL

Remittances sent through the mails should be addressed only in the name of the Company to its office, No. 11 Granite Street, Quincy.

We desire in conclusion, to assure our customers that the installation of the system outlined above is to secure uniformity and accuracy in handling their accounts.

THE HOMELESS

themselves on being well dressed and clean and make it a point to secure three regular meals a day. Each has his special story. Above him is the tramp that is clever enough to get hold of some boy, luring him with tales of adventure. He teaches him some trick of begging. He sends him out on the street in the day time and takes away his money each night. He browbeats the boy into behaving.

"That is the real tramp. He travels on the railroads, generally on freight trains. The cleverest ride on passenger express trains as blind baggage either between or on the trucks. Those fellows it is impossible to do anything with. They cannot give up the road. They are in it for the fun of the thing.

"My work lies with the more hopeful. The man that is down and out through his excesses or misfortunes. We try to show him he is on the wrong track, turn him around and start him right."

The remainder of the evening was taken up in stories of cases that had come under the speakers personal attention and the recital was very interesting.

"We are lucky," said Mr. Warren, if we get 8 or 9 per cent to live different lives permanently and actually help 50 per cent. To get men back into steady jobs is a tough proposition. The police has much to do in the making and encouraging of beggars. Not only must we educate the man that is down and out but we must also educate the public. The chronic professional beggar finds the American public an easy mark. He is an economic drain on the community and it is a crime for the public to support a thing of that sort.

President Langelier announced a challenge to a bowling match from the Wollaston Congregational club. The challenge was accepted and a committee of five appointed.

Attention was called to the new social club being organized in connection with the Community House and those present were urged to join.

HOUGHS NECK.

The Ladies' club will hold their regular whist party this evening.

KILLING TURKS BY THOUSANDS

Bulgars Inflict Terrible Punishment in Gallipoli

FIGHTING AT OTHER POINTS

Several Thousands Said to Have Been Killed by Shell Fire of Bulgarians Along Tchatalja Lines—Report From Sofia Says Invading Army's Losses Are Slight

Sofia, Feb. 12.—The Turkish army in the peninsula of Gallipol lost between 5000 and 6000 men and fifty officers during the fighting at Bulair, according to a war office dispatch. Several thousands of Turkish soldiers fell in a battle before the Tchatalja lines on Feb. 9 and thousands more at Charkeui, southeast of Rodosto.

The report says the Bulgarian army, having repulsed several Turkish attacks along the Tchatalja lines except on the extreme right flank, where they were exposed to the convergent fire from the Turkish warships in the Sea of Marmora and the Gulf of Buyuk Chekmedje, retired to fresh positions five or six miles to the rear. The losses of the Bulgarians were insignificant, while those of the Turks amounted to several thousand men, mainly due to the excellently directed Bulgarian shell fire.

The report continues: "The Bulgarians are entrenching their positions in front of Bulair. Large bodies of men have been sent out to clear the field of battle of the dead bodies of Turkish soldiers, which number from 5000 to 6000. It is believed that the number of wounded Turks must be more than double as great. The Turkish warships shelled the Bulgarian left flank all day, but only killed one and slightly wounded another Bulgarian soldier.

"The Turkish troops which descended upon Charkeui, near the port of Rodosto, on Saturday and Sunday, were almost surrounded by the Bulgarian army and were compelled to retire hastily, under the protection of the Turkish warships, to their transports lying off the coast. The Bulgarian infantry on shore kept up a deadly fire on the small boats loaded with Turkish troops, inflicting losses amounting to several thousand men. The Bulgarian losses in the whole affair did not exceed 100 killed and wounded."

Turkey Is Losing Hope

London, Feb. 12.—There are signs that the porte realizes the hopelessness of the situation and is preparing the way to leave the fate of Turkey in the hands of Europe to obtain the best possible settlement. Although it is officially denied that Hakki Pasha has been sent on a peace mission to London, there is little doubt that that is his object.

FOR TWO BATTLESHIPS

House Naval Committee's Decision Is Practically a Compromise

Washington, Feb. 12.—Two battleships in this year's naval appropriation bill were determined upon by the house naval affairs committee by a vote of 14 to 7. Six destroyers, four submarines, one supply ship and one transport will also be provided.

The vote for two battleships is practically a compromise between the recommendation of the secretary of the navy for three ships and the demand of the small navy men of the house for not more than one.

Secretary Meyer and the greater navy men had been hopeful that three battleships might be got through in this year's bill, to make up the decrease the navy suffered in last year's bill, when only one was appropriated for.

Former District Attorney of New York to Remain In Prison

Albany, Feb. 12.—The conviction of Daniel O'Reilly, former assistant district attorney of New York, who was sentenced to the penitentiary for five months for receiving stolen property, was affirmed by the court of appeals.

O'Reilly's conviction resulted from his negotiations with the police and G. A. Bancroft & Co., brokers, for the return of $60,000 worth of securities stolen from the firm in March, 1911.

FEARED TO FACE MOTHER

Little Fellow Who Lost Dime Commits Suicide by Hanging

Portland, Me., Feb. 12.—Clarence L. Cady, 12 years old, was found dead in a nook of the back piazza at his home on Federal street last night, the boy having committed suicide because he feared to face his mother after losing a dime which she had given him when he went to the store. Clarence had lost small sums twice before and been whipped for it, and last night the mother told him that if he lost the 10 cents he need not come back.

Romping with his pet dog on the way to the store the boy dropped the money, and later his mittens were found in the snow where he tried to dig it out. Returning home he took the rope from his sled, fastened it to the upper part of the piazza, placed a noose about his neck and jumped, his neck being broken in the fall. The mother is in a serious condition as a result of the suicide.

TELEGRAPHERS DROPPED

Switchmen to Man Office at End of Single Railroad Track

Portland, Me., Feb. 12.—Owing to the trouble in gettting telegraph operators to stay on the jobs, the Boston and Maine railroad has closed the telegraph office at Spinney's Switch, just east of Kittery on the Portland division. Three operators, working eight-hour shifts, have been replaced by a night and day switchman.

The office is at the end of the single track, and trainmen believe the discontinuing of telegraph service will lead to more or less delay in the movement of freight.

POWELL'S CLIMB COST TEAM DEAR

Eager But Lack of Judgement Proved Costly

IN CLOSE CONTEST

Both Quincy A. A. teams beat both North Dorchester teams in the Greater Boston basket ball league games at Vine street hall, Tuesday evening, the first 15 to 14 and the second 43 to 9.

The first team game was the fastest ever played at the hall and was so interesting throughout that the fans went frantic with enthusiasm. The largest gallery appearing at any league game saw the contest and were generous in their compliments to the winners.

The first team was without the services of "Sid" Duggan and Boyle. "Cy" O'Rourke scored three baskets and his brother "Joe" made four points on free tries. "Dan" Duggan was so well covered that he was able to score but one basket. The feature of the game was the horse shoe shot of "Cy." The second team scored at will. "Bootus" Chapman made seven and shot three from free tries. One score was a long throw from beyond the centre of the hall which started stiff cheering for the Quincy team. Manning netted six.

The local boys resorted to a strictly passing game and were so successful that at times their opponents were bewildered.

Early in the game Quincy was awarded a point for interference by Dacey who climbed the side of the hall and stopped the ball as it was dropping through the basket. Quincy was allowed the basket and the additional point which turned out to be the winning one. Powell of East Milton was at centre for the N. D. team and although he is a wizard in the game was unable to do a great deal because "Put" Kelly outplayed him. "Put" who is one of the best all round athletes in the game and Powell are of even height and the battle at centre was most interesting, with the odds in favor of Kelly.

MAYBE DECIDING GAME.

The first place in the Y. M. C. A. League will probably be decided tonight when Quincy and Newton fight it out on the latter's court. A difference of one game exists between Newton and Quincy and if the latter returns with the victory a pretty situation in basket ball circles will have developed. The second teams of both gyms are similarly placed.

A large band of rooters are planning to see the contest. The team will leave here at 6.12. The game will be called at 8.15 o'clock.

NO PAY FOR ALSBERG

Salary For Wiley's Old Job Stricken From Agricultural Bill

Washington, Feb. 12.—The $5000 salary of Dr. Alsberg, Dr. Wiley's successor in the bureau of chemistry, was completely struck out of the $17,000,000 agricultural bill as it passed the house, on a point of order that an old statute provided a salary of $2000.

Provision for expenses of department of agriculture officials in lecture tours and farm instruction work also was struck out. It is expected the senate will put back the items.

KATSURA DRIVEN OUT

Japanese Premier Is Forced to Bow to Will of the People

Tokio, Feb. 12.—The resignation of Prince Taro Katsura, the Japanese premier and minister of foreign affairs, together with that of the members of his cabinet, was handed to the emperor yesterday. Count Gomboi Yamamoto was officially installed in the office of premier today.

Violent political riots broke out in the city of Osaka. The offices of the newspaper which supports Katsura were attacked by great mobs.

SELF-COALING ENGINES

Stokers' Services Not Required on the Latest Style of Moguls

Pittsburg, Feb. 12.—Two of the latest types of locomotives intended for use on the main line of the Pennsylvania railroad have arrived in Pittsburg from Dunkirk, N. Y., where they were built.

The monster piles of steel and mechanicism caused unusual interest, not only because of their enormous weight and size, but because of a new automatic stoker with which they are equipped.

The new attachment, according to railroad officials, will do away with the necessity of having experienced firemen on engines, as the belt-like arrangement of steel that carries coal directly to the firebox from the tender can be operated by any one with very little labor.

The movement for a social club to occupy a part of the Community House is going on apace and it is reported that 150 signatures have been secured.

The Community House Committee is willing to make provision in the plans for a floor for the exclusive use of the club if an organization of sufficient size is formed to guarantee the rental.

HOBART MURDERED SISTER-IN-LAW THEN SENT BULLET INTO OWN HEAD

Six-Year-Old Daughter of Victim Awakened by Flash, Dropped Off to Sleep Beside Dead Mother

Both Dead Several Hours When Discovered by the Husband of the Murdered Woman on Returning From Work

VICTIMS OF BRAINTREE TRAGEDY

MRS. SARAH JENNIE HOBART, 43 Years Old, Murdered

MYRON L. HOBART, 60 Years Old, Murderer and Suicide

ALLEGED CAUSE

Alleged Jealousy of Neighborly Friendship

The quiet town of Braintree was shocked from its centre to circumference at an early hour this morning by the discovery of a gruesome tragedy which had been enacted in the very heart of the community, in the form of a murder and tragedy.

The murdered woman is Mrs. Sarah J. Hobart, 43 years old, the wife of George Hobart. The supposed murderer and suicide is Myron L. Hobart, 60 years, a widower and brother-in-law of the murdered woman. Myron L. Hobart lived with the family of his brother for the past few years, or practically ever since the death of his wife about 10 years ago.

Mrs. Hobart was the mother of six children, one of whom, Marie 6 years old slept with her mother, and was awakened by the flash, evidently of the murderers revolver as he sought his victim in the darkness of the early morning. The little girl however was hardly awakened by the strange noise and dropped off to sleep again, being mercifully spared the agony of realizing that she was lying beside the corpse of her murdered parent, until shielded by the embrace of the father who later arrived on the scene.

George Hobart, husband of the dead woman was the first to discover the evidences of the terrible calamity which had fallen over his house. He is employed as night baggage master at the Braintree station. On finishing his tour of duty at six o'clock this morning he proceeded in the direction of his home at the corner of Washington and School streets, with no forebodings of the horrible spectacle which would be revealed to his horrified gaze.

As Hobart entered his home, he found the body of his wife, lying on the bed, with a bullet wound through the right eye. The little girl Marie was sound asleep beside the dead body of her mother. He quickly removed the child from the couch of death. Startled at what he had discovered and unable to account for it, George Hobart hastened across the street to the home of his life long friend, Ralph L. McGlauflin 277 Washington street, and the latter immediately got in touch with Officer James R. Qualey. Accompanied by McGlauflin, Officer Qualey proceeded to the house of tragedy and ascending to the second floor occupied by Myron L. Hobart, found his dead body partly lying over a couch and on the floor beside the couch a 38 calibre revolver with two chambers discharged.

They immediately notified the medical examiner, John C. Frazier, of Weymouth, who was soon on the scene and viewed the bodies, and he gave it as his opinion, that Mrs. Sarah J. Hobart was murdered by Myron L. Hobart, and the latter committed suicide. Both had been dead some hours, so that it may be that the murderer had carefully planned his actions, and probably committed both acts shortly after midnight. The man's aim must have been steady and sure, as he only used one bullet in each case and each was effective.

The woman was shot through the right eye and the bullet that ended Hobart's life penetrated the brain through the mouth. No cause except that of jealousy and an unreasonable objection regarding the friendship that existed between his brother and his brother's wife, towards their friend and neighbor McGlauflin is assigned as a cause for the tragedy.

Myron L. Hobart was a well known carpenter. Some years he made a start in the contracting business, but so far as could be learned he erected only one house under this plan, when he settled back into the routine of a journeyman jobber. He was always considered a good worker and eagerly sought for the performance of some particular job.

His wife died about 10 years ago and since that time he has made his home with the family of his brother occupying apartments on the second floor. It was said this morning that for the past few days he had hardly been himself. It was believed that he was very much attracted by his sister-in-law and it is alleged that he even went so far as to propose an elopement with her but to this she objected.

Mr. McGlauflin was a very good friend of George Hobart and his wife, and this seemed to bother Myron L. Hobart, who did not approve of any friendship between McGlauflin and Mrs. Hobart and even went so far as to write McGlauflin a threatening letter that if he did not discontinue his friendship there would be a story for the newspapers. Whether he meant the story which would result from the tragedy or something else is of course unknown. It is claimed that Myron Hobart has been open in his disapproval of the friendship of McGlauflin with his brothers family. George Hobart knowing of this unfriendly feeling towards McGlauflin, when he returned to the house later with the latter to search, would not let him go up stairs as he feared if the brother was alive he would shoot or attempt to kill McGlauflin.

Mrs. Hobart was the mother of six children as follows: Chester, 19; Fred 16, Dolly 15, Lester 10, Marie 6, and Frank 5 years.

Mrs. Hobart slept in a room on the lower floor. It was said that she feared her brother-in-law who lived upstairs and that she kept all doors leading into her apartments locked. In order to do the deed it was necessary for the man to come downstairs and force the lock of a door which he probably did, since the door was found open.

Mrs. Hobart was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hollingshead of Hollis avenue, Braintree. She has three sisters, Mrs. Beatrice Hunter of Braintree, Mrs. Mary Doran of Quincy, and Miss Frances Hollingshead of England.

Both bodies are at the house, Washington and School street and have been turned over to Undertaker Fay of this city who will prepare them for burial.

ADDRESS ON LINCOLN

A large delegation of brothers of Rural and Wollaston Masonic lodges accepted the invitation to the smoker of St. Stephen's Royal Arch Chapter in the Masonic apartments, Wednesday evening. The Chapter met at its regular convocation at 4.30 and worked the Past Master's degree upon several candidates and at 7 o'clock the Most Excellent degree was worked on those companions who had received the Past Master's degree earlier in the day. The work of the evening was over at 8 o'clock at which time the smoker was held.

Most Excellent High Priest Walter E. Piper presided and briefly welcomed the brothers present. He also had a word to say about capitular Masonry. Rev. Dr. Adelbert L. Hudson was then introduced, who gave a short address on Masonry and on President Lincoln. The address was followed by a brief entertainment, which included impersonations by Ernest Wright of Wollaston and selections by the Haymakers Trio of the Kincaide theatre. There was also singing of many familiar airs from the collection of Wollaston lodge. Light refreshments were also served by the committee in charge.

BOYNTON ASKS CONFERENCE

In a Letter Addressed to All the Churches in District

Chester A. Boynton has sent letters to all churches in the Suffolk South Conference asking for an ex-part conference. No letters were received at the Park and Downs Church where the pastor is Rev. William B. Ayers against whom he has brought suit for $25,000 for alleged alienation of his wife's affections. The letters were received Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Boynton was refused a letter of dismissal from the Park and Downs church so that he might become a member of the First Congregational Church of Revere and he was also dropped from membership in the Park and Downs church following a suspension period of six months. He applied for a mutual council and that was refused.

The chairman of the Conference is E. S. Woodbury of Newton and the scribe is Rev. Thomas W. Davison of Atlantic.

SQUANTUM LINED UP IN SOLID PHALANX FOR HIGHWAY NEEDS

Jump of $249,000 in Valuation Two Years a Surprise to Mayor Stone

Huckins Avenue, Bellevue Road and Dorchester Street Demanded

Squantum's fight for better streets and an interesting talk on docks and inland waterways were the important features of the regular meeting of the Squantum Improvement association Tuesday night at the bungalow of Herbert A. Smith, Wedgewood street. It was voted that a special car be provided by the association for the free transportation to and from the hearing on the acceptance of Huckins avenue, Bellevue road and Dorchester street given by the Quincy City Council Monday night.

Reports were made showing that Mayor Eugene R. Stone is to support the association in its fight for better streets. The mayor when waited upon by a special committee expressed surprise that Squantum's real estate valuation had jumped $249,900 in two years and that the assessed valuation of property for 1912 was $730,225. The Mayor admitted that he knew of no other section of Quincy except South Quincy in the vicinity of the Fore River Shipbuilding yards which could show such an increase. He was shown that Squantum's increase in valuation had been without a single accepted street and without the aid of manufacturing which in the case of South Quincy was responsible for the increase in valuation.

It was presented to Mayor Stone that with $8,000 to $10,000 for the acceptance of the main thoroughfare through Squantum the tax valuation within a year would jump over the $1,000,000 mark as hundreds of lots have been purchased on Bellevue road and Huckins avenue and their owners are merely waiting for decent streets before building handsome homes.

President C. E. Carlson, presided, and the minutes of Secretary John Mardon of the last meeting were read and approved. The president introduced Dock Commissioner Crane who was vigorously applauded.

Mr. Crane prefaced his remarks by saying that the United States was just waking up to the development of its inland waterways. He said this was why Quincy got $140,000 in the last appropriations by Congress for inland waterways. He declared that the matter of water transportation was one of the greatest economic questions of the day. Massachusetts he said was slow to wake up to this fact. He showed that 22,00 lives had been sacrificed and $40,000,000 worth of property lost owing to the failure to develop inland waterways and the continuation of shipping along the hazardous coast.

He traced in an interesting way the formation and development of the Atlantic Deep Waterways association and declared that at the last convention in New London, Massachusetts for the first time was adequately represented. He said Governor Foss took an active interest in the waterways question and attended this congress.

"While Massachusetts year after year went to Congress with a small delegation to ask for waterways appropriations the western men went to Congress in private trains.

"New England spends $70,000,000 annually in its transportation of coal from southern ports. Think of the saving it would be if this freight could be brought by inland waterways. The time had come for the state to appropriate $40,000,000 for the building of the so called Brockton canal which would connect Quincy and Boston Harbor with Fall River and a direct line to the south by inland waterways."

Coming to local issues Mr. Crane said he was opposed to the appropriation of $100,000 by the City of Quincy at the present time for a public pier. He said that he favored a public pier in Squantum and believed that it was for the best interests of the community. He said a public pier concentrated all visitors to that spot and with "No Trespass" signs at other points all visitors could be compelled to land at such a pier. He said it was much easier to give police protection to a pier than to distribute it all over the beach. He said with a public pier all visitors could be looked over and watched and it was easy to keep out undesirables. He said he believed the matter of a public landing at Squantum should be taken before the Quincy city council this year. He said that if Squantum people did not get out and fight for their rights they would get nothing. He said that no part of Quincy except South Quincy had advanced so rapidly as Squantum and the section covered by the old Adams farm. He said that the taxable prop-

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

No chance now for complaining of any lack of winter.

The gink who put the Val in Valentine is about due on the scene.

Disconnecting door bells is a good scheme to insure some degree of peace and comfort tomorrow night.

"Big Bill's" romance is being so effectually riddled and manhandled that there is hardly enough of it left to hold an inquest over.

Mayor Fitzgerald says he is 50 years young. He acts and lives the part.

Are those who have been so eager for interference in Mexican matters, inspired by humane principles or moved more by the value of their personal interests at stake?

The suffragettes who plan to march to Washington had better carry along good old fashioned woolen mittens and ear lappers. At the same time they would display more common sense and less desire for the sensationally ridiculous if they made use of the parcels post to forward their petitions.

The actual imprisonment is more painful than the grievous suspense to which King and his family have been subjected.

The sick man of Atlanta is enjoying himself in touring Europe, despite the fact that he was to die in six months and his family were reduced to dire straits.

The Mexican government would do well to pen up all the would be dictators and let them fight it out among themselves and while they are doing that let the people establish something they have never enjoyed a real representative government.

What is that echo of alleged graft among the Boston police officers?

The smile of the ice men increaseth as the cold expandeth and the water congealeth.

Plenty and early distribution of gravel on the sidewalks those cold and frosty mornings would be appreciated. A mid morning round is of little benefit to the citizen who has to be about early.

The youngsters are happy their skating sport is given another lease of life.

LAYING OUT STREETS.

It was rather a disappointment to many that the Attorney General ruled that the bill presented to the legislature by Mayor Stone relative to the laying out of streets, was unconstitutional. It seemed as though the bill was reasonable enough and was only a means of protecting the city. It likewise afforded protection to property owners. It has been the custom in many places to develop and improve property by laying out streets and then selling the abutting land for house lots. A commendable enterprise and one that should be encouraged as such public spirti means an increase in the taxable property and the building up of the city. It has infrequently happened that without a proper eye to the future persons have laid those streets out narrower than the law provides for public highways. The people building have not thought of this and build closer to the line than they would otherwise have done. Later comes a demand for the acceptance of the street as a public highway, with the result that the street has to be widened and many buildings changed and moved, walls rebuilt and the like at great expense. The mayor's plan was to have those roads laid out at the legal width at the very start, so that all this expense to the city and later annoyance with possible litigation to the abuttors would be avoided, if proper supervision of the construction of such streets was guaranteed. A reasonable measure and one worthy of consideration. Yet the Attorney General says it is not constitutional and so the bill has to go over. There is always a chance of a question being put to the law department in such a way that an answer directly contrary to that desired may be obtained and yet all the parties concerned are correct and clearly within the law. The framing of a question with regard to its legal standing in many instances, makes or breaks a proposition.

NEPONSET BRIDGE.

Boston's opposition to an improvement of Neponset bridge is as persistent as it is inconsistent. This bridge is one of the approaches to the City of Boston. That it is from the south is a mere matter of geography. How this can be figured as lessening its value and deprecating its importance is hardly understood. Cities in the main take pride in having the approaches as attractive and beautiful as possible. It is an indication of some of the pleasing things which may be found in the heart of the city. Neponset bridge in its present condition is neither ornamental or extravagantly useful when measured by the tone of its usage. It is not pleasing to the eye. It is hardly up to date and the draw would be wholly inadequate to meet average requirements in this day of large ship building. The travelled way becomes worn, torn and ragged looking. The amounts which must be annually expended to keep it in half decent condition would be enormous and if calculated would plainly show that it was false economy to continue in this latter day method of meeting an up to date proposition.

Any one who can say that the bridge is adequate for all purposes for some years to come, is hardly a good judge of conditions or is permitting their judgment to be biased to a degree beyond common sense and reason. The attempt to show that the congestion at the bridge was due to the cars transferring passengers was quickly exploded. An up to date bridge permitting a double track would obviate such a make shift necessity.

That a new bridge is needed is evident to every one. Any one opposing such a measure stands in the way of progress and this is hardly a period to assume such an attitude in public improvements which are apparent necessities.

The present old fashioned wooden structure upon its wooden piles, is neither creditable to Boston or Quincy. With regard to the price that or the division of the cost it is really a secondary consideration when the real issue of necessity is at stake. To other points leading to and from Boston, such a structure would be quickly condemned and given a place in the ancient museums where it belongs. Quincy and Boston likewise need a new bridge. False economy or haggling over division of the cost should not long be permitted to stand in the way of needed improvement.

INLAND WATERWAYS.

Waterfront and Dock Commissioner Frank Fessenden Crane is correct when he says that neglect of the inland waterways is a false economy. His appearance before the legislative committee as a representative of the Boston Chamber of Commerce afforded him a good chance to give expression to views which will be endorsed by a good many people. Of course many people will disagree with him, but in the main that does not change the idea or belief that on the whole his contention is correct. Massachusetts, in fact New England has permitted golden opportunities to slip by for the improvement of the inland waters. In the meantime, the west has been alive to the great economic problem and has not been backward in setting forth claims. No one can blame the western people for thus asserting themselves. It is their right and privilege and if they do it effectively they deserve all the credit that is due them. It is up to New England to wake from its dreams and listen less to the revengeful screams from prison cells than to the crying needs of the communities and work for the improvement and betterment of this entire section of the country. In unity there is strength. Let New England unite in making reasonable demands which cannot be ignored and the blessings of abundant prosperity will follow.

CUTTING ICE.

Frank S. Patch of the Meadow Brook Ice Co. stated this morning that he should commence work cutting his ice pond bright and early Friday morning. The ice on the pond is now about nine inches in thickness. Work however cutting ice has been commenced by the Eaton Ice Co. who have between nine and ten inches of ice.

CARVING THE MORTGAGE

Will Be a Splendid Task For Memorial Church People

POLITICAL EQUALITY

At the regular meeting of the Ladies Benevolent society of Memorial church, Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Sarah Butler president urged the ladies to enter into the Easter sale on a large scale and try to emulate the success of the fall fair. Chairmen of the different tables were chosen and the women hope to see a big slice taken off the church mortgage this year.

After the business Mrs. Florence Rich Nichols sang two solos—"Singing of You," and "The Skipper of St. Ives." The speaker was Mrs. Mary Atherton Howe, State organizer of the Massachusetts Political Equality Union and her subject was "Woman Suffrage."

Mrs. Howe said that when she was a little girl of six years or less, it was impressed on her the need of equal rights. That everything seemed to remind her that she was a girl, and as she grew older the emphasis became more pronounced, and women were looked upon as a class by themselves. But the constitution now allowed women to be looked upon as citizens and human beings equal to men in righteousness and intelligence, but in 40 states did not give them the equal right to vote.

Mrs. Howe said that as she knew men, they were much better than their laws, and many of the things in the government would not be cleaned up until women had the right to vote. That the white slave traffic and child labor would not be stamped out until women went to the polls. She made it clear that the liquor interests, money trust ,and the machine politicians were the most outspoken against equal suffrage, as these had the most to fear from it.

Several pointed questions were put to Mrs. Howe which she frankly answered.

After the speech lunch was served by Mrs. Isabel Smith, Mrs. Charles A. Stearns, Mrs. Frederick Osgood and Mrs. John H. Welsh.

SOME QUESTIONS STILL IN DOUBT

Who Will Win in the Daily Ledger Contest?

SOME SURPRISES EXPECTED

Have all voted who wish? The polls in the great Washington trip contest will close at 12 M., Tuesday, Feb. 18. Less than five days, including Sunday, for the final spurt.

Big gains by all the candidates are expected; but how big? is Williams sure of the capital prize? Can Hunt overcome the lead which Williams has maintained? Will MacKay capture the ring or the Washington trip? Can Mrs. Marnock hold fourth place? What prize will Bowditch take? These are some of the questions that are being asked,but are somewhat in doubt. Surprises are expected.

All votes received in the Washington contest hereafter will be kept secret until the prize winners are announced. Remember the polls will close Tuesday, Feb. 18, at 12 M. It is not necessary to hold back votes until the eleventh hour. They may be forwarded any day with the assurance that no information will be given to other candidates. It is the intention of the Contest Editor to keep all votes, as received, in their original packages, boxes or barrels, until after the polls close, and then to count them in the presence of a disinterested party, who will certify to the correctness of the count. By this method no one could give out any reliable information in advance. The Contest Editor, himself, does not expect to know the prize winners until several hours after the polls close, possibly not until the next day. He has no knowledge today of the reserved vote of any candidate. He wishes all of them success, and guarantees fair play.

MONDAY VOTE.

The standing of the first ten candidates on Monday at 9 A. M. was as follows:

"BIG TIM'S" BIRTHDAY

Custom of Giving Away Shoes Is Carried Out by Relatives

New York, Feb. 13.—Nearly 4000 pairs of shiny shoes trod the Bowery sidewalks last night and by their newness emphasized the ragged clothes of the men that wore them. They were "Big Tim" Sullivan's annual birthday gifts to the Bowery outcasts.

Although Sullivan, once a Tammany leader, is a patient in a sanitarium at Yonkers, his relatives obeyed his wishes in continuing the custom he instituted many years ago. It was the first time "Big Tim" had not been present to superintend the distribution.

ANNUAL REPORT OF FORE RIVER

Comparison of Balance Sheet For Four Years

BIG FLEET UNDERWAY

The Board of Directors of the Fore River Ship Building Co., have just issued their annual statement for the year 1912.

"There have been some necessary additions to the plant and machinery during the year, consisting of a pneumatic power house; a three-story mold loft and rigging building; a shipwright's building; three small tracts of real estate bordering on Bent's creek and the company's property; two new boilers to replace boiler s worn out, and a number of needed minor machines.

All items of repair and maintenance of the plant have been charged to current expense and $120,000 has been charged off for depreciation.

The company received a contract for the battleship "Nevada," which provides that it is to be built on an eight-hour work day. On account of this and other naval work it became necessary to place the entire plant on an eight-hour day on Nov. 4, 1912. This step, together with considerable unrest among employees and most series delays in receipt of important materials by sub-contractors, has resulted in a decrease in the surplus during the past year of $281,000.

The following vessels were under construction Dec. 31, 1912: Argentina battleship "Rivadavia," four submarine torpedo boats, two torpedo boat destroyers, three steel fishing vessels, four steel car-floats, one battleship for United States government, one steel oil freighter, one submarine tender, and one cargo vessel.

During the year there have been completed and delivered: One steel fishing vessel, one tank steamer, one steel suction dredge, two submarine torpedo boats, one torpedo boat destroyer.

The average number of employees for the year was 3741. The force at present is approximately 4191. The contracts in hand will employ the present force approximately 18 months.

Comparisons are made of the balance sheets for the past four years, and totaled as follows: 1909, $5,382,128; 1910, $7,038,883; 1911, $5,980,264; 1912, $5,939,631.

Miss Maude Amsden, who has recently began her service in this city, as supervisor of music held a general teachers meeting at the Coddington school, Wednesday afternoon, at which she gave a general outline of her plans and methods of carrying them out.

DAY INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

The number on the waiting list of the day industrial school session is steadily incresing and in all probability the second class, which it is planned to open in September when another teacher is added to the school, will be filled before the First of July. The school and all the establishments with which the school co-operate have been thoroughly inspected recently by the agent of the State Board of Education who expressed his hearty approval of the scope and resources of the work.

The call for information with regard to the Quincy Industrial school is so constant and widespread that arrangements have been made to print a brief pamphlet giving all the essential details of its organization and operation. This pamphlet will be reserved for distribution among other cities seeking the information.

ADAMS SCHOOL.

Work on the new Adams School has been delayed for the past few days owing to the fact that the iron frame work has not yet arrived in Quincy, but it is expected the latter part of this week. There seems to be little doubt, however, but that the building will be ready for occupancy in September.

A very successful candy sale was held at the close of school last Thursday afternoon. The sum of $27.26 was made and will be added to the Decoration Fund for the new building.

LINCOLN DAY AT WOLLASTON

Rev. Edward A. Horton Discoursed on the Martyr

A large number of parents attended the Lincoln day exercises at the Wollaston Grammar school Wednesday afternoon. The Ladies Aid Alliance which lent the speaker attended the meeting in a body. Principal David H. Goodspeed presided and the six upper grades of the school participated. The program opened with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" and the salute to the flag by the pupils.

Principal David H. Goodspeed read the governor's proclamation and Lincoln's Gettysburg address was recited by the pupils of Grade Eight. The school sang the "Battle Hymn of the Republic." A striking epitome of Lincoln's character by Frank E. Parlin, ex-superintendent of the Quincy schools was read by Mr. Goodspeed.

In his address on "Lincoln," Rev. Edward A. Horton, chaplain of the Massachusetts Senate told many anecdotes of this great man. Mr. Horton was one of those who responded to the first call for volunteers in the Civil War. He heard Lincoln speak several times.

"Lincoln," he said, "bridged the gap from obscurity to fame. He was the most abused president by people of his day, and was even slandered by members of his own cabinet. He was the least understood of all our presidents.

"His success lay in his big heartedness and his love for humanity and the common people. During the war he often stole away to visit the sick and wounded. He often prayed that the war would speedily close. Lincoln was blamed."

Mr. Horton reviewed the writing of the Gettysburg address. "England" he said "first recognized its beauty and conciseness of expression. It is a fine specimen of literature and will be ranked among the classics. Lincoln is loved by the world today and is our greatest American."

In closing, "America" was sung. The music was directed by Principal Goodspeed and Miss Beulah Sturtevant was the pianist.

KINDERGARTEN DRAMATICS

Much interest is being manifested in "Our Mutual Friend"" which is to be given in the Wollaston Grammar School hall for the benefit of the Wollaston Free Kindergarten. This dramatization from Charles Dickens will be produced by the Wollaston Dramatic club in four acts, tonight and Friday evening many Wollaston footlight favorites will be seen in the odd roles. The comedy is being staged by Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney.

GIVEN LEAVE TO WITHDRAW BILL

Fate of McDevitt's Effort For Lower Gas Price

Leave to withdraw was the verdict of the Public Lighting Committee on the petition on John J. McDevitt for 80-cent gas in Quincy. The same committee reported a bill to penalize any gas company which charges for the use of a meter for any portion of the fiscal year during which a consumer uses $7 worth of gas .

HE UNDERSTOOD HUMAN NATURE

A Trait of Lincoln Which Brought Others to His Views

The Bethany Brotherhood is doing a good practical work, as well as enjoying some very pleasant evenings. About 50 men attended the February meeting, Wednesday evening in Bethany chapel, the Rev. B. A. Willmott, presiding. The brotherhood pledged $50 or more toward the introduction of earphones in the church. Other organizations of the church are co-operating in the movement, that the deaf may enjoy the services.

After the business meeting, Rev. George W. Martin, D. D., of Lexington, a former colleague of Mr. Willmott at Lowell, was introduced and gave an admirable address on Abraham Lincoln, which he termed a word picture. He certainly is an admirer of the martyred President, and a close student of his great life. First he portrayed Lincoln physically, then mentally, morally and religiously. Without notes he quoted many of the utterances of Lincoln, and introduced some of his stories. Above all Lincoln was a man, a righteous man, who understood human nature, and was irresistibile in bringing others to his views.

Long applause greeted Dr. Martin at the close and he was given a rising vote of thanks.

Refreshments followed, the committee including John Evans, Lorenzo Wood and Arthur B. Innis.

AT CODDINGTON SCHOOL.

Charles H. Johnson gave his illustrated lecture on Washington before the Parents' and Teachers' association at the Coddington school hall on Wednesday evening before a large audience. The speaker also made reference to President Lincoln. There were songs by pupils and the exercises closed with a picture of the American Flag, and the singing of "Star Spangled Banner" by Mrs. W. F. Perry.

LENTEN SERVICES.

At Christ church, Wednesday evening, Rev. James A. Thompson of the church of the Epiphany, Walpole, addressed a large congregation from the text "In that we were sinners, God sent his only son, that we might not be lost."

Rev. Chester A. Drummond, minister of the First Unitarian church in Somerville, preached at the Lenten service of the Wollaston Unitarian church last evening. Miss Ernestine Litchfield sang two selections.

SWEEPING WIND OF THE PRAIRIE

And Vastness of Primeval Forests Alone Measured

NATURE OF LINCOLN

The birthday of President Abraham Lincoln was fittingly observed Wednesday evening by members of Paul Revere Post and Paul Revere Womens Relief corps at a gathering held at the residence of Past Commander Francis P. Loud. The room in which the exercises were held was prettily decorated with flags and bunting, a large portrait ofthe martyred President occupying a prominent place.

Words of welcome by Past Commander Loud were followed by reading of the scriptures and repeating the Lord's prayer in unison. Mrs. Loud at the piano and Mr. Loud with the violin then rendered "The Star Spangled Banner."

The exercises were in charge of Mrs. Eliza A. Penniman, Patriotic Instructor of Paul Revere Woman's Relief corps who introduced Mayor Stone.

His Honor said that it always gave him great pleasure to attend meetings of this kind and that he thought the time was not far distant when Lincolns birthday would become a national holiday and that it would be as generally observed as that of Washington.

Past Commander James H. Webb gave a short talk on the life of Lincoln and other brief remarks were made by Past Commander George L. Phillips, Patriotic Instructor of Post 88 and Mrs. Cylendia C. Richardson of the Relief Corps.

The address of the evening was by Austin W. Green, master of the Montclair school, and a Son of Veteran. He gave a brief outline of the life and work of Lincoln and said he would always be a hero and an ideal to the American youth, for only this country could have produced him. The sweeping winds of the praries and the vastness of the primeval forests went to the making of his nature, which was as simple as are all things which we call great.

The exercises closed with a salute to the flag and all rising and singing ""America."

ALL WANT INCREASES.

Mayor Stone is busy preparing the annual Mayor's and Treasurers budget to be sent to the City Council next Monday. Every department desires an increase over what was given them last year and he is finding it quite a hard problem to keep the budget within the $12 limit. It would require at least a $15 or more limit to give all departments the amount they desire.

TO SAVE THEM FROM BALKANS

Turks Make Formal Appeal to British Foreign Minister

SUFFERING SEVERE REVERSES

Twenty-Five Hundred Buried by Allies, While Three Thousand Dead Are Left Scattered Over Battlefield of Bulair—Many Christians Reported Masascred by Turks

London, Feb. 13.—The Turkish government has formally requested Sir Edward Grey to invite the European powers to intervene to stop the Balkan war. This request has been communicated to the ambassadors here, who have transmitted it to their respective governments. They will meet on Friday to report the result.

More detailed accounts of the Bulair battle received at Sofia say that it was a complete disaster for the Turks, 2500 of whom were buried by the Bulgarians, and another 3000 Turkish dead left lying scattered over the battlefield. According to reports received here nearly 10,000 Turks were wounded.

The Turkish disembarkation of two divisions at Charkeui occupied two days. At 6 o'clock on the morning of the third day the Bulgarians fiercely attacked them, and in the afternoon, finding themselves in danger of being surrounded, the Turks fled in a panic. They regained the shore with difficulty, pursued by Bulgarian infantry and artillery. Their re-embarkation was effected in great disorder under the protection of the guns of the Turkish warships. When the remnants of the Turkish soldiers were aboard the ships the flotilla steamed away.

On the other hand, the Constantinople correspondent of the Daily News asserts that Enver Bey made a successful landing at Charkeui, compelling the Bulgers, who opposed him, to retire. He intends to cross the Rhodope mountains and attack the Bulgarians in the rear at Kavak.

While official accounts of the fighting issued at Sofia and Constantinopde are very conflicting, it seems to be certain that the Turkish arms have again met serious reverses, although Adrianople and Scutari are still holding out.

It is reported in Sofia that the Turkish troops drove the whole male Christian population of Buyuk Chekmedje into the schoolhouse there and then massacred them. Subsequently they killed all the Christian women and children with the exception of the young girls, whom they carried off on board ship.

There was no fighting yesterday either in the Gallipoli peninsula or at the Tchatalja lines. The bombardment of Adrianople, however, continues.

Bulgaria having refused the request of the powers that foreigners be allowed to leave Adrianople, the French government has made further representations to Bulgaria of the most pressing character, demanding that French residents be authorized to quit the city immediately.

MANY DESERTERS

Cold Proves Too Much For Suffragettes on Long Hike

Metuchen, N. J., Feb. 13.—It was a half-frozen "army" of sixteen suffragists—reduced by cold and exposure to that number from an original 200, who left Newark yesterday morning—that struggled into this village last night to make the first bivouac of its 250-mile march to Washington to carry a message to Woodrow Wilson on the day of his inauguration as president.

From town to town as the first day of arduous tramping wore on, hikers in tens and twenties unostentatiously left the ranks and sought warmth indoors and then confessed themselves deserters by boarding trains for their homes.

SQUANTUM LINED UP

erty of this section from Neponset river to Squantum had increased $4,500,000 in recent years. He said this was a tremendous advancement and that Squantum was justly due a number of improvements including streets, lights, etc.

A unanimous vote of thanks was extended Commissioner Crane for coming to Squantum.

Chairman Hagan of the street committee told of his conference with Mayor Stone and Commissioner of Public Works Tupper regarding street improvements in Squantum. He said the mayor after being shown the figures regarding Squantum's growth expressed himself in favor of the acceptance of additional streets. It was estimated by Commissioner Tupper that to put Huckins avenue and Bellevue road in good condition would cost about $7000.

It was voted that President Carlson, Chairman Hagan of the street committee and Treasurer Callahan, be the speakers to present the case of the association at the public hearing Monday night. Messrs. Nelson, Jepson and Fifield were appointed a committeee to draw up a map suitable to demonstrated the locations of the streets for the public hearing.

Messrs. Smith, Nelson and Bostwick were made a committee to draw up a special announcement of the hearing.

Chairman John Holmes of the school committee reported on the hearing given by the school committee regarding noon fares for school children. He said no report had been made by the school committee. Mr. Anderson reported that the transportation committee of the school committee had reported favorable on giving the noon tickets.

Chairman Kenyon of the street railway committee reported that he had communicated with the Bay State railroad officials regarding better service for Squantum . He said he had received nothing but evasive answers until last night when he received word that a communication outlining what the company would do, had been forwarded.

Chairman Kenyon has demanded in behalf of the association and Squantum residents half hour cars after the first of April during the day and a car to connect with the 11.20 P. M. train out of Boston every night and the abolition of the present arrangement of turning cars at Atlantic. If these matters are not attended to by the railroad officials the association has voted to take its protest before the Railroad Commissioners.

Chairman Kenyon of the street lights committee reported that Mayor Stone had promised additional street lights for Squantum. It is about definately decided that 15 additional lights will be installed at once. There was some discussion as to whether the association should favor gas or electric lights and it was decided that the association should not act in this matter at present.

Mr. Anderson complained of the electric light service. He said that a light on East Squantum street has been out of order for over a week and an appeal to different authorities was of no avail.

Mr. Marden, chairman of the police committee, reported that there had been a conference with the chief of police but that there was no assurance of police protection until the new police budget went through. Mayor Stone has recommended $500 for police protection for Squantum for the coming year.

A vote of thanks was extended President Carlson for a handsome gavel which he presented the association. A vote of thanks was also extended Vice President Smith for the use of his home for the meeting. The next meeting will be held at the bungalow of John R. Nelson on Tuesday, March 18.

AUTO ACCIDENT ONE INCIDENT

In the Courtship of Dr. Crimmins and Miss Langdon

An automobile accident on Presidents Bridge was only one of many incidents in the courtship of Miss Louise Langdon, a well known stock actress by Dr. Philip P. Crimmins of Brockton whose engagement has been announced. The marriage date has not been set but friends believe it will occur within a short time.

In the early spring Miss Langdon, while on her way to Boston, drove a Maxwell car into the north side of Presidents Bridge. Dr. Crimmins was in the machine and both were severely shaken up. A heavy box covering a water pipe was all that stopped the machine from crashing through the fence to the tracks below, a drop of 20 feet.

People in the vicinity said that the noise of the machine striking the casing sounded as though a house had fallen down.

A remark passed by Dr. Crimmins to a reporter who saw the accident was the first inkling of the serious attentions of the physician. Miss Langdon said that the heavy fog which was over the Adams street section that night bothered her view, and caused the accident.

Miss Langdon was a leading lady in the Hathaway Stock Co. at Brockton for many months. She is a graduate of Radcliffe College and the Emerson school of oratory.

Dr. Crimmins has relatives in Quincy was frequent visitor in his younger days and has many friends here.

Hudson who read a short but beautiful poem and prayer by Rev. Richard E. Armstrong. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

LOST FOREFINGER.

Robert Brohan of West Quincy employed at a shoe factory at South Braintree had his hand caught in a machine at the factory Wednesday afternoon and before the machinery could be stopped his forefinger of the right hand was fractured.

PROUD OF THE PUBLIC LANDING

Swimming Beach A'so Included at Weymouth

IN THE IMPROVEMENTS

Weymouth is to have a public landing and swimming beach. The plans presented have been greeted with general approval.

In referring to this improvement and meeting with a public demand, the Weymouth Times has the following:

"This is an age of concerted effort; an age of individual sacrifice for public weal; an age of big public constructive work. Germany was foremost in the application of this spirit, and all Europe quickly followed her, and now finally America has taken up the work. German cities have spent millions upon millions on housing, transportation, ports, and health. American cities are doing so to-day; Boston is using $9,000,000 for the development of her port, Seattle is spending $40,000,000 on hers; even Houston, Texas, has had a paid engineer studying foreign works for a year past with a view to building up that city most efficiently, for Houston's enthusiastis citizens realize that with the opening of the big canal she will be in line for big business—and they are preparing.

"All these works are being done with a view to the future. What is Weymouth doing? But Weymouth is small! Because a man makes counters, instead of running a whole shoe factory, has he no reason for studying leathers, labors, markets, and finance? If he intends to make counters the rest of his life,certainly not. But if he would run a factory, he must prepare. Does Weymouth intend to grow? Has Weymouth any ambition? Then she too must study and act: she too must prepare.

"True, Weymouth is small. So is Cohasset. So is Quincy and Wollaston, and Atlantic, and Winthrop, and Revere, and Lynn, and Swampscott. And yet in each of these communities part of the water front belongs to the public. In the meantime, Weymouth and Hingham have slept contentedly, and today find themselves the only towns from Cohasset to Swampscott, whose general public cannot, without depending upon private indulgence, touch foot anywhere on their long shore lines. Shall Weymouth be last?

"A committee of the Board of Trade has been studying the problem of obtaining suitable shore property for public landing purposes and has reported in part as follows:

"At its first meeting your committee formed the opinion that a public landing should not be located above the Fore River bridge, because of the bridge itself, the swift tide,and the narrow winding channel; nor below the cove, east of Great Hill, because of the inaccessibility of that district.

"Shortly after its organization your committee made a thorough inspection of the shore from the Fore River bridge to Great Hill and found but three locations, which deserved serious considertion in connection with a landing:

"(a) Dr. Welch's property immediately adjacent to the bridge. This was eliminated early, both on account of its cost and the rapid flow of the river at that point.

"(b) Land at the eastern foot of Great Hill. This consists of a small triangular piece on the water side of the Fort Point road and could probably be purchased for about $500. The gradual slope of the land and the character of the beach in this cove makes it very suitable for bathing. It has the disadvantage, however, of being served by cars, from which persons would have to transfer to reach otherparts of the town, and is moreover too far from the channel to be of much use as a Public Landing.

"(c) Hunt's Hill, at Bay View, being the land on which Keen's shipyard was formerly located and consisting of some 23,000 square feet. This plot is the best available site for the purpose. It is practically on the channel and has moreover, an entering channel already dredged out. Fore River avenue terminates at the eastern line and the East Weymouth-Quincy cars run within a ten minute walk from the shore, making the property easily accessible.

"This land was recently purchased by Messrs. Cox, Brown, Purdy, et al. for $3,500, mainly for the purpose of protecting their own neighboring dwellings against undesirable occupancy of the land. They are a public spirited body of men and although they are now planning to erect a clubhouse on the land, they have given members an impression that, if the town desired this site, and would not put it to an objectionable use, they would sell at a reasonable figure.

"Feeling that the town of Weymouth should own an approach to the harbor that such an approach would be useful as a landing at present and necessary to the town in the future, and feeling furthermore, that it can never be purchased cheaper than now ,your committee unanimously recommends that the Board of Trade use its influence toward bringing about the purchase of this property by the town at the next regular town meeting.'

"The Board of Trade unanimously adopted this report and has had inserted in the warrant an article to see if the town will make this purchase.

"Mr. Frank A. Bourne, who is designing the improvements for Copley square in Boston, came out to Weymouth and looked over the shore. He was enthusiastic over the possibilities offered by Hunt's Hill and made a sketch, which we reproduce above, showing a possible development of the point for public landing purposes.

"The members of the committee appointed by the Board of Trade are Walter B. Binnian chairman, Frank H. Torrey, Minot P. Garey, Dr. Clarence P. Whittle and Judge Louis A. Cook.

There is still a chance to help somebody win this contest. The winner will have a trip to Washington with all expenses paid on the week of the inauguration of President-Elect Woodrow Wilson. The winner of the contest has the privilege of taking a companion on the trip and the expenses of both will be paid by the Daily Ledger.

The trip will be a magnificent one and the winner will have a chance to see Washington at its best. The spectacle of an inauguration of a Democratic president is one that has not been seen in Washington for many years and people from all over the country are going to be there. For the first time in history Confederate veterans will march down Pennsylvania avenue in the grand inaugural parade. For four long years these veterans tried hard to capture Washington and march through the streets and on the fourth day of March next they will march down the well known avenue, but this time in peace.

We have received a number of inquiries regarding the subscriptions. ome evidently do not understand. In reply we will state that every subscription paid is good for 1000 votes. # ANOTHER DAY OF FIGHTING

Neither Side Gains Advantage In Capital of Mexico

HEAVY ARTILLERY BEING USED

Many Buildings Practically Wrecked as Bombardment Continues Despite Protests of Diplomats—Centre of Business District Shelled—Foreigners Seek Refuge Around Embassy

Mexico City, Feb. 13.—The battle for the control of the capital between the federal forces and the followers of General Diaz was resumed with great vigor yesterday morning and continued throughout the day, without material advantage to either side at nightfall. Non-combatants and foreigners suffered just as much as did the local armies. One American woman was killed; another fatally wounded.

Both sides used heavier artillery than at any other time, but the Diaz followers were more conservative in their firing and also seemed to be the better marksmen. They silenced a number of machine guns which the federals had placed on a number of high buildings in the centre of the business district and created considerable havoc among the infantry detachments, but seemed unable to make any considerable headway.

The American woman killed was Mrs. H. W. Holmes, who, while preparing dinner in her home, was struck by a bursting shell. Mrs. Percy Griffiths, another American woman, had both her legs shot off.

The bombardment reached a climax yesterday when Diaz shelled the very centre of the business districts in an effort to silence the cannon of the government and drive from the roofs of the taller buildings the federal sharpshooters and the men serving the machine guns.

This smothering action, directed from the arsenal, continued for more than two hours. Shrapnel fell like hail and occasionally bursting shells tore holes in the sides of buildings.

Meanwhile, the fire from the opposite direction rendered the far-out residence district uninhabitable, as well as the big apartment building known as Gore court.

The federal guns replied occasionally, but without serious damage to the rebel positions. It was this action which decided the diplomats, after communicating with their governments, to protest against the continuation of such operations, which they characterized as being unsanctioned by the laws of warfare of civilized nations.

President Madero and his ministers agreed that the bombardment of cities was barbarous and the minister of war, acting in accordance with the president and the cabinet, sent to General Diaz a protest declaring that if he persisted, the government would regard all those occupying the arsenal as beyond the pale of the law.

Immediately after the dispatch of this message, the finance minister, Ernesto Madero, speaking for the president, said it had been determined to crush the rebels by a concerted attack, the government using the heaviest guns available and bringing to a swift end the next big action, when the fighting was resumed.

Not doubting the intentions of the government to resume the action on an augmented scale, the foreigners sent throughout yesterday afternoon automobiles under white flags to collect the women and children and transfer them to the section around the American embassy, which is considered relatively free from danger. An American guard is on duty at the embassy, and foreign residents without visible arms patrol this quarter, because of the total absence of police.

UP TO CONGRESS

Must Share Responsibility For Intervention In Mexico, Says Taft

Washington, Feb. 13.—President Taft and the cabinet are in accord that congress shall share the responsibility for any intervention in Mexico.

A day of conferences between the president and his advisers ended with the understanding that should conditions in Mexico City become so much worse as to demand the landing of American troops, the president will lay before both houses of congress the full facts of the situation in a special message.

The United States has thus prepared for the Mexican crisis:

Total of 35,000 men in army and navy put in readiness for instant movement.

Six dreadnoughts with approximately 6000 bluejackets and marines now rushing for Mexican ports.

Ten other crack fighting ships of Atlantic fleet with steam up at Guantanamo, seventy hours off. They have approximately 9000 officers and men.

Five other smaller craft in Central American waters within call of wireless.

"Oh, we had mince pie and—and some other things," replied Willie when asked what he had for dinner. And that's about the only way you can describe a dinner that includes mince pie.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects and wounds Thornton in a duel For Sumter is fired upon

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him Frank enlists in the Union army

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Thornton escapes, captures Lieutenant Bedloe and takes from him Mrs. Haverill's miniature.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

"Stonewall" Jackson is killed. Grant takes supreme command of the Federal armies, and Sheridan invades the valley of Virginia.

Gertrude loves West, but disappears before he reaches Belle Bosquet. West recognizes Bedloe as Frank Haverill.

General Haverill, not knowing Bedloe is his son, sends him on a dangerous mission. Gertrude is captured by West's soldiers.

West takes Mrs. Haverill's miniature from Thornton. Bedloe is wounded and captured. Haverill plans to exchange Ellingham for Bedloe. Thornton stabs West. Haverill finds the miniature on West's person.

Gertrude tells West she loves him. The Union army at Winchester is surprised and driven back. Bedloe returns, dying. Haverill places West under arrest.

"The war in Virginia is over," said Sheridan to General Haverill, passing as the latter's troops still advanced, until a white flag of truce appeared in the distance, approaching like a reluctant dove of peace.

"Now there is nothing left me but to go and see General Grant," General Lee had said.

"Oh, general," came the protest of his lieutenants, "what will the world say of the surrender of your army in the field?"

"Yes, they will say hard things of us, I know. They will not understand how we were overwhelmed by numbers. But that is not the question. The question is, Is it right to surrender? If it is right then I will take all the responsibility."

The note brought under flag of truce to the Federal lines was General Lee's reply to an earlier communication from General Grant. The proposition had been made and accepted for a suspension of hostilities pending negotiations looking to the surrender of Lee's army

During the interval occupied by these arrangements a stately, gray bearded Federal officer approached Colonel Ellingham, who had been sent by General Gordon with the flag of truce, and drawing something—doubtless a document—from his side pocket said:

"Colonel, I have been requested while waiting to extend to you the courtesies of this side of the line"—at the same time proffering the supposed document which proved to be a silver flask.

Then Colonel Ellingham recognized General Haverill—the Mexican war comrade of his father under the old flag, and his own and Gertrude's guardian until the great sundering of sacred ties by the awful outbreak of civil strife that now had spent itself after laying the country and its homes and industries desolate.

"We meet under difficult circumstances, General Haverill," faltered Bob, "but—I trust there are no hard feelings?"

"None, Robert, my boy—quite the contrary. It is time, God knows! How are Gertrude and"—

"She and Kerchival were married last Sunday," answered Bob. He saw the general's face alter strangely, and his whole attitude stiffen, as if his heart had suddenly frozen. So he hastened to add, "But we have not been able to locate Captain Heartsease, and I hardly dare to speculate as to what has become of him."

"On that point I can give you welcome news," said General Haverill, recovering his old cordiality. "He escaped while being transferred from Danville and came to us at Petersburg to rejoin the corps. But he was in no condition for campaigning, so I sent him on to Washington, where I have no doubt Miss Jenny Buckthorn will succeed in nursing him to recovery."

In due time word was received from General Grant that he was coming on immediately to discuss terms of surrender with the southern commander. General Grant's courier found General Lee near Appomattox Court House, lying under an apple tree upon a blanket spread over some rails, whence originated the report about Lee's having surrendered "beneath the apple tree of Appomattox."

The historic meeting of the two generals really took place at the house of Wilmer McLean, a Virginian, who, before and during the first battle of Manassas, had resided at McLean's ford, over Bull Run, and who had removed thence to Appomattox expressly in order to be out of the war's way.

General Grant, accompanied by Generals Sheridan and Ord and several other officers, including General Haverill, presented a striking contrast to General Lee, who, with a couple of staff officers, awaited him in the old fashioned parlor of the McLean residence.

Grant, forty-three years old, medium sized and somewhat stoop shouldered, wore no marks of rank except a general's shoulder straps on his blue flannel blouse. His trousers were tucked in his boots, and he had neither spurs nor sword. Lee, a dozen years older than his late adversary, had the stature and bearing of an old knight crusader. His hair and beard were silver gray. He wore a plain but handsome uniform of Confederate gray, top boots with spurs, gauntlets and a dress sword. This unaccustomed side arm was a splendid blade engraved on one side with the motto "Aide toi et Dieu t'aidera," on the other side with the inscription, reminiscent of the cam-

The terms of surrender discussed and reduced to writing at General Lee's request embraced the parole of officers and men "not to take up arms against the government of the United States until properly exchanged;" arms, artillery and public property to be turned over to Federal officers, this latter provision not embracing the side arms of the Confederate officers nor their private horses or baggage.

Before this draft was copied in ink for signing General Lee took opportunity to remark that his cavalrymen and many of the artillerymen owned their horses and asked whether these men as well as the officers would be permitted to retain them.

"I suppose," said Grant sympathetically, "that a great many of the men in your ranks are small farmers when they are at home and in that case will need their horses just now to put in crops to carry themselves and their families through next winter. Well, then, we will have it set down that any man who claims to own a horse or mule may retain the animal and take it home with him."

"That will have a very good effect," said Lee, much gratified.

The Union commander acted with good grace in his own disposition and at the same time was in perfect accord with the expressed wish of President Lincoln at Richmond, when General Weitzel had asked what he should do in regard to the "conquered people."

"Oh, if I were you I'd let 'em up easy!" was Mr. Lincoln's reply. "I'd let 'em up easy."

Indeed, the behavior of Grant at Appomattox touched the heights of true poetic chivalry, springing from a kind and magnanimous heart. He neither demanded nor accepted Lee's sword, as formal military custom might have justified him in doing, but actually apologized for not having his own, which in the hurry of departure he had left behind in the wagon.

PORT REACHED BY TERRA NOVA

Uneasiness Concerning Fate of Japanese Expedition

SCOTT'S APPEAL IS HEEDED

British Government and People Will See That Explorers' Wives and Families Are Provided For—Amundsen Paints Verbal Picture of Probable Manner In Which Brave Men Perished In the Antarctic

Christchurch, N. Z., Feb. 13.—The Terra Nova, the vessel which took Captain Robert F. Scott to the Antarctic on his way to the South Pole, and which returned there to fetch him back, but instead brought news of his and his companions' heroic death, arrived in this port yesterday.

The arrival of the Terra Nova gave rise to considerable uneasiness concerning the fate of the Japanese South Polar expedition under Lieutenant Shirase, which has not been heard from.

H. G. Ponting, a photographer who accompanied Scott's expedition, was aboard the Terra Nova. He was quoted as saying that the Scott explorers had found traces of the Japanese and that the indications were that the Shirase party might have been overwhelmed by the same Antarctic blizzard that killed Scott and his men. The Japanese Antarctic expedition set out from Yokohama in 1910 in a 150-ton schooner.

Britain Responds to Scott's Appeal

London, Feb. 13.—The general feeling expresed is that no honor is too great to be rendered the dead heroes, and that whatever is done by the government should not interfere with the spontaneous generosity of the public in behalf of the wives and families of those who sacrificed themselves in the nation's honor and service, both living and dead. Nothing has been decided as to what steps the government or the admiralty will take, but full confidence is felt that ample provision will be made.

The committee of the British Arctic expedition will issue a national appeal for a fund to provide for the relatives of the dead explorers.

The Daily Telegram has opened a fund for a national memorial to Captain Scott and his dead comrades. Among the first subscribers to this fund are Rear Admiral Peary and Baron Rosthschild.

The Daily Chronicle also has opened a fund which it heads with a subscription of $10,000. Another $5000 has been added to the newspaper's subscription.

AMUNDSEN'S THEORY

Explorers Were Not In Fit Condition to Meet Great Blizzard

Chicago, Feb. 13.—A thrilling picture of the probable manner in which Robert F. Scott and four of his companions met death on the ice barrier close to the earth's southern extremity was painted verbally by Captain Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole.

"It is hard to say just what happened," said the Norwegian explorer, "but we can imagine, perhaps, although it is horrible. We know, of course, that it happened about the 79th parallel and that they were down on the barrier and not on the plateau. And just about there our positive knowledge stops. Certainly they were exhausted and starving. It may be they had some scurvy among them—who can say?

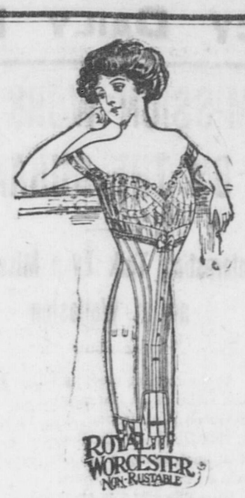

"At any rate, they were not in a fit condition to meet the terrible blizzard when it came. Not that blizzards are unusual. Scott was prepared for blizzards, for he was no amateur. One may always expect blizzards in that country.

"But there they were—those poor, forlorn fellows—struggling along without even ponies to draw their sledges, for they had sent back their last ponies when they had reached a point 150 miles from the pole on the journey southward.

"They were drawing their own sledges, weakened though they must have been. They had no dogs, and that was a mistake, I am afraid. And always before them there stretched that awful waste of ice. And across the frozen surface sweeps the wind—furiously. The great flat expanse offers a terrific sweep for the blast and there is no protection except what man is able to build for himself.

"And they died," he said softly. "Of course Evans—Petty Officer Evans—had died already. He fell on the ice. But the others must have died within a short time of each other. Oates went bravely out into the blizzard that his sickly condition might not hinder the others. That was a great sacrifice, but it did no good.

"I cannot read that last message of Captain Scott's without emotion. I never met him, personally, but I know he was a brave man. And to think," added the captain in a hushed tone, "that while those brave men were dying in the waste of ice, I was lecturing in warmth and comfort in Australia."

COURT SAYS UNION IS NOT TO BLAME

Denies Injunction Against Boston Garment Workers

Boston, Feb. 13.—Judge Hardy denied the injunction against the United Garment Workers of America brought by the Macullar, Parker company. Hardy said:

"I cannot infer from evidence presented that the union was responsible for any trouble that may have occurred.

"It is pretty hard to deal with the strike cases because the union may not order violence, but a number of irresponsible persons may get together to satisfy their pugnacious tendencies. Such things as these hurt the unions more than employers.

"I must refuse an injunction. But I hope this union won't take courage from this."

TO RESUME BUILDING

Grand Trunk Railroad Will Construct New Line to Palmer

Southbridge, Mass., Feb. 13.—John W. Marsch, head of the Marsch, Cleary, White Construction company, railroad contractors, came to Southbridge from Montreal, where he has been in conference with Grand Trunk officials, and brought with him the best news heard in Southbridge since the work was stopped in November.

Marsch said positively the Grand Trunk will build the road to Palmer, and backed up this statement by stopping shipment of machinery that had been ordered shipped to Philadelphia, where he has a contract.

Locomotives, shovels and other pieces of apparatus that have been moved to the Central Mills siding will be returned where they were taken from to remain there until work opens in the spring.

Weymouth made a good showing on this string also. Then came the third Weymouth nosing ahead with 11 points to the good. # MISSION WORK BY THE CUBANS

Interesting Talk by a Missionary at Wollaston

At the regular meeting of the Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostom's church, Wednesday afternoon Miss Josephine F. Bumstead of Cambridge gave a most interesting and comprehensive talk on Missions in Cuba.

Miss Bumstead is chairman of the Massachusetts Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary in charge of the Latin-American work which consists of missions in Mexico Brazil, Haiti and Cuba. On a map she pointed out the various mission station in the different provices including the Isle of Pines. She described some of the curious old towns, the different races, the traditions supperstitions, etc., of the natives ,as well as their inheritance and environment as a preface to her talk on what the Churches are doing.

Of late years history has been making fast and no small part has been the work of the devoted missionaries including Bishop Knight who has such a satesman like ability, and is such a power among men, Archdeacon Steele The Rev. Mr. McCollough; Burry, Ramsdell and Decker all indefatigable workers. Besides eleven priest there are as many more native ones.

In the field are ten women made possible by the women's united offering. The problems with which these workers have to deal are sometimes hard to solve.

The ray of hope in Cuba are the children. The 18 schools, boarding and day, besides an orphanage and an industrial school are doing splendid work.

Those in charge of sugar plantations, one of which employes 7000 people are a tremendous power for good when the right men are in charge.

The reading of parts of letters from Cuba brought one in close touch with the work. In the homely details was a deal of pathos.

Miss Bumstead had appreciative listeners and was given a cordial greeting during a social hour which followed. Photographs of the Cathedral at Havana and many other views were shown. Mrs. George P. Parker and Mrs. Frederick S. Waite served tea and fancy crackers.

MEATS MUST BE COVERED

State Health Board Approves Rule Governing Boston Markets

Boston, Feb. 13.—After two years of constant battling the local board of health has won its fight to put into operation its "cover up" regulation on foodstuffs exposed for sale out of doors in this city.

Yesterday the state board of health approved this regulation which will make a change in the methods of selling meats, fish, fruits, berries, etc., in Boston.

The new law requires dealers in meats, fruits, fish, certain berries, cracked nuts and other food stuffs, which might be contaminated by being exposed to dust and flies, to keep them under coverings while exposed for sale. This applies also to such food stuffs while being transported on teams.

NEWTON WON CHAMPIONSHIP

Quincy 2d Team by Good Work Forged Ahead

CHECKING CLEAN SWEEP

The Newton Y. M. C. A. 1st team practically won the State Championship last night when it won from the Quincy five by the score of 34 to 23.

Newton secured a big lead in the first half, the score being 18 to 8 when the whistle blew. The Quincy boys came right back, however, and put the score up to 17 to 18 before the local rooters knew what had happened.

Capt. Jacobs got into the game in earnest and rapidly caged two pretty goals. Trask scored two on fouls and then Kenn made a dandy basket from the middle of the floor and Quincy was only one point behind .

It proved to be Quincy's last effort, however, for Newton began to draw away after Jacobs had scored twice more. Muir, the Newton centre was put out of the game on a fine foul rule. Miley going to centre and Middlemas to forward position. The change worked well, for Miley immediately caged two goals and Middlemas one. Henry Trask had an off night, missing easy shots repeatedly during the last five minutes of the game.

"Jack" Melville who played in a back position did grand work holding Cady down to 3 goals. Rich also played well.

The second team game aroused almost as much interest and enthusiasm as did the "big" contest. Each team had won a game and Newton was naturally the favorite being on its home floor. It was decided by Capt. Dineen that the heaviest team which Quincy could put on the floor should start the game and the result of the game showed the wisdom of his policy. The first half ended 12 to 18 in Quincy's favor, a fact which gave our boys much confidence. The passing and all round work of the entire quintet was the best that has been shown this season. "Pete" Miller, who played left back, put up a grand game, his fine passing and interception of Newton passes being mainly responsible for the victory. Croucher held Barrows, who played in the Newton 1st team last year, down to one basket. Pinel, Thomas and Price were there with the scoring end of the game. This victory puts Quincy into the lead in Second Team Division.

THREE PERCENT OF THEIR SALARIES

Tax Levied Upon Postmasters In Campaign of 1912

Washington, Feb. 13.—Gordon H. Campbell of Little Rock, Ark., treasurer of the Republican state committee of Arkansas, told the Clapp campaign fund investigating committee that he knew nothing of the charge by Thomas J. Camp, former postmaster at Beebe, Ark., that he was removed from office because he refused to contribute to the 1912 campaign.

Campbell told the committee he had solicited contributions from other postmasters in Arkansas in 1912, all the letters he sent out being similar to those sent to Camp.

"How about $39 fixed upon as the amount for Camp to contribute?" asked Senator Clapp.

"We thought there was no reason why he should not pay us about 3 percent of his salary," said Campbell.

"Was that amount to be contributed specified in all cases?" he was asked.

"In most cases it was."

BOUGHT WIFE FOR $2250

Statement of Gypsy In Jail on Charge of Wife Desertion

Nashville, Feb. 13.—That he paid $2250 for his wife is the remarkable statement made by Frank Thompson, 21 years of age, a gypsy. He says that two years ago, in Oklahoma, he married Mary Demetro, and that the money for her purchase was paid to her father, Eli Demetro, by his father.

Thompson is in the Davidson county jail charged with wife desertion and attempted assault upon her relatives.

SUICIDE AND HIS VICTIM TO REST IN THE SAME CEMETERY

Rev. Daniel Roy Freeman to Perform Last Sad Rites on Braintree Tragedy

Six Children to Witness Burial of Mother and Uncle at Same Time

The last sad rites resultant of the fearful tragedy of Thursday at Braintree will be performed Saturday, when the victims of the dual event, the murderer suicide and the sister-in-law whom he sent into eternity before him will be laid at rest.

The bodies of Mrs. Sarah Jennie Hobart, wife of George Hobart and Myron L. Hobart were not moved from the place where they were found still and cold in death.

There was no need of an autopsy to determine the cause of death and the conditions which are said to exist and the temper of the dead man and his views on certain subjects are accepted as evidence that the tragedy was murder and suicide.

Both funerals will be held Saturday from the home, at the corner of Washington and School streets which was jointly owned by the brothers. The funeral of Myron L. Hobart will be held at 11 o'clock in the forenoon. The funeral of the sister-in-law whom he murdered will be held at 2 o'clock in the afternoon Rev. D. Roy Freeman will conduct the services at each funeral. Both bodies will be buried in the First Parish cemetery at Braintree, but not in the same lot.

Declaration of Miss Norton at Board of Trade Banquet State Board Official Tells Some Home Truths

Lieut. Gov. Walsh Urged the Development of New England to Regain its Prestige in the Commercial World

The twelfth annual banquet and ladies' night of the Quincy Board of Trade was held Thursday evening at Music hall and while the attendance was not as large perhaps as in some other years, it was an unqualified success. The speaking was exceptionally good, especially the address of Lieut. Gov. David I. Walsh. John L.

LIEUT. GOV. DAVID I. WALSH.

Hamilton, President of the Board of Trade presided and during the banquet music was furnished by Provost orchestra.

From 6.30 to 7 o'clock there was an informal reception during which time those who were to participate in the banquet were arriving. They were immediately taken in charge by the reception committee who included President Hamilton, Charles C. Hearn, Delcevare King, Col. Henry L. Kincaide, H. Everett Crane, Frank Fessenden Crane, George T. Magee, J. Winthrop Pratt, Walter E. Piper, Harry G. Studley, Arthur W. Stetson, Thomas L. Williams, and Joseph A. Sedgwick. The ladies reception committee was headed by Miss Mildred Gray Huston and Miss Ernestine Shores, and they were assisted by the wives of the members of the reception committee.

The tables looked particularly attractive. At each cover in addition to a carnation there was a small valentine, the menu card and a card which briefly set forth why every tax-paying citizen, business or professional man in Quincy should be a member of the Quincy Board of Trade. This card read as follows:

"It is necessary at times for the Quincy Board of Trade to take some action which fails of universal approval. Such however, is the history of all human achievements. Nothing was ever done upon earth that did not excite criticism, and it is far better to be up and doing—even making a mistake now and then—than to die of dry rot.'

"Don't focus your memory on the mistakes fancied or real, that the Quincy Board of Trade may make. Its leaders are, after all, only human—like yourself. Men err collectively, as well as singly—but not so often.

"Judge the Quincy Board of Trade therefore, not by its few mistakes, but by the big aggregation of good things it does and seeks to do for the common welfare of Quincy and the South Shore district."

A part of the card was an application for membership blank. In addition to this Delcevare King appeared with a box of buttons one of which was given to each guest. These buttons bore the mysterious figure of 399. This he later explained to mean that the goal of the Board for the year 1913 was 399 members. That the Board had 299 members, Jan. 1, 1913 and the aim was to have 399 on January 1, 1914.

The only reserved table was that across the front of the platform. Those seated at this table were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. John R. Richards, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Whitman, Secretary and Mrs. John O. Hall, Joseph A. Sedgwick, Miss Edith Stone, John H. Corcoran, President and Mrs. John L. Hamilton, Miss Therese Norton of the Woman's Municipal League, Lt. Gov. David I. Walsh, Mayor and Mrs. Eugene R. Stone, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Hearn, Representative and Mrs. William J. Leslie, Dock Commissioner and Mrs. Frank F. Crane, Mr .and Mrs. H. Gerrish Smith, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Williams, Charles H. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Sandberg, Representative and Mrs. Michael T. Sullivan, Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra, Delcevare King, Frank Stone, Col.

HON. EUGENE R. STONE and Mrs. Henry L. Kincaide, Mr. and Mrs. J. Winthrop Pratt, Fred Williams, Miss Florence Pratt, Miss Marion Teasdale, William H. Teasdale, Miss Mildred Gray Huston, Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Piper and County Commissioner and Mrs. John F. Merrill.

The banquet was served by Burleigh & Martin. It was of good variety, well cooked and well served. The menu was as follows:—

Escalloped Oysters

Lobster Salad Chicken Salad

Croquettes with peas Small Patties

Roast Stuffed Turkey

Cranberry Sauce

Celery Radishes

Delmonico Potatoes

Queen Fritters, Sauce

Assorted Light and Fancy Home Made Cakes

Lady Fingers Macaroons

Frozen Pudding

Bisque Glace

Neapolitan

Pistachio Macaroon

Harlequin Sherbet

Vanilla Strawberry Chocolate

Rolls Coffee

It was a few minutes past 7 o'clock when everybody were in their places at the tables and the exercises opened with the singing of America followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Steenstra. Then the dinner was served.

The post prandial exercises commenced about 8 o'clock when President Hamilton briefly welcomed those present to the twelfth annual banquet. Next year he said another would be held but while it could not be more enthusiastic he hoped to see more members present .He then spoke of the buttons Mr. King had distributed ad called upon Mr. King to explain their object which he did.

Continuing President Hamilton spoke of what the Board could do with a large membership, and he believed that eventually the Board would number 1000 members. He introduced who extended the welcome of the city to the invited guests. His Honor said that he assured them it was a pleasure to welcome the Board. He had been a member of it for several years and knew the kind of work it was doing. If all got together and worked as a Board there would be no question as to the finances of the city. In the last few years the city has begun to expand and develop and the business interests are getting stronger. One of the prominent factors in this movement has been the Board of Trade. "Did you ever consider what it means to the members of the City Government to have a committee of the Board of Trade come and say we want something done? It is a great factor in bringing about improvements. Quincy is made up of several districts but the people in the outer districts do not take the interest they should. If they all joined together they would get more. He hoped during the coming year that these districts would come in to the Board. In speaking of an article in Thursday's Ledger from Squantum the Mayor said that he was sure that he did not make the statements which the article said that he did. If the people of that district would only join the Board of Trade they would get more than they now do. The Mayor then spoke of the trip taken last summer by the Board to the industries of the city. No city had so many wonderful industries as did Quincy. "You do not realize it. Join the Board and become one of us."

JOHN H. CORCORAN.

President of the State Board of Trade said that he was pleased to come to Quincy "the home of the JOHN O. HALL, Secretary.

Presidents .The centre of great activities, the home of shipbuilding and of no-license." Judging from his experience in getting from Boston the city did not have rapid transit for although he came on an express train the engineer stopped at every white post like a motorman.

Next to the influence of the church and schools there was no factor so beneficial as a Board of Trade. He then spoke of the work Boards of Trade were doing in other cities like Brockton and Framingham, as an example of what Quincy should be doing. Quincy should be a member of the State Board, not for any direct benefit, for one who joins a Board of this kind for selfish purposes is not good for much, but for the benefit of the whole community. The functions

BELATED TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF QUINCY'S HONORED SON

Provisions For a Bust of John Hancock in Doric Hall at State House

Only Statue in Existence in the Capitol at Washington

On or about next April 19 the Sons of the Revolution in Massachusetts will present a bust of John Hancock, with a suitably inscribed tablet, to the State, and it will be placed on the walls of Doric Hall in the State House. It will be the only sculpture of the President of the Continental Congress and first signer of the Declaration of Independence in Massachusetts. The State today does not own a likeness of its first Governor in stone, bronze or plaster.

John Hancock left no descendants. So far as Massachusetts history is concerned ,the name of Hancock is not to be found on any public record after the first Governor under the State Constitution was buried in the family vault in the Old Granary Burial Ground.

The State has never erected a monument in his memory, his splendid mansion on Beacon street which he intended to leave to the Commonwealth, has long since been torn down, a source of never-ending regret to local history lovers of today.

When the Sons of the Revoultion decided to make some sort of a memorial they discovered that the only sculpture in existence is a full-length statue of Hancock ,in the Senate wing of the Capitol at Washington.

The society had to petition both Houses of Congress for permission to make a plaster cast of the head of this statue, and at last session this was granted. The cast was taken by Herman Walthauser of New York, who is having it cast in bronze with an inscription which in part follows: "As President of the Provincial Congress: As our first Chief Executive under the State Constitution; As President of the Continental Congress and the first signer of the Declaration, 'where he wrote his name where all men could behold it and all time could not efface it,' he deserves this recognition.'

The cost of the memorial is being defrayed by the members of the society. The committee in charge of the memorial and of the ceremonies at the dedication, which will be quite elaborate ,consists of: Walter Gilman Page, chairman; Talbot Bailey Aldrich, Charles Dana Burrage, Charles Irving Thayer and Herbert Messenger Leland.

In the distribution of woman suffrage the southerners have to face the problem of dealing it out to the colored race and then to the poor whites.

And by the way why has not the south taken some measure to eliminate this characterization of "poor whites," by improving their condition and trying to build them up as equals.

In the north and the south, the phrase, "born free and equal," goes so far and no farther.

The Boston police should demand an investigation of the report that some of their members have attempted graft, for the honor of the force and the credit of the city.

The Boston school committee "gag-rule," is hardly in keeping with the high civilization, freedom, and a score of other high sounding titles to which Bay State men make claim when speaking of their own state.

The Connecticut farmer who interrupted Dr. Anna Shaw, woman suffragist speech and asked her to marry him, right before everybody, took a freakish way to propose.

SHOULD BE MANDATORY.

The "may" of the Boston excise board, no doubt, will call for a prompt "shall" by the people of the city, upon the question of investigating certain serious charges which have been made against the good name and fame of the city through its police department. A certain hotel keeper has charged that he was pointedly told he must "come across," which is the common phrase in such case, or, well it would not be healthy for him. He claims this mild request was made by members of the police force. He contends that he "did not come across," and things began to happen. He claims he has lost money because of this alleged enmity on the part of the police or some one. The excise board is quoted as saying when questioned upon the subject that there "may" be an investigation The citizens of Boston and undoubtedly members of the police force will be stronger in their view of the situation and insist that there "shall" be an investigation. In view of the many graft stories which are coming from all parts of the country it is up to the city of Boston, to know if anything of the kind exists in that city.

If there are dishonest policemen on the force or men higher up, they should be unearthed so that the entire force will not enjoy a reputation it does not deserve. On the other hand if the charges and complaints are groundless every officer will demand an investigation, that will place them in their proper light before the citizens. So it is safe to assume that the matter is not one which the excise board may exercise discretionary powers, but one which the citizens sitting as a court of appeal shall issue a mandamus that it "shall" be done.

CRY FOR PROTECTION

The time has gone by for the operation of a willy nilly policy with regard to the attitude of this country towards Mexico. Some impudent responses were received by this government, a few months ago to requests which had been made, which another country would probably have demanded an apology at the face of the cannon or point of the bayonet Depending upon this supineness when the flag of the nation and the lives of its citizens were in jeopardy the Mexicans have gone from bad to worse. American blood, innocent of participation in the internal affairs of the land below the Rio Grande has been spilled. The American embassey has been riddled with shot and the flag has been torn by flying bullets. This is more than the national honor can wink at for long. Neither side, rebel or federalist has shown a capability to handle affairs to the complete protection of American citizens or prevention of innocent to the flag. Mexican territory is not sought by this country, but the protection to the American people and respect to the American flag, should be maintained at all hazards, under whatever clime and this every citizen has a right to demand.

SQUANTUM DETERMINED.

If determination of purpose and unity of action count for anything harnessed to a commendable persistence, then, the residents of Squantum will not be long lacking the improvement of the three roads which they have so long and arduously worked for, namely, Bellevue road Dorchester street and Huckins avenue. The residents plan to make a descent upon City Hall, Monday evening when the City Council is to give them a hearing on their petitions They will make the trip in a special electric car and if they all cannot come down in one, they will come down in two or more, but come they will if they have to use skates. They offer some reasonable arguments for the consideration of their requests which may influence the council in granting them. At any rate they deserve success for the consistent persistent, determined and courageous contest they have put up in the face of many obstacles.

EAGLES ON THE WING.

—Through the efforts of 100 determined women, Washington's legislators are being swamped with a deluge of letters written in red ink. The lately enfranchised voters of Spokane have reached the conclusion that when they want something the way to get it is to organize and then go after it. Each of the 100 women who attended a recent meeting in the interests of legislation designed to aid their sex promised to write a letter in red ink to each of Spokane county's delegation. Besides this, the women are superintending the writing of similar letters by their husbands and friends. Matters claiming their attention are the mothers' pension bill, teachers' pension bill, "lazy husbands' bill," vocational training in the grade schools and the introduction of a course in social and moral hygiene in normal schools.

LOWER RENT OF SCHOOL HALLS

Advocated by James S. Whiting in an Open Letter

Editor Quincy Daily Ledger:—

Chapter 320 of the Acts of 1912 provides under section one that Section 1 of Chapter 367 of the Acts of the year 1911 is hereby amended by striking out the word "may," in the second line, and inserting in place thereof the word "shall," etc. etc. so that Section 1 as amended by this act shall read as follows:

"Section 1.—The School Committee of any city or town which accepts the provisions of this act shall grant the temporary use of rooms or halls in school buildings upon such terms and conditions and for such public or educational purposes, as the said school committee may deem wise: provided however, that such use shall not in any way interfere or be inconsistent with the use of the halls for school purposes, and that such use shall not be granted during the regular sessions of the school unless means of egress have been approved for such purpose by an inspector of public buildings of the district police.

This bill was approved by the governor on March 25, 1912.

The original act (Chap. 367, Acts of 1911) relative to the use of school halls for other than school purposes provided among other things that the school committee may grant the use of the halls only where no admission fee is charged. Under the new law the "no admission fee clause" has been repealed thus allowing the School Committee great latitude in granting the use of the halls.

I believe that it was the intent of the petitioners and all who advocated the passage of the bills that the School Committees should do nothing to impede the frequent use of the school halls for public and educational purposes.

When our School Committee establishes a rental charge of fifteen dollars per evening for the use of a school hall I believe that it is contrary to the spirit of the law and virtually hold up in the use of the halls for public purposes. The expense of heating the halls should not be charged against the lessees as I believe that a warm temperature is always maintained in them during the winter months. It would seem as if janitor service and lighting, the only actual expenses incurred, would not exceed nine dollars.

I hope that the School Committee will reconsider the fifteen dollar rate and establish in place thereof one which will carry out the intent of the law and not be a hinderance to those citizens who from time to time desire the use of those halls which represent such a huge investment of the city's money.

MARSH MURDER CASE READY FOR TRIAL

Dorr Pleads Not Guilty When Arraigned In Salem Court

Salem, Mass., Feb. 14.—Charged with the murder of George E. Marsh, an aged Lynn man, on April 11, 1912, William A. Dorr of Stockton, Cal., was arraigned before Judge Quinn in the Essex county superior court and pleaded not guilty. He was remanded to the county jail without bonds. The case will be put on trial next Monday, and a number of witnesses from California, where Dorr was arrested, are on their way east to testify.

When the body of Marsh, who was a wealthy soap manufacturer, was found near the state highway, it was first supposed that he had been killed by an automobile. Later it was discovered that he had been shot. Investigation led to the arrest of Dorr, who is a nephew of Miss Orpha Marsh of Stockton, Cal., a near relative of Marsh.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN

BOSTON AND VICINITY

BOSTON THEATRE.

"The Garden of Allah" enters upon the sixth week of a limited engagement at the Boston Theatre Monday. The play is a dramatization of the novel of that name by Robert Hichens. Mary Anderson Navarro, is a co-author of the play. As everybody knows, Mary Anderson de Navarro has been from childhood a devotee of the Roman Catholic Church, and it is due to her belief that Hichens' great story, "The Garden of Allah" contained a powerful argument for tne sacredness of monastic vows, and their ringing call to the soul to leave the joys of the flesh and return to the cloistered spiritual solitudes of the monastery, that resulted after nine years of thoughtful work in placing "The Garden of Allah" upon the stage. George C. Tyler added his entreaties for a dramatization of the novel to those of Our Mary, until Mr. Hichens, its author, had really no choice but to permit Mme. de Navarro to make a scenario for the play, which she largely assisted in writing and staging. As to the result—well "The Garden of Allah" is a paradise for adherents to the Catholic faith. It breathes the atmosphere of Rome amid the glaring sand and purple shadows of sun-kissed Africa, and as a theological appeal, it has provoked endless discussion as to the claim of monastic vows over those of the marriage rite. A witty French dramatist once defined a great play as one which successfully justified a man or woman in ignoring a marriage vow. In that respect, and in one other, "The Garden of Allah" is a "great play."

The stage has never seen such a succession of marvels as shown in "The Garden of Allah."

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

The return of two of the most popular prima donnas on the entire roster of the company,—Mme. Edvina and Miss Mary Garden, will make the coming week a notable one at the Boston Opera House. Monday evening Mme. Edvina will come back for one performance in order that the subscribers for that night may have the opportunity of hearing her as Maliella in "The Jewels of the Madonna." Wednesday evening Miss Garden will make her only appearance for the season as Carmen, in the Bizet opera. The role of the vixenish cigarette-girl is one which the famous soprano has made her very own and when she introduced it here last season, it was conceded generally to be one of the greatest in the gallery of portraits which she has created. Friday evening will come the first performance for this season of Puccini's "The Girl of the Golden West." Mme. Carmen Melis, the creator of the part here, will appear as the girl and Zenatello, by many considered the greatest tenor singing in opera today, will be the road agent Dick Johnson. Saturday afternoon Mme. Weingartner-Marcel will make her only appearance as Aida. After she sang the role here last season for the first time on any stage, she gave it many times in Europe and in Hamburg where she appeared to the Redames of Caruso, the great tenor said that hers was the greatest Aida he ever had heard. Saturday evening a special performance of "Louise" is announced with Miss Garden in the title part and Charles Dalmores as Julien. Sunday afternoon, Mme. Lina Cavelieri, famous as one of the world's most beautiful women as well as one of its greatest sopranos, will make her first appearance of her American concert tour. Mme. Cavalieri has been much in the limelight of late partly through her experiences as the former wife of Sheriff "Bob" Chanler, the New York millionaire. She will be assisted by Lucien Muratore her present husband leading tenor of the Paris Opera House.

HOLLIS ST. THEATRE.

A new comedy by Pinero, the foremost dramatist in England today, and Miss Billie Burke, one of the most charming actresses on the American stage, are both potent attractions in the theatre world and combined—well, they're irresistible. That is the way it seems, anyway, to anyone who has observed the audiences—their size and their enthusiasm, too—at the Hollis Street theatre, Boston, since Miss Burke has been appearing there in "The 'Mind the Paint' Girl," Pinero's latest comedy. The pretty actress scored a big hit on her opening night and ever since the theatre has been crowded. It was perhaps the most genuine triumph Miss Burke has ever won in Boston, although she has always been a favorite there and her opening nights have always been gala events. This time, though it was something more. This time the audience applauded her not only because she was pretty and sweet and young and girlish and had kittenish little ways, but because besides all that in the big scene of the play in the third act she proved herself an actress of real power—an actress capable of expressing and of making the audience feel real and deep emotions of several different kinds. The engagement will close on Saturday—Washington's birthday.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The coming week of "Believe Me, Xantippe" at the Castle Square will be its fifth, this being sufficient testimony to its continuing and increasing popularity. This play is a genuine comedy, mingled with farce and melodrama, and it persistently amuses. The audiences are in a continuous laughing mood at every performance, and they are unbounded in their appreciation and praise of this latest Harvard Prize Play. Its plot is extremely clever, its characters are original, and its dialogue is life-like and brilliant. The acting by Mr. Craig and his company is no small factor in the success of "Believe Me, Xantippe" Mary Young is delicious as the heroine, Mr. Craig makes a lively hero, and Donald Meek's acting as Simp Calloway is especially fine. Others in the cast are Wilson Melrose, George Henry Trader and Mabel Colcord.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Without question the most notable capture ever made by Mr. B. F. Keith for his vaudeville circuit, is the arrangement entered into recently by the "Father of Vaudeville," by which he has contracted to place in all the B. F. Keith Theatres throughout the United States the latest and most wonderful invention of the celebrated wizard, Thomas A. Edison. This is Mr. Edison's latest and in many respects his greatest invention, the Kinetophone, or talking motion pictures. This scientific miracle is a perfect combination of his two former triumphs,—the moving picture and the talking machine. The new kinetophone simultaneously projects sound and motion, producing an effect that is really remarkable. It is difficult to believe that the action depicted upon the screen, with the accompanying dialogue, music, and other sounds, are not reality itself. The two functions of this wonderful invention are so perfectly synchronized that the talking moving picture is the marvel of the mechanical world, as well as a source of amusement to the amusement-seeking public. Just as Mr. Keith was the first manager to see the possibilities of Mr. Edison's biograph, and the first to exploit it in New England, so has he secured the first rights to exhibit this latest marvel. The wonderful talking pictures will be shown for the first time in Boston at B. F. Keith's Theatre within the next few weeks. The electricians are hard at work installing the machines, and the exact date will be announced shortly in the papers.

HOW RAILROADS BUILD BUSINESS

Development of Territory the Primary Policy

At the regular session of the Braintree Club, in Cochato hall, Tuesday evening, Albin L. Richards of Boston gave a most interesting talk on "How Railroads Build Business." The address was a long one, replete with valuable informations and thoroughly enjoyed. Among other things, Mr. Richards said:

"The primary policy of the American railroads is to develop the territory which they serve. To provide better facilities for transportation helps immensely in the growth of the prosperity of a community; and a growing community means increasing traffic for the railroad. Only if the community progresses can the railroad earn its dividend; the only way a railroad can prosper is by bending all its energies to the up-building of its territory. The railroad system serving a community has the greatest stake of all in the future of the community. Other industries can if need be seek other markets, but the railroad must risk its all on the success of the community. The railroads lines of New England have no other ambition than to build up New England as a whole by working out a system of transportation to serve it as a whole. If they did not truly believe that by a unified system of operation there could be brought about a greater development than New England has ever known they could not have considered their expansion policy a wise venture. They have cast their lot in with New England and the only way they can win out is by providing a better system of transportation than New England ever could have hoped for in the old days of separate roads.

"The President of the New England Railroad Lines has seen service in the great West. They well understand in that country that the only way in which a railroad can prosper is to get in touch with the business interests of the territory it serves and do everything in its power for the development of its resources. The railroads must always be working to increase their business by working with the community. The business of the community is the only asset which the railroad has. If the business of the community dwindles the railroad will have nothing left but two streaks of rust. Other industries may go into other markets, but the railroad is anchored where it is. If the railroad can help advance the community it may hope for profit, if it retards the community, it is doomed to failure. American railway practice, developed by nearly a century's experience, is strikingly alert and resourceful in advancing its ends. Its methods admirably illustrate the principle of "economic strategy." Like a general conducting a campaign the management of a great railroad has certain primary ends always in view. The military aim may be conquest of territory and the diversion of it to serve conqueror's purposes. The railway is primarily a business enterprise organized to sell a single commodity; transportation. The railway corporation enjoys its authority, its privileges, its specially delegated powers of state, purely because its activities are essentially beneficant, in manufacturing its commodity with the movement of its trains and the multiform activity of its terminals it performs one of the greatest and most vital of public services. The fundamental incentive of the railroad, like that of any business, is profit. When profit ceases the incentive to operation correspondingly diminishes until for lack of encouragement, operation itself may eventually cease.

"This is why the railroad must always be a business builder. It has transportation for sale, and it must create its market. It is keenly appreciated that a railroad is closely and inextricably indentified with its territory; that the interests of the company and of the public served are one and the same, the railroad can prosper only when its public prospers; that prosperity is dependent upon service, and that in order to promote prosperity in its territory it must render adequate service; and that in turn the community, in order to prosper, must encourage conditions for the railroad that will assure sufficient revenue to give it a chance to flourish."

BOARD OF TRADE

of the Boards of Trade are to attend to the affairs of the town and state. They should scrutinize every law put on the statute books. Last year Congress considered 40,000 measures, and is it any wonder at the confusion that results. This year in the Massachusetts legislature there are 1900 measures pending. Ask yourself if they are all needed. We have in this country 300 laws to every one law in Great Briton. Do you wonder it is difficult for a business man to conduct his business. A business man can hardly come out of his place of business without running up against a commission of some kind telling how he shall run his business.

Another thing is the transportation facilities by which we get our raw material. It is of much importance to you that here in Quincy you have 23 miles of water front. We find much fault with the railroads and hold them up for what they are not responsible, but they are doing their best to handle the raw material, yet it is almost beyond their control. It is necessary to have water facilities. Congress has been asked to make an annual appropriation of $50,000,000 for the development of water ways. Is it not a matter of importance that you should take this up?

He then spoke of what Boston was doing in the way of developing its water front, but when the port and docks are completed what have we got to tie up to them? This great nation without a merchant marine. This great question should appeal to the Boards of Trade and we should see to it and do what we can to place on the ocean a merchant marine that will carry the American flag all over the world.

While Mr. Corcoran was speaking, Lt. Gov. Walsh came in and received an ovation.

SWAT THE FLY.

The next speaker introduced was Miss Therese Norton of the Woman's Municipal League who spoke on "The Fly." Miss Norton said this was a serious matter as it represented the health measure. The household fly is one of the greatest problems of modern sanitation. There was a time when we took the fly carefully out of the milk pitcher, let him dry off and then fly away and live as God made him. But now he is considered more dangerous than the tiger. One fly by contamination will kill more people than in the Spanish American war. Of filthy places as the fly producing places 95 percent come from stables to wreck the homes. In her argument Miss Norton spoke of the epidemic of typhoid in Worcester which came from a dairy and the fly. The fly is not actually the originator of disease but the transmitter of disease The only way to remedy the evil is by co-operation. People do not take it seriously enough. It is a case for the women. It is the duty of every woman to take an interest in sanitation. Women should take up the matter of the house fly. Under recent laws passed local Board of Healths have the power to regulate about flies. We can not be too careful about them. The whole thing is to exterminate them. If filth is allowed to accumulate it will supply flies for the whole neighborhood. It is wrong to offer prizes for collections of flies as it puts a premium on filth. As an illustration she spoke of a case where a prize of $100 was offered to the boy who captured the most flies and the boy who got the prize it was later learned breeded them. You should kill each house fly you see. We should also keep our eye on the market. The market conditions are the greatest questions of the day. See to it that things you buy in the markets are not exposed so as to be of easy access to the fly. We should demand certain conditions in our markets. Above all do not let the fly get into the markets.

LT. GOV. DAVID I. WALSH.

The last speaker of the evening was Lieut. Gov. David I. Walsh. He received an ovation as he was introduced. In opening he said that he was glad to come to Quincy and meet the men and women of the city. To bring to each and all the greetings of the best of all Commonwealths, the good old Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Another reason was because gatherings of this kind give a side of public life one does not see very frequently. The side we see most frequently is the scheming, planning and pulling for power. So much of this do we see that one often loses sight of the real work of officials. In gatherings like this we can say 'here are the people for their interests are not of individual interest.'

He was glad to find the women present. The public official today is no longer a question of male population but of women and children and thy ought to have an opportunity of hearing them. We want them informed on great public questions so that when they get the ballot they may know how to use it. But I want to say to you women we who hold public office receive great honor, but you hold the greatest title of all. There is no title like the title of mother. The mother alone can see to it that we have clean men and women and become an honor to the state and household to which we belong.

I came to talk to you about the business of the government. There is no problem so great as the problem of transportation. If we are to be a great commercial centre and develop a great trade and business we must first solve the transportation problem. We are behind every sea port of the world in docks and water front. The reason is not because of indifference of the men and women but to the fact nothing has been done to develop our great natural resources. He would be glad to give his time, energy and ability to help solve this important problem that we may continue to be a power and influence in the great business development of New England. You can not expend too much time to help your public officials. Nine millions of dollars will not begin to develop our natural resources. Here we are with that wonderful avenue and have done absolutely nothing. We need to expend $100,000,000 for the development of our water ways. We have got to do it or New England will go backwards. No city or state can be great unless it keeps awake.

Have you ever stopped to think what the business of the government is? Every place you go the government is reaching out and giving you a helping hand. It is hard for some of foreign population to understand this.

As an illustration the speaker told of a civil case which he at one time brought for a woman whose husband had been killed. Six times was that case tried. What do you think that woman thought about our government? Could she not say there was no justice for a poor woman? Yet the trying out of that case was laying down a law for the settlement of cases of future generations. There are hundreds of such cases. Yet these same people never stop to think that their children are as welcome in our public schools and that they have the same opportunities for education and to rise as the son of a railroad magnate. This is one of the blessings they never think of. He liked to talk about the blessings of government and no less about the evils of the government. We are establishing great courts for the settlement of disputes. Great banking houses, passing great health laws to help add the government. These are some of the things we ought to think about occasionally.

For all of these the government only asks in return one day in the year that you give up your private affairs and attend to the government. That you go intelligently on election day and solve the problems. The development of proper intelligence should come into your life every day. That is the reason the Board of Trade has brought you here. I ask you to do this work in the real spirit of citizenship. Another thing is to appreciate the age in which we live.

At first the public schools were only for the rich, but we have been growing. We have inherited much and it means responsibility. We have been developing a great business, commercial prosperity. That is why we are here to solve the problems for the great mass. This is why the government seems at times to be for the classes. The call that comes to us is to see that your heart is there. Work for our government. Make it permanent rather than a commercial one.

What ought our loyalty and patriotism to be? That of being happier. Interest in human beings. If we do this we never need to appologize to future generations. Let us appreciate our citizenship, responsibilities and duties so that those that come after us will rise up and bless us. Just think of the happiness a little law will bring us. Every law is a benefit or a burden let us act so that those who come after us will bless our memory as we bless the men and women who handed down these blessings we have retained.

MUTUAL FRIEND PRESENTED

By Dramatic Club at Wollaston for Free Kindergarten

"Our Mutual Friend," presented in the Wollaston school hall, by the Wollaston Dramatic club, Thursday evening, for the benefit of the Wollaston Free Kindergarten was enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience.

This comedy adopted from the book of Charles Dickins was presented in four acts, the quaint costumes and eccentric actions of the Dicken's characters adding much to the charm of the production.

The play opens at the home of the Wilfers. Bella,the elder daughter is in mourning for her betrothed whom she had never seen and who was reportedu wrecked at sea. John Rokesmith engages rooms at the Wilfers. Mr. and Mrs. Boffin, neighbors recently come into affluence, call on the Wilfer's and invite Bella to make her home with them. Bella accepts. It is discovered Rokesmith is Boffin's secretary.

Act two shows the Boffins mansion and the Wilfer's poor but independent call on Bella. After their departure Rokesmith proposes and is refused by Bella.

In act three, scene one, Mr. Boffin gets wind of the refusal and seeing Bella really loves Rokesmith, conceives the idea of harshly criticising the latter in Bella's presence.

This has the desired result, but estranges Bella and Mr. Boffins. Bella leaves the Boffin's forever and goes to seek her father.

Scene two shows the dingy office in which Wilfer is employed. Wilfer is discovered eating his lunch, a bowl of bread and milk. Bella enters and tells of the estrangement. Rokesmith follows Bella and the young people rush into each other's arms much to the horror and amazement of Wilfer. The two become betrothed.

Act four shows the Wilfer household in confusion over a letter from Bella announcing her elopement and marriage with John Rokesmith. The talked of couple returns and it is discovered that Rokesmith is John Harmon, not a poor secretary but the wealthy betrothed of Bella and who was thought lost at sea.

All of the characters were good, the costuming and properties were faithful counterparts of the time and the performers deserve no little credit for the production.

The cast of characters was:

John Rokesmith, "Our Mutual Friend," John Norrie
R. Wilfer, "Cherubic Pa," Robert B. Locke
Mr. Boffin, "The Golden Dustman," Willard E. Keyes
George Sampson, "The Friend of the Family," Ernest W. Arnold
Bella Wilfer, "The Lovely Woman," Lucy D. Luard
Mrs. Wilfer, "Majestic Ma," Mrs. Charles L. Seavey
Lavinia Wilfer, "The Irrepressible Lavvy," Mrs. Charles E. Sweet
Mrs. Boffin, "A Dear, a Dear, the Best of Dears," Theodore A. Luard

Between the acts an orchestra consisting of Theodore Corey, Ninon Lacey, Dorothy Sayward and Ernest Pletsch played popular selections.

Candy was sold by the ushers who were Miss Helen Jones, Miss Frances Jones, Miss Caroline Sprague and Miss Lucille Smalley.

The comedy was produced under the direction of Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney. This evening will see its second performance.

ELECTRIC FREIGHT TERMINAL.

An important epoch in the transportation history of Southeastern Massachusetts will be recorded when on Monday, Feb. 17, the Bay State Street Railway Company will open their new Freight Terminal in the shipping center of Boston, at Copps Hill wharf, 529 Commercial street.

For seven years this Company has maintained an electric freight and express service over its lines south of Boston, and now, as a culmination of years of work, it is opening its main freight terminal, so advantageously located in the shipping center of Boston.

When the first car leaves the new terminal Monday morning at 8 o'clock, the people located along the lines of the Bay State Street Railway, over which the express and freight cars operate south of Boston, will have accessible a fast, frequent, safe freight and express service into the very heart of Boston.

The new terminal will be used exclusively for handling freight, and is located at about the half-way point on Commercial street, between the New York, New Haven & Hartford freight yards in South Boston, and the Boston & Maine Rutherford avenue freight yards in Charlestown, and will be, therefore, most advantageously located, lessening for the shippers to an appreciable degree the length of haul necessary for their teams.

Eighteen feet of water is available at the wharf at low tide, and eventually, if conditions require, coastwise connections can be established.

The Bay State Company will operate cars daily from Boston at 8.00 A. M 11.00 A. M. and 5.00 P. M. to points on its lines south of Boston, which include Quincy, Braintree, Holbrook, Randolph, Avon, Brockton, Bridgewater, Abington, Rockland, Whitman, Taunton, Middleboro, New Bedford, Fall River and intermediate points.

The terminal will be open until 6.00 P. M., and shipments will be received for any car up to within 30 minutes of its leaving time.

George Dunford, general express and freight agent of the company is in charge of the new terminal, and will gladly furnish any information relative to the service.

Appeal to Conference Claiming Unfair Treatment

ASKS HEARING FEB. 25

That Chester A. Boynton is making a desperate effort to recive recognition and leaving no stone unturned to accomplish if possible his reinstatement in the Congregational church is quite evident from his activity. He has sent letters to all the churches of the Suffolk South Conference for an ex-parte hearing on his case and these letters were received Wednesday.

The churches to which letters were sent are the Second Church of Dorchester, Phillips Church of South Boston, Villiage Church of Dorchester, Eliot Church of Roxbury, West Roxbury Congregational Church, Central Congregational Church of Jamaica Plain, Trinity Church of Neponset, Pilgrim Church of Dorchester, Highland and Emmanuel-Walnut Churches of Roxbury, Boylston Church of Jamaica Plain, Harvard Church of Dorchester, Central Church of Dorchester, Roslindale Congregational Church, St. Mark's Church of Roxbury, Romsley Church of Dorchester, and the Congregational Churches in Canton, Dedham, Hyde Park, Clarendon Hills, Norwood, Islington, Wollaston, Atlantic and Westwood.

In his letter Mr. Boynton says that he has been unjustly treated by the Park and Downs Church, was dismissed from membership without a hearing and was deprived of due and regular standing in the church and continuing, "This action is erroneous both in method and substance and an injury to me as a Christian brother. I have asked the church to join in a mutual council to ask the advice of the neighboring churches. The church has unreasonably refused to grant the request, according to relief acknowledged from our churches.

"The undersigned affectionately invites you, by pastor and delegate, to join in an ex parte ecclesiastical council to be constituted of churches in the South Suffolk Conference, to be heard in Pilgrim Hall, 14 Beacon street, Boston, Tuesday, Feb. 25 at 10 a. m. to which shall be communicated all the facts in the case, and be respectfully asked to give such advice as shall be warranted. Trusting in your willingness to listen to and aid in securing the removal of any injury, if such be found to exist, I remain yours in Christian fellowship, Chester A. Boynton."

Fitchburg, Mass., Feb. 14.—After a search for nearly fifty years for David A. Bagley, son of the late Nathaniel B. Bagley, who recently died in this city, leaving a large estate, proof has been secured that the man died in Leadville, Col., in 1881.

The $10,673.70 that he would have received from his father's estate, if alive, goes to the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

RECORDS FOUND WITH DEAD

May Shed Some Light on Shortage of Fuel When They Become Public—Reticence of Survivors on the Terra Nova Gives Rise to Sinister Suspicions—Evans Won't Talk

Lyttleton, N. Z., Feb. 14.—If any one of the supporting expeditions was in any way responsible for the death of Captain Scott and his four companions within eleven miles of safety, it will not be known until the personal diaries and records of the dead men are placed in the hands of their families.

The reticence of Commander Evans and the other survivors aboard the Terra Nova excited the suspicion of those who visited the relief ship that there was some sordid story back of what at first seemed wholly a tale of sublime heroism.

Commander Evans said no records found with the dead would be made public until they were given over to the families of the men. Scott, in his last message to the public, vaguely hinted that his return to shelter was impeded by shortage of fuel, for which, he said, "I cannot account."

If the diaries of the other dead men make similar comment, their families, it was hinted, may demand an investigation through any of the three channels, the admiralty, the Royal Geographical society or the North British Antarctic society.

At frequent intervals on his way south Scott left caches of blubber and and other supplies, to sustain him on the return trip.

On two occasions, on his final dash, the commander sent back return parties. The last of these, from latitude 87 degrees, 30 minutes, consisted of three men, under the leadership of Evans. In his last message Scott commented pathetically on the shortage of fuel and food in his supply depots.

Experts on polar exploration agreed that there were two possible explanations; Scott's depots were tapped by the return parties, or the blubber evaporated.

When the Terra Nova arrived here Evans refused to talk about the death of Scott or to discuss its causes. "The shortage of fuel which Scott referred to is of hardly sufficient importance to deal with in a communication to a newspaper," was his tart comment.

"The southern party had sufficient fuel to last a month longer than the time they expected to take for the whole journey to the pole and back," said Evans. "They ought to have been independent of the supplies in the depot." He added that of the four parties who came back after supporting the polar party hardly one reached the base with more than one day's fuel in hand. Evans said he did not wish to discuss the shortage to which Scott referred.

The bodies could have been brought back, according to Evans, but all agreed to leave them in their white mantle, where they had worked and died. All on board the Terra Nova look to be in good health and bear no outward signs of the hardships they have undergone.

CONFERENCE OVER FIREMEN'S TROUBLE

Knapp Says Situation Is Stubborn, but Not Hopeless

New York, Feb. 14.—The fifty-four eastern railroads and their 34,000 firemen who demand higher wages and better working conditions are no nearer an agreement. Judge Knapp of the United States commerce court held a conference with the firemen's representatives without success.

"No progress has been made," he said. "It is an exceedingly stubborn situation, but I would not say hopeless."

President Carter of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen denied he decided to issue the strike call Friday night. He would not say when, if at all, this last move would be made.

More Than a Million In Gold Arrives at Seattle From Alaska

Seattle, Feb. 14.—More than a million dollars in gold was brought down by the steamer Mariposa from Cordova, Alaska, having been more than two months in transit from the Iditarod district.

From Iditarod to Chitina, more than 2000 miles, the gold was hauled on dog sleds. At Chitina it was placed on a train and caught between two snow slides that tied up traffic more than a month.

During that time the express company's guards, heavily armed, watched over the treasure.

AMERICANS IN SAFE QUARTERS

Cannonading Continues In the Heart of Mexico City

PUBLIC BUILDINGS RIDDLED

Diaz Calls on Madero to Surrender Government Palace—Prepares For Threatened Overwhelming Movement by Government, Which Fails to Materialize—Barrett Presents to Taft a Plan of All-American Commission to Settle Mexican Troubles by Mediation

Mexico City, Feb. 14.—Mexico City is practically without food or lights. Dead bodies litter the streets and the police and fire departments are absolutely disorganized. The Colonia railroad station was set on fire and destroyed by the rebels.

Ambassador Wilson has removed 700 Americans from the firing zone and quartered them in embassies and suburbs.

It is reported that General Diaz has demanded the surrender of the national palace. All through yesterday the rebel batteries of heavy guns were throwing a fierce fire of shrapnel around the palace. Many of these dropped into the Zocalo, which fronts the building, and federal soldiers were compelled to move to cover.

Many public buildings were riddled by shell fire. Both sides appear to be firmly entrenched.

Before dark the fire on both sides was intermittent, but apparently less vigorous from the rebels. The government troops were receiving ammunition in small consignments, and it was said they were running short. short.

The fifth day of the battle began at 8 o'clock, a battery of federal artillery opening fire on the arsenal, but, although the bombardment was kept up without cessation for an hour or more, it had no appreciable effect on the rebel defenses.

That Diaz had prepared for the threatened overwhelming movement by the government, which Madero promised would be carried through yesterday, was shown by the fact that he had stationed sharpshooters on the roofs of adjoining buildings, had dispatched a force outside his lines to the west of the city and had placed his heaviest guns in positions commanding all the approaches to his stronghold.

General Huerta, commanding the federals, had promised to rush the fortifications of the rebels, but he elected to employ his artillery from the various points of vantage. Only once during the day did the infantry come into action.

During the heavy shelling of the palace, Diaz apparently moved some of his forces to the southeast of the city and the palace was made the target of both shells and rifle fire from that district. Coincidentally the rebels succeeded in extending their zone of activity in other directions.

The rebel fire towards the palace was intended not only to bring about its surrender, but had for its purpose also the clearing of the intervening high buildings of machine guns and riflemen and of silencing the federal battery operating at a point midway between the arsenal and the palace.

This shelling wrought havoc among the buildings in that section of the city. The American club was riddled. The interior of this building on the second and third floors was completely wrecked. Of forty Americans within it at the time several had an almost miraculous escape from death. In all, seven shells tore through the walls.

In addition to the shell fire the interior as well as the exterior of the American club was perforated in scores of places by bullets from rifles and machine guns.

MEDIATION IS URGED

Pan-American Union Head Submits Plan For Consideration

Washington, Feb. 14.—Mediation in Mexico, rather than intervention, by the appointment of a Pan-American commission was urged upon President Taft, Senator Cullom of the foreign relations committee and Representative Flood of the foreign affairs committee by John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American union.

The commission which, it is suggested, should seek to bring about a readjustment of Mexican affairs would be composed of a statesman from the United States, an eminent Latin-American diplomat now in Washington and an influential Mexican.

The mediation proposal was made after conferences with members of the senate and house and following renewed assurances from the state department that there is no present intention of departing from the established policy of dealing with the situation in Mexico.

In his letter outlining the plan Barrett says that "it involves mediation rather than intervention, international American co-operation rather than individual United States action, and a practical application of the Pan-American rather than of the Monroe doctrine."

Mr. Barrett expresses the opinion that this government would find the Latin-American governments in sympathy with this plan.

For the present the entire efforts of the administration are being concentrated upon the protection of foreign life and property in the Mexican capital without actual forcible intervention, which the president is determined to avoid until the last extremity.

WON'T EXPRESS OPINION

But Wilson Keeps Himself Well Posted on the Mexican Crisis

Trenton, Feb. 14.—Efforts to get President-elect Wilson to give his opinion of the Mexican situation or the attitude he will take toward this troublesome question were fruitless. The president-elect feels that anything which he might say might possibly be misinterrpeted and aggravate a situation which is already acute.

While he has heard nothing from President Taft on the subject, Wilson is reading everything which is being printed on the subject. If Wilson inherits the Mexican situation in its present critical form from the Taft administration he wants to face the question well equipped with knowledge.

CHAPTER XX.

The Double Wedding.

THE double wedding was to take place at St. John's, Washington. In that venerable and picturesque old church across the park from the White House the gallant and impetuous Captain Heartsease, after an intermittent courtship that had lasted considerably longer than the late civil war, was finally to claim Jenny Buckthorn as his unblushing bride.

And the added feature of the occasion, arranged at the eleventh hour in consequence of the arrival of Colonel Robert Ellingham, late of the Confederate army, from a veritable Odyssey of experiences after Appomattox, to be united inseparably with gentle but unfaltering Madeline West.

Such an occasion, of course, would be incomplete without Madeline's brother Kerchival and Colonel Ellingham's sister Gertrude. That happy pair of "newlyweds" were even now hastening on from Richmond for the grand matrimonial celebration of the war's ending. Dr. Ellingham had promised to come with them. The headquarters of the joyous and eventful reunion was to be the hospitable home of General Buckthorn.

The return of General Haverill was set for the very day of the wedding of his former ward. Robert Ellingham. That the call of his own home had not brought him back long before seemed unaccountable to all—most of all to his own wife, Mrs. Constance Haverill.

Mrs. Haverill and her daughter Edith, as she now called poor Frank's widow, sat together in the cozy morning room of the Haverill residence the day before the—before the day. Edith's little son, a sturdy four-year-old, was playing soldier with some other children in the dooryard outside.

"It seems hardly possible that the war is over," said Edith, standing at the window. "With the troops returning and the flags flying and the bands playing, every day is like a holiday. And so it is, I suppose, for those fortunate women whose husbands are coming back to them."

"Yes, Edith dear," sighed Mrs. Haverill, "to those women whose husbands are coming back to them. Ah, forgive me, pet! I was selfishly thinking of myself, but you know that in my heart I also share your grief."

"Dear, it is months since you have shown me any letter from General Haverill—from Frank's father. And did you not expect the general home before now?"

"That is what I meant when I spoke just now."

"I wonder if it is because I am here? He has never seen me, and sometimes I fear he has never forgiven our marriage—Frank's and mine."

"Nonsense, Edith child!" Mrs. Haverill rejoined quickly. "If only that were all! He will at least be eager to see you now, and little Frankie."

"And yet, in his official report to the government, when he told the whole world how bravely Frankie's father died, General Haverill only wrote the name of Lieutenant Bedloe. It looks as though nothing, in his mind, could atone for the disgrace his son brought upon his name."

Mrs. Haverill rose from her chair and turned away, brushing her handkerchief across her eyes, as she said, more to herself than to Edith:

"I know him so well—the pride that conquers all the tenderness in his nature. He can be silent and cold when his heart is breaking—yes, and when my heart is breaking too!"

A message came a little later from General Buckthorn saying that Captain Heartsease had something of importance for Edith and Mrs. Haverill and inviting them to come over to his house as soon as possible to receive it.

"My dear madam," said Captain Heartsease, addressing himself to Edith, "I have here the notebook of Lieutenant Frank Bedloe, otherwise Haverill, in which Miss Gertrude Ellingham wrote down his dying message to his young wife—to you, madam."

Edith seized the precious relic, clasped it to her heart, kissed it and then tried through eyes brimming with tears to scan its blurred pages while chokingly uttering her thanks to Captain Heartsease.

"How did it come into your possession?" Mrs. Haverill asked him.

"Why, you see, Miss Ellingham—now, I should say, Mrs. Colonel Kerchival West—sent it to me from Richmond as soon as she learned I was here because it was uncertain at what time the colonel would be released on his parole, and"—

"Here they are!" called the deep, hoarse voice of General Buckthorn as he blustered in, attended by the faithful Sergeant Barket. "Ladies, welcome to our camp! Jenny, haven't you relieved the captain yet? Order him to the billiard room, can't you?"

"Every day is like a holiday."

"'Bout face! March!" commanded Miss Buckthorn, in her strictest military style.

Heartsease marched. Jenny slipped an arm around Edith's waist and walked with her toward a window alcove. Mrs. Haverill would have followed, but General Buckthorn approached her, gravely and gently, to whisper:

"Will you come with me, Mrs. Haverill? I must have you by yourself, to prepare you for something that is going to startle you, but will do you good. Your husband is here, and you are going to meet him alone in the library."

The old soldier knocked, opened the door, bowed Mrs. Haverill in and then retreated.

"Constance!" exclaimed General Haverill, standing stern and impassive.

"My husband—may I still call you so, after this long separation, without one word"—

"Where is the miniature portrait which I gave you in Charleston for my son?"

"Why, your son is dead, John, and my portrait must be in the grave with him. Don't you know?"

For answer General Haverill took the worn case from his pocket, opened it and held it forth in his extended hand. She looked at it, then at him, in wondering interrogation.

"It might have lain in the grave with Kerchival West," he said.

"What do you mean by that? You must tell me."

"I mean that I have it not from my son, but from—the other. You are silent? Well, you know now why I also have been silent so long."

The unhappy wife's agitation was pitiable as, with brave self conquest, she said proudly:

"My chief witness to the truth is dead. The other you have had sufficient opportunity to examine, I should suppose. As Colonel West is not here I shall remain silent—even though that silence parts us, you and me, forever."

"And yet," he went on, pleadingly now, "as I look into your eyes I'll swear I can see only truth and loyalty there."

"No, John," she answered gently, turning away from him, "I will not accept your blind or unwilling faith."

Before he could reply the door opened very suddenly and Jenny Buckthorn peered in.

"Oh, dear! I was looking for Captain Heartsease. Please excuse— Why, General Haverill! Papa said you had come back, and I wouldn't believe him. And—you haven't seen Edith yet?"

"Not yet, but I am curious to do so as soon as possible," he replied. Then he murmured to himself, "My son's wife!"

Jenny led the way back to the drawing room, the general and Mrs. Haverill following.

Edith came forward to meet them eagerly, yet timorously. General Haverill took her hand and kissed her on the forehead, saying:

"You shall take the place my son once filled in my heart."

"You will see his own face again, sir, in our little son's," she replied. "I am happy that Frank won your forgiveness at the last and that the boy will soon be old enough to understand your words telling how his father died a hero."

"My words," repeated the general vaguely.

GOT AWAY WITH $5400

High Life of Young Forger Comes to an Abrupt End

New York, Feb. 14.—The glittering swath that William Van Tafrey, a young bank teller of Nova Scotia, had cut through New York, Boston and London ended here last night in a police station. Van Tafrey, who is 20 years old, is charged with cashing a forged draft for $2500 on the Royal Bank of Canada at Vancouver.

According to the complaint, Van Tafrey on the first of the year resigned as paying teller in the Spring Hills, N. S., branch of the Royal Bank of Canada. He forged the name of the cashier to a draft made payable at the New York branch of the bank, then came here and, representing himself as the payee, got the money.

After a gilded career in Boston and London he returned to New York, where he was arrested by a detective who gained his confidence by posing as a millionaire's son.

ADVOCATES OF ECONOMY

Fail to Force Reduction of Number of Battleships to One

Wahington, Feb. 14.—At a stormy executive session of the house naval affairs committee the economy advocates failed to force a reduction in the two battleships program adopted by the committee and returned to a further conference with little likelihood of an agreement.

The economy advocates demand that at least one of the two battleships authorized by the bill as originally framed be eliminated. They plan to fight the bill on the floor.

Against Charging $15 for Use of School Halls

CELEBRATION THE FOURTH

A meeting of Ward Six Patriotic Association was held Wednesday evening at the home of the president, Frank E. Badger, Clive street.

There was a good attendance, several new members joining.

Several matters were brought up for discussion one of which was the question of a Fourth of July Celebration in Ward 6. It was unanimously voted to celebrate this year. There will be another meeting held in the near future at which the chairmen of all committees will be elected and as complete arrangements made as possible for carrying on the celebration.

The Association took up the question of train service which is very unsatisfactory as there is no train for Boston stopping at Atlantic between 6.14 and 7.29 p. m., which makes it very inconvenient for theatre goers.

The matter of school halls came up for discussion, and it was the opinion of all present that the school committee ought not to charge $15 each night for use of the hall when $5 would more than cover all expense to the city. Especially is this true as this organization of men is working for the best interests of the community.

CHURCH COUNCIL DECIDED UPON

It was also voted to install a new illuminated sign under the church tower. This committee will also have charge of the new system of ear phones to be installed in the church. They will be installed as soon as possible.

ALSBERG WILL KEEP UP WAR

New Chief of Chemistry Bureau Publicly States His Policy

THE PROBLEM OF PURE DRUGS

Should Be Co-Operation In Control and Regulation of Handling and Sale of Drugs and Their Preparation—Public Confidence Already Won In Struggle For Pure Foods

New York, Feb. 14.—Dr. Carl L. Alsburg, appointed recently to the position of chief of the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture, delivered his first public statement of policy at the annual meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers of Medical Products at the Waldorf-Astoria.

He took occasion to urge a closer regulation of medicinal nostrums, and confined his remarks largely to a discussion of the problem of pure drugs, rather than that of pure food. He said in part:

"The bureau hopes to co-operate with the various branches of the food industry in placing their processes upon a scientific principle, in eliminating waste and in utilizing by-products to the best advantage. The bureau hopes to do for them what the bureaus of the department of agriculture are doing for the farmer.

"I wish to assure you that the bureau stands ready to co-operate with your association, because such co-operation is to the best interests of all. We feel you have learned the lesson that the application of science to practical things is the wisest and best course.

"A field that is crying for co-operation between us is that of the control and regulation of the handling and sale of drugs and their preparation.

"The eyes of the people have, in the past, centred upon the department's struggle for pure foods. This work has, I think you will admit, been very successful in improving the quality of our foods, and preventing the grave forms of fraud and adulteration. Public confidence has been won. No backward step will be taken. There will be no letup in the enforcement of the pure food and drugs act."

NO ONE FROM QUINCY TO OPPOSE THE ANNEXATION TO BOSTON

Kiley Framer of Bill Did Not Appear Until Hearing was Over and Then Stood Alone

Braintree at One End and Lynn at the Other Included in the Plan

(Special to the Ledger).

That old bugaloo of the suburban cities and towns that comprise greater Boston, annexation came in to the committee on metropolitan affairs at the State House, Friday for a hearing. There seemed to be a lack of interest on the part of the proponents of the measure but the opposition was there strong. Almost every town was represented and some cities sent in their mayors and city solicitors to talk against any movement that tends toward putting them under the rule of Boston. Quincy was not represented but it is understood that a message from some of those interested in this bill was received by the committee. The opposition was not wholly heard, the hearing being continued until a later date.

Daniel J. Kiley, of Boston was the only one to talk for annexation. Kiley who is the framer of the bill and holds a position under the Boston City government did not arrive until the hearing was over and the committee decided to allow him half an hour to present his case.

John A. Sullivan, chairman of the Boston finance commission was among those who asked to be recorded in opposition to the bill. Under the circumstances the chairman announced that those in opposition might turn in their names and the hearing would be declared closed.

After some of the opponents had left the room Mr. Kiley arrived and asked to be heard.

Among those besides Mr. Sullivan who recorded themselves as opposed to the bill were: Harvey L. Boutwell, city solicitor of Malden; Winfield S. Slocum, city solicitor of Newton; H. L. Orcutt of Winthrop; J. L. Clements of Wakefield; F. H. Gilson of Wellesley; Edward E. Willard, mayor of Chelsea; Conrad Sawyer, a member of the Malden city council; Representative Haines of Medford; and Representatives Robinson and Caro of Chelsea.

The bill proposes to take in a wide area to be included in the Greater Boston. Some of the more distant communities that would be included under the provisions of the bill are Lynn, Nahant, Melrose, Wakefield, Woburn, Lexington, Waltham, Needham, Quincy and Braintree. Such places as Brookline, Cambridge, Somerville, Malden, Chelsea and Revere, instead of being outside Boston, as at present, would be under the terms of the Kiley bill rather centrally located within the proposed greater city.

CONSERVING THE YOUNG

Their Moral and Physical Life Discussed

BY REV. MR. WILLMOTT

The Woman's Auxiliary held its regular meetin, Friday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, a large number being present. Mrs. Edwin Beal the president presided and Mrs. Thomas B. Pollard conducted the devotional services.

The speaker of the afternoon, Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, pastor of Bethany church took for his subject, "The Conservation of the Moral and Physical Life of the young," saying in part:

"The Y. M. C. A. work keeps in touch with the church and is largely supported by the brain and money of church people. The youth in some cities are antagonistic to the church forgetting that the revenue of the association depends upon church sources and would dwindle unless sustained by them. Most of my lectures have been for boys. I do not believe in co-education. I was brought up in a boy's school and always had men teachers, and the whole trend was to keep our reverence for girls intact. I was talking with a foremost educator recently and he said as a rule you can depend upon boys to tell the truth but he was sorry to say that girls were not so reliable.

"My heart goes out in sympathy to every Christian father and mother for the dearest thing in life is your boy or girl and this problem we are facing.

"I do not believe in a Y. W. C. A. That great organization never reaches the working girls. It is more like a club. The Christion churches can reach them more effectually. We wish our boys to grow up physically strong and our girls to grow into our highest conception of womanhood. I take a decided issue against the atmosphere o fthe theatre or the picture show. How many parents encourage their children in attending these places. I must condemn its artificial surroundings and impress upon your mothers and friends the harmful results of the emotions strained and excited. Your boy is much better off in this gymnasium, where he will get fagged out and go to bed and enjoy a healthful sleep. Let your daughters play golf, it is the best game ever introduced into this country. If they do not play golf they will play at golf, and they will develop into strong and graceful womanhood.

"No young girl should be allowed to attend a social function of any description without a chaperon. We have ignored this fact too long, and I say emphatically it is not wise. Every mother should question herself, where is my boy after dark? Where is my girl after dark?

"As a minister of the gospel of Christ I wish to prevent the wrecking of young lives morally and physically. When I receive letters from those who have become scarred they are enough to wring my heart. I am anxious and you are for the moral conservation of our children."

During the social hour refreshments were served by the auxiliary.

SUDDEN DEATH OF J. F. PARKER

Had Been Ill Less Than Two Weeks with Pneumonia

A feeling of sorrow prevails among the employees of the Quincy division of the Bay State Street Railway on the death of James F. Parker, of the claim department, at his home 72 Upland road, Friday afternoon. Mr. Parker took a severe cold a week ago and last Monday it developed into pneumonia. At first it was thought that there was a good chance for his recovery and his family was very hopeful. As the week advanced however he continued to grow weaker and for the past two days he had been at a very low ebb and just alive. Everything possible was done but to no avail and he passed away at 5.30 Friday afternoon.

Mr. Parker was born in Quincy 45 years ago and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Parker, his father for many years being one of the staunchest members of the Irish Land League and had served as its president for several years.

The deceased was educated in the public schools of the city and at the Adams Academy, afterward through his own efforts becoming a very proficient stenographer. Eighteen years ago he entered the employ of the then Quincy & Boston street railway company and had remained with the street railway ever since, through its various consolidations to the Bay State Co. He had charge of the claim department at the Quincy office of the company. He was a member of Quincy council Knights of Columbus.

He is survived by two brothers and two sisters, Edward J. Parker the well known attorney and William J. Parker for many years the Quincy correspondent of the Association Press, Miss Elizabeth Parker and Miss Mary Parker the last named being a teacher at the John Hancock school.

Funeral services will be held Monday morning from St. John's church.

GOODHUE NOT LINKED WITH ANY OF THE BECKER TRIBE

Defendant Acknowledged That He Tried, But Failed to Bribe the Inspector

Put Up Job but Would Not Reveal Name of the Framer

Inspector Alfred W. Goodhue is not a member of the Becker tribe by any means as Luigi Romeri, the Italian who tried to bribe him found to his sorrow.

Romeri lives at West Quincy and conducts a grocery store at 83 Willard street. He was charged with violation of the liquor law. Saturday afternoon of last week, Inspector Goodhue visited the store to notify Luigi to appear in court today to answer to the liquor case, Luigi took a large roll of money from the money drawer and proffered it to Inspector Goodhue, who declined the bait. Thinking he had not gone the limit Luigi took another roll from his pocket, big enough to choke a cow, placed it with the other under a roll of paper and turning his back pointed to the money and said to the Inspector, "Take it, nobody see, nobody ever know." He misjudged

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

While Germany may be disturbed by the triple entente building so many warships she should remember and be content in the possession of the Krupp gun factory.

Praise be and now comes a partriarch with one eye, who says he is in splendid condition to re-enter the ring and the boobs stand for it. There will soon be no age limit to the ring contenders.

It is distressing to the memory of brave men, to have people in the warmth and delights of steam heat, best of care and diet and every luxury under the sun, criticising the course of heroes and pointing out just what should have been done to avert disaster in the Antarctic blizzard circle with the glass at 70.

The Mexicans must be awful poor gunners or the other fellows good dodgers when an artillery duel in a public street, only 500 feet apart is strung along for almost a week without much damage to either side. The greatest sufferers were the non-combatants in a measure.

Things have come to a pretty pass when a man under indictment in this country asks to have a commission sent to London to take evidence in his case. If that isn't arrogance and insolence of wealth it pretty near fringes it.

The cash register officials have been found guilty. Will they receive their punishment now or wander around the country for three or four years until people have forgotten all about the case and then have it settled up on a lighter basis?

Patten cornered the cotton supply. No knowing how many people he ruined or drove to the verge of suicide and he gets off with a fine of $4000 to avoid further worry. A mere bagatelle of the amount he cleaned up. Pretty easy picking.

Of course Vincent Astor will not use a rake or a hoe, but he will get the name of a farmer all the same by taking a look at some prize products of his numerous acres now and then.

This Monroe doctrine may be all right, but its efficiency may be questioned now and then with a few more Mexican affairs cropping up.

The New York Giants are to have a dentist in their train. How about a valet, manicurist and a few other things like that to while away the time.

The Valentine spasm is over and the only thing to do is repair the door bells, gates and knobs and not grumble until it comes around again.

FLY CONTESTS.

Miss Therese Norton, one of the speakers at the Board of Trade banquet did not go far afield when she announced that so-called fly contests were nothing but premiums offered for the building up of monuments of filth. In some places fly contests were conducted by newspapers and the youngsters were awarded prizes. In one place, the person gathering up the largest number of flies with a certain period was to get $100. This was in the summer time. There were many contestant for the leading prize, but one youngster soon got such a lead that it was quite apparent that he was the champion fly catcher. At the same time he might be termed the champion fly producer. That boy knew his business all right. He prepared a breeding place for the flies. They mulitply rapidly. His hive proved a gold mine to him, but it likewise weighed as a burden upon the tenants in that district for months after. The efforts to propogate the fly, the building up of fifth mounds upon which they could thrive, spread rapidly.

Other insects gathered to the scene by the choice pickings, began to multiply and increase. In time it became a rendezvous for rats. Finally a colony of cockroaches set in. None of this was discovered while the champion fly catcher was at work and encouraged in his endeavor. Then came the cold months. The flies disappeared went into retirement for the winter. Not so with the roaches and rats. They needed warmer quarters. The streets were black with the roaches marching across from the dump to seek quarters in the dwelling houses on the other side of the street. That boy made $100, secured the title of champion fly catcher, but he caused the city several thousand dollars, and the residents in that vicinity countless hours of worry, annoyance and actual fear and discomfort before his fly breeding place was cleared of the succeeding tenants.

DEVELOPMENT.

The remarks of some of the speakers at the Board of Trade banquet, Thursday night furnished much food for thought and discussion. As in every case, there were some things said that all could not conscientiously subscribe to, but they only go to further emphasize the fact, that however much we may differ with people honestly and intelligently there is always much to be learned from what they say. An honest criticism or difference of opinion must never be confounded with nagging or useless fault-finding. Criticism is good. But there are times when speakers at banquets to raise a laugh, exaggerate beyond reason, even stretching the truth to insure the mirthful commendation of their phrase. Mr. Corcoran, president of the State Board of Trade in his remarks came very near to that horizon, when he said that he took an express train but the engineer, stopped at every white post.

Such mental dishes as that are hardly acceptable to the intelligent mind. Quincy people know the service between this city and Boston. While at times there may be some little inconvenience or a train does not run every minute to suit the individual taste, the train service, the passenger service, in the main is very good. An express train makes the trip in about 15 minutes which is nat so bad and when it comes to the matter of local trains, stopping at every station, it must be remembered that the people living along the line of the railroad have to be served as well as those at either terminal. If the railroad depended exclusively upon the terminal service to care for its running expenses there is a chance that there would be many deficits to meet.

It is as necessary to have trains for people at the way stations as at the terminals. As to the engineer stopping at every white post, that is as ridiculous as it is uncalled for. Exaggerated and ridiculous shafts pointed at the train service between Boston and Quincy are fully as hurtful to Quincy as they are to the railroad performing the service.

BURGLAR TURNS NURSE

Thinks of His Own Little Ones and Saves Baby's Life

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 15.—A burglar who went to rob Mrs. Fred Morris remained to save her baby's life, according to a report she made to the police.

Mrs. Morris said her baby was stricken with croup. She started to run for a physician. Just as she went out of her front door she met a masked man, who ordered her to keep quiet at the risk of her life. She screamed: "My baby is dying; I am going for a doctor."

"Let me help you," said the robber, dropping a revolver into his pocket.

Mrs. Morris, frightened, led him back into the house. He asked for vinegar, sugar and water, and concocted a mixture which he forced down the infant's throat. Then he rubbed olive oil on the child's chest and worked for an hour before he told the mother it was out of danger.

"You must have a baby yourself," remarked Mrs. Morris.

"I have five," replied the man. "That's why I came here tonight."

Then he left and Mrs. Morris refused to give the police a description of him.

Right on the Job at Norfolk Downs

AT BOWLES HOUSE

When the family of E. F. Bowles of 9 Stanton street, Norfolk Downs, returned from a visit to a moving picture show Friday night shortly after 9 o'clock found that their home had been visited by burglars during their absence. It appears that the family is about to move to another house and in anticipation for moving they had packed most of their effects so that it was hard to tell just what had been taken. Entrance was made by forcing a window opening from the porch.

As soon as the break was discovered Sergt. John T. Larkin who lives in the neighborhood was notified and he immediately made an investigation. As far as could be learned all that was taken was a gold neck pin and a gold neck chain. A small hand bag was also missing but whether the burglars carried any valuables away in the bag is not definitely known .

SOME LITTLE IRREGULARITY

On Gas Bills at First But After That Perfect Order

AND BETTER SATISFACTION

It was not without the fullest investigation that the Citizens Gas Light Co. undertook the change in its meter reading and billing system which goes into effect the first of March. The same system is to be put in operation in Quincy is already in operation in many other cities of the commonwealth and investigation of the results obtained in these cities has shown it to be universally satisfactory and to be working to the mutual advantage of both the companies and consumers. It was for this reason that the Citizens Gas Co. decided to adopt the plan for Quincy.

It is to be expected that it will seem a little odd at first, as any radical change in an established order of business would naturally be, but once the customers get accustomed to the new system there is no question but what they will be better satisfied than ever before, and will wonder why the change was not made long ago. Bills will be a little irregular in arriving for the first six weeks but after that they will come regularly on a certain day of the month.

QUINCY JEWS MUCH PLEASED

At the President's Veto of the Immigration Bill

The Jews of Quincy are jubilant because President Taft has vetoed the Burnett-Dillingham Immigration bill, which provides for a literacy test for foreigners entering this country. He said he vetoed it reluctantly because of some clauses which would be very valuable amendments to the present immigration laws, but he also said he greatly disapproved of the literacy test which would remedy a so-called immigration evil, when in reality, there is no such evil

Hearings were held last week before the president at which the various objections against the bill were pointed out. Organized labor was infavor of passing the bill to remedy the evil of cheap labor. Protests were registered by Jewish, Italian and Polish societies throughout the country.

A week ago petitions to President Taft to veto the immigration bill were presented. One of these petitions was signed by many residents of Quincy and circulated by the Young Men's Hebrew Association.

It looks now as though the bill was downed for good, although Senators Lodge and Dillingham are to try to have it passed by a two-thirds vote in the Senate Monday and in the House of Representatives Tuesday. But with such men as Senator LaFollette and Senator Gormon registered against the bill, it is doubtful if it can pass the Senate.

Thanks is due Congressman Curley for his magnificent fight against the bill and he is enthusiastic over the outcome.

DR. STEINER ON IMMIGRATION

Eminent Lecturer to Treat the Subject Monday Night

It seems particularly fortunate that at a time when the interest in the question of the immigrant is so keen that Dr. Edward Steiner should come to Quincy. For weeks interest in the immigration bill, which Pres. Taft vetoed Friday has been very great. This has of course called attention in a more marked degree to the people who come to us from across the water. While it is true that some of us may play the "ostrich" still when we see fit to take our heads from under the sand we will find these people have been coming to us in a steady stream. The problem will be just as acute, and more so, when we really awake to the fact it is here.

Much has been said and written recently about "World-wide Peace" and who is there of us that woud not welcome it? But you cannot make a man honest or truthful by legislation. Neither can you make a body of men, a nation, really peace loving by the passage of legislation. However we may feel about the matter, human nature is very much the same at base as 1000 years ago. Unfortunately the feeling is very strong today, that is is not so much the committing of a wrong but the being caught in doing it.

Now it is just as true that no amount of legislation will change conditions in regard to the condition of the immigrant; in regard to his attitude towards American insitutions. How then are these changes to be brought about? Any person who has ever heard Dr. Steiner, who by the way is a most fascinating speaker, will surely hear him Monday evening at Music hall.

LOWER GAS.

Senator John J. McDevitt of Quincy is causing something of a stir on Beacon Hill in his efforts to get an 80-cent gas rate for the Granite City. "Joe" who is also widely known as "The Duke" has been fighting for 80-cent gas in Quincy ever since he first began to hold public office, which was as a member of the city council in his native city. He can't see why Milton the next town to Quincy, should have 80-cent gas while just across the line it costs almost twice as much.—Whirligig of the Hub in Herald-Traveller.

The stir seems to be over for the present as the committee has recommended leave to withdraw on the proposed bill.

DIVORCES GRANTED.

At the divorce session of the superior court at Dedham, Thursday, Nellie L. Pinel of Braintree was granted a decree nisi on her petition for divorce from William E. Pinel of Framingham for alleged desertion. The couple were married July 11, 1906, by Rev. W. A. Brady, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church of Quincy and lived for some time in Wollaston and South Quincy.

Other local cases disposed of were as follows:

Ruth F. Ingraham of Millis vs. George H. Ingraham of Cambridge. Decree nisi for infidelity.

Ella A. Harris of Quincy vs. Winslow M. Harris of Quincy. Decree nisi for cruel and abusive treatment.

Mary A. Yule of Quincy vs. Christopher B. Yule of Springfield. Decree nisi for intoxication, and custody of minor children.

MADERO GIVES UP CONTEST IN MEXICO

President's Resignation Means End of the Revolt

DE LA BARRA TO BE PROVISIONAL PRESIDENT

Selection Approved by Diaz, Whose Rebel Forces Have Overwhelmed Federals In Six Days' Battle Which Has Cost Thousands of Lives and Torn Mexican Capital Asunder—Battalion of Infantry Join Rebels After Shooting Their Officers—Good News Reaches Washington When Intervention Seemed Inevitable

Mexico City, Feb. 15.—Francisco Madero has resigned as president of Mexico and Francisco de la Barra, former minister to the United States, is to succeed him as provisional president.

The resignation of Madero is announced on the authority of the British legation, where de la Barra took refuge after having urged Madero to compromise with the rebels.

Arrangements for the succession of de la Barra are now being made at the British legation.

The Mexican congress is expected to meet at once and formally accept the resignation of Madero, this being necessary under the law. Until this meeting is held the resignation of Madero and the succession of de la Barra will not be officially confirmed.

The senate called a session at 7:30 o'clock last evening. De la Barra, on his way to the senate, stopped and made a brief address, assuring the citizens who crowded around that an early settlement of the warfare was assured.

COPYRIGHT BY WALDON FAWCETT.

FRANCISCO DE LA BARRA

This is taken to mean that General Diaz approves of the selection of de la Barra as provisional president, and that the six days' battle which has torn asunder one of the most beautiful cities on the continent and cost thousands of lives has come to an end.

Ever since the fighting began last Sunday de la Barra has been trying to bring the warring factions together to stop the carnage and it is declared his was the hand which finally brought the fighting to a halt.

Americans and other foreigners in the city are feeling happy and had, after six nights and days of suspense, a good sleep. Americans are especially relieved, as they have felt that in the event of an attack on foreigners they would be the first ones to suffer, and even if the authorities at Washington did intervene it would be several days before United States troops could get to the capital.

Begining of the End

It was the advance of the federals down Balderas street yesterday which provoked the first sharp reply from the mutinous zone.

Diaz waited until the federals were far down the line and then threw into their ranks a hail of shrapnel and swept them with machine gun fire. Few left the street alive.

The government troops tried to carry the rebel position from other directions, but always fell under the withering fire or were driven back to shelter.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon a general order to cease firing was given, but for the two preceding hours the fire from the government lines had practically been suspended. General de la Vega, commanding the line directly to the east of the rebel position, admitted he was unable to advance. Failure had been encountered in all quarters.

It was coincident, with this cessation of the firing, that a battalion of the Twentieth infantry revolted. All but a handful of these federals succeeded in joining Diaz.

The battalion was stationed along Independecia street. The men suddenly turned upon their officers and shot them, but the sound of these shots did not attract general attention in the heavy fusillade. The entire battalion broke for the rebel lines, reaching there in safety.

Thirty-eight of them were overpowered, however, by the loyal troops and were marched to the palace, where they will probably be executed.

Friday's Damage

Although the firing on both sides was lighter yesterday, the total number of shells used was enormous and the incidental destruction to property great. The loss of life among the non-combatants probably was less than on the other days.

Bullets whistled here and there in all parts of the city. They were fired across the town by both sides, from the housetops and other places, wherever sharpshooters could be stationed. On account of the efforts of the government troops to advance, this fire was heavier than usual, and deep inroads must have been made on the arsenal munitions to keep the rifles and machine guns supplied.

What was promised again by the government to be a day of terrible punishment for the rebel commander developed into the weakest attempt at his subjugation. Madero's artillery conducted the attack half-heartedly, although his infantry at times showed desperate courage.

Assault on the Palace

Rebel shells were thrown at the national palace and occasionally hurled across the town towards the federal battery on the Paseo Reforma, near the Colona railway station, but for the most part Diaz waited until the federals moved well into range for his guns guarding the approaches. This took place innumerable times and as often the streets were effectually cleared in short order.

From the regions outside the capital the news was bad for the government. Although few outside forces have arrived in the capital to support Diaz, there is evidence that many quarters of the country are participating in risings in his name.

All trains leaving the capital are crowded with refugees of every nationality, but the Mexican fugitives predominate.

HORIZON IS CLEARED

Washington Pleased Over Announcement of Madero's Resignation

Washington, Feb. 15.—The news of Francisco I. Madero's voluntary relinquishment of the presidency of Mexico brought relief to official circles in Washington, in which the situation during the last five days had been hourly growing more tense.

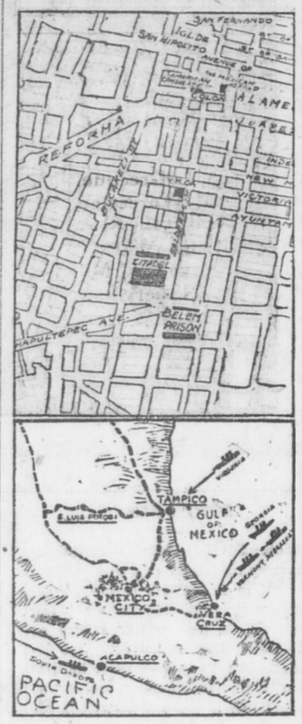

The announcement served instantly to clear the horizon of the storm clouds which came nearer as the prospect of armed interference on the part of the United States seemel inevitable.

State department officials, since the opening of the fight in the plaza before the Mexican national palace last Sunday, have eagerly waited night and day for official and unofficial advices from the scene of the conflict, and the government was fully prepared to meet any situation which might arise.

As a result of the co-operation of the navy and war departments, their combined forces were in readiness for Mexican service. Coincident with the receipt of the news of Madero's abdication, a wireless message was flashed to the navy department here announcing the arrival in the Pacific Mexican port of Mazatlan of the cruiser Colorado, the first of the American warships to reach its destination off the shores of the revolution-torn republic.

MEXICAN WAR MAPS

District Where Battle Raged and Destination of Our Ships

The upper map shows location of the arsenal held by Diaz and his rebels and the American consulate, with the Y. M. C. A. building, which was shot full of holes. The lower map shows Vera Cruz, Tampico and other points where the United States battleships are due to arrive.

VOTING CONTEST

Ledger newsboy? Will Sturgis Hunt invite his chum? Will A. R. MacKay be accompanied by a Heptasoph? The work of the next few days may decide.

DO IT NOW.

If you contemplate becoming a subscriber of the Daily Ledger, do it now, and make your subscription count.

If you intend to pay your Daily Ledger subscription soon, do it now, and help a friend.

After Feb. 18 it will be too late to obtain one of those 1000-vote certificates when you pay. Do it now.

Today 1000 votes are worth about $3, and 300 Ledgers at 2 cents each are worth $6. Combination price until Feb. 18 only $5. Do it now.

Subscriptions and coupons will be received at the Daily Ledger office right up to the hour of closing.

The contest bids fair to eclipse any ever attempted by any paper in this section.

There is still a chance to help somebody win this contest. The winner will have a trip to Washington with all expenses paid on the week of the inauguration of President-Elect Woodrow Wilson. The winner of the contest has the privilege of taking a companion on the trip and the expenses of both will be paid by the Daily Ledger.

All votes received in the Washington contest hereafter will be kept secret until the prize winners are announced. Remember the polls will close Tuesday, Feb. 18, at 12 M. It is not necessary to hold back votes until the eleventh hour. They may be forwarded any day with the assurance that no information will be given to other candidates. It is the intention of the Contest Editor to keep all votes, as received, in their original packages, boxes or barrels, until after the polls close, and then to count them in the presence of a disinterested party, who will certify to the correctness of the count. By this method no one could give out any reliable information in advance. The Contest Editor, himself, does not expect to know the prize winners until several hours after the polls close, possibly not until the next day. He has no knowledge today of the reserved vote of any candidate. He wishes all of them success, and guarantees fair play.

MONDAY VOTE.

The standing of the first ten candidates on Monday at 9 A. M. was as follows:

|---|---|
| Fred D. Williams, drug clerk | 75,780 |
| Sturgis H. Hunt, Y. M. C. A. | 56,670 |
| A. R. MacKay, Heptasophs | 46,875 |
| Emma C. Marnock, W. R. C. | 27,930 |
| Galen Bowditch, messenger | 15,405 |
| Nellie Morrisset, Crescent st | 10,460 |
| Annie Lamont, L. L. O. L. | 6,040 |
| R. E. DeNormandie, Wollaston | 5,545 |
| Fred J. Kessler, insurance | 4,565 |
| Richard A. Cole, letter carrier | 1,940 |

The trip will be a magnificent one and the winner will have a chance to see Washington at its best. The spectacle of an inauguration of a Democratic president is one that has not been seen in Washington for many years and people from all over the country are going to be there. For the first time in history Confederate veterans will march down Pennsylvania avenue in the grand inaugural parade. For four long years these veterans tried hard to capture Washington and march through the streets and on the fourth day of March next they will march down the well known avenue, but this time in peace.

We have received a number of inquiries regarding the subscriptions. ome evidently do not understand. In reply we will state that every subscription paid is good for 1000 votes. If you pay for two years you get 2,000 votes. If you pay for five years you get 5,000 votes and so on. Back subscriptions count just the same as new ones.

It won't cost any more for the Daily Ledger for the coming year to send in your subscriptions at once. Your votes will help someone and will help to give them the best trip in their lives.

A limited number of Daily Ledgers with coupons may be obtained at wholesale or retail until the closing of the polls. Subscription certificates good for 1000 votes will also be issued until Feb. 18.

THE PRIZES.

The first prize in the contest is a free trip for two to Washington, during Inauguration week, with all expenses paid.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Thornton escapes, captures Lieutenant Bedloe and takes from him Mrs. Haverill's miniature.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

"Stonewall" Jackson is killed. Grant takes supreme command of the Federal armies, and Sheridan invades the valley of Virginia.

Gertrude loves West, but disappears before he reaches Belle Bosquet. West recognizes Bedloe as Frank Haverill.

General Haverill, not knowing Bedloe is his son, sends him on a dangerous mission. Gertrude is captured by West's soldiers.

West takes Mrs. Haverill's miniature from Thornton. Bedloe is wounded and captured. Haverill plans to exchange Ellingham for Bedloe. Thornton stabs West. Haverill finds the miniature on West's person.

Gertrude tells West she loves him. The Union army at Winchester is surprised and driven back. Bedloe returns, dying. Haverill places West under arrest.

Bedloe dies. General Sheridan makes his famous ride to save the day at Winchester.

Sheridan defeats the Confederates. West has disappeared. Gertrude goes in search of him. Richmond is ordered evacuated.

West and Gertrude are married in Richmond. Lee surrenders to Grant at Appomattox. The war is over.

CHAPTER XXI.

Love Rules.

"YES,' sir—in the dispatch to the government from Cedar Creek. You gave the name of Lieutenant Bedloe, but"—

"Ah, yes. He died before I reached him, but my prayers went up for him then, as they do now."

"Here is his notebook, with his last message to me," continued Edith, biting her lips to keep from crying. "He says: 'Tell our little son how his father died, not how he lived. And tell her who filled my mother's place so lovingly' "—

Here she broke down. Mrs. Haverill had turned away, sobbing.

"Go on, my child," urged General Haverill.

"'My father's portrait of her, which she gave to me in Charleston, helped me to be a better man. It was taken away from me while I was a prisoner in Richmond by Captain Edward Thornton, Confederate secret service' "—

"One moment, please!" cried General Haverill, reaching for the notebook. "Let me think. Thornton was taken a prisoner—and searched—by Kerchival West, and then he broke away and wounded Colonel West, and he had in his pocket— Oh, Constance, my wife! In the presence of all, let me humbly beg your forgiveness for my unreasonableness and misunderstanding, these long months past."

"Can it be that you did not receive Constance's—mother's—letter after Frank's death?" ventured Edith.

General Haverill only shook his head, bowed in penitence. Mrs. Haverill went up and kissed him and he clasped her in his arms.

"Well, that's settled," growled a voice as from the battlefield. "Now let's have a—ahem!—I mean some refreshments. Barket, tell old Margery to serve the tea and things in here and bring up Heartsease, and then we'll swap stories about how some parts of the war might have been fought out, but weren't."

Jenny Buckthorn had to draw Heartsease out concerning his adventures after being wounded and captured in the raid on the signal station before the battle of Cedar Creek.

"Didn't you long to see your friends, and so forth, at home when you were in that prison?" she asked.

"Aw—naturally. However, there were quite a jolly lot of chaps there, and we had our own fun. We got up a regular orchestra and gave concerts, don't you know. I had a banjo with one string, and I played one tune on it—'Turkey In de Straw,' if I remember rightly. It went like this."

Here the captain stopped to drum it out on the piano with one finger.

"Oh, bother that!" Jenny exclaimed. "Tell them about the awful dangers you went through when you escaped from prison. I'll bet you were badly scared more than once?"

"No—only once, and that was all the time. One night I came face to face with a Confederate officer. It was Captain Thornton."

"Oh! What did you do?" everybody exclaimed, breathlessly.

"I killed him," answered Heartsease, with sudden intensity, looking up from the piano an instant, then dropping back mechanically to his one fingered "Turkey In de Straw."

That was all he ever said on the subject, and it was not until long afterward through other sources that the detailed story came out of how he had encountered the vindictive Thornton and after a desperate hand to hand combat had slain him with his own weapons.

"And 'twas afther Colonel West he was a-lookin', too, I'll go bail," put in Barket, who was waiting upon General Buckthorn at the moment. "That Thornton was a pizen divil."

"Mention of the military prisons reminds me," said General Haverill, "that I have a letter written shortly after Cedar Creek by a Captain Cox of a Kentucky regiment. Captain Cox was in Libby with—with Lieutenant Bedloe. He himself escaped from there some time later with the considerable number of Union officers who crawled out through Captain Rose's tunnel from the cellar. He mentions another comrade—Captain Hunt, as I remember—who was finally exchanged when dying of consumption and lived just long enough to reach home."

The conversation now turned to Kerchival West and the last engagement in which he had participated, in the Shenandoah valley. As Sergeant Barket admittedly knew more about this than any other man alive, including Colonel West himself, the company now unanimously decided to give him the floor. Barket was in his element, especially when he observed that old Margery, the cook, had lingered in the background among his attentive audience. He had half a dozen teacups and a sherry glass or two arranged on the hearth rug to represent the Union and Confederate lines, while he illustrated the cavalry charges and artillery fire with flourishes of General Buckthorn's walking stick.

"Just in the hottest of this battle of Sayder Creek, whin Colonel West and I rode to the front to rally the rigiment and turn upon the victorious inimy—it was at this p'int, foreninst the brow of the hill, ye moind—sure, the colonel he sailed out ahead widout any coat or hat and wid only a shtick in his hand, and yells out: 'Charge, b'yes! Gineral Sheridan's come back!' They gave wan big cheer and we swept clane over the secesh battery."

"Hoo-roo!" cried Margery as Barket's stick smashed a line of teacup artillery.

"The attack on our left flank was checked. But whin we shtopped to take breath, where was brave Colonel West? Heaven only knows. After the foight was over Miss Gertrude and the other gals searches for him on the field, and thin, of a suddint, Miss Gertrude rides off all by herself and disappears behind the schoolhouse"—

"No, Barket; it was the church. And the colonel and I were married there!"

Gertrude herself, on the arm of Kerchival West in a brand new uniform, suddenly appeared upon the scene, having been ushered in by the maid at the front door unobserved while the battle of Cedar Creek was raging. Nor did they come alone. Close in their rear followed a quiet civilian, who on second glance proved to be Bob Ellingham—and where Bob was Madeline West could not be far away.

"Welcome, Colonel Ellingham!" roared General Buckthorn. "We had a long fight to keep you out of Washington, but we're delighted to see you within the lines now."

"I see that flag has just been raised again over Fort Sumter, on the fourth anniversary of the day in Charleston which we all remember so well," said General Haverill, in a tone of thankfulness that had no ring of triumph.

"I think," replied Bob, "that Virginia will be about right for us—Madeline and myself. The Old Dominion is dilapidated, fenceless and war trodden. But her soil is elastic and her air has something inspiring in it still. Madeline says she loves Belle Bosquet. She would hardly recognize the old place now, but I hope her presence there will bring it back to life again."

"The schoolhouse and the church, which somebody was speaking of a minute ago," said General Buckthorn in what sounded like an aggrieved tone, "must be our national headquarters from now on."

"Not forgetting the hospitals," added General Haverill, with a fond glance at his wife and Edith. "They are still in full commission. It is for us, as immortal Lincoln said, to 'strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and for his orphan; to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations.' "

THE END.

Increases Harbor Appropriation

Washington, Feb. 15.—The bill making an appropriation for rivers and harbors was reported to the senate. The senate committee recommends increases amounting to $7,218,787 over the appropriation, amounting to $40,872,959 as it passed the house.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

No Hubbite Woman has Perfect Feet, Declares Eminent Physical Culturist Dancing Master Recommends Sandals and Kneipp Cure—Bay State is Slow, so Colorado Suffragist Finds—Misses Vote She had in the West—Old Age Pension Experts to Speak at Statehouse in Behalf of Teachers—Chadwick's "Phoenix Expirans" Expires grandly once more.

While Boston women are brainy, not one of them has a perfect foot, according to Baroness Rose Posse, physical culture expert. Others say essentially the same thing. The discussion has grown out of reports of an examination at a western university of a thousand pairs of rights and lefts not one of which reached 100 per cent. J. Jefferson Richards, dancing master, says that the women have only themselves to blame and not Dame Nature who fashions many admirable footsie-tootsies that are later ruined by injudicious housing. This teacher sends some of his pupils daily across the Fenway in their bare feet. As they thus parade through the snowdrifts they form a characteristically Bostonese procession.

Mrs. H. W. Pinkham, now of Boston but formerly of Colorado, has been telling "How it Hurts to be Disfranchised." She finds the process quite painful and she says no few uncomplimentary things about this staid old Commonwealth. "I had not realized how much misinformation, or lack of information, about suffrage existed until I came to Massachusetts," she observes. "It is because women do not know the privileges they are missing that they are not working harder to gain the vote." In Denver, it appears a young woman wheels the go-cart up to the polling place and asks one of the ward workers to look after baby while she drops in to cast her ballot. That is about the extent to which women neglect their domestic duties while exercising their privilege of the franchise.

When at the end of the Handel and Haydn society's performance of "Phoenix Expirans" in Symphony hall a vast audience tendered a spontaneous and enthusiastic ovation to the composer who was in the hall, there was presented genuine testimony to the local appreciation of a school of composership which has grown to vigor in the past 25 years. This harmonization of ancient church Latin by the director of the New England Conservatory of Music is a work which was first sung at the Hampden County music festival, Springfield, in May 1892, with Nordica as soloist. It then made a great impression by reason of the skill with which the composer combined a musical counterpart of the poem's strange mingling of religiosity and sensuousness.

In the years that have intervened the writing of serious music has become less of a novelty than it was in this country a quarter of a century ago. American operas, symphonies and concertos are coming to take their place in the world's standard music. In this development of a school of composership Mr. Chadwick himself has had a very prominent part, both through the example of his long series of notable works and through his class room teaching which has prepared many young men and women for work in this stimulating field.

Meantime many Bostonians who remember the furore that was created by the "Phoenix" at Springfield and upon its subsequent presentation by the Handel and Haydn Society in this city have long cherished a desire to hear it revived. This desire was amply gratified by the recent concert in Symphony Hall at which, to quote from Professor Louis C. Elson, "The Phoenix Expirans' expired in very lofty style." The performance revealed once again, so Mr. Elson says, that "Mr. Chadwick and his pupil Mr. Parker have placed America well abreast of Europe in the matter of counterpoint."

To have secured as leading speakers in behalf of teachers' retirement and tenure of office two such authorities as former President Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University and Professor F. Spencer Baldwin, secertary of the Massachusetts Old Age Pension Commission may be interpreted as arguing for the seriousness of the propaganda which the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation has undertaken. Under such auspices it is evident that no undignified scramble for favors at the hands of the public is involved.

Dr. Eliot's interest in problems of this kind is well understood to have been lifelong. He is himself a graduate of the Boston public school system and his father, the first mayor of Boston, was for many years the efficient head of its school committee. The president emeritus is also a past president of the National Educational Association and has been a foremost factor in furthering the advance of the educational profession.

As for Professor Baldwin, no man, in all probability, is better known throughout civilization as an authority on the subject of old age pensions. As secretary of the Bay State's commission he directed the monumental task of preparing the material for a report that would cover the entire field of what has been done and what proposed in all countries of the world. His advocacy of contributory systems in opposition to those supported solely out of general taxation has been consistent; this attitude is undoubtedly that of the average New England tax payer who would not grudge a superannuated teacher his retirement on pension but who would hold that the educator should at least contribute toward the funds that make such retirement possible.

Under this leadership the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation has felt itself well justified in appealing for a large attendance of teachers and others at the two hearings at the Statehouse on Feb. 14 and 24 respectively.

Citizens' Gas Light Company

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO CONSUMERS

NEW SYSTEM OF METER READING AND BILLING

It is the aim of the Citizens' Gas Light Company to give to the Public a service as excellent in every detail as possible and to improve the service as opportunity offers.

To this end the Company will on March 1st, 1913, put into effect a new system of Meter Reading and Billing which has been adopted after careful study of the many systems in use in other cities.

REGULAR METER READERS

Instead of hiring a large number of special men to read all the meters on the last few days of the month (as will still be done up to February 28th, 1913) the Company will in March create a permanent force of regular meter readers, who will be easily identified by the Company's badge conspicuously worn.

CONSTANT SYSTEM

These men will on each working day throughout the month read all the meters in one of the sections into which the accounts have been grouped and, having covered the City, will periodically read the same meters once in about every thirty calendar days, all bills rendered covering gas used during the preceding thirty days.

BILLS PAYABLE WITHIN FIFTEEN DAYS OF DATE

Two days after the reading of the meters of any section, the corresponding bills will be delivered. Each bill must be paid within fifteen days of its date and should a bill become overdue by not being paid within fifteen days, the supply may be discontinued without further notice.

EXAMPLES

The following examples are given on typical cases:

| METER IN SECTION NO. 2 | | METER IN SECTION NO. 7 | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Meter read | Monday, Mar. 10 | Meter read | Wednesday, Mar. 19 |
| Bill delivered | Wednesday, Mar. 12 | Bill delivered | Friday, Mar. 21 |
| Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Tuesday Mar. 25 | Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Thursday, Apr. 3 |

METHOD OF CHANGE FROM OLD TO NEW SYSTEM

As all meters will be read in the last days of February and as the new system will go into active operation about March 10th, it is evident that the first bills received after this latter date will cover periods ranging from two to six weeks. But in future the date of the last state of the meter and the date of the preceding state of the meter will appear on all bills; the period covered by each bill will therefore be evident in the bill and should be considered in connection with the amount of gas used.

For instance, bills rendered March 14th, will cover a period of about three weeks, while bills rendered April 2nd, will cover a period of about six weeks. After these first six weeks of change, customers will find that each month they will receive their bills on or about the same date, and that each bill will invariably cover the preceding thirty days.

LEARN TO READ METERS

We would again urge our customers to learn how to read meters; instruction as to this will be found on the back of the gas bills and will enable customers to check bills rendered.

REMITTANCES BY MAIL

Remittances sent through the mails should be addressed only in the name of the Company to its office, No. 11 Granite Street, Quincy.

We desire in conclusion, to assure our customers that the installation of the system outlined above is to secure uniformity and accuracy in handling their accounts.

C. H. SOCIETY IN GOOD WORK

Varied It With Little Play on St. Valentine's Day

Friday evening, at the residence of Mrs. George A. Smith, Berlin street, the C. H. society held an entertainment and social which was greatly enjoyed by many friends of the society. Although but recently organized with charitable work as an object the society has rendered valuable assistance in several cases.

The event was partly in celebration of St. Valentines day, as denoted by the profusion of hearts in the decorations, and also to replenish the treasury. Several selections on the piano preceded a very pleasing as well as comical sketch presented by the members which scored a "hit" with the audience. Later refreshments were served at small cost by which a goodly sum was realized. The remainder of the evening was devoted to games tricks and singing by all who seemed reluctant to depart.

STATESMEN CLASH OVER APPOINTMENTS

Montana Senator and Representative Start Big Rumpus

Helena, Mont., Feb. 15.—A ten-hour debate in the house of the Montana legislature culminated at midnight in a fight between Senator Whiteside and Representative Lovelace and almost a riot.

The fight was over the appointment of the house members of a joint steering committee by the speaker. The house wanted to name its own committee and this led to a long siege of filibustering.

Towards midnight it is charged that Whiteside attempted to spirit Jordan, one of the speaker's appointees, from the chamber to prevent him from resigning. Lovelace interfered and this led to one of the most disgraceful scenes ever enacted in the Montana assembly.

Whiteside is the man who several years ago turned $30,000 over to the senate which he said had been tendered him as a bribe to vote for W. A. Clark.

VETOES IMMIGRATION BILL

President Does Not Approve of the Test of Literacy

Washington, Feb. 15.—President Taft vetoed the Dillingham-Burnett immigration bill, which would revolutionize the immigration policy of the United States by imposing a literacy test upon all foreigners seeking a home in America.

In a short message to the senate the president announced his disapproval of the measure solely because of the provision which would lock the doors of the United States against the alien who could not read some language or dialect.

Senate and house leaders lost no time in arranging for an effort to override the veto. As soon as the message was read, leading supporters of the measure made arrangements to take it up in the senate Monday and in the house Tuesday.

BOWLES GIVEN APPOINTMENT

As Member of New England Railroad Conference

FROM MASSACHUSETTS

Among the important appointments announced Friday was that of Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, President of the Fore River Ship Building Co. as one of the two New England members of the New England Railroad Conference. The other Massachusetts member of the commission is Marcus P. Knowlton former chief justice of the Supreme Judicial court. The conference was one of the matters decided upon by the Governor of New England at the recent meeting in Boston, of which Gov. Baldwin of Connecticut was the chairman.

After naming the two Massachusetts men, Gov. Foss issued a statement setting forth the fitness of his selections and of Admiral Bowles he said:

"Admiral Bowles has been chosen as Justice Knowlton's colleague in the conference because of his wide experience with the manufacturing interests of the Commonwealth and his knowledge of the relations which should exist between these industries and our transportation facilities.

"Admiral Bowles has also accomplished a most notable work as a member of the Board of Directors of the Port of Boston. He has taken an energetic and effective stand toward better terminal facilities for the Port of Boston and for New England in general, and his influence has been potent upon the Board of Directors in outlining the best possible application of the large appropriations made by the Legislature for port development.

"The Governor realizes fully that any study of our transportation problems, if it is to be effective, must include not only the land transportation facilities of New England, but the dock and harbor facilities as well, and the relations which should exist between land and water transportation in general.

"Admiral Bowles' knowledge of the conditions in both land and water transportation is, therefore, felt by the Governor to adapt the admiral especially for the work of the conference."

BRIEFS

The Foresters met Friday evening in Clan McGregor hall.

The men of Memorial church are planning a three days' forward movement in finances next week. They will begin Monday evening and enlist every man who is willing to work. It is planned to have at least four teams with six men on a team and solicit the whole community and raise the necessary running expenses for the year on plans similar to the methods used in raising the money to build the church. This church has been making an attempt at scientific management both in raising money and doing business.

LACK OF VIGOR IN RESCUE PLAN

Alleged Friction Among Explorers With Scott Expedition

THREE LIVES WERE SACRIFICED

Belief That Scott, Wilson and Powers Might Have Been Saved—Petty Officer Evans Became Insane and Proved a Handicap—National Tribute to Heroes In London Cathedral

Christchurch, N. Z., Feb. 15.—Intense bitterness of feeling prevails among a section of the surviving members of the late Captain Robert F. Scott's Antarctic expedition over the failure of the rescue party to push south vigorously on their march to the relief of the explorers, who had been to the South Pole. The belief is expressed that Captain Scott, Dr. Edward A. Wilson and Lieutenant H. R. Bowers, the last three to die, could have been saved if this had been done.

The relations between Commander Edward R. G. R. Evans and Dr. Edward L. Atkinson are said to have been strained.

Some of the survivors state that Petty Officer Evans became insane, owing to the privations he had undergone, and was occasionally very violent. He declined to help pull a sledge, and his condition became so serious that he had to be carried.

Captain Scott's reference in his notes to an unaccountable shortage of fuel at the depots surprises the supporting parties, who deny they made any undue use of it.

GREAT MEMORIAL SERVICE

Attended by King and People In Every Walk of Life

London, Feb. 15.—The British nation yesterday paid its respects to the memory of Captain Robert F. Scott and his heroic companions who died in the wilds of the Antarctic after reaching the South Pole.

A great memorial service was held in the cathedral of St. Paul's, and this was attended by people in every walk in life, from King George, in the uniform of an admiral of the fleet, down to the common laborer who was proud to feel that the men who had met such a noble death were his countrymen.

Only a few seats had been reserved for the royal party, which comprised representatives of Queen Mother Alexandra and of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. Premier Asquith and all the cabinet ministers were present, with many members of the foreign diplomatic corps and their attaches, the American embassy being represented by its secretary, Irwin M. Laughlin, and Commander Symington, the naval attache.

Hours before the time set for the singing of the first hymn, "Rock of Ages," the police had to turn away many thousands who could not even get within view of the doors of the cathedral. The service was a simple one. It included the playing of the Dead March in "Saul," in which the great cathedral organ was accompanied by a military band. The service concluded with the hymn "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." In the closing Collects the names of the five dead explorers were included.

The whole service was impressive. Vast crowds remained throughout outside the cathedral, and a great number of British bluejackets were present, both inside and outside.

GENERAL WOODFORD DEAD

Gained Distinction In War and Served as Minister to Spain

New York, Feb. 15.—General Stewart L. Woodford, Civil war veteran and former United States minister to Spain, died at his home here. He had been ill for more than two weeks.

He was 77 years old and a native of New York city. After serving through the Civil war with distinction he was elected to congress, went to Spain in 1897.

General Woodford made the speech nominating Governor Hughes for the presidency at the national Republican convention in 1908. He was a member of a law firm in this city.

CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY

Bathtub Trust Men Are Found Guilty by a Federal Jury

Detroit, Feb. 15.—The so-called bathtub trust was found guilty of criminal conspiracy in restraint of trade by a jury in the United States district court.

The act as charged is a misdemeanor and the penalty provides imprisonment not exceeding one year, or a fine of $5000, or both.

The jury required four hours to reach a verdict. Sentence will be pronounced today.

Ex-Cop Goes to Prison

Brussels, Feb. 15.—A dismissed policeman was sentenced to jail for three years for circulating a false report that his superior officer, who filed charges against him, was dead.

BOWLING

Three games in the Fore River league and a special match between teams One and Two of the Wollaston Yacht Club were played at the Coliseum alleys, Friday night.

The Shipfitters and Yard split even with two strings each, the later taking the total score by 17 pins. Smith with 111 for the single and 292 for the total was the white headed boy of this contest.

The Pipefitters started off as though they planned to walk away with the Electricians, but the latter came up strong at the second round which they took, but the Pipefitters called up their reserve fetish and cantered home with the game, three to one and a total score of 1335 to 1279. This game was marked by pretty even and at times high scoring. The century mark was topped no less than six times. Bliss and Porter were tied for the high single with 117 each. Blake carried off high total honors, his bowling was more consistent as will be seen by the score.

The Machinists made it a runaway match against the Hull Draftsmen, taking all four strings and by a total of 1344 to 1236. Carlson led in high single and total with 105 and 202 respectively.

The match of the evening, was between teams One and Two of the Wollaston Yacht club. At the first glance it would appear that there might be some importations from the world's best bowlers in this game, but a second perusal showing that six men played on a team, gives one a chance to revise that opinion. Still the scoring was well balanced and showed some flashes of high form. The No. Two Team swept the alleys, and by a total score of 1542 to 1407. Ellis was credited with the highest single string, 110, while Raymond was high total man with 274, with Nelson a close competitor in second place with 273. The score:

NEIGHBORS IN HAPPY MOOD

Show Good Feeling Towards Christopher Family

JUST BEFORE DEPARTURE

Mr. and Mrs. George Christopher of 30 Elmwood avenue, Wollaston were most pleasantly surprised Friday evening. About 75 of their friends met at 15 North Central avenue, and headed by Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Walther, the pastor of the Wollaston Baptist church marched to the Christopher home a short distance away. When they were met at the door by the host and hostess Rev. Mr. Walther informed them that he had brought his children with him. After all had entered and been welcomed by the surprised couple, a short and pleasant entertainment was provided including piano solos by Miss Mary Critchley; vocal selections by Erald Estes; reading, "The Model Love Letter," by Miss Etta Holmes; and vocal solos by William Bullock and Mrs .Percy Christopher of Middleboro.

Mrs. Ellen Talbot in a neat and brief speech presented Mrs. Christopher with a purse of $10 in gold and the hostess expressed her keen appreciation of the gift and the good feelings that prompted it. Refreshments were served after which there was another pleasant social hour during which Philip Dresser entertained with his Victor Victorola.

Every one had a good time and regretted when the time of departure arrived. The committee in charge of the affair included, Mrs. Frank Roberts, Mrs. Ellen Talbot and Miss Gertrude Kingsley. Mr. and Mrs. Christopher with their family are soon to move to Dover, Mass., where they will reside. ## RAILROADS NOT KEEPING PACE WITH TRANSPORTATION DEMANDS

Latter Increasing at 12, and Former Dragging Behind With 2 Per Cent

Narragansett Canal Would Be Great Saver of Life and Property

Quincy was represented Saturday at the great waterway conference and annual dinner of the Boston Chamber of Commerce by President John L. Hamilton and Secretary John O. Hall of the Board of Trade as well as by Dock and Water Front Commissioner Frank Fessenden Crane, Col. Henry L. Kincaide, Jonathan S. Swingle and John Cashman.

It was an all day conference at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce, lunch being served to the delegates at noon at the Exchange club and closing with a dinner at the Copley Plaza in the evening.

Commissioner Crane who was one of the speakers at the conference after thanking the Chamber for the interest it was taking in the conference said that Boston had the best Harbor and Land commission in the United States, the best Board of Directors of a Port in the United States and was fortunate in having as the head of the government department U. S. District officer Col. Francis V. Abbott, who was thoroughly interested in the waterway development of this district.

Commissioner Crane among other things said that the interest in the waterways of the country was due to the fact that the carrying business of the United States was increasing at the rate of 12 per cent, and the railroad facilities at the rate of two per cent, and that the latter had agreed they were unable to carry the freight; that the United States was paying six billion dollars annually for transportation, which was more than seven times the total revenue of the country from all sources.

The national commission sent abroad to study the canals of the old world and report the best system, recommend the connecting only such ports as have good harbors and good terminal facilities, where large business interests exist and where municipalities and states have themselves improved the docks and harbors.

Speaking of the Narragansett canal Commissioner Crane told of the advan-

BIG ADDITION TO SUNDAY SCHOOL

Wollaston Baptist Church to Raise $9,000

FOR THE GOOD WORK

The Baptist Church of Wollaston is conducting a campaign for funds for the new addition to the Sunday school plant. They have a Sunday school enrollment of over 500, and the present rooms are wholly inadequate so they are making an addition of 50 by 30 feet, with two floors.

At the Sunday morning service John L. Miller, Chairman of the Trustees and Canvassing Committee, made the statement from the platform, that the Committee would endeavor to see each member, that the addition would cost approximately $9,000, and hoped the response to the committee call would be hearty and generous. He felt certain it would, for the church was one of the best givers in this section of the state.

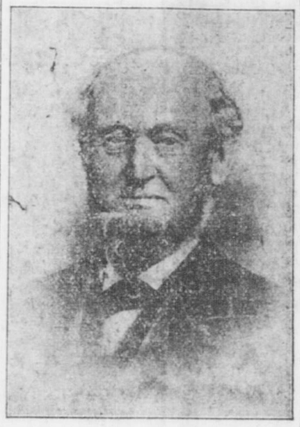

The excavation for the basement has already been completed, and the granite walls are well advanced. It is hoped to have the new part completed in May, when the church will celebrate its fortieth year of progress, the present addition being the third since the original church was built.

VETS ANNUAL CHOWDER PARTY

Hose Association and Friends Had Good Time

TALKING OVER OLD TIMES

The annual mid-winter chowder party and reunion of the Washington M. French Association was held Saturday evening at Grand Army hall and as usual was the occasion for the gathering of a large number of boys who ran with the old hand tubs years ago before the advent of horses and power propelled apparatus with which fires are fought today. In addition to the old veterans there were a number of those who are still active in fire circles today. Fred F. French, the first and only president the association ever had presided in his usual gracious manner. Fred is a son of Washington M. French, for whom the old hose reel was named that was located during its palmy days in the station at the corner of Canal and Washington streets.

The first number on the evening's program was a clam chowder. This was served piping hot at a little after 8 o'clock. Asa Pope and "Billy" Bird put the things together that went to make up the chowder and it is of course unnecessary to say that the chowder was of its usual excellence and went right to the spot. In addition to the chowder there was cold meats and hot coffee.

No gathering of these vets would be

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Those whistling bullets keeping Madero in the high altitudes so much gave him cold feet.

The Suffragettes might have sent their message by mail and saved time and that savage hike over hard roads.

The grand jury did not insinuate, they handed it right out to "Big Bill." Now let it be hoped that the incident is closed.

There's an awful sting to that word "squealer" and the one who does not feel it is either below average intelligence or lacks all ideas of decency.

Kansas and Vermont lead in that "Blue sky" law, which shuts out all shady investment companies. There is no excuse in the least for the slightest delay in making this measure, nation wide.

The literacy test in the immigration law has again been tested and found wanting. President Taft has displayed courage as well as judgment in disapproving the bill as adopted by congress.

Is this latest movement in Mexico simply a move to keep the Diaz family in control of affairs?

Some where out in the Pacific there is $60,000 in gold in a runaway ship. How careless when it could have been so useful.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S VETO.

President Taft was in a position to throw politics to the winds, provided he might have been otherwise influenced under different circumstances and give to the consideration of the immigration just passed by congress the full benefit of his judicial mind and able powers of discrimination. The literacy test was the main spring on which the presidential approval hung. The bill contained many excellent provisions, but this was a hardship which seemed uncalled for, unnecessary and liable to operate just the opposite from what it was intended. It was quite plain that the people were very much opposed to this part of the bill. Congress could have stricken that out without losing anything of its dignity and succeeded in giving the country an improvement over the present laws. This they did not do, but played politics with the result that the immigration situation remains unaltered.

THERE'S THE RUB.

Referring to the development of the port of Boston, at the Board of Trade banquet, Thursday night, John H. Corcoran, president of the state boards of trade, pertinently inquired, "when we get the docks what have we got to tie up to them?" A question which no doubt has occurred to a great many people. After Massachusetts and Boston has expended those millions in the construction of docks, deepening waterways, enlarging channels and the many other things necessary along those lines, what have we got to tie up to them? It is not only desire to throw a cold douche upon the heated atmosphere of the dock development, but rather a query which would have greater weight in solving of a problem which has been before the people of this country for the past half century or more. Money of the people of this country is put into the great docks and coastwise waterways and foreign shipping and foreign companies and foreign seamen reap the benefit of those great improvements.

No one finds fault at people coming to our shores and enjoying the delights of having the first sunrise of their journey to this land illuminate deep and safe harbors, with wide and adequate channels, and piers that will rival those of any in the world. And it is right here in Boston and vicinity that they are wanted. There would naturally be a certain pride on the part of a brief European sojourner returning to this land with some foreign born person, pointing to the first glimpses of land and exclaim with exultation, "behold, look upon the greatest harbor in the world and the finest piers ever constructed by man."

But ah would it were that they could go even further and supplement that first outburst of joy with an accompanying, "look at those ships, all coastwise or around the world vessels. Look at the Stars and Stripes at the peak. Some harbor, some city, some ships, hey!" And one can almost picture amazement of the beholder of such scenes. There's the rub. We want the docks, but we also want shipping, American shipping to tie up to them. The old saw that ships cannot be built on this side of the water as cheap as on the other or that the foreign ships can be run cheaper is only imaginery.

It is not an argument. Or at least it is not an argument any longer tenable. There are many American built ships engaged in the coastwise traffic, every bit as good as those built abroad. They are manned by American seamen and those vessels are equipped with every known up to date device, steam heat, ice plants, and the best of grub. If one company can do this why cannot others do the same?

The question is an open one. Let the people get together and demand that the system which permits an American product to be sold cheaper in Europe than here in the home market, thus giving the foreign manufactuer an advantage over the home manufacturer or builder, be eliminated and a change brought about which will see as in the olden days American ships tied up to American docks and riding at anchor in, or moored in the ordinary course of events at the piers all over the world. It can be done and should be done. If millions can be expended to invite transportation companies to come here, other millions can be expended for the construction of United States ships which would look much better discharging cargoes at those piers.

MUCH OF IT NEEDLESS.

Congress considered 40,000 measures last year, and the present year our own legislature will be called upon to act upon more than 1900 papers. Possibly this latter number may be augmented by some special provision later on. Those figures sound big, but that is all there is too them. At least one half of the measures before congress were hardly worth considering. The same applies to the legislature, and as David Harum says "If not more so." Many things that are put up to the legislature in the forms of petitions and bills are not needed. Many laws are mere repititions of old laws or amendments thereto, which if they were enforced would be all right, but as they are not enforced by the supposed proper officers, new laws carrying with them enforcing officials, must be produced simply adding to the expense without adding to the efficiency. Then there are many freak laws which would be just as well if they were forgotten and dropped into the waste basket. There ought to be a clearing house for legislative work to sift the good from the bad, the necessary from the needless and freakish and the like.

BOLD DAYLIGHT ROBBERY

Safe Cracked In Boston Store and $15,000 In Currency Carried Off

Boston, Feb. 17.—A $15,000 safe robbery was effected at the Hanover street store of the E. E. Gray Grocery and Provision company in daylight yesterday, which for daring and expert burglary stands unsurpassed in New England criminal history. The robbers left a complete burglar outfit on the scene.

They did not take $300 in silver which they perhaps deemed too heavy to carry, and they left checks, notes and all documents which could not be turned into cash.

What they carried away was a massive bulk of paper currency in bills ranging from twenties down to ones and $29 in postage stamps.

To commit the robbery the thieves took extraordinary precautions. The giant double-door safe was drilled and the mechanism blown out by the use of nitroglycerin and electricity. The inner door was opened by wrecking the combination.

The robbery was discovered by the watchman and two policemen who entered the store at 6 last night.

TO MEET MEDIATORS

Railroad Firemen May Today Settle Question of Strike

New York, Feb. 17.—The crisis in the controversy between the eastern railroads and their 34,000 firemen, which, last week, narrowed down to the method of arbitration to be employed to settle the differences, is expected today, when representatives of both sides have agreed to meet Judge Knapp of the commerce court and G. W. W. Hanger, acting commissioner of labor, the federal mediators, in a final effort to avert a strike.

"We are waiting for Knapp and Hanger to announce they are unable, under the federal law, to secure arbitration," President Carter of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen said last night.

AS FIREMEN PLAYED

The alarm from Box 138 at 8.05 Sunday morning called the firemen to a small fire in the house of Isaac Steinberg at 100 Intervale street. The fire started from some unknown cause on a rug beneath a piano in the parlor and before discovered had communicated to the instrument, the front of which was burning brisk'y when the firemen entered the house.

A chemical stream was directed to the keys and the fire was soon out. The damage was confined to the rug and piano although the latter was but little damaged other than the front.

The move for a social club in connection with the Community House is on the boom and a committee has been appointed to perfect plans of organization.

A meeting was held, Saturday evening, at the home of Harold D. Waterhouse on Grand View avenue at which the social club project was thoroughly discussed.

Charles Alden was chosen chairman and Russell T. Anthony secretary of the meeting, Chester I. Campbell was present by request and spoke of the social club in connection with the Community House movement. He declared the committee heartily in favor of a social club and stated the committee stood ready to provide suitable quarters.

A round table discussion followed in which all present took part. The prevailing sentiment was in favor of co-operating as fully as possible with the Community House movement but was strongly in favor of having club quarters however the building project turned out.

Already 150 have signed the membership lists and Saturday evening the meeting voted to limit the membership to 300.

The club will be organized along the lines of the Cochato club of Braintree and others of a similar nature. Card rooms, ladies parlors, bowling and other attractions will be among the features.

The following committee with full powers to lay plans for organization as a permanent club and confer with the Community House committee was elected.

Charles Alden, Louis E. Crosscup, Harry A. Stevens, N. G. Nickerson Jr, Charles E. Barker, Charles W. Jones and Russell T. Anthony.

The informal committee that inaugurated the club movement was retained as a committee on membership It is N. G. Nickerson, Jr., H. D. Waterhouse, Harold Green, E. Tyler Brigham, Charles Alden, Jesse I. Litchfield, Charles E. Barker, G. Ernest Carr, George E. Brown, Walter Weld, Arthur Raymond and Russell T. Anthony.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Robert S. Sharp of Tennessee, chief postoffice inspector, resigned to accept a business opportunity. Carter, B. Keene of Maine was appointed to succeed him. Sharp was chairman of the committee which worked out the details of the parcel post organization.

Postmaster General Hitchcock, in announcing the resignation, stated Sharp's departure would be a great loss to the postal service. He had been particularly effective in carrying out Hitchcock's crusade against the fraudulent use of the mails.

MYSTERY IN BULGARS' MOVE

Withdrawal From Tchatalja Lines Is Thought to Be a Feint

MAY DRAW TURKS IN PURSUIT

Allies Could Crush Ottomans by Luring Them From Forts and Giving Battle In Open, Field—Greek Flag Now Waves Over Island of Crete—The Gallipoli Campaign

London, Feb. 17.—One of the greatest mysteries of the renewed Balkan war is the action of the Bulgarian army before Tchatalja. The allies are reported to have withdrawn still further from the line of strong forts that guard the way to Constantinople.

It was said at the first news of the retrograde movement that the Bulgarians were giving up their advance positions because a large part of the troops had been withdrawn for the campaign in the Gallipoli peninsula. But now it looks like a feint.

The allies probably realize they cannot take the Tchatalja lines and Constantinople without a tremendous loss of life. At the same time they believe, it is thought, they could repeat their victories of Lule Burgas and Kirk Kilisseh once the Turkish forces had attempted again to give battle in the open field.

Should the Turks, deceived by the apparent retreat, vaingloriously hurry to pursue them, it is expected the allies would quickly turn and crush the Ottomans.

Something of this sort may already have happened. Telegrams rumor a great battle at Chorlu. No details are given.

From Athens comes a dispatch announcing that the island of Crete has been handed over to Greece by the European nations, the flags of Turkey and the protecting powers being hauled down and replaced by the Greek standard at Canea.

Mysterious also is the situation in the Gallipoli peninsula, and the result of the fighting at the lines of Bulair, across the narrowest part of the peninsula, which must be captured before a land attack can be made on the Dardanelles. A report stated that the Bulgarians after a great victory on Tuesday captured Bulair, but another message stated that there was heavy fighting at that place on Thursday, with considerable losses on both sides.

An unconfirmed report from Turkish sources states that the Montenegrin attack delivered on Thursday against Tarabasch and Birditza was repulsed by the Turks, who captured six guns. The Montenegrin casualties are said to have numbered 3000, but no mention is made of Turkish losses.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

HALL PLACE M. E.

Rev. T. C. Martin took for his text at the morning service at the Hall Place M. E. church, Phil. 3-8. "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord."

Sunday school was held at noon. The Juniors met at 3 p. m. Miss Helen Martin led the Epworth League devotional service on "Genuine faith as shown by deeds." The following questions were answered by various members, "How can a man who is skillful in right living be like a house founded on a rock? What is the difference between a man who does what he knows to be wrong and a man who does not do what he knows to be right? This question was answered by the reference given in James 4-17. "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin?" How can character be strengthened: by overcoming a habit, acquiring a better habit or by talking and meditating on them?"

At the evening service the pastor preached on the "Life and character of Abraham Lincoln."

Wednesday evening the Copley Square School of Music will give a concert in the auditorium which will equal that of last year.

Prayer meeting Friday evening at 7.30 in the vestry.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

The usual audience filled the church to the doors at the morning service. Dr. Sneath took for his topic, "Don't Worry, but Trust," and chose the text from Philippians 4:6.7. "Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus."

"This is an age of successful worrying. There is more worry in one year of Boston's city life than in one hundred years in Brahministic India, and this in a Christian land. We are living at a high nervous tension. The women seem to have taken St. Martha for their patron saint and the men St. Vitus. The principles of the new psychology which bear upon worrying have done a vast amount of good.

This is a tremendous power and influence in seeing the bright side and looking for the beautiful in things.

"But I purpose to go back to an apostle of the Old School. Paul had plenty of opportunities for anxiety but in the midst of all, lived a life of content. While a prisoner at Rome, chained to a guard he preached the gospel of Jesus Christ with joy. It was under those conditions that he wrote the letter to the Philippians, so full of inspiration and help, the only one out of his fourteen epistles that contains no reproaches or rebukes. In it he gives that wonderful prescription against anxiety. 'Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God.'

"Our first duty in perplexing experiences is to pray. We need the presence and help of Almighty God. The need of the age is a God-consciousness. Prayer is not an interference with the plan of God, but an earnest supplication that God's plan may be achieved. Christ prayed and I take my example of life from Him. The age tends to cultivate a spirit of self-sufficiency. In the ethical life a spirit of anxiety develops and we feel the need of other help. Prayer is the prescription.

"But there is another feature—with thanksgiving. The greatest antidote to discontent and fault-finding is gratitude. It is a positive principle that gratitude for the past is a sure guarantee of good in the future. In place of anxiety put trust.

"If you follow the prescription what is the result? 'And the peace of God which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.' I cannot tell you what that peace is, I can only describe it to you in Christ's words. At the Last Supper when Christ tells his disciples that He must be crucified on the morrow and anguish is written on every face, He in the calmness of perpect content, says 'My peace I leave with you. Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions, if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you.'

"Cultivate self-control, see the bright side, but take the prescription of the doctor of the old psychology, 'Pray and trust.'"

The regular monthly church sociable will be held in the vestry Wednesday evening, supper at 6.30.

At the vespers next Sunday, the "Holy City" will be given by a chorus of thirty voices.

It is a keen disappointment that Miss Weeks has been forced to give up the leadership of the Society on account of the growth of the business in town which with Mrs. Walker she is the head. Her place will be taken by Mrs. W. Y. Sherman, who is experienced in such matters and is well qualified in every way to carry on the work effectively.

It is thought best to postpone for one week the meeting of the Sunday School teachers inasmuch as Feb. 22 the date originally set is a holiday.

The second of all day sewing meetings will be held on Wednesday beginning at ten o'clock. A basket lunch will be served.

1865, a short time after Lee's surrender, but served in the Army till November 1865.

On being discharged from the Army, Mr. Corthell took up the work of shoemaking. He was of an inventive turn of mind, and while working in the shoe shop he invented two different styles of lace hooks for shoes. One of them was made of sheet metal, and is the same hook, practically, that has been in use ever since. He also invented an edge trimmer, a wax edge setter and a heel scourer. After these inventions came into general use Mr. Corthell accepted a position with the Union Machine Company of New York.

In 1877 he moved to Wollaston and entered into business with David Whittemore, and in 1881 he organized the Corthell Manufacturing Company and for six or seven years managed that company and sold its shoe machinery. After a long series of patent lawsuits, most of the inventions became public property, through the expiration of the patents, and Mr. Corthell accepted a position travelling for and setting up the American Shoe Machinery Company's products in England, Scotland, France, and Costa Rica.

From 1891 to 1900 Mr. Corthell was in charge of the finishing of shoe machinery of the Standard Shoe Machinery Company, and on the absorption of that company he accepted a position with the United Shoe Machinery Company. Owing to the illness of his wife, however, he gave up that position shortly afterward and accepted a position with the Tubular Rivet and Stud Company's works in Wollaston so as to be near home, and he is employed there at the present time.

Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Corthell and of these three are living. These are Mrs. F. W. Haynes and Mrs. Charles B. Harrington of Wollaston and Robert N. Corthell of Auburn, Me. In addition to these children, they have six grandchildren.

tages that would be gained by this canal in the loss of life and property. The annual saving in land values, loss of life and property and saving in insurance would be $3,205,600 and the annual maintenance, figured at on a cost of 4 per cent of $20,903,000 would be $836,000 making a net profit of $2,369,600 to thirty million people on the Atlantic seaboard, dependent on the west and south for coal, cotton, coke, iron, ore ,etc.

From 1900 to 1909 there were 5,700 disasters to shipping on the Atlantic seaboard; $40,500,000 worth of vessels and cargo and over 2,200 human lives. About one thousand of these lives being charged to Cape Cod.

It was a shame for our state that it remained for Congressman J. Hampton Moore of Pennsylvania and Congessman John H. Small of North Carolina to be pioneers to inaugurate a movement for the saving of life and reduction of freight rates when the commerce of our state exceeds that of the Mississippi river by millions. In closing Commissioner Crane thanked the Chamber in behalf of the Quincy Board of Trade for the opportunity to make a partial presentation of the proposition for the canal from Taunton to Boston.

complete without a little shop talk and this came as usual after they had their fill of the good things to eat. President French presided and extended a welcome to all. Then Mayor Stone had a word of greeting. The Mayor is one of the honorary members of the association and while he never ran with the machine, his sympathies have always been with the boys. He brought his greeting and assured them that there was no social gathering that he attended in the course of a year that he enjoyed more than he did these gatherings and he wished them good health during the coming year, and promised if living to be with them at the summer gathering.

Ex-Mayor Shea who is also a member of the association and always has a word to say about the amazing things the old Granite used to accomplish in her palmy days is down south and could not be present. He however sent a message of regret from North Carolina. A similar message was also received from Frederick B. Foss who is now in Pennsylvania.

Other speakers were James H. Elcock, the present Overseer of the Poor and formerly a district engineer, who spouted for the old Granite, John Q. A. Field ,still young at 78, Councilman Joseph L. Whiton known as the father of the present Steamer 1, and auto chemical 1, Councilman Edward J. Sandberg, ex-Councilman Harry G. Studley, and Elmer E. Abercrombie of Braintree.

The only Galen Vinton Bowditch was of course present and he had a word to say, not neglecting the opportunity to get in a rap at those wicked Republicans. Galen also told the boys that he was going to Washington to witness the inauguration of President Wilson.

After the dinner was over and cigars lighted the old vets gathered about in little groups and talked over the good old days when the Hose company was one of the first, if not the first to arrive at the scene of action in answer to an alarm of fire.

WATERWAYS APPRECIATED.

Improvement of the upper Columbia river to permit navigation is receiving the attention of the United States government, which has sent Major J. B. Cavanaugh and Captain Ernhbeck of the army engineer corps west to make an investigation. At a meeting with business men of Kettle Falls, north of Spokane, the officers said the plan adopted by the war department is to improve the river from Wenatchee north to Kettle Falls as rapidly as possible.

The state steamer Yakima and there barges are now removing obstructions at various places in the river, from 100 to 150 miles south of Kettle Falls, and congress has been urged to provide funds for extending the work to the northern part. Farmers in that section declare they will be at a disadvantage if the river is not opened by next fall, as they suffered some losses last year during low water.

AUTO ACCIDENT.

Saturday evening about 9.30 o'clock an automobile owned and driven by William J. Connell of Cochato road, Braintree, met with a serious accident in the vicinity of the Hollis school, Washington street, Braintree. The car was from Quincy and was going at a good speed when the chains on one of the rear wheels broke and punctured the tire causing the machine to skid. At that point the road rises noticeably and it is reported that the car hit against the shut-off pipe on the sidewalk and was thrown toward an electric light pole. The gentlemen of the party William J. Connell of 116 Monatiquot avenue and Alfred Hixon were unhurt but both Mrs. Hixon and Mrs. Connell were thrown out and considerably injured. Mrs. Hixon was badly shaken and bruised; Mrs. Connell had a broken nose, and her left shoulder, foot and ankle were badly bruised. Drs. Dearing and Gould were hastily summoned and rendered all necessary assistance and conveyed the injured members to their homes.

DANCING PARTY.

Saturday evening the members of the Wah Wah club of Braintree held an enjoyable dancing party in Cochato hall, Braintree. There were about sixty couples in attendance and the music was furnished by Abel's orchestra which always provides most satisfactory music.

The affair was in charge of Miss Bertha Smith, Miss Evelyn M. Bridgham, Miss Helen Averill and Miss Ada Mack. The matrons were Mrs. G. C. Fuller, Mrs. S. S. Bridgham and Mrs. Edward Averill. The dance orders were unique and the decorations suggested the valentine season. It was one of the most successful affairs of the season.

THE NATIONAL FORESTS.

The National Conservation Association has issued the following with regard to this important subject.

"Both in and out of Congress an attempt is being made to turn the National Forests, which now belong to the whole people, over to the Western States. This attempt was started because most of the openings through which the public lands and their resources used to be stolen have been closed. The men who have grown rich or who desire to grow rich, by looting the public domain are now facing hard times. These men regard any change from national control as a change for the better, for to them the present situation could not well be worse. Although a certain number of honest but mistaken men are behind the effort to destroy the National Forests, still in a somewhat extensive experience with land grabbers, I cannot recall a single one who was not an ardent friend of this policy.

"Some of the men most interested deny that any such movement exists at all. A partial answer is that a provision to give the National Forests and public lands to the Western States was introduced and defeated at the last session of Congress, that many Western Governors advocate it, and that more than a dozen bills to promote or carry it out are actually before Congress now.

"The National Forests, like the timber, the waterpower, the grass where the forest is open and the minerals they contain, do not stop, and the use of them does not stop, at State lines. They can be protected and used with success only under a policy that is alive to the interests of the whole people, and not merely to the interests of any one section or State.

"The heart of the Conservation policy is development and use. The United States Forest Service, now bitterly attacked by those whom it has prevented from grabbing public resources, has always stood for prompt development of the National Forests, and the use of them by the small man first.

"Six hundred thousand people use the National Forests every year. The sheep and cattle which graze within their boundaries supply one-sixth of the American people with meat. Every man, woman and child in the United States owns six thousand feet of lumber in the National Forests. Much of the timber in them is still too remote and difficult of access to be saleable now; but as rapidly as it can be sold without loss and without injury to the forest, it is cut and used. The Service has built more than eleven thousand miles of telephone lines, sixteen hundred miles of road and over thirteen thousand miles of trails. Forty thousand permits for the use of timber free by settlers are issued every year. Forty-five thousand miners operate in National Forests, and the Forests conserve the water supply of 1,175 towns and cities, and 324 water power projects which furnish light and power for industries of every kind.

"Four-fifths of the standing timber in the United States is in private hands. Thirty seven private owners absolutely control about as much timber as the other ninety four millions of us have in the National Forests. What the Nation has left must be protected for the use of us all against the coming time of need, and only the National Government can do that.

"The Forest Service is a clean and efficient organization almost entirely made up of Western men. It has always been and is today wholly free from politics. Why should the American people run the risk of political mismanagement and private monopoly by splitting up the National Forests between fifteen or twenty separate States, most of which have no forest services to take charge of them? It is bad business to multiply organizations when one will do the work, especially when that one is doing it well already.

"If this movement were to succeed two billion dollars worth of public property in the National Forests would be in danger of passing by way of State ownership into private hands. But the greatest danger lies in the monopolies of coal, water power, timber, and other natural resources to which such private ownership inevitably leads. The proof of this statement is the story of how the Western States have squandered the lands already granted to them, and the monopolies which have resulted therefrom. There is a similar record in many of the Eastern States as well.

"If this attack succeeds the public lands and other public resources will be endangered in turn. I have taken the liberty of putting the facts in your hands because I hope for your help in this fight."

TRIP OF SCOTT AND HIS PARTY

Should Have Been Glorious Without Being Tragic

VAGUE FEELING OF BLUNDER

No Doubt That Four Men Died Like Heroes, Making Awful Sacrifices For Sake of Comrades—Slow Response to Appeal to Nation Made by Leader of Expedition

London, Feb. 17.—With the sorrow felt throughout England at the death of Captain Scott and his companions, there is mingled an uneasy feeling that the tragedy could have been avoided had somebody not blundered. Perhaps this feeling so far has found little or no public expression. England has been stirred by the news which came at the beginning of last week as by no record of tragic adventure since the Franklin expedition in the middle of the last century. As The Spectator remarks:

"There is a peculiar quality in the experience of polar discoverers to excite the compassions—the fearful loneliness, and their helplessness when disaster comes. The death of Captain Scott and his companions has brought a shock of personal grief into every home in the United Kingdom. He was the victim of a series of misfortunes which could not possibly have been provided against. Even the pessimist, trying to imagine all the setbacks that might happen, would hardly have convinced himself that ill-luck would really dog the footsteps of the party with such relentlessness."

It is only in the reiteration of statements such as this quoted, by the very stress which is laid on the assertion that every possible precaution was taken, that one comes to see that at the bottom of it all lurks some fear that the glorious, but tragic, page in the history of British polar exploration might have been made glorious without being tragic.

Nobody doubts the glory. Scott, Wilson and Bowers undoubtedly died like heroes, and it is believed probably could have saved their own lives but for their unwillingness to abandon Evans, in the first instance, and later Oates.

That gallant soldier's end is in itself regarded as proof that he realized he had been a drag on his comrades and would no longer add to their perils. He evidently thought out the situation and recognized clearly that for him to stay in camp with the party for the few days he might yet live meant death to all. He tried to save his comrades' lives by losing his own. The reticence of his words, "I am just going outside," which prelude the sublime act of self-sacrifice, is likely to be remembered so long as the English spirit lives.

In this and other aspects, such as Scott's remarkable message, the tragedy is of a kind to awaken the best national pride. It has been so depicted in a way that might be thought excessive were it not remembered that grief seeks some solace.

A feature of the tragedy which caused mixed feelings is the slow response to the appeal to the nation made by Scott. The government's delay in declaring its precise intention in the matter was at first held responsible for the public holding off from subscribing to one or the other of the funds opened, but now it is known the treasury will make a grant of naval pensions to the widows of Scott and Evans, some other reason must be sought altogether.

Not $50,000 has yet been raised by all the funds combined. It is remembered that a few years ago a single newspaper got together $250,000 for a physician who abandoned medicine for cricket playing.

SCIENTISTS IN PERIL

Relief Expedition Fails In Attempted Dash to the Arctic

Christiania, Feb. 17.—The second Norwegian expedition sent to the relief of the German scientists, stranded in a remote part of Spitzbergen, has not succeeded in its undertaking.

It left Advent bay late in January, but was forced to return to Green Harbor in a pitiful condition.

The expedition reached Dickson bay, where a hurricane stopped all progress. Seven dogs died and several of the members of the rescuing party were frostbitten.

Two sledges were destroyed, and for that reason and the loss of the dogs the expedition was forced to leave all provisions except minimum rations.

No further efforts will be possible until additional dogs are sent from Norway. Experts consider that unless the Germans are rescued in the near future, their position will be precarious.

Five Steamship Officers Drown

Hamburg, Feb. 17.—The five officers of the steamer Christiania were drowned when their vessel sank after being cut down by the German steamer Galata, in a dense fog off Borkum. The nineteen sailors and stokers escaped in the ship's boats.

Sales, $250,000
Tolls, $36

THIS is the most remarkable incident of its kind that we have heard of in the course of a demonstration of selling by telephone — sales totalling $250,000 at an expenditure of $36 for telephone tolls.

By permission we are enabled to say that the selling was done by MR. GEORGE R. KELLY of George R. Kelly & Co., of 104 Hanover St., Boston, New England selling agents of the American Window Glass Company of Pittsburgh.

One of our salesmen called upon Mr. Kelly to demonstrate our new toll service selling plans, only to find that already he was employing advanced methods along this line. Said he:

"We anticipated a rise in the price of window glass around January 1, and wanted to give our customers the benefit of current quotations.

"There wasn't time to make personal visits to the trade, letters wouldn't be satisfactory, so we made our call by telephone.

"During the first ten days in December we made toll calls to widely separated points in New England, at a cost of about $36, and booked orders aggregating $250,000."

If any New England house can show greater results from selling by telephone, we would be glad to learn of them.

Business men interested in progressive ideas for the extension of trade are invited to send for our booklet entitled "Modern Methods of Money Making," and for sample of our "Telephone Passes."

In Greater Boston, call Fort Hill 7600 and ask the Contract Department for details. Outside of Greater Boston, call the Local Manager.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

EGGS DAINTILY POACHED.

POACHED eggs are merely eggs boiled without the shells. Unless you have a "poacher" use a frying pan. Fill it about half full of boiling water and add a few drops of vinegar and a good pinch of salt. First break each egg into a cup, taking care not to break the yolk; then slip it carefully into the boiling water. Draw the pan to the side of the stove, so that the water boils gently. If it cooks too fast the white will be hard. In three and a half minutes the white will be nicely set. Lift the egg out carefully with a "slice" or large spoon if you have not one.

You can serve each egg on a neat square of hot buttered toast. Only really fresh eggs will poach well.

Wholesome For Invalids.

Poached Eggs With Rice.—Take four ounces of well boiled rice, six new laid eggs, one gill of brown sauce, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, one ounce of butter, salt and pepper. Melt the butter in a saucepan, add to it the boiled rice while it is still hot, mix it well and season carefully. Make this rice into a neat bed on a hot dish, leaving a margin of dish around the rice. Poach the eggs carefully in boiling water to which the lemon juice has been added and when they are sufficiently set lift them out, trim them neatly and arrange them on the rice. Pour on the hot sauce and serve hot.

Eggs Poached In Milk.—To poach eggs this way substitute sweet milk for water and add a pinch of salt. Break two eggs in a saucer, taking care not to break the yolk, and slip them into the milk when boiling. Boil for five minutes. Take up with a slice and trim off the rough edge of each egg. Place the eggs on two rounds of buttered toast, pour a little milk on the plate or dish and serve.

In Scallop Shells.

Eggs Poached With Spinach.—Take four eggs, a pound of the fresh dry spinach, one truffle, an ounce of grated Parmesan cheese, four tablespoonfuls of thick white sauce and salt and pepper to taste.

Pick over and wash the spinach, cook it in boiling water with a little salt and soda in it till tender, then drain and press and either pass through a sieve or chop it. Season it nicely.

Butter four scallop shells, put a layer of spinach in each. On this lay a neatly poached egg. Mask it with white sauce, which must be hot and nicely seasoned. Sprinkle over the top some of the grated cheese and garnish with a little chopped truffle. Put the shells in the oven for a minute or two to brown the cheese.

UTILIZING COLD RICE.

WHEN you have cold boiled rice set it aside and serve it a day or so later in some one of the many palatable concoctions in which it may be an ingredient.

Rice fritters, waffles or griddlecakes may be made by following the ordinary recipes for these and using cold rice instead of the flour called for, adding flour to make a thin batter.

Fried Rice.—For this the rice should have been boiled until quite soft. Mold it and when ready for use slice and fry in butter or lard. It may be eaten with pepper or salt or served with sugar or maple sirup.

Rice Salad.—Take a cup of cold rice, a cup of diced beets and two cups of celery. Season with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of made mustard, one teaspoonful of powdered sugar and a dash of cayenne. Moisten with equal parts of cream and vinegar.

Nice Side Dishes.

Rice With Tomato Sauce.—Stew half a sliced lemon in a half pint of tomato liquor strained from stewed canned tomatoes. Let the onion simmer in the tomatoes for fifteen minutes. Take it out, cook a tablespoonful each of butter and flour together and make a tomato sauce. If the tomato is tart, as it usually is, add a teaspoonful of white sugar at the time the salt and pepper are put in. Place the rice in a baking dish and pour the sauce over it. Place in the oven for about ten minutes and serve hot.

Toasted Rice.—Take squares of cold boiled rice, butter and toast them. These may be eaten with sugar, jelly, preserves or vegetables. They keep hot much longer than a piece of toasted bread and therefore are an excellent substitute for the bread in dishes that cool rapidly.

Steamed Rice.

Casserole of Rice and Meat.—Chop any cold meat which you have on hand very fine and season with half a teaspoonful of salt, a saltspoonful of pepper, a fourth of a teaspoonful of celery salt and a teaspoonful of finely chopped onion. Beat an egg, add it to the meat, together with two tablespoonfuls of cracker crumbs, and moisten with a little water. Take a casserole dish, line the bottom and the sides with rice half an inch thick. Then put in the meat and cover it closely with rice. Steam for forty-five minutes and serve with tomato sauce poured over it.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

WEDDING OF WOMAN OF 105 DELAYED

Eighty-Six-Year-Old Fiance Hears Wrangle In Court

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 17.—Unable to decide whether Mrs. Marcelina Elisalda, 105 years old, should be permitted to marry Pleasantino Leon, aged 86, Superior Judge Rives continued the case in probate court for one week.

The court ordered the attorney for Mrs. Elisalda, who is wealthy, to produce her at that time in order that he may base his ruling upon personal observation.

Leon, who says he has loved Mrs. Elisalda for more than half a century, was an interested auditor while lawyers were wrangling over his courtship.

Mrs. Elisalda's relatives object to the marriage. Their fight is being waged by a granddaughter, who was recently appointed the aged woman's guardian.

CAMPHOR GROVE A SUCCESS

New York and Boston Capitalists Will Compete With Japanese

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 17.—After experiments covering a period of three years New York and Boston capitalists announced the success of a thousand acre camphor grove at Crescent City, Fla.

A New England drug syndicate now will duplicate this grove in an effort to rid itself of the Japanese combine which for centuries has supplied the world.

It has taken three years to prove camphor trees can be successfully cultivated in this country under suitable conditions of soil and climate.

ARMISTICE LASTS BUT FEW HOURS

Battle Raging In Mexico City May Be Decisive One

MADERO DECLARES HE WILL NOT RESIGN

Thinks He Can Crush Rebel Forces If Given Time—Diaz, Whose Position Is Impregnable, Bound to Drive President From Office—Women and Children Being Looked After by American Ambassador, Regardless of Their Nationality—President Taft and Cabinet Reaffirm Policy of Keeping Hands Off

Mexico City, Feb. 17.—Hostilities were resumed with renewed fierceness in the Mexican capital Sunday after a truce which lasted only a few hours, and a battle, probably the decisive one, is on here.

The armistice, signed at 2 o'clock Sunday morning by the representatives of both sides, agreeing to suspend operations for twenty-four hours, was broken before noon. Soon the sound of heavy cannonading and the whirr of machine guns announced the return of the federal troops to their post in front of the arsenal.

It appeared as if the words of Madero and Diaz might prove prophetic and that this time the battle would be to a finish.

Ambassador Wilson was busy all day with hurried preparations for the removal of American women and children to safety across the border or under the guns of the battleships at Vera Cruz. Those women and children of other nations who desire will be cared for also.

President Madero yesterday reiterated his refusal to comply with the suggestion of the senators that he resign. He declared he was still able to dominate and that, given time, he would crush the rebel forces.

General Diaz had not shown himself to be greatly in favor of the armistice, but he consented to it out of respect to the efforts of the American ambassador and the ministers of the powers to bring about a cessation of hostilities until the foreigners and other non-combatants—still within the zone of the fighting—could be removed to a position of comparative safety.

General Diaz regarded the truce as merely a delay in the accomplishment of his fixed purpose to drive Madero out of the presidency. The fighting Saturday had undoubtedly gone in favor of the rebels, who had resisted all assaults against them, had received into their ranks several hundred federal deserters and had obliged the federal commanders to admit that, for the present, at least, the rebel position was impregnable.

General Huerta, the commander of the government troops, a hard fighter who has been through many campaigns, was opposed to the armistice and chafed under the terms which it imposed upon him. Nor did he willingly agree to the sending of a large body of his forces back to the federal base near the national palace Saturday night.

President Madero's attitude was one of exasperation, but as he had requested the American government to withhold intervention, he could do no less than consent to an armistice when the question was submitted directly to him. But he let it be known, without equivocation, that he was determined to retain the presidency.

The American ambassador and the German minister called on the president and on Huerta and asked that the military dispositions of the government forces should be so arranged as to render unnecessary the firing over the residential quarter; that a free zone be fixed and the government unite with the American committee in the establishment of centres for the distribution of food to the poor, this having been agreed to by the general provisionally.

Yesterday morning the embassy was the scene of intense activity. A dozen automobiles moved swiftly to and fro, carrying refugees, provisions and messages. The work entailed necessitated the hiring of a corps of extra clerks and stenographers. The embassy building was besieged by hundreds, not all of them Americans, who asked for advice and assistance.

There is little actual suffering from lack of food or shelter within the city, but there is a vast mount of discomfort and great danger to those who remain.

TAFT IS DISTURBED

Calls Special Meeting of Cabinet to Discuss Situation In Mexico

Washington, Feb. 17.—After a conference of an hour and a half with Secretary of State Knox last night, President Taft called a special meeting of the cabinet to discuss the late dispatches from Mexico. The report from Mexico City that the armistice had been declared off and that hostilities had been resumed caused intense interest among the cabinet officers.

Mr. Knox laid before the president a long resume of reports from Mexico City from Ambassador Wilson, picturing in detail the revolt of Diaz and the efforts of Madero to suppress it. The proposed reply of this government to Madero's request to keep "hands off" and allow him to settle with Diaz himself was considered.

Despite the alarming information that has continued to come into Washington for the last few days not a member of the president's cabinet favored intervention when summoned to last night's meeting.

Most of the official family believe the Mexican factions will solve their own troubles and are of the opinion that interference by the United States is uncalled for at this time.

The president was plainly disturbed to learn that communication between Mexico and the United States was precarious and that an apparently strict censorship had been instituted by Mexican authorities.

His fear has been that just such a condition might arise and that Americans in Mexico City might find themselves facing a situation like that which existed in Pekin during the Boxer rebellion.

There was little doubt expressed here that if a censorship is being exercised, this government will demand that the communications from Wilson and the replies shall be permitted to go through without interruption. It does not propose to have the slender thread that connects the American colony and Washington interfered with for an instant.

WOBURN EASY FOR LOCAL BOYS

Y. M. C. A. Basket Ball Teams Won in Canter

The Woburn Gym basket ball team was easy picking for the local Y. M. C. A. fives Saturday night. The visitors first team have a good reputation and a good game was expected. The contest was a big disappointment in almost every way, the only redeeming feature being the excellent shooting of Henry Trask, the local center. Trask seems to have found his "shooting eye." After several weeks layoff. He caged 16 goals from the floor. Some of them were of a very difficult nature, being made on the dead run and from a side angle. Rich also had his eye on the basket getting 6 goals.

"Jack" Melville played a good game in the back field and is rapidly developing into a fast guard.

The "Silent Five" played the Woburn 2nd and had almost as easy a time as did the senior team. Bishop and Summers did the best shooting for the local team, while Wilcox played well for the visitors. "Billy" Childs, who formerly played with the second team was back into the game in good style and his clever passing aroused much enthusiasm. The summary:

AMERICANIZED IMMIGRANTS

Soon Become Accustomed to the Ways of the Land

DR. STEINER'S LECTURE

"A country has the immigrants it deserves" was only oneof many trite remarks by Dr. Edward A. Steiner at Music hall Monday evening. He qualified the sentence by saying that while we did not create culture or civilization we democratized it, which is most glorious and that the decay of a nation commences on the upper rung of its social life and never at the bottom.

This statement was made while delivering his well-known lecture, "On the trail of the immigrant," a subject which he has studied from the angle of contact and association. He appeared under the auspices of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. and was the fourth attraction of their Lyceum Course.

Dr. Steiner, a resident of Iowa, a Viennese by birth, a college professor by choice, and, as he says, above all an American citizen, is a highly entertaining talker. Humorous and pathetic, through his descriptive analysis of the situation, he earned not only the sympathy of his hearers but also their assistance. Their interest was shown by the questions asked the speaker at the close of his lecture.

Delcevare King introduced Dr. Steiner. He said Massachusetts people were two-thirds foreign born or the children of foreign born parents and that the speaker could be classed as a foreigner since he had arrived here 25 years ago.

Dr. Steiner said he was a professor of sociology. He labeled the cause of immigration as an economic problem due to a social unrest. He said no country is free from it,that it is one manifestation of the social struggle. An imperialist would say that back of human endeavor is the struggle of existence or that the soul of history is its struggle. I am an idealist by conviction and I realize there is some truth in it. In all human action the scales tip toward idealism.

It is the social struggle that makes men do as they do and it finds its outlet towards the United States. The necessities of life play an important part ini the movement. Many come here because of the social prominence given them in the eyes of the parents through their residence here. The immigrant is an economic problem and it is intensified by the great presence of numbers. Our main problem is the lessening of the economic stress, the matter of a few involved lessens our problem.

"None of our present day problems were created by the newer type of immigrant. They are universal problems and exist where our type of civilization which tends to industrialism is found. They are not created by the workers, but by the shirkers, because of the many who want to eat by the sweat of the other's brow. Immigration robs other countries of the flower of their land, stalwart and brave hearted men in the noonday of their life. They come here for the common task of working.

"If illiterate, they are not so by choice. Many of them and their forefathers may have shed blood in the cause of education which was and is now suppressed through the enactment of severe regulation by tyrannical government. But, if they were all university graduates and wanted to live by their wits what would we do with them? They are patriotiic, rush to the defense of the homeland at the first call and have proven a similar respect to our country.

"With regard to what is sent abroad in currency, it is more than equalled by that spent by our luxury loving tourists. Their capital is secred at the expense of exhausted energy, spent in trying to reap the price of liberty. The greater percentage of those injured and killed were immigrants who laid down their lves to our Mamon. Their standard of living is self satisfying, gradually broadens and is soon Americanized. They want citizenship they work for t and attain it.

"They surround themselves with forms of culture similar to our past surroundings. They may change their names, but they work and expend brawn and muscle in order to live and lay aside their small margin. All become Americanized when they strike these shores. They assimilate as we did. No geographic barriers effect the distribution of our excessively pre zone: no dietary provincalism marks our life for we all eat the same articles of food; we are all one type made from the forces of other people.

The problem of the immigrant may be solved perhaps by getting them to our homes, by our being generous in mind toward them, never forbetting that they are now what you or your fathers were residents who came here in the steerage."

—By their finger prints depositors in Spokane, Washington banks will be recognized in the future. Six of the leading banks have decided to install the system, following approval of the plan by the American Bankers' association. W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National bank of Spokane, has studied the finger print system as applied to banking for five years and was largely instrumental in securing its approval by the national association. As a means of identification the system is believed to be far more effective than the use of signatures. The finger print test is applied by bankers by placing the tips of the fingers and thumbs of both hands on a card designed especially for the purpose.

COUNCIL GETTING LATE HOUR AND DEBATING HABIT SESSIONS

Berghouse Tells Wonderful Tale of Obstacles Encountered by Squantum People

The Annual Budget Presented a Most Interesting Document to Peruse

Another midnight session of the City Council was held Monday evening the length being due to several public hearings coupled with debates on questions that came up, principally on the substitute order reported by the special committee on street matters relative to Penn street Theoriginial order called for $9,000 to pave the street and the substitute order cut that amount to $2,000 for rebuilding, it being the idea of the committee that the street should have a tarvia top.

After considerable discussion the report of the committee was accepted and the order ordered to a second reading.

Communications were received from the Mayor appointing W. I. Hickson, Daniel G. Butters, George A. Wardwell and John McNeil as special constables. Confirmed .

The Auditor forwarded a communication stating that bills in excess of the appropriation for 1912 had been filed as follows. Overseer of the Poor outside poor, $1,141.12, Board of Health Miscellaneous $271.41. Later orders were offered for these amounts charging them to the Excess and Deficiency Fund, that of the Board of Health was adopted and that of the Overseer of the Poor was ordered to a second reading.

Communications were received from the Mayor and Treasurer inclosing the budget for the year 1913, also the School Committee budget and will be found on page two.

From the Mayor returning Order No. 58 for retaining wall and rail on Kent street Laid on table.

From the Mayor inclosing petition for granolithic sidewalk on Hancock street, westerly side from Saville street to School street. Referred to Special Committee on Street Matters.

From the Mayor inclosing communication from Chief Engineer of the fire department asking for the following transfers, $98.67 from horse shoeing to miscellaneous and $46.78 from fire alarm to miscellaneous.

From the Mayor with inclosure from the assessors asking for an appropriation of $75 to complete the vaults in the assessors' offices. Later orders were offered and adopted for the above

From Mayor with inclosure from P. J. McGinley asking for hearing relative to his land on West Squantum street. Referred back to Executive to find out what the petitioner wanted.

A petition was received from the Electric Light Co. for a location for poles on Hill street. Hearing ordered for March 3.

A petition for street lights at Atlantic was referred to the Executive.

Licenses were granted as follows. Georgia L. Oakes, private detective, G. Klinger, bowling alleys, Nathan Ames to sell firearms.

The Chief of Police recommended that a hearing be given on the petition of Konstant Hill to run a bowling alley. Hearing ordered for March 3.

Councilman Cunningham offered a petition for a granolithic sidewalk on Hancock street from Harmon block to Squantum street. Laid on the table.

Applications for apportionment of betterment assessments were granted and the betterments apportioned.

A petition for lights on Conant road was referred to the Executive.

On petitions to accept Ocean street and from the abutters on Ballou street for reduction in betterment assessment orders for a hearing March 3, were adopted.

Petitions for sidewalks on Billings road and for the repairs of Billings road were referred to the special committee on Street matters.

Councilman Griffin presented a petition for a hall in the Washington school. Laid on the table to be referred later.

A hearing was held at 8 o'clock on petitions of the Electric Light Co. and of the Street railway company for location for poles. After the hearing the petition was laid on the table.

The Special Committee on Street Matters reported as follows:—

Leave to withdraw on the petitions for the acceptance of Saville avenue, extension of Nelson street to Copeland street, acceptance of Cherry avenue, acceptance of part of Norfolk street, sidewalk on Whitney road and repairs of Franklin street. Report accepted.

An order for a public hearing March 17 on the acceptance of Morton street, Staunton street, Muirhead street, Curtis avenue, Vernon street, widening Sea street and changing the grade of Elm avenue and accepting a new street in front of the new Adams school building.

A substitute order for $2,000 for rebuilding of Penn street from Liberty street to Columbia street.

This report caused considerable debate. Councilman Richards claimed it would be a waste of the city's money to expend $2,000 on this street as proposed by the substitute order. Over a million dollars worth of business was done on this street in a year. Over 500 tons passed over the street every day.

Councilman Farquharson said there was more heavy teaming on this street than any other street in the city. He had seen four and six horse teams get stuck there.

In reply to a question Commissioner Tupper said that with the expenditure of $2,000 it would last for four years.

Councilman Whiton favored the report of the committee. In comparison with Independence avenue the teaming was small on Penn street. In view of the fact of the new terminal there will not be so much hauling that way.

Councilman Devaney believed that the street should be paved.

Councilman Griffin favored the report of the committee.

Councilman Bailey favored the committee report.

Councilman Cunningham favored a good job being done. Do the job thoroughly and it will last for thirty years.

Councilman Gauthier believed $2,000 to be throwing so much money away.

During debate Commissioner Tupper was asked many questions relative to travel on Penn street as compared with other streets, particularly Washington street. He said that the traffic on Washington street was much heavier and more wearing as the automobiles did more damage to streets than did heavy teams.

After some further discussion the substitute order was accepted on a rising vote of 14 yes and 7 no and ordered to a second reading.

A hearing was held on the application of John H. Gillis to keep and sell gasoline. No one appeared against the petition and the license was granted.

At 8.30 a hearing was given to residents of Squantum on the question of accepting streets. There was a big crowd of Squantum people present, including a few women. Mr. Carlson president of the Improvement association the first speaker spoke of the condition of the streets. The acceptance of the streets named. Huckins avenue, Dorchester street and Bellevue avenue was very much needed. They were very much used and were necessary in order to give access toproperty. Last year we paid $16,000 in taxes and we should have a share of that back. There were 300 or 400 families living in Squantum this year and if we had good streets there would be many more. He believed that the streets named could be accepted and built for $2,000 each.

Mr. Hogan felt justified in asking for the acceptance of the streets, first on account of their condition and second on account of the growth of the section. The valuation of real and personal property in Squantum had increased from $480,375 ini 1910 to $730,225 in 1912. He spoke about the muddy condition of the streets and of the many teams that got stuck there. He also spoke of the ladies who lost their rubbers in the mud and how their gloves were soiled picking up the muddy rubbers.

Mr. Logan one of the oldest residents of Squantum said all that he asked was for fair treatment. If houses are built the city will get the taxes. All that he asked was that a beginning be made on the streets.

Herman Berghouse was the last speaker and he kept the council and audience in a roar of laughter. He said that he was a disappointed Dutchman from Squantum. First,

Tremendous Vote Has Been Cast in Washington Contest

POLLS CLOSED AT NOON

The final spurt in the Daily Ledger Washington contest fulfilled all expectations. The Contest Editor is buried beneath thousands of votes. No count has been made of the vote cast since Monday, Feb. 10, but now that the polls are closed a speedy effort will be made to ascertain the prize winners.

Last week the coupons came in slow as most of the candidates seemed to prefer to hold them back, but nevertheless several hundred were cast. Yesterday and today, however, they came by the thousands ini quantitieis that surprised the Daily Ledger.

All the leaders shared in the gain, but at this writing the Contest Editor could not teli, if he wished, the list of prize wnners. He has made an estimate, on the blank printed in the Daily Ledger of Monday, but it is only a guess, as is as liable to be thousands out of the way as your estimate.

The Daily Ledger of Thursday will announce the prize wininers, and print half tones and sketches. Prize winners will be interviewed and they will tell how they came to enter the contest and how the yorganized to win.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Burglars are getting pretty bold and successful when they can blow a safe and make off with $12,000 in broad daylight.

Rigid censorship in Mexico is giving rise to grave apprehension.

It looks rather doubtful if those who favor the immigration bill will be able to muster strength enough to pass it over the veto.

New England people would like the Grand Trunk atmosphere made somewhat clearer.

Mars is a pretty busy old boy about this time, with activities on both sides of the globe.

A legislative enactment to prevent district attorneys being candidates for some other office while still holding down the public prosecuting job seems to be all right, but it hardly goes far enough. It should apply to every office holder.

The man who made the trouble in Japan was completely panned. The Japs moved with celerity and determination.

Football coaches come almost as high as baseball players.

February has probably more distinctive lasting features than any month in the year. It gave the world Washington and Lincoln, also St. Valentine, is the shortest month in the year and changes its pace every four years. And the present year it furnished the weather in large chunks.

We trust that Senator Lodge may not be correct in his predictions of war, but at the same time it would be just as well to be prepared.

Quincy's youngest institution, the Young Men's Hebrew Association has marked out a campaign which is commendable. May it be maintained to the honor and credit of both the city and the association.

Mr. Wilson has said that every one will know March 4, but nothing will be certain about the cabinet before that date. As he is in a position to know we take his word for it and at the same time suggest to others that they "go thou and do likewise."

The Harvard man who has not slept for 20 years is the latest marvel. He has got Rip Van Winkle nialed to the cross.

The firemen's affair is still up in the air.

February is still doing well in its weather variety, and few are sorry that only 10 more days of it remain.

Some of those wicked Princeton boys would kidnap some of the suffragettes. Well in the case of a few one could hardly blame them.

1912 was a record year in the value of marine disasters.

England does not appear to be living up to that generous heights to which Scott credited her.

No the suffragette who indulges in hiking would not have the inauguration day changed. She would receive little sympathy or notice from talking a mere tramp under warm clear skies.

The demand for silk hats for the inauguration parade, has created a boom in the hat trade of the country. It would be rather disappointing to the wearers if the usual blustery weather prevails on that day.

It looks as if the new president would have a few momentous problems facing him right at the very start.

AUTOMOBILE HOG.

The automobile hog is as much in evidence in various parts of the country as the same breed of animal in other departments. The automobile hog has a chance to do greater harm, without actually injuring any one than the other brand, and can stir up more wrath in the human breasts, and still grin and watch the clouds gathering and still claim to be within the law. Take for example a driver of a car, in making a turn, or passing at a street crossing. Pedestrians are encountered. The street is muddy or slushy or there are pools of water all around gathered in the hollows of the road. The pedestrian probably does not move any faster by hearing the toot of the horn and so the driver has to slow up. That driver is inwardly wrathy but he smiles just the same. His turn is coming. As soon as it is clear that the pedestrian is perfectly safe, the machine is speeded up and sent as close to the pedestrian as possible. The sudden jump of the machine and wheels send the water and mud spouting as from a hose or fountain. The pedestrian is covered with it. He is mad clean through. The driver of the car looks back, throws a grin over his shoulder and moves along, with as much as to say air, "you'll know better and move faster next time." Pedestrians have some rights in the highway and they are not supposed to rush at a 100 yard race pace, the minute they hear the toot of a machine. The supreme court has decided that the tooting of the horn does not give an automobile the right of way, it merely warns people of its approach.

The auto hog above referred to will keep on doing that until human patience can stand it no longer and then steps will be taken to provide a remedy.

Where the case is deliberate and plainly shown so by the actions of the driver and his later rubbering to see the effect of his little move, the person injured would do well to take the number of the car, and immediately write the state highway commission about the incident, time and place. Accumulations of such complaints against any car owner or driver would not afford the highway commission the greatest confidence in the granting of a license to such a person and on a renewal he might find some difficulties confronting him. On the whole though it would be well for both classes to be reasonable and respect the rights of the other and when they each do that there will be little cause for complaint.

THE BLUE SKY LAW.

If properly fromed the so-called "Blue Sky" law, is one that should become universal and adopted by all the states as rapidly as possible and be of such a simple character and common in its provisions and operations that there should be no chance for any misunderstanding its object and no opportunity to dodge it in any place. The law is really planned to shut off undesirable investment companies. If it had been in operation years ago much money would have been saved and there would be less people ruined. However it is not too late to improve and here is a golden opportunity for a move in right direction which cannot fail to produce good results. Kansas was the first to adopt such a law. Vermont followed in line the other day. There is a movement in that direction in this state. Delays are dangerous. There is no excuse for dilly dallying, or debate upon this law. It should be made, strong, binding, iron clad in its provisions and within the constitution so that it will have some effect. When such a law is framed it should be pushed along as rapidly as possible.

Hub's Mayor Wants Duty Maintained on Boots and Shoes

Trenton, Feb. 18.—President-elect Wilson heard a brief argument from Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston urging that the present tariff of 12 percent protecting the boot and shoe industry be maintained.

The mayor declared there were other industries protected by tariffs of from 25 to 50 percent, the removal of which was not being contemplated. The boot and shoe industry was not monopolized by any one concern, he said.

His Two Alleged Collectors of Police Graft Are Under Arrest

New York, Feb. 18.—Police Inspector Dennis Sweeny and two policemen alleged to have acted as his collectors of police graft were indicted by the extraordinary grand jury.

The policemen, Hartigan and Robinson, were immediately arrested on bench warrants. The indictments grew out of the recent confession of Police Captain Walsh.

A DOCTOR'S STORY

By RYLAND BELL

After a meeting of our medical society we separated into small groups, some discussing a paper that had been read, some idly chatting and some telling experiences. In our group we fell to talking about leaving patients in the hands of nurses we were not sure of, and one of our number told the following story:

One morning when making my round of visits I was going upstairs to the room of a sick lady when I heard the words:

"Doctor, my nurse is killing me!"

I stopped and listened for a repetition. I did not doubt that it came from the sickroom, though the patient had not complained of her nurse, whom I had recently placed on my list of those I recommended. But I did not hear the words again, so resolved to keep my own counsel and went on to the sick chamber, knocked and was admitted.

Now, I am enough of a scientist to know that an investigator is very easily worked upon by his theories. Before entering the room I had explained in my own mind the words I had heard. A former patient of mine had once, while I was bending over her, whispered to me, "For heaven's sake, take away that nurse!" I at once made an excuse to do so, and the patient, whose nerves were shattered, told me that the woman domineered over her. I did not completely side with my patient in the matter, for she needed a firm hand, but I gave her another nurse.

Nevertheless that case influenced me in the second one, and, realizing that I was influenced by it, I resolved to banish it and get at the facts without a word with the patient or the nurse. I found the nurse somewhat agitated, though the patient did not give evidence of anything unusual having happened. The nurse had just come into the room through a door opening upon a back stairway and carried a tray, on which was the invalid's luncheon.

There was no opportunity to speak to the patient alone during my visit, for the nurse did not leave the room. It has always seemed to me that for a doctor to send a nurse from the room reflects upon her, indicating that he wishes to say that to the patient which he does not wish the nurse to hear. At any rate, I once offended one of my best nurses by doing that very thing. So in this case I went away without having acquired any further information about the matter.

On my next visit I made a pretext to send the nurse out of the room to bring something I wanted, but she foiled me by going to a closet for it. I couldn't think of any other excuse and went away as uninformed as before. On my next visit I had scarcely entered the house before I again heard the words:

"Doctor, my nurse is killing me!"

This time, since I had not gone upstairs, the sound was farther away from me and less distinct. It seemed to come from directly over my head, though I paid no attention to this, for the ear does not give us the direction of sound. I hurried upstairs and into the sickroom without knocking, hopin to learn something by taking them by surprise. I found the nurse arranging the patient's pillow. Neither showed a consciousness of anything disagreeable between them.

But despite my remedies my patient was getting worse. Probably this turned the scale in my mind against the nurse. At any rate, I determined to remove her without offending her. I told her that I had another case in which she alone would satisfy me and I would send a substitute, she reporting at the new place that evening. Then I left without saying anything to her charge about the change, intending to do so after it had been made and at the same time give her my reasons for relieving her of her nurse.

What was my astonishment at my next visit to hear on ascending the staircase the words:

"Doctor, my nurse is killing me!"

I had only an hour before left the nurse who had had charge of the case with another patient, and here was the same complaint. I resolved to investigate on my own account. Avoiding the sickroom, I opened every door. In a small room directly over the front door was a parrot on a perch beside the window where he could see my carriage drive up and see me alight and enter the house.

Here was the explanation, or a part of it. Still keeping my own counsel, realizing that I had removed the nurse unjustly, I returned to the house where I had placed the suspected woman and told her what had happened.

"Doctor," she said, "the morning you called when I was carrying in the patient's breakfast I had just passed the room where the parrot was kept and heard him say, 'Doctor, my nurse is killing me!' I was in terror when I saw you enter for fear you had heard him and would suspect me. Upon inquiry I learned that a former patient had been delirious in that house and had repeatedly accused her nurse of trying to kill her. That's where the parrot picked up the phrase and whenever he saw you enter repeated it."

I was so disgusted at the way I had been fooled that never since will I permit a parrot to remain in any house where I have a patient. There are other ways than the one I have mentioned that they may influence what is taking place in a sickroom. At any rate I don't want one about.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Anncuncements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

CHRIST CHURCH.

The program for the week is as follows:

Junior auxiliary Tuesday afternoon 3.45 o'clock, Woman's Guild, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Gardner club at 8 o'clock. St. Margaret's Guild meets Friday evening at 7.30 o'clock and the Reapers circle meets at 7.45 o'clock. Rev. John Matteson of the church of the Messiah, Auburndale will preach at the Wednesday evening service.

The Galahad club is rehearsing for an entertainment which will be given after Easter. During Lent the meetings will be Monday evenings instead of Wednesday.

The annual dinner by the Vestry to the men of the choir and the ushers was served in Quincy House, Boston, Feb. 4.

Through the courtesy of Dr. and Mrs. Jones a radiopticon has been placed at the disposal of the Rector and the talks on Japan at the Children's service are being illustrated, thus making the story more helpful and real.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee it was decided to recommend that the regular meetings during Lent be omitted and instead that the members attend the Wednesday evening services.

Tuesday afternoon one of the officers of the Massachusetts Branch of the Junior Auxiliary will come to our meeting.

FIRST CHURCH.

Attendance at divine service is reaching flood tide with the Unitarians of Quincy. The men are coming out every Sunday of late and the general attendance is showing a steady and gratifying increase. A large number were present yesterday. Singing the hymn of Universal Praise, (a paraphrase of the 117th Psalm) by the congregation at the opening of the service has been adopted. Familiar hymns were given out by the minister and sung heartily by the congregation.

The subject of Mr. Hudson's sermon was "Temptations." He said in part: "'Lead us not into temptation' is a prayer that should be uttered every morning by every young man, and by older men too. Let us be careful lest the very qualities with which we were endowed for our blessing prove the means of our undoing. Let us hold our desires under control whether they be gross or refined. Let not the satisfying of our physical needs blind us to the reality of the higher life. To provide ourselves with the good things of life is commendable within proper limitations. We should have no desire to give up electric lighting for the tallow candles of 'our ancestors, nor turn our backs on transportation by automobile in favor of 'old Dobbin.' What we need is not the simple life, but the sincere life, the life of usefulness, the life which is guided by a due sense of man's responsibility."

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

There was a large congregation at the morning service. Mrs. R. L. Turner's solo "Abide with me" and the anthem by the girls' choir were greatly enjoyed. The earphones are much appreciated by those in need of such help. The pastor preached from the text "Keep thy heart with all diligence for out of it are the issues of life," his theme being "Religion and Theology."

He said: "Religion is the life of God in the soul of man. Theology is the philosophy or the scientific statement of that life. The same relation existing between flowers and botany, language and grammar, the stars and astronomy exists between religion and theology. Religion is the same yesterday, today and forever, while theology is a changing, growing science. Theology rests on knowledge, religion on faith. Man lives by faith and develops by science. Theology changes with the increase of experience and the growth of knowledge but religion remains the same through all the ages. Theology says "there is a God," religion says "thou shalt love Him with all thy heart."

Theology says "you are immortal;" religion says "you must live as immortals." Religion always goes to the heart, calls for action and sacrifice; while theology appeals to the mind and involves only speculation and study. When men talk theology, they differ. Whey they talk religion, they agree, just as the hungry man needs food rather than a scientific treatise of the elements that make up the food, so men need religion rather than theological creeds and dogmas. The best illustration of religion we have in Jesus Christ, who went about doing good and whom the common people heard gladly."

At the Forum at 12 o'clock Col. Edward Anderson gave an eloquent address on Abraham Lincoln. A fine bust of the martyred president, draped with the stars and stripes, stood in the chancel. All the older scholars of the Sunday school attended and listened with great satisfaction to the speaker who had known Lincoln personally and had heard him deliver some of his speeches in Illinois.

At the Young People's Religious meeting at 7 P. M. Mrs. Robert E. Park told some interesting stories from a state report.

The second in the series of mid-week Lenten services for the deepening of the moral and religious life will be held Wednesday evening. The preacher is Rev. Herbert C. Parker, pastor of the First Unitarian church in Woburn since 1888, and the soloist Miss Hyland, the well known soprano of Wollaston.

The regular monthly social of the church will be held Thursday, Feb. 20, at 6.30 We trust all the newcomers in our parish will attend as this furnishes a splendid opportunity to meet the members and friends of the church. The motto of our church is "Here let no one be a stranger."

BETHANY CHURCH.

There wasn't much elbow room for those who attended the service at Bethany church Sunday evening, but seats were found for all and they were well repaid for coming After enthusiastic singing of old familiar hymns by the congregation, a selection by the choir, led by Mrs. Moore, and a solo by Mr. Hayden, the pastor delivered a brief sermon.

His subject was "Abandoned Farms."

Mr. Willmott said that the same influences which caused the abandonment of the New England farms, were at work in the moral and spiritual realms and that the secret of decadence was neglect. As the soil needs cultivation to make it yield things in their season, so the nature of man requires fresh applications of the teachings of the Bible.

"It cost many lives to keep the book of books open in former generations" said he, "but some of you today treat it as an abandoned farm, forgetting or disregarding the fact that democracy had its genesis in the meeting houses of New England and that the Bible still holds the wherewithal to inspire this generation, as it did our forebears, to the performance of duty and the achievement of worthy deeds."

MEMORIAL CHURCH.

Rev. E. A. Paddock, president of the Idaho Industrial Institute preached in the Memorial church, Sunday evening.

Mr. Paddock told of his experiences among the western mining camps and cow boys stating that some of the boys from the eastern colleges are to be found out there living as though they were uneducated and without the influence and culture of the east.

Mr. Paddock held the attention of the congregation one hour and twenty minutes.

The Music committee of the Memorial Church entertained the singers of both the morning and evening choirs at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Hall on Faxon Road, Friday evening and the time was spent in singing songs and playing games. Several new parlor games were introduced which will become popular at socials.

Refreshments were served and all report a fine time.

Miss Maud E. Read, Miss Jane Seaver and Mrs. Henry Malloch had charge of the games.

WAR AND PEACE.

"Common Fallacies about War and Peace" will be discussed by Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead at the Cranch Parent-Teachers Association meeting tonight at the school. Mrs. Mead is a well known lecturer and writer and has discussed the subject all over the country. She is most active in the Womens' Club Crusade for Peace. Music will be followed by refreshments.

—The query which has been pretty generally raised as to why the mailing of books and other third-class matter by parcel post should be prohibited is likely to take form in a bill in Congress to amend the new law in this particular. Uncle Sam has always been jealous of his monopoly in certain forms of mail carrying and it seems strange to relinquish another form of it to the express companies after he has broadened his field to include part of the express business. If books can be sent by express, why not by parcel post. The question is something of a poser.—Milford Gazette.

SENT TO PRISON FOR MONOPOLY

Sentence of Officials of National Cash Register Company

ONE YEAR FOR ITS PRESIDENT

Fine of $5000 Also Imposed Upon Patterson—Jail Terms Given Twenty-Eight Others, Who Must Pay Cost of Prosecution—Judge Severely Arraigns the Defendants

Cincinnati, Feb. 18.—President John H. Patterson of the National Cash Register company, recently convicted along with twenty-eight other officials of the firm of violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary and fined $5000.

The twenty-eight other defendants were sentenced to terms ranging from nine months to a year in jail and to pay the costs.

The men were convicted of having violated the criminal section of the Sherman anti-trust law. One of the defendants was given three months in jail, while three others were sentenced to nine months and the rest to one year. George Edgeter of Dayton, secretary of the company, was given the lightest sentence—three months. William Bippus, treasurer; Alfred A. Thompson of Dayton and Jonathan B. Hayward of New York were given nine months in jail.

The following were sentenced to one year: Edward A. Deeds, Dayton, vice president; William K. Muzzy, Dayton; William Pflum, Dayton; Robert Patterson, director; Thomas J. Watson, sales manager; Joseph E. Rogers, assistant sales manager; Alexander C. Harned, sales manager; Frederick S. High, district manager, Boston; Pliney Eves, district manager, San Francisco; Arthur A. Wentz, Columbus; George E. Morgan, Dayton; Charles T. Walmsley, Chicago; Charles S. Snyder, Elizabeth, N. J.; Walter Cool, Denver; M. M. Jobes, Pittsburg; M. L. Lasley, Detroit; Fred B. Wilson, Los Angeles; Alexander W. Sinclair, New York; John J. Range, Washington; M. G. J. Kelth, New York; William Cummings, Brooklyn; J. C. Laird, Toronto; W. C. Howe, San Francisco; E. H. Epperson, Minneapolis.

Before passing sentence Judge Hollister denied the motion of the defendants for a new trial. The bond of Patterson was increased to $10,000, the sureties of the other defendants remaining the same.

Formal notice of an appeal to the United States circuit court was given by attorneys of the defendants and the appeal is expected to be filed within a few days.

Judge Hollister, in passing sentence, severely arraigned the defendants, declaring that the maintenance of the competition department, with its "gloom room" and "morgue," constituted business methods that should not be countenanced.

"I have never heard of a legitimate concern having a competition department whose sole duties were, not to sell goods, but to prevent the sale of goods by competitors," said Hollister. "The only way that I can characterize them is to say that they were petty and mean. I will not even refer to the acts of Edgar Park, alias Foote, whose acts were so despicable that they ought not to be even contemplated by a business man in good standing."

CITY COUNCIL

when he came there he had no water. Just think of a German without water. Then, we had no sewerage and the cesspools filled up every time he took a bath. At nights he had to find his way about with a stable lamp. As an incident of how muddy the streets were he said that last night he lost one of his rubber boots in the mud and if you went down there now you would see it sticking up out of the mud with a red light on it. Further than that it cost him ten cents a day to shine his shoes.

A call for a show of hands was then made of those from Squantum in favor and 42 hands went up.

The hearing then closed and the petition was laid on the table.

The special committee on fire and police matters reported as follows.

Reference to the Executive on the order for a fire alarm box on South Walnut street.

Ought not to pass on the order for $6,000 for an auto chemical for West Quincy.

An amendment to the Police ordinance fixing the salary of the Captain at $1200 a year and on the Inspector at $1150 per year. Read and ordered to a second reading.

Councilman Cunningham offered an order for $2,600 for a sidewalk on Hancock street. On motion of Councilman Sandberg the order was referred to a special committee on street matters.

Councilman Cunningham moved reference be withdrawn. He argued that the order was in proper form and that it should be placed in the calendar. Here was an opportunity to give the new rules a fair trial.

Councilman Sandberg objected and called attention to the gentleman's attitude last year.

Councilman Whiton believed this was just the order that should go to a committee. He did not like this attempt to railroad an order through.

Councilman Richards said we were losing sigiht of the principal involved of considering matters as a council of the whole. If laid on the table there would be an opportunity to discuss the matter.

Councilman Griffin believed that it should go to a committee to consider If we go at it in this way we will not know how much money we are approprating.

Councilman Devaney moved a public hearing but was declared out of order.

The vote to reconsider was then lost 9 voting yes and 11 no.

Councilman Whiton offered an order for a special committee of three with the President to confer with the Mayor and City Solicitor relative to having the wires of the Electric Light Co. and Telephone Co. placed under ground and the necessary action to be taken by the Council in the matter. Adopted.

Councilman Beeman offered an order for $1,400 for furnishing the hall in ithe Quincy school, ordered to a second reading.

Councilman Little offered an order for $800 to rebuild that part of Miller street between Copeland street and the boulevard. Referred to the special committee in street matters.

Councilman Beeman offered an order for $1,600 to purchase three lots of land near the city stables containing three and a half acres for a public dump. Ordered to a second reading.

Councilman Little offered an order for a light on Hall place. Referred to Executive.

Councilman Duffy by request offered an order for $50,000 for extension of the water mains of the city and the purchase of pipe and fittings. Referred to a special committee consisting of Councilmen Whiton, Ericson, Bailey, Richards and Johnson.

Councilman Cunningham moved and it was voted that the Commissioner be requested to inform the Council what he proposed to do with the money involved, that is a schedule of the extensions proposed and the work involved.

Councilman Duffy by request offered an order for $20,000 for a standpipe on Great Hill Houghs Neck. Referred to the special committee on street matters.

Councilman Bailey offered an order revoking the apportionment of betterment assessments made on estates of E. B. Yjoungquist and F. A. Walter. Adopted.

Councilman Ericson moved reconsideration on the reference of the $50,000 water extension order. Lost on roll call 12 no and 8 yes.

Councilman Beeman offered an order for $3,000 for sewer house connections. Ordered to a second reading.

Counciuman Beeman offered an order for $40,000 for extension of the main sewer. Ordered to a second reading.

Councilman Cunningham moved that the Commissioner furnish a similar schedule as to work proposed for sewers as for water. Voted.

Councilman Beeman offered an order that the receipts for house connections with the sewer be appropriated for house connections with the sewer. Ordered to a second reading.

Councilman Griffin offered an order for a light on Cleverly court and on Thompson street. Referred to the Executive.

Councilman Sandberg moved and it was voted to take the order calling for the appointment of a special committee to consider sites for a public dock from the table.

A brief debate followed after which the order was rejected on roll call 11 voting no and 10 yes.

Councilman Ericson offered an order for $3,500 for paved gutters and rebuilding Cranch street. Referred to special committee on street matters.

In the calendar the order amending the auditors ordinance which provided that the Auditor shall approve all bills was passed.

Adjourned at 11.28 o'clock until March 3.

ENVER BEY IS BADLY WOUNDED

Attempt to Assassinate Leader of Young Turks

EFFORT TO RELIEVE GALLIPOLI

Turkish Troops Were Full of Hope, but Soon Became Dispirited and Disastrous Failure Resulted—Most of Those Who Got Ashore Were Killed or Taken Prisoners

London, Feb. 18.—Turkish soldiers attempted to assassinate and succeeded in stabbing three times and badly wounding Enver Bey, the Young Turk leader, who last week made a disastrous effort to pierce the flanks of the Bulgarian army on the shores of the Sea of Marmora with a "forlorn hope" of Ottoman troops, who were beaten back with terrible losses.

The latest news states that his disheartened men are crowded, wet and hungry, in the open streets of Gallipoli, in the worst kind of weather, all the houses being filled with wounded. It is said he is about to ship his men again across the Dardanelles, owing to the report that the Greeks have landed near Bezika bay, intending to take the forts on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles in the rear.

A correspondent of the Daily News says there is almost certain to be accidents, if this move is attempted, for the boats are bad and would be overcrowded, and a great tempest is blowing.

Enver's was an idealist's armada, not that of a practical sailor. His men started filled with hope, but, without food, they soon got dispirited. The leaders disdained ordinary precautions for supplying water to the ships, and on the eve of starting they tried to sieze two water boats belonging to a local Scottish shipping firm, but they did not succeed.

For the purposes intended the ships were bad. They were Bosphorus steamers, built to carry 500 passengers and no cargo, but 800 soldiers were crowded into each, and the decks were full of saddles, ammunition and cargo, and consequently top-heavy.

After leaving the Golden Horn a superannuated boat, No. 40, which rolls heavily at all times, began to get out of hand. One porthole glass was burst in and water began to pour in. Ammunition, etc., was thrown overboard, and the captain beached her. The other boats struggled on to Charkeui, where there is no proper landing accommodations.

When half of Enver's men had landed and the other half were in the throes of landing and a struggle was being made to get guns, stores and horses ashore, the Bulgars made their presence known in a most abrupt and unpleasant manner. The result was that most of the Turks who got ashore were killed or taken prisoners.

Enver's armada was indeed in a deplorable pilght. The tempest blew for forty-eight hours and there was no chance of landing elsewhere. As a matter of fact, all Turkish disembarkation plans may now be regarded as finally out of the question.

Attempts were then made at Constantinople to get food and supplies for Enver and the huge starved army crowded on the Gallipoli peninsula. One pound sterling a ton was offered for ships for that purpose, but there were no takers, and the result will inevitably be the same as at Lule Burgas, where the army was left starving; the same outbreak of cholera and the same dispersal of the troops.

Enver is said to have taken refuge in the sultan's harem, he being married into the sultan's family.

HUNDREDS OF HATS OFF.

Editor Daily Ledger:

It was an inspiring sight at Bethany Church, Sunday evening when that great audience sat together as a great family in a church home, reverent and attentive, listening, with unobstructed view, to the fine life-stirring message of Pastor Willmott.

If the women and girls only knew the appreciation of the men and boys for a clear view of the preacher we are sure that they would at every church service—morning, as well as evening—forbear the wearing of headgear which keeps an audience dodging, jerking, scowling and craning in vain effort to get a peep at the minister.

Sister! Your hat is a wonderful and costly creation, but just think for a minute what it costs one who sits behind you. It may cost him his interest in the service and loss of attention to some words which would otherwise have put him on the path where the Master trod and to which he is being urged.

In these days when the uncovered hair out of doors, is so popular—why should women and misses put on a monstrous head-gear(not tolerated in theatres) and enter pews where people have come to worship in spirit and in truth! Stop a minute and think it out. Will you distract by the millinery and selfishly screen the pulpit and choir from those who have rights equal to your's and who perchance have come with heart-longings for a good day in God's house?

Sister, don't forget how handsome you look in the adornment which nature has given you, it is your glory.

Hasten the day when in every church in Quincy the minister can see the faces of those for whom he has prepared his sermon or address .

Hats off.

CHALLENGE RECEIVED.

A challenge has been received by the Boston Y. C., for the Quincy Cup from the Corinthian Y. C., and the regatta committee have chosen Charles P. Curtis, who last year won the cup with his sonder boat Ellen, to defend the cup with any boat now owned by him or with any that he may build. Mr. Curtis now is having built a sonder by W. Starling Burgess, and in case this comes up to expectations it will undoubtedly be the defending boat.

In other words the Boston Y. C. has had a thorough overhauling and is in commission with an outlook for a better season than ever before.

Q. GYM GIRLS AGAIN BEATEN

Mansfield Outplayed Them Under the Boys Rules

The Quincy Gym Girls were beaten by the Mansfield High at Mansfield, Saturday, 12 to 3. The winners have been having a clear field all the season. The boys rules were observed and the Quincy Girls have had practically no experience under them.

Quincy's only scores were made by Miss O'Neil who shot three fouls. Mansfield's team is considerably heavier than Quincy but the local girls played a fast game and put up a stiff defense. On their offensive play they were naturally outpointed because of the extra weight and fine physical condition of the winners.

A return game in Quincy will probably be arranged which should prove to be a fine drawing card. The summary:

King Urged to Avert Strike

Brussels, Feb. 18.—A deputation of mayors from various Belgian cities called upon King Albert and asked him to prevent the threatened strike of dock workers at Antwerp.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

OYSTERS ON TOAST.

SERVED in this way oysters make a very attractive appearance on the table and are very pleasing to the palate.

Sandwich bread should be used and the slices toasted only until golden brown. Fresh, firm oysters should be used for this purpose.

Culinary Tidbits.

Boiled Oysters on Toast.—Toast and butter slices of bread and lay them in a shallow dish. Heat the liquor from the oysters, add salt and pepper and thicken with a little flour. Just before this boils add the oysters. Let it all boil at once and pour over the toast.

Appetizing Fare.

Broiled Oysters on Toast.—Wash your oysters and then drain on a towel. Strain the oyster liquor and scald and skim it, adding an equal quantity of hot milk with salt and pepper to taste. Toast thin slices of bread a delicate brown and place it where it will keep hot while the oysters are being cooked. Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter, add one-half of a teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of white pepper and one tablespoonful of chopped parsley. Then rub in one tablespoonful of lemon juice. Rub the broiler, which should be a special one with the wires set close together, with a bit of suet. Dip each oyster into melted butter or olive oil, arrange in the broiler and broil them quickly over a bright fire, turning several times until the gills curl. Put a spoonful of the prepared oyster juice on each piece of toast, place on it three or four of the oysters, drop on them a small bit of the prepared butter and send at once to the table.

Combined With Celery.

Oysters and Celery on Toast.—Take a bunch of table celery and cut the white stalks into fine pieces enough to make a pint. Then place in a saucepan on the fire, cover with boiling water in which is a teaspoonful of salt and boil it until tender. Take a dozen oysters and put into a saucepan with their liquor, a half teaspoonful of salt and a little white pepper and boil for a couple of minutes. Mix a half tablespoonful of cornstarch with a half tablespoonful of melted butter and add this to the oysters. Now drain the celery, mix it with the oysters and boil for two minutes. Two tablespoonfuls of cream should be added to the oysters and celery. Have a half dozen slices of buttered toast ready and pour the celery and oysters over these. Serve hot.

WHEN FRYING POTATOES.

THE secret of frying potatoes to make them palatable lies in having the fat very hot, if not boiling, when the potatoes are put in. Each piece of potato should be dry when put into the fat. If the potatoes are damp they will not fry crisp. When the potatoes are brown enough they should be taken from the fat and placed on soft paper before the fire to drain. Then scatter dried salt over them and they are ready to serve.

Ingeniously Cut.

Potatoes may be cut in any shape you like for frying. There are ingenious devices sold for cutting potatoes. One of these shapes them like a lattice and in this form they make an attractive garnish for beefsteak.

If you are frying cooked potatoes, cut them in slices and flour them before frying.

Ribbon Potatoes.—Wash and peel raw potatoes in the ordinary way. Then cut them into slices about half an inch thick. Proceed to cut each slice in a thin layer as if removing the skin from an apple, but being careful not to break the strip till the potato has been cut away to nothing, and a long curly ribbon hangs from the knife. When sufficient slices have been cut into spirals, cook them in a frying basket in boiling fat for about two minutes and serve them heaped up loosely on a napkin sprinkled with salt.

Reliable Methods.

Saratoga Chips.—Peel large raw potatoes and slice them as thin as possible. Put them in cold water for an hour and dry thoroughly on a cloth. Then fry them light brown in hot lard as you would doughnuts. Drain on paper to remove grease, then sprinkle with salt.

French Fried Potatoes.—Cut raw potatoes into any desired shape. Do not soak them in water. Put the pieces, a few at a time, into a pan of hot fat and let them boil. When the edges begin to turn a little brown lift them and drain. Place on a soft brown paper and let them stand until cold. At serving time put a few at a time into the frying pan, plunge them into hot fat (about 360 degrees F.), dip them up and down once or twice until they are puffed and brown; drain, dust with salt and serve at once.

Potatoes Saute.—Cut the potatoes into fancy shapes and parboil them. Then dry and fry until a golden brown in hot clarified drippings or butter. Serve hot.

CAVALRY TO THE RESCUE

Military Students Defend Hiking Suffragettes From Bad Boys

Chester, Pa., Feb. 18.—The marching pilgrims bound from New York to Washington, in the cause of woman suffrage, had their first hostile reception since their hike commenced, at Lieperville, a small village north of this city, late yesterday afternoon, when they were snowballed and almost routed by a crowd of small boys.

A squad of cavalry from the Pennsylvania military college, however, went gallantly to the rescue, put the young opponents of the movement to rout and escorted "General" Rosalie Jones and her "army" to this city, where they spent the night.

GOING TO HIGH COURT

Government to Appeal From Judge's Ruling In Castro Case

Washington, Feb. 18.—Cipriano Castro's right to remain in the United States as a visitor will be decided by the United States supreme court, to which the government will appeal from the decision of United States District Judge Ward overruling Secretary Nagel's order for Castro's exclusion.

The appeal will be taken within ten days by United States Attorney Wise at New York. This is the course decided upon by the departments of justice and commerce and labor as the most expeditious way of getting settled for all time the important principle involved.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

VETO OF "LITERACY TEST"

Question of Overriding It Will Be Settled In Senate Today

Washington, Feb. 18.—An agreement to vote at 3 o'clock today on the question of overriding President Taft's veto of the "literacy test" immigration bill was reached in the senate after a filibuster by Democratic senators who demanded an opportunity to speak upon the subject.

Opponents of the literacy test to which President Taft objected are prepared to back up his veto with emphatic speeches.

A two-thirds vote will be required to repass the bill. In case of its success in the senate, it probably will be taken up in the house at once.

THE GRAY SAFE ROBBERY

Police Believe Confederate Working In Store Did Planning

Boston, Feb. 18.—That the safeblowers who robbed the large safe in the office of the E. E. Gray company, grocers, at Hanover and Blackstone streets, Sunday, and escaped after securing between $10,000 and $12,000 in cash, had a confederate at work in the store at some time, is the opinion of the police working on the case.

After an all-day investigation they became satisfied by the evidence which they obtained that this man planned the affair and set the exact time for the safeblowers to begin their work without fear of detection.

Compromise In Cotton Mill Strike

North Providence, R. I., Feb. 18.—The strike which has been in progress at the Esmond cotton mill for the past three weeks ended when the strikers voted to accept an offer of the management of an increase in wages ranging from 5 to 15 percent.

TAFT SENDS ULTIMATUM TO MADERO

Reply to Message Asking Him to Withhold Intervention

EARLY ESTABLISHMENT OF PEACE AND ORDER

Unless It Can Be Accomplished the Present Paramount Duty of United States Is Prompt Relief of the Situation—Government Rushing Marines to Base In Cuba to Be Used In Connection With Our Fleet Now In Mexican Waters In Case of Intervention, Which Appears to Be Near—Fighting Continues In City of Mexico

Washington, Feb. 18.—Intervention by the United States in Mexico is nearer today than it has been at any time since the retirement of President Diaz.

President Taft answered the note of President Madero appealing to him to withhold intervention and the note was as near an ultimatum as it could well be under the circumstances. President Taft virtually demands that peaceful conditions be brought about at once and the lives and property of Americans be protected.

In the meantime the government is rushing marines from points on the Atlantic seaboard to Philadelphia and Norfolk, where they will sail at once for Guantanamo, Cuba, where there will be established a base with at least 2000 men, who will be used in connection with the fleet now in Mexican waters in case of intervention.

All the available army transports have been ordered to proceed to Galveston and prepare to embark the land forces which will be concentrated there in case of necessity. Every army post has been ordered to have its men ready for immediate foreign service.

A persistent rumor comes from Philadelphia that the reserve Atlantic fleet has been ordered to sail from Philadelphia today, but this cannot be confirmed either here or in Philadelphia.

There are at present three warships at Vera Cruz, two at Acapulco, one at Tampico and one at Manzanillo. This makes a total of about 6000 officers and men who could be rushed to the City of Mexico at an instant's notice.

Taft's Reply to Madero

The reply of President Taft to the message of President Madero, appealing to him to withhold intervention by the United States, was made public by Secretary Knox. It is as follows:

"From your excellency's telegram, which reached me the 14th, it appeared that your excellency was somewhat misinformed as to the policy of the United States toward Mexico, which has been uniform for two years, as to the naval or other measures thus far taken which are measures of natural precaution.

"The ambassador telegraphs that when you were good enough to show him your telegram to me he pointed out this fact.

"Your excellency must, therefore, be aware that the reports which appear to have reached you that orders have already been given to land forces were inaccurate. The ambassador, who is fully informed, is nevertheless again instructed to afford you any desirable information. Fresh assurances of friendship to Mexico are unnecessary after two years of proof of patience and good will.

"In view of the special friendship and relations between the two countries, I cannot too strongly impress upon your excellency the vital importance of the early establishment of that real peace and order which this government has so long hoped to see, both because American citizens and their property must be protected and respected, and also because this nation sympathizes deeply with the afflictions of the Mexican people.

"In reciprocating the anxiety shown by your excellency's message, I feel it my duty to add sincerely and without reserve that the course of events during the last two years, culminating in the present most dangerous situation, creates in this country extreme pessimism and the conviction that the present paramount duty is the prompt relief of the situation."

President Is Worried

President Taft is plainly worried by the fact that, although he has only a few more days to serve in the White House, the situation in Mexico shows little signs of becoming less troublesome. The president has no desire to leave over for Mr. Wilson the settlement of this country's relations with Mexico, but he is decidedly opposed to taking any measurers himself unless extreme provocation and wholesale murder of Americans drive him to it.

The president told friends he realized what a difficult thing it would be for a new administration to gather up the reins of government and understand the conditions in the southern republic in a few weeks or in a few months. He is of the opinion that it would take at least six months for Mr. Wilson and his cabinet to grasp details of diplomatic negotiation of troop and battleship movements, and of international niceties that he and his cabinet have acquired in two years' close study of a condition that never has ceased to confront them.

He has informed his advisers that he will be president until Mr. Wilson takes the oath of office, and that if intervention is demanded by congress on his last day in office, he would not hesitate to concur. But he hopes that he will not have to act and then move into the background, leaving a new president and inexperienced administration to struggle with the real problem.

Situation In Mexico City

From Mexico City comes word that despite heroic efforts the Maderist forces have failed utterly to rout the army of Diaz. The fighting kept up all day yesterday and many Americans and all the Mexicans who are able are fleeing to Vera Cruz for the protection of the warships.

A strict censorship has been in force and it is practically impossible to get press or other private dispatches through.

The whole situation is giving the officials here more concern than it has at any time, but heads of departments declare the position of the warships with their marines, both on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, and the army on the Texas border, place the United States in excellent position to rush troops in with the least possible delay, moving on the Mexican capital from three sides at once.

Marines Leave Boston

Boston, Feb. 18.—Five hundred marines, recruited from the Charlestown and Portsmouth navy yards and the naval magazine at Hingham, left Boston in two detachments last night to mobilize at Guantanamo and invade Mexico, should the conditions warrant, to protect the Americans and American interests.

The first detachment will stop at Philadelphia, where they will board the transport Meade and sail for Hampton Roads. The second detachment went direct to Norfolk, where they will embark on the cruiser Prairie.

The entire detail is ready for action, being equipped with the regulation field service.

Wilson Watching the Situation

Trenton, Feb. 18.—President-elect Wilson displays a keen interest in the developments in Mexico. He is kept informed through press dispatches. Wilson feels he ought to make no comment on the situation at present, refraining from injecting any more elements into the dilemma than it already contains.

He is watching it closely, however, with the idea of being prepared immediately for any difficulties that may arise after he takes office.

KETCHUP EMPTIED INTO BOSTON SEWER

Twenty-Six Hundred Gallons Had Been Seized In Stores

Boston, Feb. 18.—The contents of fifty-two barrels of bad ketchup, amounting to 2600 gallons in all, were poured through a sewer manhole at North and Commercial streets by order of United States Deputy Marshal Ruhl, after the sustaining of a complaint made by United States food and drug inspectors.

The product was manufactured by Huss-Edler company, Chicago, and was seized at five different wholesale grocery stores in the North End on complaint of the inspectors.

The "ketchup," it was claimed, was made from the refuse of canning factories, making a cheap product alleged to be extremely injurious to consumers.

Webster, Mass., Feb. 18.—Mary and Anna Winstock, aged 14 and 3 years, respectively, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the Winstock home. Mrs. Michael Klatecki and several firemen were seriously burned. The fire was caused by an overturned kerosene lamp.

Mrs. Winstock, who was on the upper floor, saved a younger baby, and Mary Klatocki, 17 months old, was rescued from the lower floor by firemen. The damage to the house is estimated at about $5000.

JOAQUIN MILLER

Poet of the Sierras, Who Has Died In California

DEATH OF JOAQUIN MILLER

Poet of Sierras Unable to Complete His Last Great Task

Oakland, Cal., Feb. 18.—Joaquin Miller, "the poet of the Sierras," who has been ill at his home, "The Heights," the past six weeks, suffering from Bright's disease, died yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Miller, and the poet's daughter, Juanita, were at his bedside when the end came. Hard at work writing a six-volume life record, the poet, who was in his 71st year, had gradually grown weaker since his illness.

Cincinnatus Heine Miller was his Christian name, and until he gained fame as a writer he was held to his name. Years after he ran away from his home in Liberty, O., and when he was in California, he was thought to be the famous Joaquin Murietti, the Mexican bandit, and he was so pleased with the name that he gave up his name and became Joaquin.

Known all over the world as a famous poet, dramatist, philosopher, writer and journalist, Miller lived an eccentric life and wrote most of his poetry and prose when in bed.

DRAKE IS HURRYING TO QUIET RUMORS

Expedition Secretary Bringing Scott's Diary to London

London, Feb. 18.—Public interest in the Scott expedition was heightened by the announcement that Secretary Drake, in charge of all official records of the Antarctic party, would leave the other survivors and hurry to England by the fastest boats.

The information in Drake's possession will be placed in the hands of the Royal Geographical society, and then, perhaps, more will be known about the expedition. Britishers will have their suspense ended; they will know whether there is a hidden scandal in the tragedy of the South Pole. It is believed Drake will bring with him diaries Scott and the other dead men left and turn them over to their families.

"IF I HAD."

When Abraham Lincoln was a lad
And lived in a hut in the wood,
No books, no lamp, no time he had,
And yet, it is understood,
He trudged many miles to borrow a book,
The light of the flickering fire he took
And studied whenever he could.
And none of his friends ever heard him say,
In a self-excusing and hopeless way:
"If I had this or that, I would."

When Joan of Arc was a little maid,
Untutored, gentle, good,
And France was conquered and dismayed
By England's masterhood,
She had no wealth nor armament;
Alone, with her faith, the little maid went
And freed her land as she could,
And nobody ever heard her say,
In a listless, longing, empty way:
"If I had this or that, I would."

When young James Watt sat by the fire
And watched the burning wood,
He saw the kettle's lid mount higher,
Observed and understood;
He had no need of a laboratory
To plan the great steam engine's glory;
He used his eyes as he could,
And he never once was heard to say,
In a shiftless, thriftless, futile way:
"If I had this or that, I would."

If now you will read your histories o'er
(As I earnestly think you should)
The fact will improve you more and more
In the lives of the great and good,
That they were those who never held back
For circumstance or material lack—
But arose and did what they could,
And never a one was heard to say,
In the weak, surrendering, doubting way:
"If I had this or that, I would."
—Stella George Stern Perry, in St. Nicholas.

AND MR. VANDERBILT PAID

"Get the Very Best," Was His Instruction—Sequel Became Only a Matter of Course.

This is how the late Cornelius Vanderbilt found himself giving to an institution the same costly carpet he had just selected for his palatial New York home:

Saint Johnland is a church community on Long Island, where differences of faith play little part in the admission of some 200 children and old people. Mr. Vanderbilt, its vice president, offered one day, through Dr. Henry Mottet, to give the chapel a much-needed carpet, and told Dr Mottet where to buy it. The article continues:

"Get the very best," said Mr. Vanderbilt, who had just finished his new house at 1 West Fifty-seventh street.

Mr. Mottet accordingly looked over carpets and selected a costly one of red velvet. He told the clerk it was for an institution, gave its rather generous dimensionss-to-be, and added that the bill should go to Mr. Vanderbilt. The clerk had some difficulty to recover his composure.

"I don't suppose you know," he volunteered, "that this is the identical carpet selected by Mr. Vanderbilt for his new house!"

The Vanderbilt carpet is still in the little chapel.—The Churchman.

—Herbert Corey, writing in the Kansas City Star, thinks that John Pierpont Morgan in all probability inherited his "punch" from his maternal grandfather, who failed as a lawyer and a merchant but "was a riproarious success as a preacher. He lost several pulpits because he insisted upon 'knocking' rum and slavery to congregations which dealt exclusively in booze and blackbirds." At the Hollis street church in Boston he preached "such flaming sermons that leading members of his church didn't dare attend for fear he'd burn 'em alive, and equally didn't care to stay away"—Taunton Herald.

A Practical Joke

It Turned Out Seriously In Two Respects

By ARTHUR D. PURDY

Sue Gwinne was known as the biggest little devil in B. We were all young then and were inclined to be frolicsome. I was, so far as I know, the only serious one in the lot. I suppose that this was the reason I fell in love with Sue. Opposites take to each other, and by good rights Sue should have returned my proffered affection, but she did not. At any rate, I couldn't be sure for more than half an hour at a time that she did. She would say something very sweet to me, raising me to the pinnacle of ecstasy, then cast me down by cold treatment.

It seemed to delight her to make me miserable, and why I couldn't understand. I wondered why she didn't play her pranks on the rest of the boys. I couldn't see that they had any especial advantages over me. Nor was I considered stupid. Why, then, had she picked me out to torment?

Sue had kept me in a chronic state of fret during the fall and winter, but when the season was about to close seemed inclined to let up somewhat in her endeavors to make me miserable. Our set agreed to end the winter's festivities by a fancy dress ball. Deciding upon or getting up a costume was entirely out of my line, for I had no inventive faculty in such matters. In my dilemma Sue kindly came to my assistance. "Leave it to me," she said, "and I guarantee that you shall have one of the most striking costumes at the ball."

This was not only a great relief to me, but set me up with regard to her preference for me. Had she not picked me out among all the fellows for an act of kindness? And when she told me that she would make my costume with her own hands I was proud as a peacock. All she wanted was a few measurements. As to material, she said it would cost little or nothing. I asked her what the costume was to be, but she wouldn't tell me, assuring me that I would be much pleased with it. I really cared very little what I represented, whether it was Louis XIV., Oliver Cromwell or George Washington. I was quite content to leave the whole matter to Sue, believing that she would provide a costume in keeping with my dignity.

The afternoon of the day on which the ball was to take place Sue telephoned me that I had better come to her house and try on my costume. I did so and met with a surprise. There was not the least doubt as to my causing a sensation in it or that it would be considered the most striking costume at the ball. I was to represent a bird of paradise.

On a light framework was the body of the bird, its feathers made of tissue paper. Space was left in the center for my body, and stockings of a proper color were provided for my legs. The tail was a wonder. Beautiful streamers composed of many hues shot out in the rear, resembling either the tail of a bird of paradise or a rainbow, whichever the beholder chose.

I confess I was very crestfallen. The prospect of disporting myself in this gaudy apparel was especially disagreeable to me. I refused to use it. Sue had two or three of her girl friends with her, who at once manifested great astonishment that I did not appreciate it, and Sue herself looked very much put out that all her trouble should have been for nothing. Between them they succeeded in persuading me to put it on. I did so and was no sooner decorated with it than they all cried at once: "Splendid! Beautiful! It will be the finest thing in the room! What an original idea!"

Well, I simply yielded my consent to make a fool of myself, because four girls set themselves to the task of forcing me to do so. Each one of them promised to make it easy for me by their support, giving me the most of their time and dances at the ball, though how I was to sweep that three yards of tail around in a dance I did not know, and they failed to explain.

We are any of us liable to do something and afterward cannot understand how we were silly enough to have done it, and this was a case in point with me. I knew all the while that I should refuse to wear such a costume, but I didn't have the stamina in me to withstand these girls. Besides, I feared that if I failed to appear in it after the pains Sue had taken in designing and making it I would break the thread that bound her to me.

On the night of the ball I was obliged to carry my costume to the building where it took place and put it on there. Had I gone through the streets with it on I should have been mobbed. The moment I entered the ballroom every eye was fixed upon me. The girls who had persuaded me to wear the bird stood by their promise to support me, and all clustered about me, each claiming the honor of the first dance with me, though they all at last gave way to Sue.

I shall never forget that dance. Had I been the kind of a fellow to make a guy of myself in order to afford amusement for others I would have considered myself to be covered with glory. Being a quiet, serious, studious, dignified person, I was in an agony. Every turn I made in the dance, sweeping my nine feet of tail behind me, excited the laughter not only of those in the set with me, but every one in the room. The antics of the others to get out of the way of my tail feathers were alone enough to set the whole company into a babel of hilarity. One couple after another stopped dancing to look at me till at last the set I was with was the only one remaining on the floor, the others forming a ring around us to laugh at me. I made a break to get away, but Sue caught me by the tail and held me long enough for others to interfere and put me back in my place.

And so I was forced to make a spectacle of myself for the others till the end of the dance. Sue endeavored to keep me steady by an occasional pressure of the hand or some other method of coddling me. But my mortification and anger were gradually getting the better of me, and, though I concealed it, I was vowing vengeance on her. It occurred to me that no girl would thus demean a man she felt any love for and that she had taken this means of showing her contempt for me.

By the time I had finished this first dance I was ready to leave the room, take off my bird costume and go away in anger. I think I should have done so had not Dan Wilson, an intimate man friend of mine, told me that but one course remained to me—to carry out the joke as though I enjoyed it. To give way to anger would only make the matter worse. I saw the sense of this advice and resolved to act upon it.

Having taken this resolution, I did the best I could to play my part, and it might have been after all quite a successful plot on the part of Sue and her abettors had not her recklessness spoiled it all. I gradually recovered my equanimity so far as to dissemble with her and conceal the bitterness I felt against her for leading me into such a trap. Possibly this encouraged her to go further. Having borrowed a match from the box of one of the men, she lighted the tissue paper on the tip end of my tail.

Very young persons are not overburdened with common sense, and as the little flame quickly spread it greatly amused the company. Feeling a warmth, I turned my head and, seeing the flame, my body, in an effort to put out the fire, giving a swish that fanned it into a conflagration.

The laughter of the lookers on suddenly gave way to anxiety, and several men rushed to my assistance. But by this time the flames had acquired considerable headway, and the task was a difficult one. My tail feathers were all aflame and those on my back were being ignited. A thrill of horror passed over those standing about me. The women, in their flimsy costumes, drew back, while the men pushed forward toward me. One, who was dressed as an Indian, took a blanket from his shoulders and wrapped it about me, while the others kept plucking the burning tail feathers. This saved me from death, but not from burning. My back and my legs were seriously scorched. I was led out of the hall, and I remember seeing among the throng of horror stricken faces that of Sue Gwinne, the very picture of remorse and despair.

The incident finished the ball before it had well begun. I was told afterward that a few persons remained and attempted to carry on the dances, but the fact that I was known to have been badly burned took the spirit out of the affair, and before midnight all was dark which should have been a brilliantly illuminated scene of gayety.

It was a month before I left my room. I confess I acted very badly toward the perpetrators of what though intended for an innocent joke, very nearly became a frightful tragedy. Sue sent me word of her distress and begged that she might be permitted to do something for me. But, believing that her action toward me had been intended to be contemptuous, I did not find it in my heart to forgive her. I showed my spleen by making no reply to her massage. She sent others to intercede for her, but I was adamant. It was not the burns that restrained my forgiveness, but the fact that my love—so I considered—had been spurned.

Finally my chum Dan Wilson, whose opinions had great weight with me, told me, that while Sue's act was to be considered as foolish and reprehensible in the extreme, the whole affair had been conceived in a spirit of mischief, and had no bearing whatever on her feelings toward me, unless it might be construed to indicate that she was favorably inclined toward me. He represented that the poor girl was suffering intensely in consequence of her act and my treatment of her was little short of cruel.

So I wrote Sue that I had come to the conclusion she had meant neither harm nor disrespect in providing me with a bird of paradise suit and firing the tail feathers, and begged that she would not distress herself further about it, especially since my wounds were nearly healed.

This brought her to see me. Kneeling beside me, she took my hand and wet it with her tears. I withdrew my hand for the purpose of lifting her face and made bold to kiss away her tears.

"Any contemptible cause is good enough to bring about an understanding between lovers, and the ignition of the tail feathers of my bird of paradise suit caused fire of another kind to burst into flame in two hearts, mine and Sue's. For once, and for once only, I had the advantage of her. But even this occasion was short lived. We have been married but five years and already she has contrived to throw upon me the blame of that affair. She says that "had I not been such an uppish sort of a fellow there would have been no inducement for a girl to take the uppishness out of me."

MODES IN NEW YORK.

Fashions of Native Origin—Color Indications—Southern Frocks Show Coming Styles.

It would seem that the breath of Spring that has deluded trees into budding, and flowers into blooming in mid-winter, is stimulating the production of advanced fashionable models this year. American designs are to the fore, on all sides, and as these are especially fitted to the style and needs of American women, we shall see a great deal of smart, pretty, and practical dressing the coming Spring and Summer.

COLOR INDICATIONS.

The indications are for very rich tones of the stronger shades, not the broken tones of last year. Rich purples, and reds with wonderful blues, greens and new shades of yellows, verging almost on the mustards of two seasons ago. A gown of dull blue linen in canvas weave, has a border of drawn work, and a bolero of English embroidery with two long tabs fastened below the knee with a knot of black velvet. A white corduroy coat and skirt, built on simple lines is relieved by handsome paste buttons in vivid blue and dull gold.

THE RUSSIAN BLOUSE.

The Russian blouse is more than ever used as Spring approaches, and fancy sleeves are appearing in many odd variations, including puffs between wrist and elbow, but on the whole, styles are becoming conservative and eccentricity promises to be shortly reckoned common rather than smart.

THE TREND OF STYLE.

No one who studies the trend of fashion can doubt that cotton dress goods will be modish the coming season. From simple zephyrs at very small prices to exquisite double fold stuffs, with elaborate borders of printed drawnwork, and embroidery suited to most elegant wear one can find in the best grades of cotton fabrics something to suit any need and every occasion. "Bontex" cottons include every desirable style and weave of cotton produced in fashionable and reliable goods and as these have the name woven in the selvage they can be identified at any counter where new cottons are shown, so a woman can examine them and decide for herself. Many of the silk and cotton mixtures make up daintily for dancing frocks now and one is so much ahead on the Summer's outfit.

PRETTY SCARF.

The newest thing in a pretty and practical scarf to protect the shoulders in a draughty theatre or ball room, is made of coarse lace edged with swansdown in white or any color liked. The scarf is about one and one-half yards in length and half a yard wide, or a three cornered shape can be used if preferred. New evening skirts and indeed skirts for all dresswear are slashed and cut about the feet in all sorts of frivolous styles but on ladies never showing more than a dainty slipper and stocking to the ankle, while the dressing of the foot is of utmost importance. Colored hose with black slippers is a smart wrinkle.

SILK STYLES.

Silks in broeaded and plain styles are very much in demand, and of course the latest things are found in the Nellrose silks which come in satin crepe, ribbed and numerous other finishes in all fashionable color tones as well as in the special American Beauty shade named for Miss Wilson, and which she will wear in a magnificent gown costing $650 for the festivities attending her father's inauguration next March.

TAFFETA HATS.

As usual at this time of year hats of silk are appearing. These make the smartest between season head coverings and this year are made of brocades as well as the ever useful taffetas. Small shapes are preferred for these wtih an upstanding trimming of the same material or a light perky feather of some sort. Bags to match finished with rings for handles are a pretty and useful accompaniment to these hats.

Don't Mar Your Good Looks On Washington's Birthday by Wearing a Greasy Frayed Tie

Many a man thinks he's "dressed up" if he puts on a new suit or overcoat—but if his tie is worn and greasy, or his derby a "dusty gray" with the binding looking like a piece of fringe, or his gloves with the fingers out, or his shoes out of shape or "run down" at the heel—his whole appearance is spoiled.

After dinner the secretary read the report of the January meeting. Dr. Hudson in introducing the speaker of the evening said among the serious problems confronting serious minded men none was more confusing than that of immigration. There was a great reluctance to make any restrictions on immigration, yet it was a difficult problem. We have all the races of men brought together forming a great democracy. If we get too much of one kind of ingredient the whole must suffer. Is it not therefore a dangerous condition that confronts us? While many differ in the matter of the

—There is a proposal in New York that the savings banks of the State carry a specified surplus ranging from 5 to 15 per cent. It is estimated that if this should go through the result would be that many institutions which now pay 4 per cent, would have to cut their dividends to 3 1-2 per cent, in which casese deposits would undoubtedly be withdrawn and the situation made still worse. These are days when somebody is constantly coming forward with a proposition to change the existing order of things in everything. Too many of the proposed "reforms" really mean ruination.—Banker and Tradesman.

OH JOY, THE WRONG BUDGET CAME BEFORE CITY COUNCIL

Original Paper From Department Heads Submitted by Mistake Monday Night

The Dissected Article of Lesser Amount Will Come Up Later

It came to light this morning that the estimate sent to the City Council Monday night of the amounts needed by the various departments was not the budget it was intended to forward to that body. It has always been the custom for the Mayor to ask the various departments to send to him the amounts needed. After this the custom has been for the Mayor to get out his pruning knife and cut some slices off of the amounts asked, for it is always the case that the departments ask for more than can be given them.

Thus it was this year. The estimates of the departments were far in excess of the amount that could be raised. This list was tabulated however and then the Mayor, Treasurer and other officials got together and spent nearly a day with the pruning knife in cutting down the amounts. The budget as pruned was the one that should have been sent to the Council but through some error the list was practically the same as that asked for by the departments.

This means that it is up to the City Council to do the job of pruning and as it must be reduced by a number of thousand dollars, the Council has quite a job before them.

NEW SYSTEM METER READING

Will Prove Highly Satisfactory When in Full Swing

Less than two weeks remain before the new system of meter reading to be inaugurated by the Citizens Gas Light Co., will go into effect. During the past few weeks the company has been making ready for the new system and everything is now in readiness. The new system will go into effect on March 1, and while there may be some little confusion at the start it will not be many weeks before everything will be running smoothly. Then the man who reads your meter one month will be the same man who reads it the following month. He will be readily recognized by the metal badge which he will wear so that there will be no danger of admitting an imposter into your house. Bear in mind that the meter reader will wear a metal badge with a number.

BANK COMMISSIONER MORE CORONER THAN SUPERVISOR

Comes in on the Case When the Ruin Is Accomplished and Holds an Inquest

Mr. Hingston Takes Testimony in Dow Case as Argument for His Bills

(Special to the Ledger).

William E. Hingston appeared before the legislative committee on banks and banking at the State House, in favor of a bill which provides for the method in which the records of loans made to stock brokers by banks and trust companies are to be kept and that such records shall be at all times accessible to the bank commissioner of his authorized agent.

Mr. Hingston said that he had prepared a written statement to give the committee in support of his bill, but after readnig the accounts of the Dow trial now going on in Boston, he had decided that testimony based on the sworn statements made in that trial would speak louder than anything he could offer in favor of the bill. He, thereupon, read extracts from the printed testimony offered in the Dow case where it states that the Boston banks and trust companies had loaned Dow, or his underling, the amount of $600,000 on securities that were almost, if not, quite valueless. Mr. Hingston made the point that had his bill been law at the time of these loans, it would have been possible that the bank commissioner's examiners might have seen the records kept in Dow's office and perhaps prevented the great loss of money. He argued that an expert accountant put upon the Dow books would have immediately seen that loans were being obtained on Dow's own property and would have smelt a rat right away. He criticized the bank commissioner mildly. That officer he said was more like a coroner than a supervisor, especially in the case of defunct banks. "After a bank has died," said Mr. Hingston, "the bank commissioner comes in and sits on the case and holds the inquest." By his method, he claimed, the bank commissioner could examine books in the stock brokers officers, "the seat of the trouble" and not at the bank.

The chairman of committee, Rep. Curtin, of Brookline, said he had good reason to know that worthless stock had been offered as collateral to a bank in which he was interested, and asked Mr. Hingston if he remembered the bonds issued by the Quincy Granite Co., not long ago? Mr. Hingston said he recalled the instance very well.

Charles Levy, a deputy in the office of the bank commissioner said he thought the figures regarding loans made by banks that are kept on the banks' books are sufficient guide for the bank commissioner's agents but had not especial objection to the passage of Mr. Hingston's bill. Senator Lombard Williams of Dedham, although he had never seen the bill until the time of this hearing said that certain clients of his would be disposed to oppose the bill and he was recorded in opposition although he offered little argument.

The committee took the matter under advisement.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Mrs. Pankhurst the London suffragette has been arrested three times within a few weeks for breaking glass. It is not a jail but some other institution in which she should find a retreat.

Both president Taft and President-elect Wilson are up against a delicate proposition in the Mexican question.

$25,000,000 for public buildings is quite a big sum for an economical congress to father.

The cash register men have been sentenced but so have a good many other offenders and they are still at large and enjoying the utmost liberty with the greatest nonchalance.

It has been suggested that William be made the White House chef as he could cook up some fine policies. Wasn't the legacy of "my policies" the rock on which another White House official was wrecked.

The several hundred gallons of impure ketchup turned into the sewer the other day will come back again, in eels or other fish.

The peer of the Sierras is dead and his red mining shirt and Prince Albert coat will never again adorn a London function.

Has the reform wave chilled the marrow in the hearts of the New York grafter. Already three days have passed by and some other official higher up has not been pointed at as a "receiver."

The passing of Cannon leaves another picturesque void in the National capital.

Who stuffed the Milton ballot box at the caucus is now the burning question which demands an answer.

The population of Boston shows that only one-fourth are of native parentage but it must be accepted that every one of the balance passed the literacy test.

It is rather unfortunate that the caution of some people has made the British nation cautious in its cintributing to the fund for the dependents upon Scott and the others who died with him.

The criminal clause of the Sherman act has the right kick to it and if put in operation a good many years ago there would be less demand for such wholesale prosecutions under the criminal or civil part of it as there is today. Its long laxity of operation is not creditable.

SUNDAY BASE BALL.

Cardinal O'Connell and other clergy of the Catholic church oppose Sunday base ball. Mon. Ambrose F. Roche, formerly of Quincy, appeared before the committee on legal affairs, representing the Catholic Federation and opposed the measure. A base ball writer, talked of the 10,000 people who played base ball, of the grief it caused him at the lack of Sunday ball playing, of the ministers he met out west who favored Sunday ball playing and others discoursed in the same maudlin way of the benefits to be derived from Sunday base ball which when simmered down only meant that a few people wished to add a little to their bank account and hence every one should rally to their support. One of the Boston City Council is credited with saying that Sunday base ball would keep men away from a gambling house located near a church in his neighborhood.

Neither base ball or anything else will prevent a person from engaging in an illegal act either Sunday or any other day, and gaming will flourish as long as there are gamesters and places where games of chance may be played.

Incidentally the councillor before laying himself so wide open to criticism of his knowledge of an illegal enterprise flourishing in his neighborhood should have bethought himself of the recent inauguration and his oath of office.

In the main the demand for Sunday base ball is no greater than it ever was. There are other forms of recreation and plenty of places where the day can be spent without the noise and turmoil of base ball. The only real demand appears to be from certain people who desire greater profits.

When the claim is made that the people do not have recreation enough and the like, those who make such appeals are either deliberately lying or they show such a remarkable degree of ignorance that their spare time of a Sunday could be put to better advantage reading some good works, histories and other authorities than on the base ball field.

LONGER SCHOOL TERM.

The Boston school board has decided against further extension of the school year. Perhaps they may be correct in their judgment, but it did not seem as if the pupils would be subjected to any tremendous amount of hardship if they were in school two weeks more during the year. Activity in school or along any legitimate and profitable lines need never be an occasion for worry on the part of parents or teachers. The idle moments are the ones most fraught with danger to the young people. While they are in school they are engaged in profitable enterprise. Outside the school hours, the time spent with "the gang," is more injurious to them healthfully and morally than a whole month of extra time in the school room. However the school board has decided against any change, because there was a vigorous protest from a number of parents. Undoubtedly the parents who interested themselves in this affair are decidedly in the minority. If a canvass was to be made of parents who have children of the school age, they would undoubtedly be overwhelmingly in favor of the longer term because no doubt many of them have had occasion to regret the inability to obtain an education when they were young.

THE ART OF POISONING.

A supposedly educated man, with a college degree or something or other attends an afternoon function. He is the lion of the occasion, the entertainer behind the tea cups. With either assumed gravity or a fine sarcasm which may have been lost the gentleman announced that the fine art of poisoning had been lost, he regretted this fact and that the days of the de Medici and Borgia were no more. And the women giggled. They did not appear to know which to do under the circumstances and it is always claimed that a laugh or a smile will save many a ridiculous situation. This was certainly ridiculous with a vengeance. There is no excuse for intelligent people in this enlightened age seeking such diversion as that. The cap and bells of the court jester are mirth provokers and one expects to laugh at them but when the art of amusing is gauged by this poison assertion, and rot of that kind, there appears to be a call for a change in the variety. Such suggestions are too serious for buffoonery and they are too much of the buffoonery type to be handed out as serious propositions.

NEALE'S MONTHLY FOR FEB.

The February number of Neale's monthly, the new magazine that was established the first of the year by The Neale Publishing Company, book publishing house of New York, makes an unusually attractive magazine. The six serials that were begun in the January issue are continued in this number, as follows: "The Strategy of Robert E. Lee," by J. J. Bowen, which the publishers claim is the only full account of the military strategy of any of the leaders of the Civil War, either Federal or Confederate; "The Scuttlers," a detective story of the sea, by Clyde C. Westover, the young Californian novelist to whom the critics are now turning their attention; "Wall Street as Our American Monte Carlo," an intimate account of the operations of the street, by Franklin C Keyes, of the New York Bar; "The Monk and the Hangman's Daughter," a mediaeval romance, by Ambrose Bierce, whose "Collected Works" in twelve volumes was recently published by the Neales.

A permanent department, "Letters to the Editors," which the editors answer, adds to the sprightliness of Neale's Monthly. "The Stage" is another permanent department, consisting of critical reviews, illustrated by portraits and stage settings. These features, with several short stories and poems by well-known writers, make Neale's Monthly for February a notable magazine.

"A RESULT OF SORROW."

This life, is but a step,
In the ladder of progression;
Our sorrows seem to be so hard:
No matter how short the session,
For our inner nature does rebel,
From what we call oppression.

Our joys we love, in greater measure
Although, sometimes they lead us far,
From what should be our greatest treasure,
Our every wish if rightly fulfilled,
Would be for eternal pleasure.

Tho' sorrows may be quite severe,
Seeming beyond endurance,
But, they who really persevere,
Must have it's good assurance.
The greatest joy we ever have,
If I am not mistaken,
Is when we triumph after all,
And all our sorrows shaken.

FIRST PARISH CLUB

bill just passed by congress and vetoed by the President there is no question but what we must be guarded against the dangers that are confronting us. There is a sense of responsibility on our part to take the immigrants that come to this country and make good citizens of them. Until we come to realize that this is our problem we must be getting ready to wrestle with the subject.

Labor interests are seeking to restrict immigration while manufacturers are looking to it for help. You and I are interested because it effects American citizenship.

Mr. Brewer on being introduced said that while we are congratulating ourselves on being the leading nation of the world the races have been pouring in and occupying our country. There are 30, 40, and 50 nationalities that are in our crowded colonies and industrial centres and still they are coming. A situation like this might well cause alarm, but when we remember our people rule here it is difficult to line out a policy.

Senator Root in speaking to the business men of New York said the bankers are looked upon by many as robbers and the employers of labor are hated by dissatisfied men. The rich distrust the poor and the poor the hated rich. Ambassador Bryce said; "morality is so mixed up with economics it was a question if the latter was in sight. Sociology is making great strides. They are saying things that give aid to anarchists and socialists. Mr. Gray of the United States Steel Co. said the condition is such as preceded revolution.

The speaker told how by the Revolutionary and Civil wars our fathers had secured liberty to all, all brought about by great leaders. Are we not today entering a period that is wanting a great leader if we are to hand down to posterity the liberty handed to us?

Who are the great men of today? capitalists of the great industries. Great manufacturers are first of all statesmen and they realize without stability business must fail. Today we leave out legislative matters to others. This is a serious situation. What do the bills of rights secure for us except liberty?

In 1905 there were in the North Atlantic states 23,000,000 people. The majority of the men of voting age were born on the other side of the water. There are many degenerates and illiterates. Thousands of them do not speak the English language. Since that time five millions more have come The schools of the great west are taking up the problem of these people for seventy per cent of all immigrants stay in the sea board states. Our schools are not doing their part.

During the next generation twenty or thirty million of people will come to our shores from Europe and ninety per cent of them will not talk the English language. Are you equipped to meet that situation? We are receiving those who for years have been ground down to the dust in their own country. Many are from the Roman empire, from Russia, Turkey, Syria, Prussia and from central Asia. Millions of people seem to be facing this way. The Archbishop of Canterbury recently said all Europe was standing amazed at the people coming here. For twenty years we have allowed these people to be automatically thrown into the trend of anarchists. Between the lines there is constantly moving a class of criminals, rascals and shysters lawyers who can talk their language. They take them in hand and before they are thirty days in this country eight per cent of them have been robbed. We do not do these things but we permit them. The shyster lawyers, boarding housekeepers and others feed upon these people. On the walls of most of their rooms is an inverted pyramid with the rich men at the top and the poor men at the bottom.

The speaker then related incidents showing immigrants who were robbed on reaching this country. With these things in mind a movement was made in New York for a civic league, the object being self preservation. They bring these facts to the American people and do other things required. There is quite as much to be done now as during the days when we had committees of safety. Men like these do three things. First, protect the immigrants on their entering port. Second, wake up the schools and lastly open bureaus through which they may come in touch with these people and educate them to know what citizenship means.

In many of these bureaus lectures are given where the English language is learned. If business men could be made to see that it was good economics to take up this question then something might be accomplished. The speaker then told of the forming of civic leagues in our industrial centres among the first being in the Merrimac valley. We tried to do what we could during the great strike at Lawrence by having the militia issue their order in the different languages so that they could be understood and what was accomplished? If we ever get together we will accomplish things that will be renumerative. If you have an employee who does not understand the English language you can not communicate with him and if he is represented by the sharks and is blackmailed by his fellow countrymen and there is no way of telling him he is not worth fifty per cent and becomes a dangerous element. Is it economy to permit these things to continue? There can be no liberty without order. Today we pay little attention to these matters as we are busily engaged in trade. If you live for thirty years you will see more stirring times than your fathers looked upon. There is need of the spirit of '76 and get the spirit of the times. With a red flag in our street reading "no God, No Master" and not doing what good business men should do, are we doing what we ought. There is need of men to do the things needed.

After his talk the speaker when asked what steps should be taken to form a league said it was best to first appoint a committee. We will meet the local committee and plan to meet local conditions. He would suggest that attention be given by the schools to teach the adult the English language. To establish bureaus where they can ask questions. The speaker then in reply to a question told how the league worked in Lawrence. They had messages printed in the different languages. They gave entertainments with moving pictures, etc., and after giving them their message they were entertained. But first of all they got their message. We taught them how to become naturalized and aided them in so doing. In Boston the children are taken and taught self responsibility before they are taken into the graded class. They are asked to lengthen the evening schools, so men at any time of the year can get instruction in English. The civic league wakes people up to what is happening, but does not take sides. The one thing is self preservation. If we admit these people we must Americanize them.

In answer to a question if his league was in favor of restricted immigration the speaker said that their position was such that they could not take sides, and could not afford to express their opinion.

Col. Anderson said it was a question which effected Quincy. Not long ago he had stood on the sidewalk and seen a procession go by headed by a red flag with the American flag trailing in the rear and not a word of English spoken by the paraders. It made his blood boil. There was nothing dangerous about the parade but it looked like the beginning of what might soon be serious. We should like it if we could pick up these people and send them back home. We want to take hold of this thing. We do not want to wait until the last.

He loved Quincy and he loved his country and he wanted to appeal to the people and see if all can not do something for Quincy.

He then moved and it was voted that a committee be appointed to investigate the subject and take steps to form a civic league.

President Hudson said that the matter of the committee would be taken up by the Executive committee and announced at the March meeting.

This brought the evening to a close although as usual the members remained for a social half hour.

Next month will be a busy month for the club with its debate on Suffrage and election on March 11, reciprocity day March 25 and the extra meeting March 5 when W. L. Hubbard of Boston gives an opera talk.

GENERAL FEDERATION.

The variety of the work undertaken by the General Federation of Women's clubs, is as great as is the variety in human interests. Nothing that concerns the welfare of humanity is now foreign to the million or more women of this great organization.

The Industrial and Social Conditions department has for its new head Mrs. A. E. Chantler, of Tacoma, Wash., a native of Minnesota, the daughter of Jairus Rich Warner, a pioneer settler who emigrated from Belchertown, Mass., in the early fifties. Educated in the public schools and later a Hamline University, Mrs. Chantler taught for a number of years in the village schools of Minnesota. For the past eleven years she has been engaged in newspaper work, having resigned from the staff of the Tacoma Daily News to accept the appointment of Assistant State Labor Commissioner for Washington a year ago. This appointment, made by Governor M. E. Hay, was due to the influence of the clubs of Tacoma, her name having been presented by the Women's club, of which she was a charter member. Governor Hay has been especially interested in the work of the Washington club women, and Mrs. Chantler has been prominent in the State Federation for a long time, serving on the Consumers' League and Industrial committees. She has led a very busy life, and smilingly says that she has been able to work so hard and so unceasingly because of the superb health received as a legacy from a childhood spent on the broad Minnesota prairies.

Mrs. Chantler is especially interested in the question of a living wage for women and girls, which she considers fundamental. Admitting that the very low wages paid to women are due in part to inefficiency, she recognizes that an unholy greed is also largely responsible, and says: "But whatever the cause, it is a menace, and society must find the way to a remedy. I believe the Women's clubs of the United States, through sincere study of this problem, can aid greatly its solution. It is my ambition that the committee of which I have the honor to be chairman shall so present this question to the women of the country that they will never rest until it is settled."

The Industrial and Social committees will not lose sight of the Child Labor problem and will work to secure Mothers' Aid bills and Mothers' Pension bills in the several States. They have also mapped out a thorough study of immigration problems relating to women and children, which they consider an important phase of their work, and will urge the need of women inspectors at all ports of entry.

Important, indeed, is the work outlined by this committee—work that must appeal strongly to the women of the clubs, whose interests, at first centered on their own intellectual improvement, have gradually broadened until they embrace almost every good movement under the sun. The child was the magnet which led the club women to turn away from their own selfish interests, taking up first educational problems, then with fresh enthusiasm and intelligence the study of home economics and finally the conditions of life of "the other half." Think of this great army of more than a million women concentrating its attention on such questions. It means more than we can readily understand. It means the awakening of both women and men to a new sense of responsibility, a new consecration of themselves, and finally the realization of a new republic.

KATHARYN CRANE MEMORIAL CLUB.

The next meeting of the Katharyn Crane Memorial club will be with Norma Johnson of Russell park on Feb. 26 and coming as it does in the week's recess the meeting will come earlier in the afternoon giving more time for the delightful story "Anne of Green Gables" which is giving so much pleasure. The club is making preparations for its annual sale, for which Mrs. Emery L. Crane is to open her home Saturday afternoon, March 15. Last year over one hundred dollars was netted and the greater part of this has been spent for food, shoes and rubbers that have brought great relief to the needy. It is hoped that this sale will be even more successful in order that the club may respond to more appeals than it has been able to this year.

BACHELOR'S WERE HOSTS

At Very Pleasing Party for Young People

DINNER BEFORE AND AFTER

Harvard upper class men and their young lady friends together with many of the best known and popular of the younger set of the city were the guests Tuesday evening of the Bachelors at a dancing party at Alpha hall. It is the first time in the city that an affair of thisi nature has been attempted and its success more than exceeded expectations.

The hall simply overflowed with the young people and the setting was most picturesque inasmuch as the prevailing colors were the Harvard crimson which was festooned throughout the hall in all conceivable corners covering chandeliers and scenery which was banked with a mass of potted plants.

Previous to the party Mrs. Herbert Lawton entertained the out of town guests at dinner and at midnight they were tendered a supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Theodore Hardwick, Chestnut street.

There were no unusual features during the evening. A good time was planned for and enjoyed by all present. Frappe and sherbert was served and the music was by Poole's orchestra.

The matrons were Mrs. C. Theodore Hardwick, Mrs. Henry M. Faxon and Mrs. Herbert Lawton.

The Bachelors who gave the ball were Edward Avery, Walter B. Binian Paul Blackmur, Arthur C. Davenport, Walter Lacey, Hobart A. Lawton, Huntington Hardwick, Deleevare King Walter J. Nolan, John S. Pfaffmann, C. Eaton Pierce, Percival Sears, Willard P. Sheppard and Morton Smith.

VOTES FOR WOMEN.

Votes for women is a passing spasm, says Dr. Margaret A. Cleaves, a nerve specialist high in estimation in America. Dr. Cleaves claims that both mental and physical deterioration of her sex is brought about by mental unrest, which is incident upon the agitiation of such questions as equal suffrage. She says that women do not consider these things from a sane view-point, that the wearing, tearing agitation of this and kindred subjects tells upon women mentally and physically.

One of Dr. Cleaves' characteristic sentiments concerning this agitation is expressed as follows: "The women of this country cannot or will not recognize what they are doing to the children to come. They are so crazed to be in the limelight, to jump into the centre of the arena, and become prominent figures, in public life that they sacrifice every right principle of health to the craving."

Dr. Cleaves is of the opinion that the home is now the secondary consideration, and at the present time, owing to this condition, even the children have their own clubs, for the simple reason, that there is no entertainment in the home nothing that binds their attention to the home

Dr. Cleaves emphatically asserts: "It is the duty of every woman to keep herself in as excellent condition mentally and physiically as she can. She should be the real pillar in the home. She cannot do this when she is sick. When she is working for a cause, wearing her nerves to an edge and unfitting herself for all home life, she is surely aiding in the deterioration of a country. Things move in cycles. The world has never before seen just such agitiations as those, now taking place over suffrage. It will not last. It is a mere spasm. When the vote is given, the women will not care to use it as much as they fancy. Their craving for excitement, for fantastic notoriety in the public eye, will have been appeased. But when this great wave of nervousness does pass, and the women recover from their mental indigestion, it will take much time to effect even a partial reconstruction of the home."

IN CATHOLIC CHURCHES.

Rev. Dr. Andrew J. O'Brien, professor of dogmatic theology at Brighton and son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael F. O'Brien of Crescent street will deliver the Lenten address at St. Mary's church this evening. Dr. O'Brien was an able speaker while at Boston College, and attained special mention as a student of the American College at Rome.

Miss Hygiene — Miss Helen Jones
Miss Suffragette — Ruth Packard
Miss East Side, N. Y., Dorothy Taylor
At Last, — Mrs. N. G. Nickerson, Jr.

The curtain rises on a scene of disorder and Mr. Locke the bachelor, trying to straighten things out. In despair he advertises for a wife. In response first comes Miss Society, who does not care for house work. Next Miss Bookworm cares for reading, and brings a pile of books with her, sweeps with a book in one hand, tries to press pants with her book on the board, resulting in burning the articles in question. Next comes the widow, who proves all right but the bachelor is disgusted with the baby. Miss Hygiene wants everything fumigated. Miss Suffragette orders him about, she has votes for women. She does not condescend to do housework. Miss East Side, N. Y., is exceeding flashy in her attire and fond of chewing gum. At Last—arrives one closely veiled. She is immaculate. The room takes on a different aspect, the pants are creased to perfection. The bachelor begs her to lift her veil, she is obdurate. He gets on his knees to her, she accepts him and he clasps her in his arms. He begs her to lift her veil, she consents, but he falls back in a faint, she is black.

The different characters were portrayed very faithfully and the audience showed its appreciation by prolonged applause. The program closed by selections from Mrs. Fish. "'Tis Day," and "The Red, Red Rose," which was much enjoyed. Miss Fish has a very sweet, expressive voice, coming out deep and pure on the high notes, and the audience thoroughly appreciated the whole program, which was finely executed, and Mrs. Nickerson is to be congratulated upon her very successful entertainment.

Refreshments were served by the auxiliary, assisted by the following young ladies: Misses Esther Beckford, Wilma G. Wilson, Helen M. Damon, Ethel G. Beal, Gertrude E. Beal, Helen L. Bromley, Gladys Hunt, Marjorie Welch, Addie J. Park, Avah Gibson, Emma Spaulding. Informal singing of popular airs was enjoyed Miss Gladys Hunt accompanying at the piano, and Ralph Young on the violin. Mrs. Edwin I. Beal, Mrs. W. G. Nickerson, Mrs. A. F. Gilson were chaperones.

OVERLOADED MILK WAGON

Proves to Be a Well-Stocked Liquor Store on Wheels

Newburyport, Mass., Feb. 19.—The biggest liquor seizure ever made in this city was brought to the police station in a large wagon bearing the lettering "Milk," on its covering, and half a dozen of the "huskies" of the force were kept busy for half an hour unloading the 693 quarts of beer, 40 quarts of whiskey and five gallons of gin from the wagon.

Officers Senders and Hayes made the seizure. They saw the heavily loaded wagon when they were standing at the corner of Thayer and Sprague streets and became suspicious of such a large consignment of milk.

SON-IN-LAW TO JOIN MORGAN IN EGYPT

Banker's Family Seriously Concerned Over His Condition

New York, Feb. 19.—Although a cable message received at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. stated that Morgan was "much better and stronger," Herbert Satterlee, son-in-law of the financier, sailed on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. to join Morgan in Egypt.

Satterlee said the trip was merely that some member of the family might be with the financier to prevent him overtaxing his strength.

Mrs. Satterlee and J. P. Morgan, Jr., were at the pier to see Satterlee off. Mrs. Satterlee will follow later. It was stated that the decision for some member of the family to join Morgan in Egypt was reached at a family conference.

INDOOR MEET OF QUINCY HIGH

Boys Getting Ready for Event Set for March 5

The pupils of the Quincy High school are making preparations for the annual indoor interclass meet which will be held in the gym March 5.

Capt. Kingsbury is hard at work, assisted by his teammates and the teachers, and while the prospects of establishing new records are not overbright there is no dearth of athletic material in the student body.

As in all meets, a dark horse is apt to appear and hang up a new record. Several members of the freshman class are considered in the dark horse combination and since they have had no real opportunity to show their ability the result of their performance is doubtful.

QUINCY PRETTY HEALTHY PLACE

Deaths Last Year Totaled 383, Two from Typhoid

REMARKABLE RECORD

Quincy had 383 deaths last year, and but two were from typhoid fever. Dr. Fred E. Jones, secretary of the Board of Health made his report Monday. In a city of more than 35,000 people the record is remarkable.

A rigid inspection of milk-producing centers and the purity of the metropolitan water is believed to have had a great deal to do with this condition of affairs.

Dr. Jones has classified the death list under three heads, 135 non-preventable deaths, 123 preventable and 125 doubtful. Of the preventable deaths 25 acute cases of infantile diseases were traced to flies. As a result of this the board will seek legislation to compel dealers in foodstuffs to keep all edibles covered with screens or some other device. During the year there were 37 deaths due to tuberculosis and 30 to accidental causes, the latter figure being considered very high.

Of the 383 deaths reported during the year 12 were due to preventable diseases covered by law. Dr. Jones said he believed that with the extension of laws covering other diseases, the Board of Health will be able to cope with local situations better than it has been so well here during the past year.

GREAT TIME AT LADIES' NIGHT

Wollaston Park Improvement Association Splendid Hosts

With a large number of members and their ladies present the second annual ladies night of the Wollaston Park Improvement association was observed Monday evening at the hall of the Wollaston yacht club.

A pleasing entertainment program was given and was followed by dancing which lasted until the midnight hour. Little business was transacted

President Woodward welcomed those present and asked co-operation in carrying out one of the objects of the association, that of furthering the social life of the district.

He called attention to the hearing on the state bath house at Wollaston beach which would be held at room 240 of the State House Friday morning at 10.30.

The business meeting was adjourned and the evening placed in charge of John L. Hamilton as master of ceremonies.

He introduced N. G. Nickerson, Jr. one of those interested in founding the proposed social club in Wollaston in connection with the Community House He said:

"The needs of the Community House are not broad enough and it is thought that a first class club with a 1 quarters will be a project much more desirable.

"I am not here to knock the Community House. We are working in conjunction with the committee. We asked them to provide suitable quarters for our club, which they promised to do.

"Not one room, or yet a floor but perhaps two floors containing lounging reception, and card rooms, bowling, billiards, etc.

We have had very little time to get out lists and I have been surprised to find so many desirous of joining, up to Thursday without any systematic canvass we had secured 150 names.

"We have been given to understand that plans for the Community House are not final but may be changed or discarded.

"At our meeting sentiment strongly favored a clubhouse or Community House with club quarters of Colonial style.

It seems to be the object of the Community House movement simply to have a public meeting place or hall. We cannot see why the project of a hall combined with a mighty good club should not be carried out.

"The club will go through. There is no doubt about it. I think the Community House committee are pleased with a club of this kind that will not only pay running expenses but will guarantee people something for their money rather than as many people express it be 'merely an ornament' etc."

A musical program by Wilson's orchestra and a number of impersonations, comic songs and character sketches by E. S. Nichols formed the entertainment.

The evening was in charge of a committee consisting of John L. Hamilton, Matthew Ott, Arthur K. Bartlett, Maurice A. Kerins, William P. Tripp, William W. Grieves and Arthur F. Capen.

Chairman Hamilton extended for Lieutenant Wardwell an invitation to 100 members and friends of the association to be present on February 24 as guests of the Kincaide Theatre.

ELISHA LEE

Chairman of Railroad Managers Figures In Firemen's Trouble

FIREMEN WIN THEIR POINT

Erdman Act Will Be Applied In Railroad Controversy

STRIKE IS THUS AVERTED

Managers Break Deadlock After Firemen's Leaders Were Authorized to Call Out 34,000 Men at Any Time—Two Arbitrators Already Chosen Will Select Third

New York, Feb. 19.—The eastern railroads have agreed to arbitrate the demands of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen under the Erdman act. This breaks the deadlock and averts the possibility of a strike at present.

The decision of the roads was announced in an official statement issued by Elisha Lee as chairman of the conference committee of managers. The managers feel, says the statement, that the public will not tolerate a strike.

The decision of the railroad managers was announced in a letter to the government mediators, Judge Knapp and Acting Commissioner of Labor Hanger. Immediately upon receipt of the letter, Knapp engaged in a conference with the firemen's representatives.

When the decision of the railroads was announced to the firemen, President Carter of the Firemen's Brotherhood said:

"We started out with the expectation of seeking arbitration under the Erdman act and to prevent a strike. Naturally we are satisfied with the result."

The break in the deadlock came after the firemen's leaders were authorized by overwhelming vote of the 34,000 men affected to call a strike at any time. The strike would have involved fifty-four railroads operating 50,000 miles of track in eighteen states.

Albert Phillips, vice president of the brotherhood, living in Sacramento, Cal., was anonunced as the firemen's representative on the Erdman act board. W. W. Atterbury of the Pennsylvania railroad will be the managers' arbitrator. It was arranged that the two select the third man on the board. The law requires that the two representatives of the parties to the controversy shall select the third man and that within ten days after the board is complete the demands must be presented before the board and that within another twenty days the award must be made.

The demands of the firemen include substantial increases in wages, $2.55 to $4 a hundred miles; a 10-hour day or a run of 100 miles to constitute a day's work; a new schedule of overtime charges; two firemen on all locomotives of more than 200,000 pounds, and a number of minor demands.

The railroads already had expressed a willingness to raise wages, but not to the maximum demanded. To grant this, they assert, would cost the railroads $12,000,000 a year and increase their payrolls 42 percent. The firemen contended that the increase would be but 15 percent.

DIES WITH PET DOGS

Despondent Blind Girl Takes Own Life by Inhaling Gas

Pittsburg, Feb. 19.—Despondent because her mother desired to separate her from her two pet dogs, the only playmates she had, Miss Martha Hicks, 22 years old, and blind, committed suicide by inhaling illuminating gas.

According to the mother, the girl had been sleeping in the kitchen so she could care for the pet dogs and prevent them from suffering from the cold.

When the door was forced the dogs for which the young woman died were found unconscious with their mouths near the crack under the door.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SALMON LOAF.

WITH the return of Lent, pleasing ways of serving fish are needed. In neighborhoods where the main reliance is upon canned fish salmon is generally popular.

Salmon loaf, a dish which is satisfactory for luncheon or supper, may be made in a number of acceptable ways. Some of these are as follows:

For the Lenten Larder.

Piquant Salmon Loaf.—Take three large pickles, mince these fine with one small onion. Add one cupful of breadcrumbs, one tablespoonful of melted butter poured over the crumbs, three well beaten eggs, one-half cupful of rich milk, one can of salmon. Drain off the liquor for sauce, pick up the meat, season with salt and pepper and one teaspoonful of celery salt. Mix the ingredients together, form into a loaf and place in a dripping pan, pour over it a tablespoonful of butter melted in one cupful of boiling water. Baste often and bake until nicely browned.

To make sauce for this take a teaspoonful of melted butter and salmon liquor, one sour pickle, minced, one well beaten egg, pepper and salt. Boil all together, stirring constantly. Add cream to make sauce enough to serve over the loaf and pour on just before serving.

Tempting Fare.

Steamed Salmon Loaf.—Take a can of the steaks of salmon and add to it three well beaten eggs, two ounces of melted butter, a half cupful of grated breadcrumbs, with minced parsley, pepper and salt to season.

Beat the crumbs with the eggs, add the salmon, butter and seasoning, place in a suitable dish and steam one hour.

For the sauce take one cupful of hot milk, thicken with one tablespoonful of cornstarch or flour. Add liquor from can, one large tablespoonful butter and one egg beaten. Cook in a double boiler. When done pour over the loaf.

Salmon Loaf In Gelatin.—Take a can of salmon and flake the fish finely. Mix with it the pounded yolks of two hard boiled eggs and a seasoning consisting of a tablespoonful of chopped capers, a little mace, chopped parsley and salt and pepper. Then take a cupful of boiling water and dissolve a teaspoonful of anchovy paste with it. Add a tablespoonful of lemon juice and a tablespoonful of gelatin. Keep the water hot until the gelatin is dissolved and then combine with the fish. Take a nice mold, butter it and lay rings formed of the white of hard boiled egg upon it. Pour the fish into the mold over these and place on ice until firm.

POTATO SOUPS.

VERY nice soups may be made with that homely vegetable, the potato. Served with dumplings they make substantial additions to a light meal. As they can be made without the use of meat they are convenient for use during Lent.

Two Savory Concoctions.

Potato Soups With Eggs.—Take three medium sized potatoes and boil until done. Mash fine, add a teaspoonful each of salt and white pepper, a tablespoonful of butter, three cupfuls of milk and one and one-half cupfuls of boiling water. Place on the fire and let come to boil before removing from fire. Stir in the beaten whites of two eggs and serve at once with crisp salt crackers.

Welsh Potato Soup.—Mince the white of two leeks and fry them in two tablespoonfuls of butter. Add three medium sized peeled and quartered potatoes and one pint of white stock and cook quickly. When the potatoes are tender, rub them through a sieve. Add the desired quantity of boiled milk or thin cream and heat to the boiling point, adding the potato puree, a lump of butter and some croutons of fried bread just before serving.

Sustaining Soups.

Cream of Potato Soup.—Take a pint and a half of milk, boil with a slice of onion and pour this over one cupful of cold mashed potatoes, pressing through a strainer. Melt one tablespoonful of butter and stir into it one tablespoonful of flour, letting the mixture boil, but not brown. Cool slightly and stir in the milk slowly until thickened. Add the seasoning of salt and white pepper and serve very hot with nicely browned croutons.

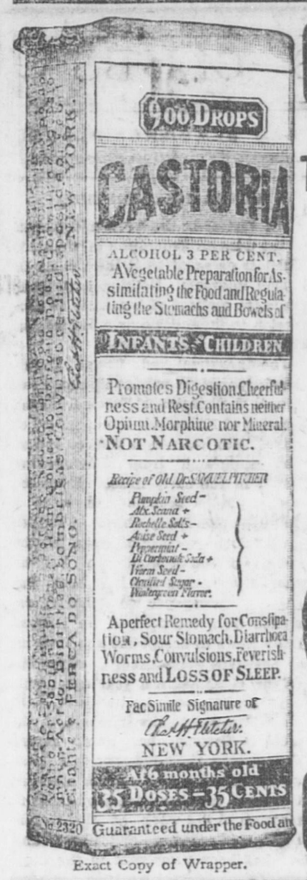

Potato Puree.—Peel, wash and slice a quart of potatoes. Put them into a saucepan and add a large onion in slices, a small bunch of soup herbs, a crushed nutmeg, three bay leaves, a level teaspoonful of salt, a few grains of pepper and two quarts of water. Boil until the potatoes can be reduced to pulp. Then rub through a fine sieve and return to the saucepan on the stove. Add two cupfuls of boiling milk and a large tablespoonful of butter. Stir until the butter is absorbed and the puree is very hot. Serve with a plate of thin dry toast cut into small cubes.

Anna Thompson.

TORTURE THREATENED

Further "Squealing" Will Result In Informer Losing His Tongue

New York, Feb. 19.—If Luigi Tancredi, a state's witness in the police graft investigation, does further "squealing," supplementing his testimony that was followed by the indictment of a patrolman, his tongue will be cut out. Two men threatened him with vengeance in this form, according to word that reached District Attorney Whitman.

Newspaper clippings telling how a one-time gambler, since shot to death by an enemy, cut off the ear of an employe who "squealed," and nailed it to the wall of his resort, were shown to Tancredi by the men who said they would cut out his tongue if he gave more testimony for the state.

Tancredi, a hotel keeper, involved in his grand jury testimony Policeman Robinson, who, with Inspector Sweeney, was indicted Monday. Sweeney under indictment, was demoted to captain yesterday.

"Docked" For Attending Funeral

Guelph, Ont., Feb. 19.—Because they were not paid for time lost while attending the funeral of the president of the Dominion Line company twenty men are on strike.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Paris, Feb. 19.—The inauguration of Raymond Poincare as tenth president of the French republic for a term of seven years took place with very simple ceremonies, but there was a great display of popular enthusiasm as the new chief executive proceeded to the palace of the Elysee to take over the office from Armand Fallieres, who yesterday completed his full term.

GOTHAM GANGSTER KILLED

"Silent" Gun Does Its Work Without Making Slightest Noise

New York, Feb. 19.—The first use of a "silencer" on a rifle in the activities of street desperadoes was recorded by the police here when Tony Vivola, an East Side gangster, and John Russomanno, a saloon keeper, were shot with five bullets from a gun, the report of which was not heard.

Vivola was killed and Russomanna seriously wounded. The shooting was believed to have been in revenge for the killing by Russomanno, in self-defense, of a gang leader, Amelli Prisco, two months ago.

REBELS DRIVE MADERO FROM PRESIDENCY

Betrayed by Two of His Generals and Taken Prisoner

HUERTA IS REWARDED FOR PLOT WITH DIAZ

Agreement Reached Whereby His Appointment to Provisional Presidency Is Proclaimed—Blanquet Probably In Plot For Some Time—Number of Dead Estimated at Two Thousand, Many Being Women and Children—Carts Piled High With Corpses Driven to Outskirts of City and Bodies Burned—United States Prepared, Upon a Moment's Notice, to Strike Aggressive Blow Should Occasion Demand It

Mexico City, Feb. 19.—Betrayed by General Huerta and General Blanquet as a result of a plot with Diaz, Francisco I. Madero has been forced out of the presidency.

He was arrested at the national palace shortly before 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon by Blanquet.

Victoriano Huerta, commander of the federal troops, was proclaimed provisional president.

About the time Madero was seized by Blanquet, his brother, Gustavo Madero, the former minister of finance, was arrested by Huerta, who was dining with him in a public restaurant.

All the members of the cabinet were promptly placed under arrest, with the exception of Ernesto Madero, the uncle of the president, who held the portfolio of finance. He was apprised of the intentions against the government and managed to make his escape.

Notwithstanding the fact that some definite action was expected, the coup d'etat at the palace created a sensation, and the exact status of affairs could not be ascertained for several hours.

The direct movement against Madero was the result of a plot which had been growing since Monday and which possibly existed with Blanquet for a much greater length of time.

From the first it had been known the Blanquet was unwilling to fight. His men were of the same mind. He held complete command over them, and it was not doubted that they would follow him in any adventure, which they did at the national palace yesterday afternoon.

The forces numbering 1000 which arrived Monday were sent immediately to the palace, ostensibly to relieve the reserves there. The reserves were sent in the field.

An agreement between Blanquet and Huerta was reached Monday night, but the first intimation that Blanquet's men had of the new role they were to play was shortly before the successful stroke was made. Blanquet drew his men up in order and delivered a stirring speech.

"This inhuman battle must end," he said. "The time has come when some drastic means must be taken to stop a conflict in which father is killing son and brother is fighting against brother; where non-combatants are sharing the fate of war—and all this because of the caprice of one man."

Blanquet then issued orders for the arrest of the president and assigned a detachment for that duty. Madero was soon a prisoner in his own rooms. One reason given for the attitude of Blanquet from the beginning was the presence of his son in the ranks of Diaz.

When the arrest of the president and his ministers became known, crowds gathered in the streets through which they paraded shouting "Vivas" for Huerta and Diaz. A conference was held between the repreesntatives of the two generals and an agreement was reached whereby the appointment of Hurto to the provisional presidency was proclaimed.

MUST END DISTURBANCES

Whoever Is President Must Heed Demand of Uncle Sam

Washington, Feb. 19.—With the government of President Madero fallen and General Huerta proclaimed president of Mexico, it devolves upon American Ambassador Wilson at once to treat with the de facto Mexican government for the protection of Americans throughout the republic.

Political recognition of the government which emerged last night out of the travail through which Mexico has passed during the last two years, will be a slower proceeding.

But with several Americans dead from bullets of the contending forces in Mexico City, with hundreds of persons wounded and thousands rendered homeless because of the short range firing in the streets of the city, Wilson's first duty will be to treat with the new president for amelioration of the conditions imposed upon Americans and other foreigners.

PASSED OVER TAFT'S VETO

Senators Record Vote of 72 to 18 on Immigration Bill

IT CONTAINS "LITERACY TEST"

Newcomers For Last Ten Years Are Classified as Cheap and Unskilled Labor by Dillingham—Worst Criminals Who Have Appeared Were Educated Men, According to Stone

Washington, Feb. 19.—By a vote of 72 to 18 the senate passed the Dillingham-Burnett immigration bill over President Taft's veto. The measure contains the so-called "literacy test."

The eighteen who supported the president's veto were:

Catron, New Mexico; Clapp, Minnesota; Clarke, Arkansas; Curtis, Kansas; Du Pont, Delaware; Gronna, North Dakota; Guggenheim, Colorado; McCumber, North Dakota; Martine, New Jersey; O'Gorman, New York; Oliver, Pennsylvania; Paynter, Kentucky; Shiveley, Indiana; Smith, Maryland; Smith, Michigan; Stephenson, Wisconsin; Stone, Missouri, and Warren, Wyoming.

Senator Dillingham, one of the authors of the bill, attacked Secretary Nagel for condemning the literacy test.

"The immigration commission," said Dillingham, "had made an investigation of all the principal industries east of the Rocky mountains, and it showed that the immigrants who came in more than a decade ago were drawing higher wages than those who have entered within the last ten years. This cheap, unskilled class of labor coming in for the last ten years has crowded out the better class of immigrants.

"The immigration commission's report shows," he said, "that 8.7 percent of this class of immigrants enter singly and work for low wages, crowding out the older class of immigrants. It is for the congress of the United States to say whether it wants that class or not."

That the worst criminals who have appeared in America were educated men who could have stood the literacy test imposed by the immigration bill was the plea of Senator Stone, who declared the men who assassinated Presidents Garfield and McKinley were able to read.

JURORS VIEW "MURDER AUTO"

Defense of His Own Life May Be Basis of Dorr's Plea

Salem, Mass., Feb. 19.—The jury which is to determine the fate of William A. Dorr, charged with the murder last April of George E. Marsh, the aged and wealthy Lynn soap manufacturer, went to Lynn to view the scene of the murder and other places which will be referred to in the testimony of the witnesses.

Among the things the jurors saw during the trip was the so-called "murder automobile," in which the government claims Marsh was decoyed to his death by Dorr.

It is thought that the claim of Dorr will be self-defense.

AFFECTS 15,000 GIRLS

Agreement Settles One Branch of Garment Workers' Strike

New York, Feb. 19.—More than 15,000 girls who work on white goods are affected by an agreement reached between representatives of their union and the Cotton Garment Manufacturers' association.

The employes assert they have gained the increased wages and shorter working hours for which they struck several weeks ago. It is believed yesterday's action settles this branch of the Garment Workers' strike and that the white goods workers will return immediately to their shops.

A RECORD BREAKER

House Passes Bill Appropriating $180,300,000 For Pensions

Washington, Feb. 19.—The largest pension bill ever reported to congress, carrying appropriations aggregating $180,300,000, was passed by the house, 319 to 40, with an amendment which will make necessary an additional appropriation of more than $1,000,000.

A motion to strike from the bill a paragraph providing that after July 1, 1913, no pension should be paid to a non-resident not a citizen of the United States, except for actual disabilities incurred in the service, was carried, 154 to 112.

It is estimated that something over $1,000,000 is paid annually to veterans who would have been barred by this paragraph.

Citizens' Gas Light Company

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO CONSUMERS

NEW SYSTEM OF METER READING AND BILLING

It is the aim of the Citizens' Gas Light Company to give to the Public a service as excellent in every detail as possible and to improve the service as opportunity offers.

To this end the Company will on March 1st, 1913, put into effect a new system of Meter Reading and Billing which has been adopted after careful study of the many systems in use in other cities.

REGULAR METER READERS

Instead of hiring a large number of special men to read all the meters on the last few days of the month (as will still be done up to February 28th, 1913) the Company will in March create a permanent force of regular meter readers, who will be easily identified by the Company's badge conspicuously worn.

CONSTANT SYSTEM

These men will on each working day throughout the month read all the meters in one of the sections into which the accounts have been grouped and, having covered the City, will periodically read the same meters once in about every thirty calendar days, all bills rendered covering gas used during the preceding thirty days.

BILLS PAYABLE WITHIN FIFTEEN DAYS OF DATE

Two days after the reading of the meters of any section, the corresponding bills will be delivered. Each bill must be paid within fifteen days of its date and should a bill become overdue by not being paid within fifteen days, the supply may be discontinued without further notice.

EXAMPLES

The following examples are given on typical cases:

| METER IN SECTION NO. 2 | | METER IN SECTION NO. 7 | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Meter read | Monday, Mar. 10 | Meter read | Wednesday, Mar. 19 |
| Bill delivered | Wednesday, Mar. 12 | Bill delivered | Friday, Mar. 21 |
| Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Tuesday Mar. 25 | Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Thursday, Apr. 3 |

METHOD OF CHANGE FROM OLD TO NEW SYSTEM

As all meters will be read in the last days of February and as the new system will go into active operation about March 10th, it is evident that the first bills received after this latter date will cover periods ranging from two to six weeks. But in future the date of the last state of the meter and the date of the preceding state of the meter will appear on all bills; the period covered by each bill will therefore be evident in the bill and should be considered in connection with the amount of gas used.

For instance, bills rendered March 14th, will cover a period of about three weeks, while bills rendered April 2nd, will cover a period of about six weeks. After these first six weeks of change, customers will find that each month they will receive their bills on or about the same date, and that each bill will invariably cover the preceding thirty days.

LEARN TO READ METERS

We would again urge our customers to learn how to read meters; instruction as to this will be found on the back of the gas bills and will enable customers to check bills rendered.

REMITTANCES BY MAIL

Remittances sent through the mails should be addressed only in the name of the Company to its office, No. 11 Granite Street, Quincy.

We desire in conclusion, to assure our customers that the installation of the system outlined above is to secure uniformity and accuracy in handling their accounts.

WINTHROP WON QUITE HANDILY

Its 16th Victory, Making Its Chances Good

FOR FIRST PLACE

Winthrop High won its 16th straight victory Tuesday afternoon by beating Quincy High here, 44 to 24 .

The win strengthens their claim to the championship and they feel greatly pleased because they beat Quincy by a larger score than did Holliston, another contender for the champion honors.

The basket ball supremacy is still in the balance. Holliston was beaten Tuesday by Horace Mann High of Franklin, 28 to 22. The defeat was due to too much dependence on the Brown brothers.

Holliston beat Quincy by three goals scored in closing minutes of play. Winthrop and Holliston play within a week. Quincy is not eliminated from the running through Tuesday's decisive defeat.

Turner of Winthrop caged eight baskets from the floor. Prout and Andrews played well for Quincy.

Quincy's next scheduled date is Feb. 22 when they play Taunton at Taunton.

A Story of the Last War With England

By T. TOWNSEND SMITH

We had good luck in meeting British merchantmen and had secured some prizes, a few of which we carried into port, and some we let go, they not being of much value. We were sailing in longitude west from Greenwich 62 degrees and 40 minutes, latitude 35 degrees 15 minutes, when in the direction of the Bermudas, to the windward of us, appeared on the horizon a sail. She had a good breeze, while we were nearly becalmed. She made straight for us and came up with us, breaking the British flag. She was altogether too strong for us, and after a short fight we surrendered.

I was put down between decks with the others, who, being tired with several days' constant activity ending with a fight, were all very soon asleep Somehow I couldn't sleep and sat watching our guards, who were as fagged as we. One by one they dropped asleep. There wasn't much use of their keeping awake, for we couldn't run away, and it would have been madness for us to attempt to capture the ship.

But when I saw the last man dozing on a coil of rope with his cutlass across his lap I concluded to take a walk. I didn't expect to get very far, but I found that all hands, having been on duty for several days without sleep, had succumbed, and I didn't see a person awake. Forward I found the bodies of several men who had been killed during the fight, laid out for burial—that is, I saw the sacks in which they were inclosed. The idea occurred to me that if we were near enough to land to swim ashore I might escape by taking a body out of one of the sacks, getting in myself and being slid over board. I knew we were headed for the Bermudas and I might somehow get to land.

I would need a knife, but had none, and while I was making up my mind to take the risk I thought I would look around for one. A sailor who was sleeping like a log had one in his belt, and, though I risked his killing me if he awakened while relieving him of it, I took the chance and succeeded. I don't believe he would have opened his eyes if I had kicked him.

Having the knife gave me nerve, and I resolved to make a break for liberty The great difficulty was getting a body out of a sack and tossing it overboard There was an advantage for me in that the sailors, not relishing sleeping near the dead men, gave them a wide berth. I was some time at the job, but finally I had a bag ready and crawled in. I couldn't lace the opening from the inside and wondered what this might lead to.

I lay perfectly still till morning, when I fancied by sounds near me and words that were spoken that the burial was about to take place. I heard a man say, "Here's a sack not closed," and felt him closing it. Then he tied a cord about my ankles, and after that a chaplain read the burial service. That ended, I heard something slide on a board, and presently I was taken up and was sliding rapidly, plunging feet foremost into cold water.

It seemed that I had gone down a hundred yards before I succeeded in cutting open the bag and two hundred more before I cut the rope that bound my ankles to the sinking shot. When free I commenced to rise, slowly at first, but soon quite rapidly. My breath was gone when I reached the surface, but I knew that if I sank again I would take in water, so I exerted myself and got a few breaths. I didn't sink again and pretty soon was able to look about me.

There was the ship not fifty yards from me and another body just shooting over the side. Fortunately I was astern, and those engaged at the burial work did not see me. I swam for the rudder and as there was but little breeze succeeded in reaching it and hanging on to the chains.

There wasn't much sea on or I would soon have been washed from my hold. I had had nothing to eat since the morning before and hadn't much strength, but during the morning the cook threw some refuse from the galley, and I was enabled to gather some pieces of bread and a few bits of meat. That helped me considerably.

About noon I saw land on the port quarter and knew we were approaching the Bermudas. Would I be able to leave the rudder and appear as some one else than a Yankee tar? All I could do was to wait for an opportunity. Once or twice we approached so near the land that I was tempted to let go and swim for it, but feared I would be seen from the ship.

Then we ran into the harbor, and a man fishing in a small boat was for a few minutes within a hundred feet of me. Before he saw me I dived and came up directly before him. He was too astonished to say anything for a few moments, then helped me into his boat.

I told him that I was one of the crew of the ship that had passed. My clothes didn't give me away, for there were very few clothes left on me, and they were of a most ordinary character. I won the man's sympathy by telling him I had been flogged nearly to death for some slight delinquency, and he took me ashore to his house, where he kept me for several weeks, at the end of which time I found a small vessel leaving for Charleston and soon after landed at that port.

BUSY BOWLERS BANG THE PINS

Quincy Woman's Team Won at the Chauncey Alleys

OTHER RESULTS SCORED

Bowling of all kinds was on the card Tuesday evening.

At the Chauncey Alleys, Boston, a girls team representing those alleys was defeated by the Quincy Girls, 3 to 1. Quincy won the first string by seven pins. It looked as though the kinks in their arm were not going to loosen for they lost the second string.

A difference of three pins in Quincy's favor in the third string and the total pinfall by two gave Quincy the winning points. High string went to Mrs. Paul Poehler who rolled 87. Her best total, the highest of the match, was 241.

Only one match took place at the City Square alleys. Two teams from the Fore River mold loft rolled. Brackett with 105 made high single. Hanford with 284 made best total.

In a special match at the Coliseum alleys the South Quincy Bowling Club lost to ""Sid" Patterson's Ponies 3 to 1. Binnie made high string, rolling 116 on the first. Walsh of the Ponies came through with 115 and took high total with 311.

Six Heptasoph teams rolled at the Coliseum alleys. The scores varied in all the matches.

Capt. Irving beat Capt. Brown, 3 to 1; Capt. Mullen beat Capt. Gigney 3 to 1 and Capt. Dackers beat Capt. MacKay 3 to 1.

Robertson on team D made high string of 111. Cahill of team E. missed a total of 300 by one pin. Several strings of a century or more were made.

THAT BOWLING MATCH.

The principle feature of the proposed Poehler-Christopher match for $500 seems to be postponements so far. The match was proposed shortly after Poehler defeated Hintze of Revere. The principals met in Boston and stated the terms. Christopher who is a travelling man, was obliged to leave town and it was agreed that final arrangements would be made Saturday night. As far as is known the meeting did not take place because Christopher was not present. The forfeit money has been placed but the total purse has not been put up. The date as suggested was Feb. 24 and 25. But a few days elapse and nothing definite has been done. If things are not cleared up within a few days it will give the sport the appearance of being hoodooed by two of its fastest men. The fans have practically demanded that the two men roll and money galore has been wagered on the outcome.

| 4—EMMA MARNOCK | 42,000 Votes |

A. R. MacKAY
Third Prize

MRS. EMMA MARNOCK
Fourth Prize

The publishers of the Daily Ledger offer hearty congratulations to Fred D. Williams, who won the Washington trip; to Sturgis H. Hunt, who won the diamond ring, and to A. R. MacKay and Mrs. Emma Marnock who are awarded Boston theatre tickets.

Nearly 400,000 votes were cast during the Daily Ledger contest just closed, more votes than have been cast in some of the recent State elections of Massachusetts, which speaks well for the popularity of the contest and the circulation of the Daily Ledger.

Mr. Williams' total of 112,895 is a magnificent one, only 60,603 less than was given to the Democratic electors for President who won in Massachusetts at the recent election. All through the contest he showed great generalship and popularity and maintained a good lead every day except three—the first, the fifth, and the eleventh. Since Dec. 10 no one was able to rout him out of first place, although at times he had a near rival.

Mr. Hunt who rolled up 85,955 votes was the youngest candidate among the leaders, and certainly waged a plucky contest. As far as known, neither he nor his friends purchased any votes. Largely through his personal canvass for coupons and certificates, he maintained his position, which at times was threatened by the systematic work of some of his rivals who had the help of different organizations.

Mr. MacKay would have finished a better third, but for his sickness during the last days of the contest, when his rivals did their best work. But the fact that he massed 67,780 votes shows great popularity.

Had Mrs. Marnock entered the contest as early as Mr. Williams and organized her friends before they were pledged to others, she might have won the capital prize. She certainly did great work during the last week of the contest, to reach a total of 42,000.

Some of the other candidates also made good showing. But for the fact that Mr. Bowditch once won the capital prize in a Ledger contest he might have been more successful. He moved steadily up in the list day by day and finished with 17,570.

Miss Nellie Morrissett surprised herself, for she had little idea it was possible for her to secure 12,570 votes. Mrs. Lamont had little hopes from the first of winning a prize but finished in seventh place with 6,040. Messrs. De Normandie, Kessler and Cole gave up early.

The gains from Feb. 10 to Feb. 18 were as follows:

|---|---|
| Williams | 37,115 |
| Hunt | 29,265 |
| MacKay | 20,905 |
| Marnock | 14,215 |
| Bowditch | 2,165 |
| Morrissett | 2,035 |
| Kessler | 700 |
| Lamont | 150 |
| Blackmur | 150 |
| Cairns | 40 |
| Larkin | 20 |

COUNTING THE VOTE.

All votes received between Feb. 10, when the standing was last published and Feb. 18, when the polls closed were kept in their original packages, bags, boxes, etc, and were counted Tuesday afternoon in the presence of William M. Marden, an old newspaper man, who now officiates with dignity and ability as court officer of the Quincy court. He has kindly made a sworn statement relative to the counting of the votes:

THE RELIEF NOT YET IN SIGHT

Mayor Claims Budget Figures Submitted Were Correct

COUNCIL MUST MAKE CUTS

Mayor Stone takes exception to the statement that a mistake was made and that the wrong schedule of estimates was sent to the Council Monday night. His honor says that the schedule sent was the one he intended to send and that it had been cut some from the amounts asked for by the several departments. He however says that he is fully aware that the amount is in excess of what can be raised but that in the main the amounts are practically the same as last year.

In the Board of Health appropriation for contagious diseases the amount is in excess of last year but the figures sent in are just what this department required for contagious diseases during that period, for it will be remembered that the Board of Health came to the Council later in the year and was given an additional sum.

Another case where the amount is in excess is that of the Assessors' department and here it is due to the fact that under the new ordinance passed last year the Assessors must this year publish what is practically a transcript from its books giving the amount each person is assessed for personal and real estate tax, the amount of land value, etc., and this additional work means about $1,000 more than in previous years.

Then again the budget of the School board is largely in excess of what was given them last year, in round figures the amount being $19,000 in excess of 1912.

Mayor Stone said that he realizes that the amount is more than can be appropriated for current expenses under the $12 limit and it is up to the Council to make the cuts.

FIREMAN INJURED

The fire Wednesday afternoon in the club room of the Young Men's Hebrew association in the Grossman block on Water street did damage of about $600 all told, $100 to the club and the balance to the building. It is thought that the fire caught from an overheated stove. The rooms had recently been fitted up and were dedicated last week. John Hackett, a fireman was quite badly burned while trying to extinguish the flames. The building in whicht he rooms are located is owned by Louis Grosman and aws damaged to between $400 and $500. The alarm sounded at 2 o'clock and it was nearly an hour before the recall came in.

MR. BOB A BIG ATTRACTION

Crowded House Greeted Clever Amateurs in Part

EVERYBODY SATISFIED

The large lecture room of the First Presbyterian church was crowded Wednesday evening to witness the production of "Mr. Bob" given by the Young Peoples Society. The more than 300 present occupied every available space. The much heralded comedy justified its reputation. It was exceedingly amusing and kept one eager with expectancy as to what would happen next. Each one took the part assigned admirably and deserves the highest praise for a flawless rendition of this high class comedy. Even the live cat acted as an aristocratic cat should. As the play advanced the confusion and mystery deepened with cats, names, plans and "eats." All however is cleared by "Mr. Bob" winning the boat race and each one learning who's who.

These young people and the committee in charge are to be highly complimented for the success of the play. Their hard work was rewarded when they looked on the large audience and knew of the fine financial returns assumed.

The whole plot of the play circled around the fact that "Bob" was a girl all the time. When the mystery is cleared up and every one takes his or her proper place every one is satisfied.

Mrs. Flockhart rendered several piano selections, with her usual efficiency, before the play and during the intermission.

A number of young ladies in white were kept busy as ushers and found difficulty providing seats for all. The ushers were Misses Susan Tytler, Jessie Shirley, Minnie Miller and Mary Barton.

The cast:

|---|---|
| Philip Royson, | Everett Clark |
| Robert Brown, | George MacDonald |
| Jenkins | Thomas McLay |
| Rebecca Luke | Margaret McIntosh |
| Katherine Rogers | Ruth Kemp |
| Marion Bryant, | Helen Kenn |
| Patty | Georgie Michael |

The play was given under the direction of Georgie Michael, assisted by John McLay as property man and Walter Morrison as prompter.

CHERRY TREES AND HATCHETS

The Favors Presented to the Dramatic Club Members

The members of the Order of Eastern Star Dramatic club were tendered a Washington Birthday party at the new Hancock hall Wednesday evening in recognition of their services in presenting "Bar Haven" at Music hall a few weeks ago.

A turkey supper, dancing and entertainment in which all took part were in order. The favors were cherry trees and hatchets.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kribbs were presented with photos of the cast and made short speeches of acceptance.

GRANT JUMPED. IT LOOKED AS IF THE CAR WOULD HIT HIS LADDER

Lineman Sought to Avoid Danger and Struck On His Head

Feared That Internal Injuries May Develope In the Case

Believing that an approaching electric car would throw him from the ladder on which he was standing while repairing a wire, about 25 feet above the street, Alex Grant, a lineman in the employee of the N. E. T & T. Co. jumped to the street at Braintree this morning. He received a gash in the head which reqiured five stitches, and minor bruises. It is feared that internal injuries may develop within a few days. He was spitting blood for several hours after the accident.

The accident happened on Washington street, near the Hollis school. A curve in the street makes the locality dangerous. Grant, from his high position could see the approaching car and jumped. The upright ladder was spotted almost as soon by the mortorman who reversed his power and came to a stop as he struck the ladder a glancing blow.

Grant was unconscious for several minutes. It was thought he would have to be removed to a hospital but he recovered and asked to be taken to his home on Hancock street, near car barn. He was treated by Dr. Deering of Braintree.

COMMUNITY HOUSE CAMPAIGN

At a meeting of the campaign teams and Community House committees Wednesday evening it was voted to refer plans for future action to a joint committee from the Community House committee and the committee of the new social club.

Chester I. Campbell was appointed chairman of the joint committee with the following members: From the Community House committee: Frank A. Page, Albert N. Murray, William M. Chase, Walter S. Pinkham, Charles E. Monroe and John L. Hamilton.

From the social club: Charles Alden Louis E. Crosscup, Harry A. Stevens, N. G. Nickerson, Jr., Charles E. Barker, Charles W. Jones and Russell T. Anthony.

In opening the meeting, chairman Campbell went over the ground covered thus far and then called for a discussion from the floor. Members of the social club committee were present and Charles Alden its chairman defined the club's position toward the Community House. The club members stood willing to work hand and glove with the Community House committee if suitable quarters would be provided for the club in the proposed building.

Charles W. Jones spoke strongly in favor of a building of different style of architecture with more spacious grounds.

The many points of the community house project were taken up and thoroughly discussed. Chairman Campbell announced an additional contribution of $100, bringing the amount raised to date $8,100.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Perhaps poor unhappy Mexico may be able to secure a little peace now, but that state will never arrive while she is the victim of personal ambition.

Lawrence street cars bear a sign, "Swearing is not a sign of intelligence," which is very true.

Vice commissions may be all right, but there are laws and officers enough to enforce the present laws without creating any more offices for hungry seekers.

The dissatisfaction over the Boston Custom house is coming rather late, but how any reasonable person could imagine that tower to be practical is beyond guessing.

Sunday baseball advocates showed that there was more commercialism than a desire to improve the conditions of the laboring people in their efforts.

Usually those self-appointed worriers over the recreations of the people have something up their sleeves from which they can derive a benefit.

Those Mexicans near the United States border are having a lively time flip-flopping back and forth.

Because Mr. Wilson has not shown himself a chaterbox, some writers are rapping him and all because he did not post them on his policies and the like.

Saturday every one will unite in doing honor to the "Father of the Country."

The amateurs are now being questioned about their expenses. Some of them will find it difficult to tell the truth and keep within the pale.

The French president manages to worry along on a salary of $240,000 and some perquisites. He probably will not starve on that amount.

A retiring president is given $5000 as a Yale professor and the football coach for a few weeks' work gets $6000 all of which raises the question is the higher education worth the price or the football?

There is a movement to make an eight hour day the maximum for women a country wide movement. It is not creditable to men who have been working hard for eleght hours for themselves that they have given the women second place in this movement.

Brother "Joe" would hardly like it to sit in an executive session of the Senate and hear "Woodie" ripped fore and aft. But maybe that is why he seeks the job as secretary to know all that is going on, inside as well as out.

SITUATION NOT YET CLEAR.

While Madero and his brief reign over Mexico is a thing of the past, the situation in that country is not as clear as it might be and trouble is still in evidence above the skyline. The position in which Diaz finds himself is indeed a peculiar one. A relative of the former president who dictated the policies of the country for more than a quarter of a century, it is contended that he may have only the continuance of the family program in mind now that he is at the head of affairs. Madero had his chance to remove this stumbling block to his power. He wavered, and wavering lost. Madero was never looked upon as a very strong character or even a peerless leader. He was looked upon as more of the man of the hour upon whom the mantle happened to fall, at the precise moment without the sturdinessof shoulder to bear the burden with dignity. His day is ended. That which concerns people in this country is the attitude which the Mexicans will maintain towards people of the United States. While on many occasions the unfriendly spirit has been at the snarling point, it has seldom reached the magnitude of a bite.

If Diaz is as strong a man as his uncle he is in a position to perform prodigious service for his country. If his is the family policy, cloaked under the clamor of patriotism, it is difficult to perceive where the poorer class of the Mexican people have been improved. It will not be long before his plan of campaign will be so well in the open that it cannot be mistaken.

Even at this juncture it is not quite clear that the United States may not have to intervene before order is finally restored to the unhappy republic If such a step is taken, the Mexicans should feel assured that it will be only in the interests of the people and the integrity of the country and that not a single foot of Mexican soil shall be annexed as part or outcome of such a course.

NOT INSPIRING CONFIDENCE.

The attempt of the Grand Trunk Railroad this week to nullify the action of the former president, Mr. Hayes, who went down in the Titanic, with regard to the Southern New England, is not such as would inspire the public with marked degree of confidence in that railroad of pledges as to what it was going to do for New England. First came teh suspension of railroad building, then announced as caused owing to a lack of money, then the retirement of the president of the Southern New England, and all this time there were protestations that the road would be built by the Canadian men. All this while, during the loud protestations of the friends from over the border, Mr. Mellen remained silent He promised a statement at a certain time and it was forthcoming and it was a statement of fact, not dodging or backing or filling or equivocating or to be plain, in the slightest degree lying.

Were the Grand Trunk officials as straightforward in their treatment of the public? The recent events speak for themselves. It looks very much from the way things have turned out that some people, business men and legislators, in Massachusetts, were fooled to the limit or permitted themselves to be mentally sandbagged by the course of events. They were, or permitted themselves to be blinded to the actual conditions.

It may serve to educate those people to a sense of their responsibilities and the duty they owe the state and people in the future, before they swallow the hook, bait and line of every lobbyist or paid agent of this or that enterprise, seeking to gain something for an entering wedge. It would seem that charters are too easily secured and lightly valued except when it comes selling time. A few changes of the law to prevent franchises to be used in subterranceous operations would not be a bad thing to keep some people within the limit of their obligations.

GOOD SENSE PREVAILED.

While the public is due to be considered in all great labor movements, and should be to the fullest extent, it is gratifying that good sense prevailed at the last moment and the railroads conceded the points on which a great strike of the firemen of the country hinged. With regard to the Erdman act, the contention of the railroad managers that this provision was not adequate, that too much responsibility was vested in one person, seems well founded. The framers of the Erdman act probably never anticipated a situation, in which 54 railroads and 40,000 employees would be engaged which would tie up a tremendous traffic of those roads when that act was considered and adopted. The suggestion that it be amended to provide for a larger body and thus relieve the responsibility of one party will no doubt now be accepted in view of the tremendous possibilities which it opens up.

STILL IN THE RUNNING.

The report that Brother "Joe" Wilson had decided to retire from the quest for the job of secretary to the senate seems to be both premature and unfounded. He is hastening to Washington according to latest returns to get all his forces at work and fixing up any of the fences which might have been damaged by adverse criticism. The chances are that Brother "Joe" will fail to land the job. It is rather embarrassing for a president to have a family connection seeking office. Charles P. Taft who contributed so generously for years to Republican campaign funds would during the last administration, if it were not for his relationship to the president, have been a diplomatic possibility. Mr. Taft's name was not even remotely connected with aspiring to the job of "grand holder" of the rod. It looks as though Brother "Joe" was butting in just a little. He should have patience and perhaps something will come to him under another administration.

FEBRUARY MEETING.

The February meeting of the Men's club of the Congregational church, South Braintree, was held in the chapel Wednesday evening and was well attended. Supper was served in the dining hall shortly before 7 o'clock and all did full justice to the menu which consisted of escalloped oysters, baked potatoes, cold ham, rolls and coffee, ice cream and cake.

Smokes were enjoyed for a time and then the gentlemen adjourned to the chapel where a lecture entitled "With Grenfell in Labrador" was delivered by Albert Gould of Cambridge.

The lecture was interesting and instructive and illustrated by beautiful stereopticon views. The lantern was kindly loaned by Dr. William Gallagher of Thayer academy who also manipulated it to the entire satisfaction of both lecturer and audience.

The story was a fascinating one and dealt with Labrador and the great mission that Dr. Grenfell is so ably carrying on in that land. There were views of icebergs, reindeer, dogs, fishing craft, the various episodes of sealing and whaling all interwoven with a narrative of surpassing interest.

The audience listened with close attention and at the close of the lecture tendered a rising vote of thanks to lecturer, operator and last but not least the supper committee. The next meeting will be held the fourth instead of the third Wednesday in March on account of Holy Week.

The committee in charge consisted of Frank A. Reed, H. Parker Hobart, Harold L. Jones, Edwin W. Borden, Rev. Tyler E. Gale. This committee was ably assisted by Mrs. Harold Jones, Mrs. F. A. Reed, Mrs T. E. Gale. The meeting was adjourned at 9.45 o'clock.

POWER BEHIND THE THRONE

Gustavo Madero Was Stronger Than President Himself

SUBJECTED TO "FUGITIVE LAW"

Brother of Deposed President Shot Dead by His Guards—Educated In Boston and Popular In New York, Where He Spent Much Money—Francisco Madero and His Family to Be Exiled—Army and Navy Plans Unchanged at Washington

Mexico City, Feb. 20.—Francisco I. Madero, deposed from the presidency, will be exiled. Arrangements have been made for his departure from the capital for Vera Cruz. From there he will sail for some European port.

Madero will be accompanied by his wife and perhaps by his father and other members of his family.

His loyal aide, Captain Montes, will also go, but in the capacity of a guard. The party will proceed to Vera Cruz under escort.

The execution of Gustavo Madero, brother of the deposed president, was the most tragic occurrence of yesterday. He was subjected to the "fugitive law" and was shot to death by his guards.

The members of the cabinet and most of the other prisoners were released yesterday. Francisco Madero, Jose P. Suarez, the vice president, and Frederick G. Garza, governor of the federal district, were the only important prisoners held.

General Huerta, who has assumed the part of governor general and General Diaz had an extended conference, after which it was anonunced that they were in complete accord. Later Huerta was in conference with American Ambassador Wilson.

A group of senators discussed the question of the presidency with Huerta, who, it is understood, will receive the appointment of provisional president at the hands of congress, a meeting of which body has been called.

The execution of Gustavo Madero formed a tragic sequel to the upheaval in Mexico City Tuesday, when Francisco Madero's administration was turned out by federal generals and all the cabinet ministers were placed under arrest.

The ex-president and his brother, Gustavo, were sent yesterday as prisoners to the arsenal from which Felix Diaz had bombarded the city for ten days. Soon after their arrival there Gustavo Madero was subjected to the "fugitive law," by which he was free to run under the rifle fire of his guards. He fell dead under their bullets.

Gustavo Madero was generally regarded as a much more powerful man than the president himself. After Francisco Madero had quarrelled with Vasquez Gomez, he and his brother, Gustavo, forced Jose P. Suarez to the front to take the position of vice president, although he was then little known.

This was a thing the enemies of Madero never forgave, and was really the reason of the starting of the anti-government party, which showed systematic opposition against the schemes of the politician Gustavo Madero.

After Gustavo's arrest, and during his removal through the streets, the crowds for a time were wildly excited and even made efforts to lay their hands on him. A heavy guard was necessary to assure the safety of the prisoner.

EDUCATED IN BOSTON

Gustavo Madero Was Popular on Gotham's Great White Way

New York, Feb. 20.—Gustavo Madero made his headquarters in this city during the early critical period in the revolution headed by his brother Francisco, and was a prominent figure for weeks on upper Broadway and in the financial district. This was two years ago.

With his father, Francisco Madero, Sr., and his brothers, Ernesto, Evaristo and Gabriel, he was busy here financing the revolution.

Between conferences he was not idle, his recreative activities leading him the rounds of the "white light" district, where he was joyously welcomed as a "spender."

Early in March, 1911, Gustavo and his family went to San Antonio to take charge of the revolutionary junta there, and later they joined Francisco in the field, moving to the capital when the revolutionary cause finally prevailed.

Gustavo Madero was educated at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston.

Ithaca, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Evaristo Madero, brother of the former president of Mexico and of Gustavo Madero, collapsed when he was shown a dispatch telling of his brother's execution.

He retired to his room at Cornell university and for some time would not admit his friends.

OFFICIALS MARKING TIME

Meanwhile Our Army and Navy Are Ready For Business

Washington, Feb. 20.—Reaction from the severe strain under which the diplomatic, military and naval branches of the government have been laboring because of the Mexican revolt, is marked by the comparative lethargy prevailing in those departments.

A hasty consultation between the heads of the various departments, conducted to some extent by subordinates, resulted in a general decision to maintain the existing attitude towards Mexico, not only in a diplomatic sense, but so far as that involves the preparation of the army and navy to meet any emergency that might arise.

Though naturally gratified at the termination of the almost continuous battle that has raged within the heart of Mexico City for so long a time, it was deemed to be unwise to permit that sentiment to affect the progress of arrangements that are being made adequately to protect the lives of foreigners in Mexico, in case the situation should get beyond control of the new temporary government.

Original orders to the army officers to have the soldiers ready to move at short notice and to the transports to proceed to their destinations, where they were to embark troops and marines, were allowed to remain in force, officials reasoning that some benefit is to be derived from the experience that is gained through this attempt at mobilization even if there should be no occasion to give it a practical turn.

PROGRESSIVES BENEFACTORS

The following free will offering is presented for consideration:

"One does not become in the large and historic sense the world's benefactor by multiplying and enriching time-honored popular institutions. For conditions and customs are always changing, and institutions are not perpetuated, unchanged through long centuries. The old gives way to the new. This is the order of nature and the law of the world's progress. Many zealous workers for humanity, including philanthropists, overlook this law and bestow their labors and benefactions upon causes that are destined to become outgrown and obsolete by the world's advancement. Thus the gifts of many public-spirited persons do not prove the lasting blessing to the world as was anticipated.

Little known, if not entirely forgotten, are the names of those who multiplied and enriched the pagan temples and schools of philosophy of antiquity, who built the fortresses and castles in the age of feudalism, and who even a few generations ago founded village academies. So it will be with those who are multiplying and enriching present-day popular institutions.

History is made and the world is advanced by the new events and achievements that in a greater or less degree, revolutionize conditions; therefore in order to become the real benefactor to the world, one must give his support to some epoch-making new (usually what is deemed impractical) cause. Moses, the Apostles, Luther, Columbus, Samuel Morse Robert Fulton, Cyrus Field and William Booth, the Founder of the Salvation Army, are among the world's benefactors. They have been a blessing to mankind and have advanced civilization.

The world's benefactor must be progressive-minded and must see great possibilities where others see nothing but failure; he must be in the front rank of thinkers and be engaged in some new effort for the good of mankind.

The writer knows of several golden opportunities whereby a few progressive-minded persons can become a blessing to the world by helping forward epoch-making movements for the good of humanity. In fact there were never greater opportunities.

E. F. Blanchard.
Centerville, Mass.

STRIKEBREAKERS FLEE

Eggs and Other Missiles Rained Upon Them In a Maine Town

Millinocket, Me., Feb. 20.—The most violent disorders since the beginning of the strike of firemen and enginemen on the Bangor and Aroostook railroad occurred here when the men who have displaced the strikers were driven from the town by strike sympathizers.

When the strikebreakers came into town last night they were surrounded by a crowd of men who jeered them for taking the places of the old employes. The taunts were answered, a melee followed, and then the strikebreakers, outnumbered, fled. Crowds chased them for a mile, under a rain of eggs, stones and sticks, until the men sought shelter in the railroad station.

He Admits Writing to Archbold About Political Matters

Washington, Feb. 20.—A report was made to the senate campaign expenditures committee by R. J. McNeil, upon the special inquiry at Franklin, Pa., with former Congressman Joseph C. Sibley of Pennsylvania as the witness. Mr. Sibley was interrogated as to the letters he wrote to John D. Archbold of the Standard Oil company about political affairs.

The former congressman admitted the authenticity of the letters produced before the senate committee. He denied any improper actions at any time and said his concern over oil matters was due to the fact that the greater interests of his district were involved in oil production.

SCHOOL CASES.

In a report published recently by a special committee of the town of Milton all towns and cities of Metropolitan district were grouped for the purpase of comparing the per capita expenditures. It will be of interest to record that Quincy occupied almost the lowest position in the table, only one or two towns in the whole district presenting so low cost figures. The per capita expenditure in Quincy for the year just closed was $29.84 which compares with a per capita tax through the state of $36.19. Both figures represent increases over the averages of the preceding year, but the cost in Quincy increased only $1.11 while the general state cost gained $1.83 which is an item worthy at least of passing notice.

The per centage of the tax levy of 1912 expended on the public schools of Quincy last year was 21.4 per cent while the portion in the preceding year was 23.4 and 10 years ago was 28.8 per cent.

These figures are taken from the reports of the school department which will be issued in a few days.

VACATION.

Tomorrow will close the present winter term of eight weeks and the teachers and pupils will have a vacation of one week before beginning the spring term. This is the first time that this division of the school year has been tried, but the comments on the plan as they have come to the school department thus far have been quite uniformly favorable. The industrial evening classes will continue their sessions through the week.

The superintendent of schools will spend the week at the mid-winter convention of the department of superintendents of the National Educational Association to be held in Philadelphia.

ITALIAN DRAWING SCHOOL.

Few people realize the amount of work that is being done by the Italian Drawing School located in Malnati's block in South Quincy and holding its sessions four evenings per week. A visit made to this school last evening by the superintendent of schools found the small room filled to its utmost capacity by young people from 12 to 25 years of age all busily engaged with pencil, charcoal or clay and turning out excellent work. The school has recently asked the school committee for the use of the basement of the Lincoln school and its request will be called upon by the committee at its next meeting.

The figures given below for the month of January, 1913 offer the following comparisons with 1912. The whole number at date is 151 greater than a year ago. The average attendance was 187 greater than last year and the attendance for the month was one per cent better than for the corresponding time last year.

CRANCH SCHOOL.

The Cranch Parents' and Teachers' Association met Tuesday evening in the school hall. Mr. Burgin, the president, in introducing Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead of Boston, the speaker of the evening, said that the subject "Common Fallacies about War and Peace" was especially apropos in these times of war in Southern Europe and in Mexico.

Mrs. Mead gave a most convincing and instructive talk. She said that there was no reason why war could not be done away with in a century. Hence it was a present day problem. New conditions have come through the rapid transmission of news, through the growing intelligence of the masses of people and through the spread of representative government. These conditions will make possible the organization of the world.

A most common fallacy that many give in their argument for a large navy is that as long as you have police to protect your cities you will need a national police to keep the peace of the nations. The mistake in the argument is seen clearly if we compare the duty of a policeman and of a soldier. The police is doing kindly, helpful things. He is really protecting us; a service which we shall always need. The business of soldiers is to fight, to take life, and to destroy generally. They are just units, obeying others, carrying out their orders, using the most diabolical weapons, and killing in the most treacherous manner. We must work for an international police.

If George Washington were living now, instead of saying, "When in peace prepare for war," he would say, "When in peace, prepare for peace."

Some say we need a navy to establish a prestige for ourselves among nations. Since the ratification of the Constitution, the United States has been a world power and our government a pattern for the building of new nations. Our navy does not give us any more respect or power at the Hague Conference of arbitration among nations. The only criterion in determining the size of our navy is not our coastline or our population, but it is our danger. In all our history we have had no danger or war peril from other countries. We started the three wars, in which we have engaged. We have no cause to fear any other nation in the world, whether we have a navy or not.

Our war should be against the daily peril, such as needless deaths. Other nations are spending vast sums on battles against the white plague, the great infant mortality and other needless fatalities.

It's the wildest lunacy to prepare for dangers, which experience tells us will not come. We are paying seventy cents of every dollar of Uncle Sams money for battleships, more than any nation except Germany. We are paying less than the cost of repairing two battleships, for the children's Bureau in Washington, even when we admit that the children are the most precious part of our nation.

An enthusiastic applause was given Mrs. Mead at the close of her address.

Mrs. Burgin had charge of the music for the evening. Miss Edna Wright and Miss Wilson played delightful piano solos.

The social hour was in charge of Miss Burke of Grade Five, and her efficient committee Mrs. Redfield Allen, Mrs. Selma Johnson, Mrs. Richard Clark, and Mrs. John Wentworth.

The beautiful daffodils and jonquils which helped to make the hall so cheerful, were given by Mrs. Henry Holden.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING.

The noticeable achievement of the year in the Beverly Industrial School was the graduation of the first class of fourteen boys. This school has been accepted and endorsed by the community as an institution worthy of support. The wage earning capacity of these boys when they entered the school is conservatively estimated at $6.00 per week. A capitalization of the boys' economic value to the community based on his wage earning power at the time of entering the school may be placed approximately at $6,000. $6.00 per week for 50 weeks—$300 or 5 per cent on $6,000.

The wage earning capacity of these boys at the time of graduation ranged from $15.00 to $18.00 per week. A similar capitalization of the boys economic value based on the wage earning experience of the fourteen boys graduated gives a figure between $15,000 and $18,000; it varies with the individual. $15.00 per week for 50 weeks—$750. or 5 per cent on $15,000. $18.00 per week for 50 weeks—$900. or 5 per cent on $18,000. When these boys went into the factory on full time it had cost the municipality and the state a little over $11,200. to maintain the school. The net cost to the City of Beverly was $5,600. The wages paid back to all the boys and returned to the community during the same period had amounted to a little over $10,000.

Giving no consideration to the remaining boys, 56 in various stages of preparedness and estimating the total cost as the prise paid to place fourteen boys in the shop as skilled workmen, the cost is shown to be $800. per boy. The expenditure of $800 per boy had raised the capitalization of his economic value from $6,000 to $15,000 or $18,000; a 13 per cent investment in 2 1-2 years had increased the capital 150 to 200 per cent, leaving an active "stock in process," 56 boys in various stages of preparedness for the trade and the prospects of a very much larger capitalization as years go by and the graduates become more skilled. During the 2 1-2 years the community had been profiting by over $10,000 in the wages earned by members of the school.

Wife Who Carves and Scalds Him Is Not Placed Under Arrest

Shamokin, Pa., Feb. 20.—John Kolan of Mt. Carmel was admitted to the Shamokin hospital in a critical condition from three deep stab wounds and a serious scalding.

His wife is alleged to have driven a carving knife into him, following his alleged attempt to assault her, after which she threw scalding water on him. She gave herself up to the police, but justices of the peace, it is said, refused to proceed against her, as it is alleged her husband treated her with extreme brutality the past year.

ANNUAL SUPPER AT QUINCY POINT

Ladies of Washington Street Church Entertain

IN USUAL HAPPY STYLE

A supper and entertainment was held by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Washington Street Congregational church, Wednesday evening. Quite a large number sat down to supper, consisting of hot beef loaf, escalloped potatoes, baked beans, pickles, rolls, fancy pies and coffee.

The entertainment which was given by a number of young ladies from the Quincy Young Woman's club, was a one act comedy, "An afternoon rehearsal," the girls acting their parts to perfection. Miss Blanche Hayden taking the part of Phyllis Herndon, who refused to marry her aunt's choice, and Miss Ella Packard portrayed Aunt Nancy Butternut, an old maid, who coming to call on Mrs. Bryan was somewhat shocked at the scene. It was explained that they were rehearsing a play, and she became calmed. Afternoon tea was served by the little French maid, Anglique, Mrs. Bryan, Laura Drexel and Kitty Vandessen, acted their parts well, more like professionals than amateurs.

The parts were taken as follows:

Mrs. Bryan, an elderly Lady devoted to young people, Miss Harriet Waterhouse
Anglique, her maid, whose English is a little Frenchy, Miss Frances Wainwright
Phyllis Herndon, always in a scrape, Miss Blanche B. Hayden
Laura Drexell, society girl, with a taste, Miss Winnifred Pratt
Kitty Vandessen, for private theatricals, Miss Mildred Bean
Aunt Nancy Butternut, from Scatterbrook, Miss Ella Packard

Supper being in charge of Mrs. M. S. Wright, chairman; Mrs. E. R. Stone, Mrs. Wade Shorter, Mrs. James Gibb, Mrs. John T. Roache, Mrs. Gustavus Carter, Mrs. J. Lackie, Mrs. C. H. Sherburne, and Mrs. T. B. Thomas.

HOUSE SUSTAINS PRESIDENT'S VETO

Death Blow Dealt Dillingham-Burnett Immigration Bill

Washington, Feb. 20.—Voting 213 to 114, the house refused to override President Taft's veto of the Dillingham-Burnett immigration bill. The measure had previously been passed over the executive's veto by the senate.

Dissatisfied with the vote, advocates of the bill appealed for a reconsideration, but were overruled by Speaker Clark. They then appealed from the decision of the chair, but were defeated on a viva voce vote.

The fight centred on the literacy test feature of the bill, and the result was a distinct surprise, even to those most earnestly opposed to the measure.

RIGHT ON THE JOB

Jewelry Clerk Catches Holdup Man With Tray of Gems

New York, Feb. 20.—Rush hour throngs on Broadway witnessed an attempted holdup, gave first aid to the victim and captured one of the assailants.

The holdup was attempted by two men who entered the jewelry establishment of Henry K. Bicker & Co., in the financial section. They wanted to buy diamond earrings, they said.

A clerk brought out a tray containing $5000 worth for their inspection. They knocked him down, grabbed the gems and bolted for the door, but he regained his feet in time to catch the man with the tray. The clerk recovered the jewelry and held the man until the crowd came to his relief.

GIBBONS' VIEWS ON PHILIPPINES

We Should Not Surrender Islands to Foreign Power

OPPOSED TO "SCUTTLE" POLICY

Responsibility For Welfare and Development of Filipinos Rests Upon America—Does Not Believe Islands Are Source of Annual Deficit to This Country—Hopeful of Future

Boston, Feb. 20.—Cardinal Gibbons, in a remarkable public statement, declares that it "would be a national dishonor for the United States to surrender the Philippines to the tender mercies of some neighboring power or to turn them adrift, wholly unprepared, to face the future as an independent people." The cardinal, whose article appears in the Boston Transcript, says:

Those islands were taken as a war measure. Some may think it would have been better for us never to have exercised our jurisdiction over them, but once American sovereignty was established in that archipelago, the responsibility for the welfare and development of the Filipinos devolved upon the American people and upon our shoulders it rests today.

I am irrevocably opposed to any proposal that would commit this nation to a scuttle policy in the Philippine islands—today, tomorrow or at any fixed time in the future, and I say this wholly in the interest of the social, material and moral advancement of the people of the United States, of whom I am proud to be a fellow-citizen, no less than of the Filipinos themselves.

In my opinion the wisest step would be for the president, in his wisdom and discretion, to select a committee of discreet and observant patriotic citizens to visit various portions of the islands. Thus would they be enabled to form their judgment upon observations made at first hand as to the time when the Filipinos may have the ability and education to assume a larger measure of self-government than this nation is warranted by conditions today in promising them. To hold out a promise to them that we could not keep would be no less dishonorable than to shirk our obligation toward them.

I have no patience with the argument that the Philippine islands are the source of an annual deficit to this country. Even were that true, the fact would not warrant a cowardly abandonment of the clear and accepted duty of the American people toward the Filipinos. Surely as a nation we owe that much to the world and to ourselves; we owe it to the cause of peace and good order the world over.

But I believe those islands are self-supporting and that the only item in which the expenditures exceed the receipts is in the difference of cost between maintaining an army there and at home. Certainly that difference is not worthy of consideration by a nation of our resources and of our large responsibilities to the world.

Now that the United States, through a considerable period of years, has with patience and a firm and steady purpose assumed the responsibility before the world of administering the affairs of the Philippine islands, I am very firmly of the belief that it would be a national dishonor, harmful to all concerned, for this government to surrender the Filipinos to the tender mercies of some neighboring power or to turn them adrift, wholly unprepared, to face the future as an independent people.

To give them up in such a way would be like a mother abandoning a helpless child, or like a father withdrawing counsel and control from a son who has not yet come to years of discretion. I am hopeful of the future of the Philippine people because I have confidence that the American people will never tolerate a "scuttle" policy in those islands.

DROPS COAL TRUST SUIT

Government Abandons Case Against the Philadelphia and Reading

Philadelphia, Feb. 20.—Unless new proceedings are instituted, the effort of the government to break up the so-called "coal trust" came to an end when, upon application of counsel for the government, the United States court here dismissed the suit of the United States against the Philadelphia and Reading company.

It was charged the company was violating the "commodities clause" of the railway rate law.

AUDIENCE DELIGHTED

At the Musical Treat Presented at Hall Place Church

The fifth in the course of lectures given at the Hall Place M. E. church this winter was given Wednesday evening by the Davis Ensemble orchestra of the Copley Square School of Music, Prof. Frank W. Davis, director, assisted by Miss Helen E. Martin, soloist A splendid program was given, every selection being finely rendered.

The violin duet by Misses Esther Charak and Cecile Bornstein was skillfully played and extremely pleasing.

Miss Helen E. Martin was at her best and her solos, Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin" by Wagner and Das Erste Lied by Hilton-Turney were well brought out by her rich voice. by request she sang "The Rosary" in a most touching manner. One advantage in Miss Martin's music is that it is possible at all times to understand the words, giving better interpretation to the music.

By request, "The Lost Chord" was played by John W. Bridge, Jr., on the cornet. Prof. Davis explained the meaning of the lost chord as being the loss of the finer spiritual nature, the God in us. The musician realizes that there is a lost chord and as he sits and plays his organ this lost chord enters into his soul and he realizes that the missing chord has been found. Sullivan very beautifully puts this finding of the lost chord to music and it is as easy to recognize when the lost chord has been found in the music as it is when the human life finds the missing chord, the God in themselves.

The violin solos by Miss Edith M. Herter were most skilfully rendered, giving evidence of an extremely keen knowledge of music.

The work of the orchestra throughout the program was grand and this splendid concert was in no way a disappointment over that of last year. The concert was given in the auditorium to one of the largest audiences of the course. The program was as follows:

Italians in Algeria Rossini
Overture, William Tell Rossini
Clarinet and Flute Obligatos, Mr. Durgan, Mr. Murray, Davis Ensemble Orchestra.
Duet, Two Violins, Symphony op 98 Dancla.
Misses Esther Charak ,Cecile Bornstein
Soprano Solo, Elsa's Dream, from "Lohengrin," Wagner
Miss Martin
Concert Piece, for piano op 79 Weber

The Beautiful Blue Danube Strauss
The Davis Ensemble Orchestra
Soprano Solo, Das Erste Lied Hilton-Turney
Miss Martin
Violin Solo, Seene de Ballet DeBeriot
Miss Edith M. Herter
Overture, Poet and Peasant Suppe

At the close Mr. Goucher, chorister of the church led the audience in singing "All, hail the power of Jesus' name; accompanied by the orchestra, after which coffee and cake were served in the vestry. Pop corn and candy were sold before and after the concert.

The last in the course will be on March 19, by Rev. L. H. Bugbee of the Malden Center M. E. church on "Life as a cowboy."

OPEN HOUSE AT CITY CLUB

Granite Members Plan Good Time for Self and Friends

In accordance with its usual custom the Granite City club will keep open house Friday evening the night before the holiday. The program for the evening will be as usual. The rooms will be open to the guests of members and the entertainment committee will try and see to it that everybody has a good time. An orchestra will be present all of the evening and as usual a continuous lunch will be served in the dining room.

There were 9 tables in play at the weekly whist tournament Wednesday evening and after twenty-five hands the entertainment committee served chicken pies. The two best scores of the eveningf were made by Herbert F. Child and B. Meurk.

PATRIOTIC MEETING.

A patriotic evening was the form the monthly sociable at the Wollaston Congregational church took Wednesday evening. The tables were charmingly decorated with tiny figs and the national colors. The walls were hung with flags and bunting while in a place of prominence stood a large picture of the immortal George Washington.

The supper was served by a committee of the ladies, consisting of Mrs. S. B. Wiley, Mrs. A. L. Baker, Mrs. Sidney Baker, Mrs. Carroll E. Bates, Mrs. Edwin Smith, Mrs. David H. Goodspeed, Mrs. Arthur Dodge, Mrs. Albert Birce, Miss Amy Rhodes, Miss Sarah Wiley, Mrs. Harry Van Buskirk and Mrs. James Brown.

The entertainment was furnished by the Walpole mandolin club through the kindness of Mrs. David H. Goodspeed. The program was one of excellence and variety.

The club was assisted by Miss Clara Bennett, reader, Mrs. B. Eva Rice, soloist, and Miss Emma Perkins, accompanist, all of which were greatly appreciated.

The final feature was a reflectorscope lecturette by David H. Goodspeed, showing pictures of the life of Washington. The singing of "America" brought the evening to a close.

GREAT WORK OF CRANE LIBRARY AS SHOWN BY ANNUAL REPORT

Librarian Presents Interesting Document for Consideration of Public and Trustees

All Departments Treated in a Business-Like Up-to-date Manner

QUINCY, MASS., January 1, 1913.

To the Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library:—

Among the many pleasant things I have to record in a year of progress, the opening of our second Branch reading room at Atlantic after hope long deferred stands easily first. It was a matter of regret that this could not have been accomplished earlier in the year and in more permanent quarters than in the two small rooms of a dwelling house. But that was purely a question of finance. However, from the time when active preparations began, the hearty co-operation and interest of many people made the opening day, Oct. 23, one long to be remembered, with its attendance of 317 in spite of a stormy evening.

The reading room was especially fortunate in the gift of its tables and chairs from the Atlantic Shakespeare Society; also a set of Rolfe's edition of Shakespeare in 40 volumes from the same source, space here forbidding the mention of many other gifts. The room opened with a total of 680 volumes, of which 135 were gifts and 500 were on deposit from the Central library. At the close of the first month, very few volumes remaining upon the shelves, the deposit was immediately increased to 600 volumes. The magazine list numbered 15 and the publishers of the Daily Ledger and Telegram kindly added their copies for the reading room tables. These with the Boston Herald and Christian Science Monitor, the latter a gift, complete the periodicals. A circulation of 4,951 for the two months and one week open, or, a daily average of 85 volumes shows not only the appreciation of the reading room but how great had been the need of it. During this time there were 409 new registrations, and 137, already borrowers at the Central library, took advantage of the nearer accommodation. Miss Catherine Saville, who had been in training at the Central library for more than a year and a half, was put in charge. Figures of expense may be of interest:—

| Total | | $559.66 |

*Gift of $100 for tables and chairs not included.

Besides the few books purchased, 30 reference books were supplied from the Central library and the Century dictionary in 7 volumes was sent later.

WEST QUINCY READING ROOM

The cost of maintaining this for the past year has been $1,248.61 as against $1,055.38 in 1911. This increase is due to the raising of the rent, the wiring for electric lights—the latter together with the electric fan being greatly appreciated improvements—and the cost for extra assistance. Each month of the year records an increase in circulation over the corresponding month of 1911, making a total increase of 4,416. In view of this with the attendance figures less by 56 than the year before, it would seem that more came who really value the opportunities of the reading room. It is a curious fact that 20 borrowers have come to the Central library from the reading room and 20 borrowers have been transferred from Central to West Quincy, and a gratifying one that 262 new borrowers have registered there. The Italian illustrated weekly is very popular, and still the call comes for the history and geography of this country written in Italian, and these denizens of our country it would be our pleasure to help to make citizens. Such an interesting work is here, for they are so anxious to learn, so appreciative of our small efforts in their behalf. May we not spend somewhat of our book appropriation for them?

Miss Wainwright in her interesting report of her work in West Quincy says: "Aside from fiction, history and science appeal most to the juvenile element, and there is evidence of much interest in the useful arts, cooking, dolls' dressmaking, and hand work of various kinds. Adults confine themselves almost entirely to fiction and periodical reading. The picture bulletins have proved not only popular, but useful for school work in composition and drawing, also for gift making. Our holiday contribution has pictured Christmas in England and in the American colonies, with two Dickens posters of character and holiday sketches. There has been an occasional story half hour for some small book lovers too young to register as borrowers. The teachers are beginning to seek material and assistance, and frequently draw upon the supply of non-fiction which is selected to be available for such purposes. Children often bring requests from their teachers for a 'history book' or some story book for a particular grade.

"The discipline of the room is no longer a most prominent feature in administration, and both adults and juveniles enjoy the room in the evening, where those who are older can prepare their school work without distraction. Adults have frequently commented favorably upon the quiet behavior and the interest shown by the juvenile element."

And all this with a deposit of 700, then 800 volumes—now, at the beginning of the year, increased to 900—and the end is not yet. What we want to do at the Central library is to keep pace with, to keep ahead of, this lively demand, to have the wherewithal to supply without depleting our store for every other call. It may easily be seen, therefore, that the satisfying of the demands from these very live, growing Branches makes more work at the Central library, and means that more and more money should be spent for new books and duplicate copies, making it a constant problem for a fair adjustment in trying to keep pace with growth along all lines and practice a rigid economy, when the question is not what we can have but what we must do without.

CIRCULATION, PUBLICITY

The circulation returns for the year are as follows:—

|---|---|
| Main hall | 65,906 |
| Children's room | 23,623 |
| West Quincy reading room | 23,354 |
| Atlantic reading room (Oct. 23-Dec. 31) | 4,951 |
| Schools | 2,725 |
| Total | 120,559 |

This is an increase of 12,677 over the year 1911. There has been a gain of about 3% in non-fiction from the main desk. Sociology, Science, and Useful and Fine Arts have been prominent in the year's circulation here. Owing presumably to the labor disturbances in Quincy and other cities, the demand for books on Sociology has made a gain in that class of of 46% over the preceding year.

The large bulletin board near the door of this hall has attracted readers to such topics as Gardening, Birds, Aviation, China, Panama, Turkey, etc. Besides lists on the above subjects and those on Music and for High school students, the following have been compiled: Stereoscopic views, Robert Browning, Commission government, Hunting, Work with boys, Thanksgiving, and Christmas. Some of these lists have been mailed to those interested or whom it was hoped to interest.

Articles written to bring the library to the attention of the people have been published free of charge through the courtesy of the Daily Ledger. Letters have been written to the different clubs of the city expressing our desire to be of service to them in their work.

MUSIC

The library now has 29 volumes of the Musicians library and 39 other works of various musical collections, including 5 oratorios and 3 opera scores. These 68 volumes have circulated 407 times during the year, all except the Musicians library having been added as late as November. Lists of the collection and of the works in the library relating to the art, its study, history, composers, etc., have been printed and distributed.

CHILDREN' S ROOM

There has been an increase in the circulation of this department of 2,798 over the year 1911, and 458 new borrowers have registered as against 380 the year before. Only 8 books have been lost from the open shelves. Much conscientious work is here done in direct contact with the children. Picture bulletins and special lists of good books have been posted. The percentage of fiction has fallen off from 58.6 to 53.6. A beginning has been made in the circulation of mounted pictures to the schools, and it is hoped next year to increase the work along this line. The stereographs are very popular here, their use in the room numbering 36,619. The hours were extended during school vacations by the opening of the room also in the morning from 10 to 12 o'clock.

SCHOOLS

The regular sending of cases of books monthly to the 10 schools outside of those nearest the library has continued from the Children's room. We have no school duplicate collection and no separate room for the work, as many libraries have. Since September the newly formed Quincy Independent Industrial school has also been supplied with a small number of books. Miss Camp's visit to the High school has been productive of most encouraging results. Through co-operation with the English department, the list of required reading was posted at the library, and the demand for these books has been so great that many duplicate copies have been bought and still more ordered. Two lists were compiled at the library, one on the study of English literature and the other on Shakespeare, resulting in increased use of these books.

ACCESSIONS

The call for books along the lines of trade unionism, socialism, and other sociological subjects has continued, and we have purchased as far as we could to satisfy the demand. Of adult fiction there were purchased 652 volumes, and for the children's room 117 volumes, making a total of 769 or 41.7% of fiction in the year's accessions. A very, very small percentage of books in foreign languages has been bought this year, namely 25 in Italian, 4 in French, and 1 in German.

The following are among the important purchases of the year—Century dictionary, Makers of Canada, Warner's Library of the world's best literature, Bailey's Cyclopedia of agriculture, Champlin's Cyclopedia of painters and painting, and the Standard reference work for the children's room.

CATALOGUING

Instead of our usual annual list, it was decided in the late summer to change to a quarterly index of additions to the library, and the first issue, in September, included all books added from January. The next number was published in December. Besides the regular work of ordering, accessioning, and cataloguing the additions to the library, there has been an entire revision of the card catalogue, subdivisions have been made of many of its larger subjects, and subject cards of individual biography in the children's room have been added to it. A long felt want was supplied by a list of detective stories in the cards, also an author card list was made of all books which have been cancelled for various reasons,—out of print, discarded, etc.—since the opening of the library. A topical list was prepared for the season's work of one of the study clubs, new material being added to that already in the library. The checking of the last A.L.A. subject headings list has added to the year's work.

PERIODICALS, BINDING, MENDING

Magazine publishers seem to be very trying individuals or there seems to be some missing link between their subscription department and their mailing list. Duplicate copies are received or none sent at all when they should be, to the vexation of the public who have been seeing them at the news stands. At the Central library there is a subscription list of 123 different periodicals, including 18 gifts, extra copies making a total of 164 newspapers and magazines. Even these do not supply the demands of the waiting readers. These periodicals are prepared for circulation and the reading tables, and the greater number of them later are sorted and made ready for the binder, as we keep an up-to-date file of all those which we receive that are indexed in the Readers' Guide.

The amount spent for binding the past year has been $747.85. The number of books bound, rebound and repaired by the binder is, 1,914. The number of periodicals bound and rebound is 157, making a total of 2,071 volumes. With a system as simple as possible it is apparent that this involves, besides records, much handling of many books, large and small, every month.

The number of books mended at the library and at the reading rooms is 5,788; of periodicals mended, 307.

STAFF

Miss Cochrane returned to her duties the latter part of February. In March, Miss Alexander, who had been with us nearly four years, left us to accept a position in the catalogue department of the St. Louis Public Library. Miss Blanche Morrison, who began as an apprentice in 1910, took the summer course in library science at Simmons College in 1911, and had since been assisting Miss Alexander, was then added to the staff. In July, Miss Stegmaier, who had been in charge of the Main hall desk since Oct. 1908, resigned to do library organization work for the Mass. Free Library Commission. In September the position was filled by the appointment of Miss Elizabeth H. Camp, from the public library of Seymour, Conn., also a graduate of the Simmons College summer school.

APPRENTICES

I wish to speak of the success of what has developed into a regular system of apprentice service. As early as 1906 one young woman from a neighboring town applied to serve us in any capacity that might prepare her to enter Simmons College summer school. As a result of the success of this experiment, and as our needs were increasing and one after another from our own city applied, the thought grew that, although we could not open a library training school, there might be mutual benefit and profit.

Notwithstanding the fact that much time has to be spent in training these apprentices for careful work, it has proved to be a very good business investment for the library, growing, as it is, as fast as its finances will allow. Each apprentice in turn found her niche of usefulness and proved a welcome addition to our happy corps of workers, although nothing was promised at the outset. Since November 1907, we have had 8, 4 of whom have positions. One is now in the St. Louis public library after nearly four years' service here, and 3 are upon our own staff. The other 4 are at present doing useful work in the library.

Before closing this report I must voice the great loss sustained by us all in the death of our beloved Mr. Butler, the Chairman of the Board for seventeen years. His almost daily presence is still missed, his kindly interest and devotion to the library which he served for so long, setting the mark of his broad culture upon it. By the death of Mr. Burke, for the second time we have lost two members of the Board within the year, this time one in the prime of his life and usefulness. It must surely be no common occurrence when in exactly one year and a half four members of a Board are removed from it by death.

I wish to thank your honorable Board for the response to the suggestion of increasing even by ever so little the salaries of your faithful workers. Statistics of 32 representative libraries from various sections of the country, compiled by the American Library Association one year ago, showed ours to be the lowest but 3 in its proportion of salaries to other expenses of maintenance. I hope that we may advance farther up the list.

One thing I might suggest is the opening of the Central library until 9 o'clock in the evening, instead of the 8 o'clock closing hour, as I think in a city and library the size of ours it is to be expected, and that the public would appreciate the convenience. Perhaps at the same time we might add an hour in the morning, making the opening hour 9 instead of 10 o'clock. At least I trust that we may see the way clear to do this next autumn.

Respectfully submitted,

ALICE G. WHITE,
Librarian.

BALLOT BOX IS STUFFED

Residents of Milton Shocked at Outcome of Caucus

MORE BALLOTS THAN VOTERS

Some one stuffed the ballot box at the caucus in Milton, Monday night, which has caused mingled joy and pain to flutter through the town.

There being more ballots than voters, Roger Wolcott, chairman of the caucus, was obliged to declare a no caucus, with one exception that for town clerk, G. Frank Kemp, of 348 Central avenue, Mattapan, who was nominated by the handsome vote of 234 as against 176 for Benjamin F. Fuller and 79 for Thomas A. Flanagan.

The Australian ballot has not been adopted in the town as yet, but after Monday's mishap it looks as if the old fashioned way of running a caucus will sooner or later die a natural death.

The caucus was the liveliest in the history of the town and brought out one of the largest crowds seen in the Town Hall for five years. For several weeks the candidates for Selectmen have stirred up the town as it was never stirred before. Maurice Duffy and Henry H. Barnes were seeking re-election. George R. Eaton of East Milton, William B. Batchelder of East Milton and James F. Mitchell were candidates for the vacancy caused by Philip S. Dalton's refusal to run.

There was a hot four-cornered contest for auditor between Richard F. Cahill, William A. Will, George C. Partelow and Ernest P. Libby.

Promptly at 10, Chairman Wolcott closed the polls. It was not long before the assembled multitude became suspicious that all was not right. The ballot clerks got fidgety and it became noised about that the ballot box had been stuffed.

Meanwhile the various candidates were anxiously awaiting the decision and at 11:45 Chairman Wolcott brought the gavel down hard and announced that he wished to make a statement before announcing the results. "There have been found more ballots," he said, "than voters, and the results to be announced are subject to change. He then announced the following result:

For Selectmen—Duffy, 397; Barnes 418; Eaton 247; Batchelder, 189; Mitchell, 104, 151 blanks. No choice.

The excitement following the startling announcement was keen, as nothing like it was ever known by people who have been concerned in the town's uplift from its earliest period.

DEFEND FICTION READERS

Somerville Library Trustees Claim That Novels Do More Than Amuse.

There has been an increase of eight per cent in the circulation of books other than fiction in the past year, according to the Somerville Library trustees' report. "The criticism has been made," they say, "that a large percentage of books taken from the library comprises works of fiction." The trustees admit that this is so and say that ther eading of good fiction is at least harmless amusement. "now," the report continues, "if this is all the reading of fiction does, the library system furnished $400,000 worth of amusement to the people of Somerville during 1912, or ten times the amount of money spent on the whole library system. The reading of good fiction does much more than amuse. To see that nothing but good fiction reaches the public through the library is the constant care of the board."

During the year 4700 new borrowers cards were issued and $11,670 was spent for new books.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

A few of the interesting books which have recently been added to the Thomas Crane Public Library are:

Challenger So, Science of the sea, which gives in brief, facts about the sea and the life it contains, which will be found useful by anyone who wishes in their leisure time to do some work for science. Between the gigantic and world embracing movements of Air and Water, and the brief life of the minutest organism—lie, intricately interwoven, the problems with which the student of oceanography must wrestle But while his proper work is the orderly mardhalling of facts into groups, the facts themselves can be gathered by any traveller who chooses to take the trouble of doing so.

Morse, Causes and effects in American history. "This narrative ignores detail. It deals not so much with facts as with causes and effects—with the large currents of thought, feeling and action which from generation to generation, especially through the economic and intellectual influences of each period, have modified and shaped the destinies of the American people. the purpose of the book is thus to supply to the imagination a key to the real meaning of the evolutions of the historical pageant as it passes across the stage."

Phelps, Teaching in school and college. A series of essays on teaching, giving some of the authors own personal experience and in which he says, "Teaching is an art—an art so great and so difficult to master that a man or woman can spend a long life at it, without realizing much more than his limitations and mistakes and his distance from the ideal." Many who are not teachers will enjoy reading this exceedingly interesting group of essays.

White, Sucessful houses and how to build them. A very timely and interesting book on house building, which all who are interested in this subject gill be glad to read. All the problems connected with building are discussed from choosing the site to the interior decorations. Many valuable ideas regarding the construction of different kinds of houses are given with good illustrations of exteriors and interiors, also a number of floor plans

BRANDEIS FOR CABINET?

Wilson Does Not Deny Truth of Statement of Boston Paper

Trenton, Feb. 20.—President-elect Wilson declined to affirm or deny the statement of a Boston paper that Louis D. Brandeis is to be secretary of commerce and labor. He declined to discuss it further than to say: "Of course, the Boston paper has no authoritative information, such as it claims, for making any such statement."

It is no secret here that Wilson has long been an ardent admirer of Brandeis, nor that he obtained a great deal of help from Brandeis during the campaign in drawing his issue for the "regulation of competition" among big industries.

YOUNG WIFE MURDERED

Result of American Girl's Unhappy Marriage to Italian

Philadelphia, Feb. 20.—James Linci, an Italian barber, 23 years old, shot and killed his young wife, who he believed was about to leave him, in the home of her sister, Mrs. Louis Woufsberger, at Edison.

Linci fired three bullets into her body and then lay down and sent a bullet through his own breast. His condition is serious.

The tragedy is the outcome of the unhappy marriage of an American girl and the barber a year ago. Mrs. Linci was 22 years old.

VOTING CONTEST

in November, and with the exception of two dates early in December, he has easily maintained first position. His great work is more conspicious when it is known that he belongs to only one organization—the Makaria Fraternity.

At the suggestion of Miss Florence B. Pratt he entered the contest Nov. 27 with 150 votes, and the next day had 1,150. On the ninth day he had 2,535, and a week later 10,000 and so the total jumped. Miss Pratt and several young friends gave him encouragement at the start, and the business men of City Square lent their assistance. No one was more surprised than Mr. Williams at the shower of votes. The coupons seemed to come from everywhere in increasing quantities, so that he found it easy to capture the weekly vote certificates offered as special prizes, and thereby shut out his rivals.

For several weeks his most dangerous rival seemed to be Mr. Hunt, but after awhile he realized that he must keep his weather eye on Mr. MacKay, although he did not rise above third place. He was a close rival for some of the weekly prizes, especially the 2,000 vote certificate awarded Feb. 3, when he almost overtook Mr. Hunt.

On Feb. 10, the date when the standing of the candidates was last published Mr. Williams led Mr. Hunt by 19,110, and Mr. MacKay by 28,935.

Fred D. Williams is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Williams of Granite street. He was born in Quincy, July 8, 1888, the year the town voted to become a city. He attended the public schools, and was graduated at the Quincy High in the class of 1906. He entered the drug store of E. J. Murphy in 1908, and has made a success of his profession. That he is popular is shown by his tremendous vote in this contest. The publishers of the Daily Ledger extend hearty congratulations to Mr. Williams and wish him a most enjoyable trip to the Inauguration at at Washington, and in all his relations in life.

THE SECOND PRIZE.

Sturgis H. Hunt, who wins the diamond ring, has several medals and cups which he has won in contest, but these were at athletic meets of the Y. M. C. A. and Quincy High school. He is today captain of the leading team in the Sunday School basket ball league, which has not yet met defeat. At the class meet of Quincy High last year he won the most points for the class of 1915. In the State meet of the Y. M. C. A. recently he led class B and won a silver cup and several medals. Although but 16 years of age he is assistant director of the Quincy Y. M. C. A.

Sturgis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Hunt of Bigelow street. He was born in South Weymouth Feb. 18, 1897, so that Tuesday, the closing day of the contest was his birthday, and the diamond ring comes as a birthday present. He was graduated at the Coddington school, and is now in his second year at Quincy High.

He is a member of Bethany Congregational church, a teacher in the Bible school, a member of the Christian Endeavor Society and of the Knights of King Arthur. His many friends who worked for his success will be glad to learn that he secured the diamond ring.

THE OTHER PRIZES.

Only two prizes were originally offered in the contest, but in appreciation of the good work by other candidates it was recently decided to give two additional prizes. Therefore two tickets to Boston theatres are awarded to those third and fourth in the list.

A. R. MacKay who was No. 3, ran as the Heptasoph candidate. He is a past archon of Granite conclave, 797 Improved Order of Heptasophs, and also secretary of the Tubular Rivet and Stud Employees Mutual Benefit Association, and both these organizations gave him loyal support, securing in all 67,780 votes.

He was born in Wollaston, Jan. 7, 1883, and attended the Wollaston Coddington and Quincy High school. For twelve years he has been a valuable man for the Tubular Rivet and Stud Co., being in charge of the tool department. This week he is ill with pleurisy, and the Daily Ledger forwarded to him today a flowering plant.

Mrs. Emma C. Marnock, who wins the fourth prize, ran as the W. R. C. candidate. She is a past president of Paul J. Revere Woman's Relief Corps a charter member of the Loyal Ladies, a past protector of the Knights and Ladies of Honor, and also a member of the George L. Gill Rebekah lodge and the Riverside club. All these organizations and her old neighbors at South Quincy gave her valuable assistance in obtaining the 42,145 votes.

She was born in Braintree, being the daughter of the late David Joy, who moved to Quincy when she was three weeks old. She attended school in the old South district in the stone building now used as the Police station. While a pupil there she "pulled lint" for the Union men of the Civil war. When the call came for men in the Spanish-American war she also worked for the volunteers. She is the widow of Alexander M. Marnock, at one time president of the Granite Manufacturers' Association. Two sons are living—Alex C. Marnock, who is with the C. W. Morse Co. of Boston; and Edward D. Marnock, who continues the granite business of his father.

A consolation prize is awarded to Galen V. Bowditch who was No. 5— a three months' subscription to the Daily Ledger.

The Contest Editor appreciates the kindness of all the candidates, as friendly relations have at all times existed. His work was made much easier by the neat and careful manner in which the coupons were trimmed, stamped, counted and forwarded. Again we extend congratulations to the winners, and wish the others better luck next time.

A BIG BOOK.

Delivery of the new winter issue of the Boston telephone directory has commenced and will be completed March 1. It will be the largest book of its kind ever published in New England and will be the most widely read, for it is safe to say the book will be consulted nearly a million times daily. In correctness it is almost perfection.

Printing the Boston directory is a tremendous job. The forthcoming issue will number 203,400 copies and each book will have 418 pages, a total of over 85,000,000 pages in one issue and more than a quarter billion pages in the three issues printed every year. After the copy has been closed about 25 days are required to print it. Over 500,000 pounds of paper are used and more than 12 miles of wire is required in the binding.

The new directory will contain approximately 40,000 changes in either names, addresses or numbers. The last book issued contained 27,000 changes. The book will have the names of over 6,000 new subscribers and will be 20 pages larger. Ten years go only 61,000 copies of the book were printed and 20 years ago there were but 18,000.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

KEEPING TABS ON WHITMAN

Police and Their Private Spies Dogging District Attorney

TRAILERS FACING SUSPENSION

New Deputy Commissioner Seeking Identity of Offenders—Espionage May Have Been Directed by Men Higher Up—Threats Against Hotel Owner Followed Visit of Whitman

New York, Feb. 20.—The police department and the district attorney's office, having reached an amicable agreement to assist each other in the prosecution and punishment of wrongdoers in the department, are co-operating in a vigorous attempt to stop the shadowing of District Attorney Whitman by members of the police and by their private spies.

Ever since the memorable morning in the Tenderloin when Jack Rose's friends killed a gambler, the county prosecutor has been the victim of an irritating system of espionage, believed to have been directed by police officers of considerable authority.

Third Deputy Commissioner Newburger, who has been placed in charge of the headquarters investigation, arranged for a conference with Whitman and Assistant District Attorney Groehl in order to get information concerning plain-clothes men who are said to have followed them in a tour of the disorderly hotel circuit in Harlem.

Whitman and Groehl were spied on from the moment they appeared at Captain Walsh's home until they finished their round of calls. Among the men who followed them Whitman is said to have recognized the face of a central office squad plain-clothesman formerly assigned to the sixth inspection district under Inspector Sweeney.

If Newburger can get the names of police officers as being trailers of Whitman he will have them suspended on charges. The new deputy has taken up the police end of the graft inquiry with refreshing energy and is determined first of all to prove that the really responsible heads of the department are not spying on Whitman and are not seeking to hamper his work.

He can do this best by breaking up the present system of dogging the prosecutor, he believes, assuming, of course, that policemen are really responsible for the shadowing which has proved so disagreeable to Whitman and his assistants.

Newburger will also seek to discover whether the men who followed Whitman were the same who called on Ludovico Tancredi, proprietor of the Little Venice hotel, within ten minutes after Whitman and Groehl had departed.

Tancredi was still warm from the excitement of telling the prosecutor how he had paid graft to Detective Robinson of Inspector Sweeney's staff when two men in citizen's attire entered and proceeded to make all manner of dire threats against himself and his family, the general purport of which was that if Tancredi knew what was good for him he would not testify against the "system" before the extraordinary grand jury.

Boston, Feb. 20.—There will be no strike of the longshoremen. The 5000 men who load and unload the big ocean liners and the coasting steamships are to get an increase of pay.

It is now agreed that the men will accept this compromise proposition.

THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 28 No. 45 QUINCY, MASS., FRIDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 21, 1913 PRICE TWO CENTS

MEMORY OF GEORGE WASHINGTON WILL LAST AS LONG AS THE WORLD

As Years Go On His Great Work in Behalf of Humanity Is More Appreciated

Birthday Tomorrow to Be Honored in All Parts of the World

Tomorrow being a national holiday, business will be generally suspended throughout the city. Work will be entirely suspended at the granite sheds, Fore River, and other seats of industry. In and about City Square however most of the grocery stores will be open a few hours in the morning. A holiday coming on a Saturday makes it hard for the stores as most people are in the habit of buying their Sunday supplies on that day.

THE POST OFFICE.

At the post office the usual hours will be maintained. The main office will be open in the morning until 10 o'clock and there will be one delivery of mail in the morning and one collection late in the afternoon.

LADIES' NIGHT.

The annual ladies' night of the Houghs Neck Associates will be held at the club house, Saturday evening. A fine supper will be served to be followed by an entertainment and dancing. The members plan to make this a gala occasion.

DANCING PARTY.

Scandia Lodge, Oredr of Vasa will conduct an evening dancing party at Colonial hall. The committee in charge will be Oscar Johnson, Carl Boliveau, Carl Barstin, Miss Fredia Carlson, Mrs. Hilma O'Brien, Miss Hilma Johnson, Wolfred Anderson.

LIVED IN THE WEST.

The funeral of John M. Craig was held from his late home Pleasant street, East Milton, Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Craig had spent most of his life in the west and had been home less than three months and had been ill less than a month. In the short time he had been here he had made a host of friends. He is survived by his father, three brothers and a sister. Thomas, one of his brothers is a conductor on the Quincy cars. Burial was in the family lot at Milton.

INSPECTION OF AIR TANKS

Every Two Years, Opposed by Granite Manufacturers

WHO FAVOR FIVE YEARS

(Special to the Ledger.)

At the State House, Friday, the committee on mercantile affairs gave a hearing to all persons interested in the bill offered by Representative William J. Leslie for an inspection, every two years of compresed air tanks.

There was some opposition to the measure on the part of granite manufacturers, their point being that every five years, was enough for the inspection, and that there was no actual need of an inspection every two years. They did not oppose the other features of the bill. Those who appeared in opposition included Andrew Milne, William Farquharson, Peter T. Fallon and Frank Morrison.

Representative Leslie, Prof. John Miller of Technology, Gen. Whitney of the State police and Arthur Huddell of the American Federation of Labor favored the bill. It is quite likely that the committee will report a bill, amended in such form as to meet approval of the objectors.

OLD RESIDENT DEAD.

Mrs. Amelia Higgins, widow of the late Warren D. Higgins, who was a well known carpenter and builder 25 years ago, died this mornig from a cancer at West Quincy. She was in her 60's.

IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Of West Quincy Hear Satisfactory Reports

AND ELECT OFFICERS

The annual meeting of the West Quincy Improvement association was held Thursday evening, President Stephen B. Little, presiding. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Stephen B. Little.
Secretary—J. H. McPherson.
Treasurer—Neil McDonald.

The report of the various officers for the past year showed that considerable had been accomplished by the association during that time in the way of improvements. A statement showing just what has been accomplished will be drawn up and given to the press for publication at an early date.

The report of the treasurer also showed the association to be in good condition financially.

William H. Teasdale, J. H. McPherson, Peter T. Fallon, Robert Newcomb and Neil McDonald were appointed a committee to arrange for a public meeting to organize a co-operative bank, an institution that is very much needed in this section of the city.

William H. Teasdale, chairman of the committee on transportation of the Board of Trade told what had been accomplished in the way of improved train service. Among these things was the one fare for workingmen and women between Brewers corner and Milton Lower Mills, a car for West Quincy from the 12.25 train from Boston. He also told of the change that is to go into effect by the new timetable on the steam railroad between West Quincy and Boston. The most important change in train service and one that the residents of West Quincy have long wanted is the train now leaving Boston for West Quincy at 5.22 and running accomodation to West Quincy. Under the new time table a train will leave Boston ten minutes later or at 5.32 and will run express to Neponset and will arrive in West Quincy about the same time as the 5.22 now arrives.

Several members of the association spoke of plans for the coming year.

McDEVITT'S GAS BILL KILLED AS REPORTED BY COMMITTEE

Quincy People Credited With Saying There Is No Necessity for Cheaper Gas

Senate Refuses to Turn the Bill Over to the Commissioners

(Special to the Ledger.)

In the Senate Thursday, Senator John J. McDevitt tried to get that body to substitute for the adverse committee report, his original bill which would give Quincy 80 per cent gas. He pleaded that Quincy is discriminated against in the matter of rates for gas. He said that the city council and the mayor of Quincy were in favor of his bill and that the Quincy delegation in the legislature approved of it and would vote for it.

The substitution of the bill was opposed by Senator Gordon, of Springfield, the chairman of the committee on Public Lighting. Senator Gordon told the Senate that his committee had given the matter a thorough hearing and that since then the committee had received petitions and letters from Quincy people saying that the lower rate in gas for that city is not a public necessity and the city would suffer none if the bill did not go through.

Another argument offered against the bill was that the matter is one which should be taken up by the Gas and Electric Light Commission and does not properly come before the legislature.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

All unite in doing honor to the Father of His country.

The House of Representatives nearer to the people then the upper House voiced the sentiments of the common people on that immigration bill.

Madero is probably bemoaning his lack of activity with the execution tools when he had Diaz in his power.

The annual eloquence of the town meetings will soon be thundering through the town halls b'gosh.

Mr. Brandeis is slated for the port folio of labor. He has been active in many public and quasi public concerns, among them the Shoe machinery Co. and others.

The hat pin bill has been postponed and it was just as well, accidents are liable to happen with any other kind of weapons as well as the long hatpin.

Loss or no loss it seems that common convenience and necessity and even health demand electrification of railroads within certain municipal limits.

The school for journalism will no doubt flourish as long as the funds hold out, but the average editor knows that the newspaper man grows and is not developed by hothouse methods.

NEED RESTRAINT.

Hot upon the denial that the women suffragettes had not been responsible for the blowing up of Lloyd-George's summer home, Mrs. Emmeline Parkhurst stridently proclaims "We have blown up the chancellor of the Exchequer's house, the authorities need not look for the woman who actually did it. I personally accept full responsibility for it."

Just as if a woman who could make such silly, idle, blatant announcement could be held responsible for anything. There seems to hinge the whole question in this English woman suffrage movement. There seems to be a lack of responsibility. So many of the active and strenuous workers in the movement, are bent on mischief and the like that it is really an open question whether they want the ballot or a straightjacket. In olden times the people had a summary manner of treating such violators of all law, order and common decency. But this latest claimant to fame, should not be allowed to pass unnoticed. Her claim while silly and simply made with the desire to draw attention to herself should afford the authorities an excuse for needed restraint in such advanced cases.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

One hundred and eighty one years ago tomorrow, George Washington first saw the light of day in Washington parish, Westmoreland Co., Va. At the time of this event, there was hardly any forecast of the great events which were later to influence his life and make him one of the greatest figures in the world's history. Thus it is that destiny goes on moulding for the unsuspecting and at the proper time, the precise moment, the situation is revealed which changes the course of men's lives and many times the course of nations. In his early manhood Washington was not what one would term brilliant, but he always established a reliance in his ability and stability of character which was never lacking in all the period of his life. His sterling qualities were always in evidence. When it came to selecting a man to lead the Colonial forces who more fitting for the post than that sombre yet reliable figure, always dependable and filled with patriotic ardor of his time and an undying faith and confidence in his own country. Much might be written of Washington.

He has not escaped the pen or tongue of the harping critic. But his character has stood out nobly and boldly and met the shafts that were hurled at him with venom and recoiled upon the heads of those who cast them. He was a man of the period. He was an American, first, last and always. He was above the petty jealousies of many who surrounded him and in consequence we can look back upon him from this distance of year and admire the rugged splendor of that lonesome figure who endured in silence.

It has been said he was not a statesman. That may be, but that he governed with wisdom and left behind him many splendid teachings and advice that has been followed with abundant success in succeeding years. Many monuments have been erected to Washington but none will be as enduring than the manner in which his memory will ever be cherished by the people of this country.

QUINCY BOYS AT CONFERENCE

Daily Ledger Prize Winner in the Party

One of the happiest boys of the city is Sturgis H. Hunt, who won the beautiful diamond ring in the Daily Ledger popularity contest. He also will take a trip and one which he will enjoy quite as much as the Washington trip. He left this morning with other Quincy boys for the State conference of the Y. M. C. A. at Pittsfield which will continue until Monday. Others in the party are Alden H. Blanchard, the boys' work director, and his brother Fred Blanchard, Charles M. Johnson, George MacDonald and Bernard Gouterman.

STURGIS H. HUNT.

With the diamond in their midst it will of course be a brilliant party. Before the prize was captured however the boys had practiced cheers and songs, and were determined to make their presence known. The program includes a grand banquet this evening, and interesting meetings on Saturday, Sunday and Monday with national and international Y. M. C. A. men among the speakers.

GENTLE PUPILS KIND TO TEACHER

WILLIAMS AND TARBOX

Daily Ledger Prize Winner Selects W. E. Tarbox

AS WASHINGTON COMPANION

Fred D. Williams, who won in the big popularity contest, is being showered with congratulations on every hand. They tell him that his total of 112,895 was "some vote;" that they are glad he won; that they were pleased to help him; that they hope he may get a cabinet appointment; that he should run for Congressman at the next election; etc., etc. Not only have his friends called at the store of E. J. Murphy, but they have kept the telephone busy.

Many were in hopes that Miss Florence B. Pratt, to whom he is engaged, might be a member of the Washington party. They argued that it would be perfectly proper, as the Daily Ledger prize winners will be members of one of George E. Marsters personally conducted tours. But the fortunate companion of Mr. Williams will be William E. Tarbox of 1632 Hancock street. Mr. Tarbox is a clerk with the Thompson Durkee Co. of Boston. Messrs. Williams and Tarbox will start for Washington next Friday evening.

WILLIAMS THANKFUL

The following letter from Mr. Williams is self explanatory:

Editor Daily Ledger:—

I wish thorugh the columns of your popular paper to extend my thanks to your enterprising Contest Editor Mr. Frank F. Prescott, who so cleverly planned the trip to Washington and to all my friends who so often and persistently voted the "F. D. W." ticket. I think this was a square contest all around and good feeling exists between all of the contestants.. I congratulate the winners; they surely worked, and all did well. Sturgis Hunt showed true grit of which his friends may well be proud.

It is unfortunate that the candidate in third place was taken sick as we had counted on his keeping us hustling until the last minute, which I believe he would have done.

Next comes definite preparations for the great event of which we will endeavor to write some of the important happenings to those from our home town as requested by Mr. Prescott.

Yours truly,
Fred D. Williams.

FRED D. WILLIAMS.

President-elect Wilson approved on Thursday the plans which the committee headed by Thomas Nelson Page have made for the inauguration on March 4. One committee will meet Mr. Wilson on his arrival in Washington on the afternoon of March 3. Another committee will meet Vice President-elect Marshall. Mrs. Wilson, the Misses Wilson and Mrs. Marshall will be escorted to a hotel, where they will be met by a committee of women. Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, grand marshal of the inaugural parade has appointed as one of his aids, Col. Thomas H. Birch, the personal aid to the President-elect, who will ride at the head of column. The prospects are that 50,000 persons may be in line. A prominent part in the ceremonies will be taken by the collegians from Princeton and the University of Virginia.

And to Show That Feeling Gave Him a Surprise Party

PARENTS TAKING A HAND

Briggs, Thursday evening at his home, Appleton street, when Thomas Murgrave, in behalf of the "boys," presented Mr. Briggs with a handsome leather travelling bag. The time passed very pleasantly and all too swiftly forthose present when the time arrived to depart for home. ## METER SERVICE AIDS DECREASE

In the Per Capita Consumption of Water

SHOWN BY WATER REPORT

The report of the Metropolitan Water Board for the month of January just issued is an interesting one for Quincy as it shows that the average daily consumption of water in Quincy for January was 11 gallons per capita less than in January 1912. This is due largely to the installation of meters. About 1,700 meters were installed in 1912 so that on January 1, about 80 per cent of the entire city was metered.

Commissioner Tupper says that he hopes by the end of the year to have the entire city fitted with meters.

It is interesting also to note by this report that the consumption in Quincy was 43 gallons less per capita than in the city of Boston, 5 less than in Somerville and 15 less than in Chelsea.

Of course there are a number of towns where the consumption is less than in Quincy but it is in towns where there are no manufacturing industries of any kind.

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

Mrs. Theo. Alice Ruggles Kitson has just completed at her studio in Quincy the statue forthe soldiers' monument at North Andover. The figure represents the volunteer ofthe Civil War, and is that of a young soldier advancing, carrying his gun before him, he is a soldier on the alert, dressed in rough-service uniform to which are added the necessities of war. The coat is unfastened and the throat is bare; the face shows breeding as well as courage and determination. The expression is fearless, earnest and fervent.

TWO DAYS AUTO SHOW

Second Annual of the Wollaston Centre Garage

Inauguration Day will be celebrated in Quincy by a good Auto Show at the Wollaston Centre Garage. In fact Quincy will be one day ahead of Washington, as this second annual exhibition will open, Monday, March 3 and continue through Tuesday, March 4, from 10 A. M. to 10 P. M. each day.

There will be something doing in the show line in Quincy, as fifty or more cars will be exhibited, and all the accessories. Such an exhibition would not be possible in an ordinary garage, but the Wollatson Centre Garage has a floor space of 12,000 square feet without a post.

Already the Atlantic Decorating Company is at work transforming the interior into a veritable garden, and some cars have arrived. Temple A. Winslow announces that it will be the biggest and most splendid exhibition ever displayed under one roof in Norfolk county.

There will be prominent speakers, a ladies orchestra, a dainty buffet banquet, souvenirs, etc.

The garage is on Weston avenue near the Wollaston station of the N. Y., N. H. & H. H. R. R., and handy to the Hancock street and Wollaston electric car lines. It is expected that over 10,000 people will attend the exhibition which opens a week from next Monday.

GAS BILL KILLED

Senator McDevitt replied by saying that the matter had been petitioned for to the Gas and Electric Commission and that the petition had been lying in the office of the commissioners for a year with no apparent notice having been taken of it.

The vote was 24 to 13 against McDevitt. He then arose and asked that the matter be referred by the Senate to the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners, but President Greenwood ruled that action would be outside the province of the Senate.

THE HOLY CITY.

Sunday afternoon at the regular 4 o'clock vesper service, the quartet of the Wollaston Congregational church, assisted by a chorus of forty voices, will present Gaul's sacred cantata, "The Holy City." Walter Clarence Rogers, of Quincy will conduct, with Miss Agnes Ruggles of Dorchester at the organ and Mrs. Amos T. Leavitt of Wollaston, at the piano.

This composition is one of the most popular of modern choral works, being particularly tuneful and showy and yet not too difficult. The solo parts will be sung by the following artists:— Miss Ruth L. Hardy, soprano; Mrs. Clyde B. Long, contralto; Harry R. Rogers, tenor; Charles H. Everett, bass.

Many well known singers of Quincy and Boston will assist in the chorus and an excellent rendering is assured.

PRESIDENT'S VETO SUSTAINED.

Although the Burnett-Dillingham Immigration bill was passed by a two-thirds vote in the Senate over the President's veto on Monday, it was killed for at least a year by the House of Representatives Wednesday. It is mainly due to Congressman Curley's remarkable fight against the bill, that the House failed in passing it over the veto of the President.

GOODBYE "MAUDE."

"Municipal Maude" for many years the horse used in the Board of Health department will be sold today. The horse has been in the possession of the department for some years and was used by Edward J. Lennon, the inspector for the board. She was removed to the City Stables at the order of Commissioner Tupper because the boarding and baiting bill had not been paid the water department in whose barn she was kept. The insufficient appropriation of the board was responsible for the deficit.

LIGHT TRAFFIC ON LATE CARS

Patronage Expected to Pick Up as People Get Used to Them

The street cars that are meeting the new midnight train from Boston on its arrival in Quincy at 12.25 are not being very heavily patronized as yet. These cars went into effect on the West Quincy line on Monday evening. That evening the number of passengers carried outside of conductors and motormen going home was 6. Tuesday night the number was increased to 7 and Wednesday night to 13.

Wednesday night the late car from this train for Houghs Neck and North Weymouth went on for the first time. On the car for Houghs Neck two passengers were carried. North Weymouth did a little better for there were 12 on this car. The late cars on the Houghs Neck and North Weymouth lines runs Wednesday and Saturday only. Wednesday night therefore was the first night for the new car. Those active in securing these cars believe that to have been a very good beginning and that the number of passengers carried will be materially increased as it becomes better understood that they are running.

The commfttee in charge of the ladies' night are Em. Sir Walter E. Piper, Sir John Morgan, Sir Otis B. Oakman and Sir Alfred H. Richards.

The Sir Knights who attended the first ladies' night of Quincy Commandery have pleasant recollections of the event and this year's affair promises to be equally as enjoyable.

BOSTON vs QUINCY.

Quincy will play its last League game on Saturday night when the reorganized Boston Y. M. C. A. team appears as its opponents. The Boston team has been going at top speed for the past five weeks, having won all of its games but one during that period. The return of Benson to the team has added a great deal to its strength, both offensively and defensively. His style of game closely resembles that of Jacobs of Newton who is considered the greatest back playing the game in Y. M. C. A. circles today.

The Boston team will line up as follows: Gunn and Rattacher, forwards; Bryant, center; Benson and Myhre, backs. Quincy will line up as the usual with Parker and Rich as forwards Trask, center; Melville and Kenn, backs.

The second teams will play between the halves and after the two Boston—Quincy games are finished, the Silent Five and the crack Braintree Circle Team will play. This last game should prove to be a hummer for the Braintree team is now in second place in the South Shore League, while the local team has lost but two games this season. The first game will begin at 8 o'clock instead of at 8.15 as customary.

BASKET BALL.

The main local sporting attraction is the basket ball at the High school gym. Quincy first team will play the strong Taunton team and the second will play the Revere high second team.

At Roxbury, the Quincy A. A. leaders of the Greater N. E. A. A. A. U. league will oppose the St. Alphonsus team.

BOWLING.

Special matches will be rolled at both the Coliseums and City Square alleys. The roll-offs for the high men who have qualified will take place during the day.

OPEN HOUSE.

The Granite City Club will hold an open house at their rooms in the Savings Bank building. A cordial invitation has been extended by the members to their friends and a special program has been arranged.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN

BOSTON AND VICINITY

PARK THEATRE.

It is good news to theatregoers of New England that arrangements have been completed by which "The Woman" will remain in Boston for an additional fortnight. According to the original arrangement the final night of David Belasco's company was to have been Feb. 22, but the success was so great and the announcement of the imperative departure caused so great a rush on the part of theatregoers that arrangement was made for a continuation. It was only by the greatest of diplomacy and the cancellation of the tour of the principal cities of New England that it was possible to retain longer the greatest success of the present dramatic year, but the change was made, and now all New England is rushing to Boston to see the play before it is too late. All records have been broken by "The Woman." The nature of the piece was such that it appealed to all classes of theatregoers, and the intensely stirring story of political conspiracy on the part of Washington congressmen and the manner in which they were all baffled by a single plucky and pretty telephone girl won an unquestioned triumph. It was styled the best play of modern American life that Boston had seen in years, and almost the most notable demonstration of Mr. Belasco's mastery of the art of stagecraft. It showed him at his best and every detail reflected the actuality of life as recognized by all. The cast has been pronounced an all star one in every sense. They are all firm favorites here, but their departure is positive for March 8.

BOSTON THEATRE.

The stay of "The Garden of Allah" is rapidly drawing to a close, only a few more weeks remain for theatregoers to witness the most resplendant and massive production of all time. The dramatized version of Robert Hichens' celebrated story of the desert, "The Garden of Allah" has made a fine impression at the Boston Theatre. The book has been so widely read and so generally discussed that it is fair to presume that the theatregoing as well as the reading public is familiar with its theme and its portent When one stops to think of the great scope of the story, the developments of the principal characters, which, through the process of suffering and experience, are ripened to their final fruition, and when one still further stops to consider the mass of detail which is woven in the pages of the book, giving a background of such kaleidescopic effect as to require the broadest of canvases upon which to sketch it, one pauses to wonder how all this can be encompassed within the space of the theatre and the time allotted for the average dramatic presentation

The action of the play is divided into four parts The first scene is a panorama conveying the spirit of the desert and preparing the audience. Then follows the road leading from the monastery of El-Largani, where the Trappist monk, Father Antoine, leaves the silent house to enter the world and asks his brother for assistance. The veranda of the hotel at Beni Mora is shown next, where the monk, now Boris Androvsky, meets Domini Enfilden, as well as Count Anteoni, and Father Roubier, and is invited to the Count's garden.

B. F. KEITH'S.

Thomas A. Edison's Kinetophone or Talking Motion Pictures will be exhibited for the first time in Boston at B. F. Keith's Theatre, Monday afternoon ,February 24th This astonishing invention of Mr. Edison's is nothing more or less than a scientific miracle. For the first week two subjects will be presented, the first entitled, "The Lecturer" In this film a lecturer describes in detail the Thomas A. Edison Kinetophone, giving various illustrations of vocal, piano, violin solo and various other sounds, such as whistles, bugles, breaking of dishes, and barking dogs. No human being appears on the stage. The entire lecture, both as regards the vocal description and the practical illustrations, are shown by means of the wonderful talking moving pictures. The second picture is called the "Edison Minstrels." A complete minstral show, with songs, jokes, music and dancing is represented by means of the talking pictures. This marvelous mechanical device will be surrounded by a splendid vaudeville bill. Rosalind Coghlan will appear in the amusing one-act comedy, "The Obstinate Miss Granger," supported by an excellent company; the Joe Boganny Troupe of Lunatic Bakers will appear in acrobatic novelties; Bert Fitzgibbons, the Daffy Dill, will have a fresh supply of foolishness; and Elsa Ruegger, the world's great lady cellist, will make her first Boston appearance.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The weeks pass, and still "Believe Me, Xantippe" remains at the Castle Square. This proves its popularity. Its sixth week begins Monday, and only twice before has a Castle Square production reached that record, first it will be remembered with "The Circus Girl" and then with "The End of the Bridge." The public goes to see "Believe Me, Xantippe," without doubt, because it is a comedy, and because it is a play that arouses laughter. Its scenes are taken from life, and the dialogue is natural, and it is in every way the work of a man who has watched huamnity as well as studied the drama. The success of Mr. Ballard's prize play is moreover due as well to the excellent acting, and the cast through the coming sixth week will continue to be headed by John Craig and Mary Young.

PROGRESSIVE BIRTHDAY

Party Plan Big Time in Boston in Honor of the Event

Int he South Armory, Irvington street, Boston, Saturday evening, will occur the first birthday party of the Progressives of Massachusetts. Almost exactly one year ago this movement first took definite shape in the preparations for the Spring Primaries. Within this twelve-months a new Party has come into being, and is today the second Party in the Nation in voting strength. In celebration of this event, Progressives of every section of the Commonwealth will assemble on Washington's Birthday for a conference and dinner.

Henry Allen, the noted and witty speaker from Kansas, and Mary Antin, now of New York, will be the speakers from outside the State. Fifteen years ago Mary Antin, a Jewish girl of eight years, landed in Boston and went to live in the North End. A particularly pleasing touch is added in the fact that the father and mother of Mary Antin (Mrs. Grabau) will be present; and although their daughter has won fame throughout the Nation and is in great demand for speaking engagements, this occasion will be the first one on which they have heard her speak to a public gathering.

National Committeemen, State Chairmen, and a few prominent Progressives from New York State, have been invited. A Conference participated in by Chrales Sumner Bird, Daniel Cosgrove, Matthew Hale, Norman H. White, Thomas L. Hisgen, Joseph Walker and various others from different parts of the State, will be a part of the program. Roland Hayes, known as the Negro Caruso, whose wonderful tenor voice has pleased many audiences, will render operatic and Southern musical selections.

Already a very large attendance of women is assured, and special trains will run over the Boston and Maine, and will carry residents of the Cape on the return trip.

OPPOSE CORPORAL PUNISHMENT.

Former Superintendent of Schools Frank E. Parlin of Cambridge and Quincy is decidedly averse to corporal punishment in child upbringing, yet he admits there are exceptional circumstances which may warrant the application of a mild spanking.

Like a mustard poultice in medicine is the spank in child-raising.

"Applied at the proper time, it acts as a counter-irritant, starting the little one on a new and better line of thought than the bad intention for which the spank is given. Corporal punishment is as a rule bad, but it cannot be denied there are things that are worse and much more injurious to the child."

PLEADED HE WAS HARD UP

But After Court Settled for Full Payment to Wife

Ellery C. Bates of Cohasset was arraigned in court Thursday for non support. Bates in telling his story said that he was a musician and played the cornet. That he was living with his father and that he did not earn much. Some nights he got fifty cents for playing at dances until 9.30 and at other times he got as high as $3 it all depended upon the number that were present. He had however given orders at the store for them to give his wife credit to the amount of $2 a week.

After hearing the evidence the court said that he should pay his wife $1 a week until April when his divorce proceedings would be heard. Bates rather demurred at this saying that he did not see how he could give her $1 a week as he was earning nothing. The court was firm however and ordered that he pay his wife through the Probation Officer $1 a week for the nine weeks.

After the court Bates met the Probation Officer and said that he could not be bothered sending up a dollar every week and that he would pay nine dollars then and there which he did. He then left the court room all smiles.

LUNCHEON AND SHOWER.

Miss Florence Hill, a popular young lady of Atlantic, whose engagement to Mr. George Shackley of West Roxbury was recently announced, was pleasantly surprised Tuesday evening, by a Valentine luncheon and useful shower. Members of the Billiken club, of which Miss Hill is secretary assembled at the home of Miss Mary Farrell, Hodges Avenue for their regular meeting.

Great was Miss Hill's surprise when she was escorted to the dining-room which was resplendent with flaming red hearts, cupids with their arrows, and other decorations suggestive of the Valentine season and the happy occasion. The table was most artistically spread and at each cover was an original place-card and ice-cup, the handiwork of the president, Miss Buckley. A lighted silver candelabrum with its red silken shades cast its rosy beams upon the faces of the jolly party and the perfume of the red carnations permeated the room. A dainty and appetizing luncheon was served, the color scheme being ingeniously carried out in the delicacies enjoyed.

Many were the gifts, both beautiful and useful that Miss Hill received and complete was her surprise as there was no evidence whatever of a "shower," for the articles were concealed beneath the table and at the appointed time drawn to her place by ribbons.

Miss Hill is the fourth club member who announced her engagement since its existence and they are now all asking, "Who will be the next?"

The Billiken club is composed of the following young ladies:—Mrs. Helen Curtin Moore, Mrs. Louise Hinkley Walton, Mrs. Ardelia Barker Merrill and the Misses Florence Hill, May Buckley, Cora Harding, Mary Farrell Georgianna Priest, Martha Jenkins, Marion White, Edna Robinson, Ethel Robinson and Julia Barber.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Proposal to License Cats Stirs Boston's Bachelor Girls—Pros and Cons of Feline Pets vs. Feathered Songsters—A Real Live Duke Proves to be a Real Live Wire—He Lectures on "The Gentle Art of Poisoning"—Famous Sanctuary of Colonial Antiquity is Damaged but not Destroyed by Fire—An Opera Singer Gives Sound Advice to an Incompetent Young Singer.

Whether Bay State felines shall henceforth be licensed even as doggies are licensed is being debated on Beacon hill where legislators decide such weighty questions and in Back Bay apartments where well to do people spend part of their time writing letters to their representatives in the Great and General Court. The balance of opinion among Boston's many bachelor girls (including those who in the old days might have been called old maids) would seem, to judge from a limited observation, to be hostile to the requirement that toms and tabbies shall be subject to a license fee. The tax of poodles has already added considerably to the high cost of living in apartments; the proposed law would cause many a thrifty spinster to dread additions to her family of Angoras.

The argument that cats eat birds many a maiden lady says it is all bosh; you should instruct the slavie not to open the cage. Against this opinion of the tea drinking stay-at-homes is arrayed that of long hiking Appalachians and other feminine devotees of outdoor life. These members of Audubon and other natural history societies have it in for the prowling feline who each spring makes nesting unsafe in the hedgerow. So vehemently do some of the simple lifers feel on the subject that an encounter with the aforementioned bachelors might easily result in a cat and dog fight.

A real live duke has been one of Boston's excitements since about the middle of February. This duke, furthermore, has proved himself to be what in Yankee parlance might be called a live wire. His titles read "Duke Litta, Visconti Arese, Prince of Montespertoli and Campagnafredda." He is three times Grandee of Spain, a magnate of Hungary and hereitary Commander of the Order of Malta. He lives, when he is at home, in the mountainous country north of Milan and between Lakes Como and Maggiore in a feudal castle set on a peak higher than Mount Monadnock—"the ugliest place in all Europe," he declares proudly. "You see we were robber barons in the middle ages, and as my ancestor was the only Ghibelline among many Guelphs he had to build a very strong fortified place."

The local newspapers, too, have found him a fount of inspiration for good "copy" for he is readily interviewed and has a remarkable fund of information and anecdote. One of the duke's humoresques is to express regret at the passing of refined and subtle methods of administering poisons. "Nowadays they poison by using such awful things as arsenic or the tips of lucifer matches. That is the absolute negation of art."

Members of patriotic societies throughout the country will rejoice to learn that the rather disastrous fire in the ancient Royall House, Medford, damaged only the so called Tidd ell. As this addition of the Tidd family's dates from only 1823 the case is not so bad as if the whole domicile of antiquity had been flame swept. A few specimens of old furniture were lost. A wonderful collection of autographs, fortunately, belonging to Curator B. F. Fenton, had recently been removed from the ell to the attic. Still the water played havoc with these so that the recovery of some of them is doubtful. Despite the discouraging effect of such a conflagration visitors to Boston this coming spring and summer will doubtless find the latchstring out as heretofore at the historic Royall House. Among the many colonial museums of eastern Massachusetts it is one of the most attractive.

Good advice is often given to ambitious young musicians and artists. Perhaps none sounder was ever bestowed on one of doubtful competence than that given the other day, according to a story going the rounds in Boston's music colony, by a famous opera singer to a young woman who has spent more money and time than brains upon her musical education. Having studied singing under some of the most famous masters of America and Europe and believing herself unjustly left out of the cast at the opera house she finally induced a compassionate tenor of the company to allow her to sing to him privately. The great musician bore it stoically as the girl did aria after aria, each way beyond her capacity or comprehension. His look she interpreted as one of interested approval. After a grand finale she turned suddenly and asked: "Now what would you advise me to do?" The answer came frank and simple: "Get married."

Ethel Angier.

Boston, Feb. 20, 1913.

EDUCATIONAL COMPARISONS.

A meeting of the Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus was held in Colonial hall Thursday evening. It was voted to attend Holy Communion in a body at St. John's church, March 2. In a talk on "Our Chief Concern" William J. Shanahan of Somerville, speaker outlined a comparison of early and present day educational systems. Several amendments were made to the constitution.

THREE MEN HURT IN SPECTACULAR FIRE

Blaze In Boston Building Results In $300,000 Damage

Boston, Feb. 21.—Two firemen are in a hospital suffering from smoke poisoning, another fireman was blown through a window and a damage of $300,000 resulted from a spectacular fire last night in the five-story brick building, 239 to 245 Causeway street. The building, which was practically gutted from cellar to roof, was occupied by Braman, Dow & Co., dealers in plumbers' and steamfitters' supplies.

Five alarms were sounded before there were men and apparatus enough to cope with the flames, which made a roaring furnace. It became necessary to call upon the Somerville department for assistance when the fire was at its height, as sparks from the main fire started a blaze upon the roof of a wooden building adjoining the old gas company's works on Hull street. A citizen sounded another alarm from box 12, which called some of the apparatus at the hardware fire to answer that alarm.

The cause of the fire is unknown. It started on the first floor and was discovered by a boy employed in a cigar store on Causeway street, adjoining the building.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Citizens' Gas Light Company

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO CONSUMERS

NEW SYSTEM OF METER READING AND BILLING

It is the aim of the Citizens' Gas Light Company to give to the Public a service as excellent in every detail as possible and to improve the service as opportunity offers.

To this end the Company will on March 1st, 1913, put into effect a new system of Meter Reading and Billing which has been adopted after careful study of the many systems in use in other cities.

REGULAR METER READERS

Instead of hiring a large number of special men to read all the meters on the last few days of the month (as will still be done up to February 28th, 1913) the Company will in March create a permanent force of regular meter readers, who will be easily identified by the Company's badge conspicuously worn.

CONSTANT SYSTEM

These men will on each working day throughout the month read all the meters in one of the sections into which the accounts have been grouped and, having covered the City, will periodically read the same meters once in about every thirty calendar days, all bills rendered covering gas used during the preceding thirty days.

BILLS PAYABLE WITHIN FIFTEEN DAYS OF DATE

Two days after the reading of the meters of any section, the corresponding bills will be delivered. Each bill must be paid within fifteen days of its date and should a bill become overdue by not being paid within fifteen days, the supply may be discontinued without further notice.

EXAMPLES

The following examples are given on typical cases:

| METER IN SECTION NO. 2 | | METER IN SECTION NO. 7 | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Meter read | Monday, Mar. 10 | Meter read | Wednesday, Mar. 19 |
| Bill delivered | Wednesday, Mar. 12 | Bill delivered | Friday, Mar. 21 |
| Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Tuesday Mar. 25 | Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Thursday, Apr. 3 |

METHOD OF CHANGE FROM OLD TO NEW SYSTEM

As all meters will be read in the last days of February and as the new system will go into active operation about March 10th, it is evident that the first bills received after this latter date will cover periods ranging from two to six weeks. But in future the date of the last state of the meter and the date of the preceding state of the meter will appear on all bills; the period covered by each bill will therefore be evident in the bill and should be considered in connection with the amount of gas used.

For instance, bills rendered March 14th, will cover a period of about three weeks, while bills rendered April 2nd, will cover a period of about six weeks. After these first six weeks of change, customers will find that each month they will receive their bills on or about the same date, and that each bill will invariably cover the preceding thirty days.

LEARN TO READ METERS

We would again urge our customers to learn how to read meters; instruction as to this will be found on the back of the gas bills and will enable customers to check bills rendered.

REMITTANCES BY MAIL

Remittances sent through the mails should be addressed only in the name of the Company to its office, No. 11 Granite Street, Quincy.

We desire in conclusion, to assure our customers that the installation of the system outlined above is to secure uniformity and accuracy in handling their accounts.

Huerta, Madero's Right Hand Man, Who Turned Against Him

© 1913, by American Press Association.

General Victoriano Huerta, Mexico's latest dictator, is the senior officer in command of the Mexican army with the rank of major general. For many months he has been in command of all the federal forces in the vicinity of Mexico City. When General Diaz and General Reyes began their revolt on Sunday, Feb. 9, Huerta was designated to take charge of the situation. He disposed the federal forces and personally led many of the assaults in the last ten days of fighting around the arsenal, where Diaz was fortified.

MURDER AND LOOT CHARGED

Madero May Have to Face Official Investigations

HUERTA CABINET TAKES OATH

Deposed President and Vice President Hear Plaudits of People as New Officials Pick Up Reins of Government—Diaz a Popular Idol, Receiving Ovation From the People as He Rides at Head of Men Who For Nine Days Withstood Attacks of the Government Troops

Mexico City, Feb. 21.—That Francisco Madero will get out of tMexico without having to face official investigations for one thing or another now appears improbable.

He has already been charged with responsibility for the death of Colonel Riveroll, whom he is alleged to have shot at the time of his arrest in the palace.

A committee of deputies has now asked that Madero be forced to account for moneys expended by the administration. This committee called on President Huerta and urged that Madero be held accountable for the depleted condition of the treasury.

The last details of the organization of Mexico's new government were completed late yesterday afternoon when the members of Huerta's official family took the oath in the yellow room in the palace, immediately above that occupied by the deposed president and vice president.

Unable to witness the scenes from their rooms, Madero and Suarez were yet able to hear the plaudits of the crowds in the streets and in the big square in front and the bugle calls for the united army. Significant of the birth in battle of the new administration was the frank display of soldiers, and the effect on the crowds was not lost.

It served as a reminder that even if it was not a military dictatorship that had been established, the present administration was of much sterner quality than that which had just fallen.

Diaz Present as Private Citizen

General Diaz was among those in the yellow room when the ministers took the oath and heard Huerta pronounce the formal time-honored phrase: "If you keep this oath, the country will reward you; if you do not, it will call you to an accounting."

Diaz was present, ostensibly in no official capacity, but merely as a private citizen, which he became many months ago on resigning his commission as a general in the regular army.

Madero and Suarez showed in their faces the chagrin and humiliation which they must have felt, according to officers of the guard. Neither deigned to ask questions as to what was happening in the room above, but the conversation of the guards served to acquaint them with the proceedings. A sneer showed on the face of Madero, but the dejection of Suarez was too great apparently to permit a play of other emotions.

Fredrico G. Garza, the former governor of the federal district, is the third prisoner occupying the room. There is no partition. Each man is furnished with a bed and meals are brought periodically and served jointly.

Outside the room stands a guard of soldiers and although there are no windows in the room, another guard is constantly on duty within, even during the sleeping hours.

ENVIRONMENT AND YOUR CHILD

A. S. Townsend Gives Some Interesting Experiences

Meeting of Parents-Teachers Asso. of Adams school was held Thursday evening. Principal A. S. Townsend gave an address on "Environment and Your Child." Miss Phyllis Smith of Atlantic, a pupil at the Quincy High school gave two readings and responded to an encore. Miss Smith's delivery made a fine impression. Among the speakers was Miss Nellie Tileston of the State Board of Charities who told of her work. She was well received.

Mr Townsend's lecture was interspersed with incidents of his early experience as a principal. He spoke of the inadvisability of parents boasting of their school day pranks before their children.

He cited many cases showing that of the two great forces shaping the individual and the race heredity and environment, by far the most powerful is environment. He said modern psychology has many suggestions to offer parents regarding the importance of environmental influences on children which all parents ought to know.

President Foy said he regretted that more members did not atend.

A business meeting was held at which pertinent school topics were discussed.

The entertainments at these meetings are in charge of Mrs. William Wilson. Refreshments were served by Miss Bessie Roberts of Grade Five, assisted by Mrs. Charles Hobart, Mrs. Charles E. Hutt and Mrs. Harold Hanson.

WOLLASTON BEACH RESIDENTS OPPOSE PUBLIC BATH HOUSE

Councilman Gilliatt Did Not Think the Project Feasible or of Great Demand

Rep. McCarthy Thought Opposition Favored Private Bath House

(Special to the Ledger)

The Committee on Metropolitan Affairs at the State House heard the arguments for and against the establishment of a public bath house at Wollaston Beach, Feb. 21.

In favor of the proposition were Secretary of the Board of Trade, John O. Hall and Albert L. Whitman, a member of that organization. Mr. Hall told the committee that the Board of Trade of Quincy had declared in favor of the bath house, and that the city council had also passed an order supporting it. The present facilities for bathing, they said, are not what they should be for the accomodation of the large crowds that throng the beach in the summer time. It would be an immense help for the children of Quincy. It would enhance the value and beauty of the boulevard and make an added attraction at Wollaston for visitors.

Mr. Whitman said the only opposition that might be raised would come from residents in the vicinity of the proposed building. This, he thought showed selfishness.

Councilman Charles L. Gilliat opposed the bill strongly. He told the committee that at a public hearing on the matter, fully seventy-five people had voted against it and not a voice was raised in its behalf. The project is not a feasible one for the State to undertake, Mr. Gilliat said, because of the inaccessibility of the location and the conditions at the beach for taking care of transient crowds. The beach is purely a place of enjoyment and relaxation for the immediate neighbors and not the proper scituation for a public recreation grounds. The latter is what the beach would become if the bath house were established, he thought. Another argument Mr. Gilliat offered was that the poor car service which accommodates the beach-goers and which makes it undesirable for a public gathering place.

S. OF ST. GEORGE ANNUAL EVENT

Anniversary Minstrel Show and Dance Big Success

MANY LOCAL HITS

Hundreds enjoyed the 27th anniversary, minstrel show and dance held on the eve of Washington's Birthday at Music hall, under the auspices of Granite lodge, 193, Order of Sons of St. George. Among the invited guests were Mayor Eugene R. Stone and members from surrounding cities and towns.

David S. "Tuck" McIntosh again acted as an interlocutor. He was primed with his experience and natural ability and kept the ball a-rolling until the curtain dropped midst thunderous applause.

The end men, all local lights, carried off their parts in an unusually brilliant manner. The jokes were well timed and witty and kept the audience in uproarious laughter. Catchy and popular songs were rendered with the ragtime swing necessary to a perfect show.

One of the brightest hits was the German Band specialty with Charles Moyle as the leader. A pleasing feature was the singing of "Decoratfon Day" with a tableaux setting following. Andrew Dinegan who wrote the piece also coached the show.

The grand march was led by William A. G. Andrew and Miss Ethel Collins. Mr. and Mrs. J. Ernest Collins were second, and about 100 couples were in line.

THE PHILIPPINE QUESTION.

Cardinal Gibbons expresses some very common sense views with regard to the duty of this country towards the Philippine islands. Many anti-imperialists, tickled alone by the title may be heard expressing horror that the people of the eastern archipelago are still held in "bondage," when no such condition exists. The Filipinos are better off today then they ever have been, yet some misguided people would hurl them into the throes of premature independence, which would only result in strife and blood shed leave them a prey to other nations and then the United States would probably be called upon again to engage in an expensive war to free those people. This country paid $20,000,000 for the islands, the land, not the people. It was a most unheard of thing to do to pay a beaten nation for territory acquired which could have been annexed by the conquest and it was done with the Christian idea of later giving those people their freedom. They are free now. They enjoy all the privileges of the people of this country. They are being educated and civilized. No doubt some of them are being stirred up their leaders and politicians who see fame and wealth ahead of them in this activity.

At the same time it must be understood that this personal ambition to use nations as foot balls of fate leads to the shedding of much innocent blood. Mexico offers a horrible example of that kind right at our very door.

Cardinal Gibbons says: "It would be a national dishonor for the United States to surrender the Philippines to the tender mercies of some neighboring power or to turn them adrift, wholly unprepared, to face the future as independent nation."

The Cardinal opposes what he terms a "scuttle" policy with regard to the islands. His arguments, are not only Christian like and philanthrophic but reasonable in the extreme. This country owes it to the world to show that she can take a people who have been sufferers from the oppressors yoke for years, uneducated, ignorant, almost savage in their habits and inclinations and lift them up to the highest plane of civilization and make useful men and women of them in this world. It will take time to do it, but that such an end will be reached and he "scuttle" policy should be relegated to the back yard of national affairs where it belongs and this country should continue its independent and splendid work to reclaiming those people and according them the treatment due to human beings.

VETO SUSTAINED.

President Taft's only objection to the recent immigration bill was the literacy test. It was, and it was enough. The House of Representatives in refusing to support the Senate in passing the bill over the president's veto came in closer touch with the common people on this subject than the upper house.

It is rather a fortunate thing that the bill was not passed, as there is every evidence that a determined effort to undo such a great injustice would have been inaugurated which would have occupied time which could be otherwise utilized. Not but what consideration of an immigration bill is important enough for due deliberation and debate, but the failure to sustain the veto fortunately saved this time to other matters of probably as much merit.

The senate performed an unworthy act in overturning the President's veto. In fact the senate has been doing things much like a spoiled child within the past few years, when they are being more and more shown that their period as select legislators is drawing to a close.

In some cases their performance is spleeny, as if they resented the activity of the people to the election of United States senators by direct vote. The great mischief is that this action was not taken long ago. Then perhaps there would have been less of the scandals which have been swept out from Washington with every wind that blows.

As an example of the unfairness of the literacy clause, take the speech of an English woman at a suffragette meeting in New Jersey the other day. She advocated the use of dynamite. Undoubtedly she could pass the educational test provided by the government but she would be seriously lacking in her moral and legal obligations as a candidate for admission to this country, when measured by her sentiments. In fact she and such as entertain similar sentiments would be a menace to the country and while on the subject would it not be just as well if this young lady were conducted to the next ship to cross and deported. As an undesirable she certainly takes front rank, without the application of any literacy test, just plain, common every day sense test and her place is on the other side with the other fire brands.

MANY FRIENDS AT THE FUNERAL

Of Anthony Sweeney and Many Floral Tributes in Evidence

The funeral of Anthony Sweeney who died Friday in his 59th year was held from his home 72 Phipps street Sunday afternoon. Services were conducted in St. John's church by Rev. Fr. John J. Casey. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Delegations were present from the Granite Manufacturers Quincy Lodge of Elks, Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus, Post Office Clerks.

The deceased was the father of a large family, one of whom is Superintendant, James W. Sweeney of the East Milton Post Office who is also a trustee of the Elks, a prominent Knights of Columbus and a local attorney.

The bearers were Thomas M. Butler, Patrick K. Ward, Daniel J. Daley, J. Frank Goodhue, Patrick H. Igo, Bartholmew Duran.

Among the floral offerings were a wreath of roses and carnations from the W. I. T. U. girls of William Filene Sons Co., where Miss Charlotte Sweeney is a buyer; cross of lilies and roses from the A. ## OPPOSE BATH HOUSE

A copy of the city council's order regarding the bill and the veto of Mayor Stone of that order, were offered as evidence. No attempt had ever been made by the council to override the veto, Mr. Gilliat said.

Mr. E. O. Woodward, a resident of Wollaston opposed the bill and said all Wollaston is practically united against the establishment of the proposed State building. As far as the accommodations for Quincy children are concerned, Mr. Woodward pointed out that there are now municipal bathing houses located in better parts of the city for the city's population. The beach at Wollaston where the bath hause is proposed to be built, is a stony beach, with mud flats when the tide is out. At only certain parts of the day is the beach available for bathing purposes. Between last Fourth of July and Labor Day only 17 days had the tide come right to be good tide for bathing. "It is a local bathing beach," said Mr. Woodward "and nothing the State should undertake to develop for public interests.

Dr. Kelley and Joseph L. Barbour were recorded as opposed to the bill. Just before the hearing closed, Representative McCarthy, of South Boston asked if he might say a word in favor. It was granted him and he took occasion to say that he thought the bill a good one. He made the assertion that all the opposition comes from one source and that it is made to protect the interests of a man who runs private bath houses and is afraid he will lose his business.

The president of the Board of Trade John L. Hamilton was present but did not speak. When asked by the Ledger reporter as to his attitude on the question of building a bath house at Wollaston, Mr. Hamilton said "I am taking an absolutely neutral position. As president of the Board of Trade, which body is behind this bill, I cannot speak against it, yet I know the sentiment of my neighbors in Wollaston to be unalterably against this measure and personally I am inclined to side with them. Whatever the committee on Metropolitan Affairs reports on the bill, will be accepted by me, but I shall not publicly take a stand either for or against the matter. I cannot emphasize my neutrality in this question too strongly."

BURIED AT MT. WOLLASTON.

STRIFE FEARED IN VENEZUELA

Feeling That Castro Has Planned Another Revolution

SECRETLY LEAVES NEW YORK

With Two Generals and Private Secretary, the Former Dictator Sails For Cuba—Schooner and Arms Said to Be Awaiting Him In Gulf of Mexico—Well Supplied With Funds

New York, Feb. 24.—The secret departure of General Cipriano Castro for Cuba, in the opinion of the Venezuelan colony in New York, means revolution in Venezuela.

Guarding his actions with the greatest secrecy, Castro, with General Simon Bello, his brother-in-law, General Jose A. Davila, his revolutionary agent in Curacoa, and Alfred Torregrossa, his secretary, is well on his way to Havana.

The departure of the party followed a long secret conference at the Savoy hotel, and every effort was made to hide their destination. The chauffeur of a hired automobile, acting under directions, made a circuitous journey to the Ward line pier, but arrived there in time for the party to go on board the steamship Saratoga. None of them was seen to leave the vessel before she left her pier, three hours earlir than usual.

"There can be no question that Castro has left New York for Cuba in furtherance of his revolutionary designs upon Venezuela," said Jacinto Lopez. "He is known to have purchased a schooner of light draught which is now in the Gulf of Mexico and which by this time may have been laden with its cargo of rifles and ammunition purchased while Castro was awaiting the adjudicaflon of his habeas corpus application in the United States court. That there will be a conjunction of the two somewhere in the West Indies at an early date seems to me to be a foregone conclusion."

Lopez said he had heard of the arrival of Bello and Davila, the former from Porto Rico and the latter from Curacao, on Friday, and that they were active agents of Castro. For several weeks the Castro adherents in Curacao, he said, have been working openly in the interests of their deposed chief, and they have been supplied with funds from a mysterious source.

According to a Venezulan who came to New York from Caracas recently there is considerable unrest there, and he said yesterday that the presence of Castro in the West Indies probably would result in an increase of the revolutionary spirit which admittedly exists among the Venezuelans as a class.

"There is much dissatisfaction expressed against President Gomez," he said, "but in ordinary circumstances this would amount to little were it not for the proximity of Castro. When it is known that the deposed president is in Cuba, speedy trouble for Gomez may be looked for."

CHARGES AGAINST KEEFE

Taft Asked to Demand Resignation of Immigration Chief

Washington, Feb. 24.—Secretary Nagel of the department of commerce and labor made a report to President Taft on the official conduct of Daniel J. Keefe of Detroit, commissioner general of immigration, and recommended that Keefe's resignation be demanded.

The report alleges the head of the immigration service accepted free transportation for himself and family from railroads and steamships.

Keefe was appointed commissioner general of immigration in November, 1908, for an indeterminate term by President Roosevelt. He had been a supporter of Taft in the presidential campaign and it was charged by the Democratic national committee that his appointment was a reward for his political services.

He was formerly international president of the Longshoremen's union and sixth vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

PERILOUS OCCUPATION

Over a Thousand Miners Killed In Pennsylvania Last Year

Harrisburg, Feb. 24.—More than 1000 lives were lost in the mines of Pennsylvania in 1912, according to the annual report of the department of mines, which shows that the total production of hard and soft coal in the state amounted to 245,231,555 tons, or about one-half of the entire output in the United States.

In the bituminous fields 182,680 men and boys were employed, of whom 437 were killed.

In the anthracite fields there were 175,964 employed, of whom 593 were killed.

METER READING SYSTEMATIZED

New Form Will Prove More Satisfactory Than Old

The change in the meter reading and billing system about to be inaugurated by the Citizens' Gas Light Co. was not undertaken without the fullest investigation. With such a large field as Quincy, it has been a perplexing problem to have the meters of the city read during the last few days of the month and in order to do this it has been necessary to import a lot of men from other districts to do the work. It is not always possible to get the same crew of meter readers which accounts for the fact that most people have had the experience of having a new man appear every month which to say the least has been somewhat confusing, in these times when the country is full of imposters feeding on the unsuspecting public.

When the new system goes into effect on March 1, the man who reads your meter one month will be the man who will read your meter the next month. The housewife therefore soon becomes acquainted with the official of the company and the anxiety about letting an imposter into the house in his respect is removed. It will take about six weeks to get the new system in easy running order so that there will be some little irregularity in the meter reading for a few weeks.

CHILDREN'S PARTY.

A pretty affair was the third annual children's party held at the Cochato club last Saturday afternoon from 2 until 6 o'clock.

There were about 175 little folks present and the festivities were in charge of Mrs. Harry W. Hall assisted by Mrs. Gordon M. Keating and Mrs. Harold M. Gage. A most enjoyable entertainment was furnished by Ray Newton who greatly delighted his audience with marvellous feats of legerdemain and slight of hand tricks. At the close of this part of the program there was dancing for the children, about 75 couples taking part, the grand march being led by Allen Gage and Elizabeth Drinkwater.

Ice cream and cake was a very popular feature of the afternoon.

Later there was general dancing in charge of Miss Hildegarde Dearing and Miss Helen Averill. The hall was prettily decorated with flags and bunting and each child received a souvenir emblematic of the birthday of the great George Washington.

HOLIDAY NOT VERY PLEASANT

Rain with Thunder and Lightning Prevailed

FOLLOWED BY COLD WAVE

The holiday as far as the weather was concerned was a rather gloomy one. There was a moisture in the air all of the morning and while it did not begin to rain until afternoon it looked threatening all the time. The first real rain of the day fell about 2.30 and from then on until late at night it was stormy. At times during the afternoon the rain fell in torrents. Then again it would slack up and look as though it was about to clear up.

It did not however and the evening was unusually stormy. Accompanying this was the heavy roll of thunder and sharp flashes of lightning. No places in Quincy were struck however as far as known. About 10.30 Saturday night it apparently cleared up for the rain ceased to fall, but only for a few minutes however when it began to fall again.

Sunday was pleasant all day but considerably colder than the past few days. The air was clear and cold but a delightful winter day.

This morning the air was clear and crisp the temperature at 7 o'clock being in the vicinity of 10 above zero.

Flags were generally displayed on all public buildings and many private residences during the holiday and the church bells were rung at sunrise, noon and sunset.

There were many private family gatherings about the city during the day, especially in families where some member was observing a birthday anniversary.

In the evening a public patriotic meeting was held in the Council Chamber at City Hall under the auspices of Paul Revere Post, G. A. R. Owing to the stormy weather however the attendance was not as large as it would otherwise have been.

Mayor Stone presided and after few remarks, briefly introduced Charles H. Johnson who gave his illustrated lecture on Washington. When the beautiful colored pictures of the flag were shown Mrs. Nason sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

THREE ALARMS LITTLE DAMAGE

Careless Boarder Set Fire to Bed Clothing

PLENTY OF SMOKE

The alarm from Box 272 at 11.20 Friday night was for a fire in an automobile owned by George W. McDonald of Charles street. When the firemen reached the scene they found that the blaze had been extinguished. While the firemen were present however the owner tried to start his engine when the machine burst into flames again. A stream from the chemical extinguished the flames.

The alarm from Box 712 at 7.13 Saturlay night was for a slight fire in the boarding house of Timothy Ryan at 67 Broadway. The fire was caused by a careless smoker. The boarder lay down in bed smoking his pipe and fell asleep, the pipe setting the mattress on fire. Mr. Ryan wakened the boarder and led him to safety and Mrs. Ryan ran to the fire alarm box. Mr. Ryan after leading the boarder out ran up stairs and threw the mattress out of the window. The loss was confined to the mattress .

The alarm from Box 23 at 8.05 this morning was caused by a smoking stove in the shoe shop of Louis J. Smith on Hancock street, nearly opposite the Ledger office. The store is heated by a stove in the back part. This morning Mr. Smith built a fire in the stove and while moving about accidently knocked the funnel off. This caused the smoke to pour into the store and give the impression to passers that the premises were on fire. The room was completely filled with stifling smoke but there was no fire damage. The front and rear door was opened and the place pretty well cleared out by the time the apparatus arrived. A passerby saw the smoke pouring from the door and ran to the box and gave the alarm.

IN GOLDEN AGE OF YOUTH

"College Life" a Thing Always to Be Regarded With the Tenderest of Memories.

The phrase "college life" is an Americanism and it has no equivalent in any other language but English. It describes, to those whose use with understanding and sympathy, an experience out of which grows a deep sentiment made up of pleasure, friendship, affection, loyalty and pride. It seems to them "a tender influence, a peculiar grace," that reaches out across miles and years, drawing them back to their Alma Mater, and the comradeship of their classmates. To most graduates their college life seems their golden age; through the mist of years the campus becomes an Island of Utopia whose very tediums grow bright in the retrospect, the sting of whose sins and failures was always lessened by the power of the ideals and hopes that filled its air. No campus ever was a Utopia, and the most golden age of memory has doubtless been much alloyed with baser metal, but if there is not something very bright and beautiful in American college life it is hard to account for the feeling in thousands of gray-haired men that long ago in their youth, besides the education they got, they gained around the knees of Alma Mater lasting joy, strength and inspiration that was not entirely contained in the books they read and cannot be exactly measured by the knowledge they acquired.—Paul Van Dyke in Scribner's Magazine.

The announcement by President Alfred W. Donovan that he will not be a candidate for re-election as the head of the Rockland Commercial club is received with regret by the members of that organization. The Commercial club has been fortunate in having Mr. Donovan at its head and it has accomplished a great deal under his administration. Mr. Donovan says that he has not got the time to give to the work and believes that it is time that the club had a new president.—Rockland Standard.

—Five new newspapers a day were started in the United States and Canada, on an average, in 1912, and nearly as many were discontinued or suspended, making a net gain of only 32 papers during the year. It is easy enough to start a paper in most any place, for there are usually enough disgruntled and "sore" people in the world who have axes to grind, etc., to warrant these ventures. In fact all lines of trade are obliged to compete against fly-by-night competitiors. Usually the old established concerns who continue to pay their bills, and intend to conduct business "on the level," win out in the end.—Wakefield Item.

BOTH FELL TO THE TRACKS

Mother and Daughter Had a Thrilling Experience

NEITHER SERIOUSLY HURT

Mrs. Andrew J. Carlson of 142 Granite street and her daughter Miss Annie Carlson aged 18 years had a narrow escape from serious injury Friday evening when they attempted to alight from an outward train just north of the Presidents bridge. The train on which they came from Boston was due to arrive in Quincy about 6 o'clock The signal on the outward track, which is operated from the gate house near the depot was out of order and was set at danger so that all trains were obliged to come to a stop The train upon which Mrs. Carlson and her daughter were on came to a stop near the signal block and they thinking that the train had reached the depot got up from their seats and prepared to leave the train. The daughter stepped off first and fell headlong to the inward rail. Just at that minute the train began to move and Mrs. Carlson also jumped off. She also fell on the inward rail.

They were seen to fall b ysome of the brakemen and the train was immediately stopped. They were assisted in to the car and taken to Quincy. On their arrival at the depot the police ambulance was called and they were removed to their homes. Physicians who were summoned found that they had fractured no bones but had been thoroughly shaken up and were suffering from a nervous shock.

GRANITE CITY HOSPITALITY

Dispensed with the Usual Lavish Hand Before Holiday

As usual the Granite City club kept open house the night before the holiday and extended the hand of hospitality to all members and their friends The rooms were thronged with members and guests from early evening until after 11 o'clock. The Wollaston orchestra showed up shortly after 7.30 and furnished continuous music until 11.30.

All of the billiard and pool tables were in use as well as most of the card tables where individual matches were played. In the reading room those who did not care for billiards or cards enjoyed the music and social conversation.

In the dining room a continuous buffet lunch was served all the evening. The attendance at the rooms was very large as usual all pronounced it a very enjoyable evening.

CHILDREN'S PARTY.

One of the charming events of the holiday, which interested several Quincy people, was the children's party given in the Louis XIV hall, at the Copley-Plaza by Miss Elizabeth J. Corlew. Over 200 children participated, and fully 400 adults enjoyed the pretty sight. Eight well known society ladies were matrons. George and Martha Washington were admirably impersonated by a young master and miss in costume, and during the afternoon they danced the minuet. The parasol German and the Confetti dance were other features, but the grace with which the young people danced was what pleased the fond parents and friends.

A PRETTY HOUSE PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Corthell were the hosts at a pretty Washington's birthday party given Saturday evening in honor of Miss Bertha L. Bosworth, of West Boylston, a cousin of Mrs. Corthell. The evening was spent in playing several novelty games, interspersed by musical solos and dancing. A collation was served, the dishes used being all prettily decorated with red, white and blue. Besides Miss Bosworth, the guests included Mr. and Mrs. Albert T. Fish of Somerville, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Barrow of Waltham, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Rogers of Quincy, Miss Alice Livermore of Providence, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Herbert Everett of Norfolk Downs, Aldro Hibbard of Boston, Dr. and Mrs. Herman Keene, Miss Eleanor Whittemore, Miss Mildred Rogers and Mrs. C. A. Rogers, all of Quincy.

OFFERED BRIBE TO FREE THAW

John Anhut Named by Chief of Matteawan Asylum

LAWYER WOULD GIVE $20,000

Sulzer Issues Statement After Conference With Russell, Who Will Look Up Records and Tell All He Knows at Inquiry—Governor Does Not Favor Slayer's Release

Albany, Feb. 24.—Governor Sulzer announced that Dr. Russell, superintendent of Matteawan state hospital for the criminal insane, has told him that "he thinks" the man who offered him $20,000 if he would aid in releasing Harry K. Thaw "is named John Anhut."

As a result of this information the governor said the committee of inquiry had issued a subpoena for "John N. Anhut, whom we have learned maintained an office on Wall street in New York city."

Anhut, if located, will be asked to appear before the committee inquiring into charges that William F. Clark, secretary of the committee, had used the governor's name without authority in an attempt to secure Thaw's release, will be resumed.

The governor issued this statement concerning the Thaw case:

"Dr. Russell, the superintendent of Matteawan state hospital, called to discuss the Thaw matter. Substantially he told me this:

"That some time last December he was invited by telephone to New York to meet a man whom he thinks is named John Anhut. Russell went to New York in response to this invitation and met this man, who told him he could make $20,000 if he would help to get Thaw out of the insane asylum. Subsequently Anhut met him again in New York and made the same offer. Russell said he declined the offer on both occasions, and said nothing about it to any one except Colonel Scott.

"Just who John Anhut is appears to be a mystery. I never heard of John Anhut, but we are having him looked up. Russell thinks he is a lawyer, but is as vague in this and his description as he is as to just what was said, and how it was said, and when and where it was said.

"However, Russell has promised me to look up certain dates and memoranda to refresh his memory, and come before the the committee on inquiry to testify to everything he knows in connection with the case.

"Let me say again, as emphatically as I can, that no one is or was authorized to use my name, directly or indirectly, in connection with the liberation of Thaw. The first knowledge I had of it was when Dr. May called my attention to the fact that an effort was being made to get Thaw out. I told May at that time that no one had any authority to use my name in this matter or any other matter; that I was not in sympathy with Thaw; that I would do nothing directly or indirectly to get him out of the lunatic asylum, and that the only way Thaw could be discharged was through due process of law and by the order of a supreme court judge. So far as I am concerned, Thaw will stay in the asylum to the end."

TAKE A SHORT CUT

Main "Army" of Suffragists Beat Pace-Makers Into Baltimore

Baltimore, Feb. 24.—Exercising the proverbial feminine prerogative, the members of "General" Rosalie Jones' suffragist "army" changed their minds twice Sunday and as a result they encamped last night at a hotel in this city.

When the army left Belair shortly after 9 o'clock yesterday morning the orders were for an over-night stop at Overlea, five miles from Baltimore. There was discussion along the way and the "going" was so good that it was decided to push on to Baltimore.

Then, when five of the pilgrims had gained a long lead on the others, those in the rear voted to ignore Overlea and take a short cut. Thus it was that the main army reached the hotel here shortly before 6 o'clock last night, an hour ahead of the would-be pace-makers, who went to Overlea.

San Francisco, Feb. 24.—Women are the moving factors in the recall petition filed against Judge Charles E. Weller. The campaign was started after he had reduced the bond of a man charged with an offense against a woman. The man ran away.

CO-OPERATIVE INSURANCE.

One help in the solving of industrial problems is the creation of more friendly relations between employer and employee.

The Foreman's association at the Stetson Shoe Company, South Weymouth, has recently arranged to provide a $500, twenty year endowment insurance policy for each of its 25 members through the insurance departments of savings banks. The company has offered to pay one-half the cost of the premiums so long as the policy holder remains in the employ of the company. Each year of service adds to the cash surrender value of the policy and at the end of 20 years, $500 will be paid each member. This act not only protects the policy holder and his family but also creates a new incentive for continuing service which helps to hold valuable employees loyal to the company. In time, perhaps, this offer of co-operative life insurance will be extended to other employees.

Doubtless this plan will be adopted by others, who, in the interest of loyal service, wish to develop a business-like co-operation between employer and employee. Massachusetts savings bank life insurance, which through the co-operation of the state and the savings banks furnishes the best insurance at lowest cost, provides an unexcelled opportunity for business men to develop this co-operative insurance with their employees.

Boston, Feb. 24.—Mrs. Anna C. Davie, the young wife of Robert E. Davie, the "boy broker," has left her parents' comfortable home to help others by studying in the Boston city hospital to be a trained nurse. The exacting duties of her nurse's training may also enable Mrs. Davie to forget her own sorrows.

Her husband is serving a five year term in prison for embezzlement. Before his flight and later arrest in Brazil, however, Mrs. Davie had left him and retured to the home of her parents. She has suffered severely in the wreck of her marriage.

As her parents are well-to-do, Mrs. Davie is not obliged to support herself. But she has voluntarily taken up the study of nursing

P. J. Garrity, 298 Granite street, Quincy, Mass., says: "Some time ago I suffered so severely from kidney disease that I could hardly get about. I was restless at night and could not find any position that was comfortable. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and contained a heavy sediment. I was rapidly growing worse and was at a loss to know what to do as the many remedies I tried failed to help me. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. After I had taken the contents of four boxes I was in good health. # COLD-BLOODED ASSASSINATION OF MADERO

Shot Down While "Guarded" by a Hundred Rurales

SUAREZ SHARES SIMILAR FATE IN MEXICO CITY

Deposed President Receives Bullet In Back of Head, While Former Vice President Dies Facing Assassins—Prisoners Being Taken From Palace to Jail When Alleged Attack on Guards Occurs on Street at Midnight—Huerta Officially Announces That Prisoners Were Trying to Escape and Were Killed In Exchange of Shots

Mexico City, Feb. 24.—Francisco I. Madero and Jose P. Suarez were assassinated at midnight Saturday night while being taken under guard from the national palace to the penitentiary. Madero was shot in the back of the head. Suarez was shot facing his slayers.

General Huerta says the killing was incidental to a fight between their guard and a party attempting to liberate them and also declares they attempted to escape.

The greater part of the public believes the men were murdered and disbelieve the official report, having in mind the use for centuries of the notorious "Ley Fuga," the unwritten law which is invoked when the death of a prisoner is desired. After its application there is written on the records: "Prisoner shot trying to escape."

The only witnesses were those actually concerned in the killing.

Senora Madero, widow of the deposed president, received the first information of his death from the Spanish minister. She already had heard reports that something unusual and serious had occurred, but friends had endeavored to prevent her from learning the whole truth.

Soon afterwards, accompanied by her brother, Jose Perez, and Mercedes Madero, a sister of Francisco, Senora Madero drove to the penitentiary, but was refused permission to see the body of her husband. Senora Suarez was also denied admittance to the mortuary, where physicians were performing an autopsy.

Woman Denounces Officers

In contrast to the widow, whose grief was of a pitiably silent character, expressed in sobs, Mercedes Madero, a beautiful young woman, educated in Paris, who has been a brilliant leader of society since the revolution of 1910, was dry-eyed and tigerish in her emotions. By the side of the two women whose husbands had been killed, the girl hurled accusations at the officers who barred the entrance.

"Cowards," "assassins," she called them, her voice pitched high. The officers stared impassively. "You, the men who fired on a defenseless man. You and your superior officers are traitors."

No effort was made to remove the women, nor did the officers attempt to silence them. Senora Madero continued to weep and the girl did not cease her hysterical tirade until the arrival of the Spanish minister and the Japanese charge, who came to offer their services.

The minister spoke with the officers in charge, but was told that on account of the autopsy it would be impossible for anyone to see the bodies. Later in the day, they said, the request would be complied with. The diplomats then conducted the women away from the penitentiary.

Madero's father and Rafael Hernandez, former minister of the interior, and other friends made efforts early in the day to recover the bodies, and it was stated that American Minister Wilson had interested himself and secured the promise of Minister de la Barra tnat the bodies should be delivered to their families for burial.

Details of the Tragedy

The tragedy occurred shortly after midnight. Madero and Suarez, who had been prisoners in the national palace since their arrest on Tuesday last, were placed in an automobile, which was accompanied by another car and escorted by 100 rurales under the orders of Commandant Cardenas and Colonel Pimiento.

With instructions not to outdistance the escort, the cars moved slowly. No incident occurred until they had reached a point near the penitentiary, where, in an open place, the guards' attention was attracted, according to the official version, to a group of persons following. Shots were fired at the escort out of the darkness. The rurales closed in and ordered the prisoners out of the car.

Thirty of the guards surrounded the prisoners while the remainder disposed themselves to resist an attack. About fifty men, some afoot and some mounted, threw themselves upon the detachment guarding the cars and the exchange of shots lasted twenty minutes, when the attacking party fled. The dead bodies of Madero and Suarez were then found, according to the official report.

Madero Shot From Behind

The body of Madero shows only one wound. A bullet entered the back of the head and emerged at the forehead. The body of Suarez shows many wounds, entering from in front.

Of the male members of the Madero family only two are now in the capital. One is Francisco Madero, the father, who bitterly opposed his son's conducting a revolution in 1910 and rode across northern Mexico in an effort to overtake and dissuade him; the other is Ernesto Madero, the former minister of finance, an uncle, though only a year older than the late president.

Gustavo Madero, a brother, was obliged to submit to the fugitive law the day after the deposition of the president and was shot down in the arsenal.

Not far from the penitentiary there are two small piles of stones, some twenty feet apart. They mark the spots where the men, who a few days ago ruled Mexico, fell. Holes in the wall of the penitentiary show where some of the bullets finally lodged.

The stones were piled by groups of sympathetic persons of the lower class whose curiosity early drew them to the scene. From the top of each pitiful monument last night flickered candles placed there and lighted by those who thus thought to pay the last rites of the church to the souls of the dead. From the ground had been scraped away blood-saturated earth which was carried off by the morbid, seeking souvenirs.

Huerta's Announcement

After the engagement on the road to the penitentiary, Commandant Cardenas reported to the military commander, who conducted him to General Huerta. The president summoned his cabinet, and, after apprising his ministers of the occurrence, issued an official announcement, saying Madero and Suarez were trying to escape on the way to prison and were killed during the exchange of shots. Two of the attacking party also were killed and two were wounded.

Both president and ministers deplored the affair and decided upon a full investigation to fix the responsibility and to punish the guilty. Members of the escort are under arrest pending the inquiry.

In his capacity as minister of foreign relations, Senor de la Barra addressed a note to the diplomatic representatives giving an account of the killing and assurances of a thorough investigation. There were no signs of a demonstration in the central part of the city during the day. The news was received quietly and apparently philosophically.

VANQUISHER OF "IRON MAN"

Madero Not at First Taken Seriously by Diaz Regime

Early in the year 1910, at the time Mexico's "Iron Man," Porfirio Diaz, had turned a deaf ear to the rumblings of discontent and once again set himself up as dictator, after holding that position for twenty-six years, Francisco Idalecia Madero, mathematician, poet, author and philosopher, raised his voice so loudly in protest that all Mexico listened and was thrilled.

It was then that Madero took his life in his hands and announced that he was a candidate for the presidency.

In its egotism of strength the Diaz regime looked upon this decrier as a crack-brained but harmless agitator, and the people far and wide were told that the family of Madero were tainted with insanity.

It took but two years for the world to learn differently, when they saw the aged Diaz flee from his country to Europe and heard cannon booming behind in Mexico proclaiming Madero provisional president of Mexico.

Madero was born Oct. 4, 1873, in northern Mexico. His family were reputed to be worth at least $60,000,000, being one of the heaviest landholders in the country.

When a young man Madero was sent abroad to study. He was first a student at the College of Versailles, later taking courses in Paris, in 1892 and 1893. The following year he was a student at the University of California, where he studied literature and agriculture.

He started to work, but it was almost disinterestedly, for dreams of freeing the peons and of lifting them from virtual slavery forever filled his brain.

His dreams gave way to action and by writings and speeches he attempted to instill in the laboring sons of Mexico ideas of equality, of liberty and of self respect.

It was on Oct. 1, 1911, that Madero was formally elected president of the Mexican people for a term of six years. It was the first attempt at a free election in the history of the country.

He took office on Nov. 6 of the same year under the most promising conditions, but it was only a short time before influential and able plotters against him began to work.

FRANCISCO I. MADERO

Former Head of Government Who Was Killed With Suarez

WON'T ATTEND LUNCHEON

De La Barra's Invitation Declined by Diplomats In Mexico City

Washington, Feb. 24.—Ambassador Wilson telegraphed to the state department last night that Francisco de la Barra, minister of foreign affairs, had invited all foreign diplomats in Mexico City to take luncheon with him today.

The ambassador stated that none of the diplomats would attend the luncheon unless the tragic death of Madero and Suarez is cleared of mystery.

This decision on the part of the diplomatic corps in the Mexican capital indicates the gravity of the situation which will confront the Huerta government should it fail to clear the mystery in which the killing of Madero and Suarez still is enveloped.

No official comment was forthcoming here on statements relating to the tragedy made by de la Barra and Huerta, but it was taken for granted that if the leaders were brutally murdered as the result of a plot the present government would be called upon for an explanation when it seeks political recognition at the hands of the United States.

Thus it may be brought about that, in addition to showing itself equal to the immense problems of reconstruction before it, including the re-establishment of law and order in states so long torn by revolution, Mexico may be asked to show that the blood of its late rulers is not upon its hands.

WILSON CABINET TO HAVE TEN MEMBERS

Department of Labor Is Certain to Be Created

Washington, Feb. 24.—President-elect Wilson, in all probability, will have ten members in his cabinet.

The house has passed the bill creating a department of labor, with a cabinet officer at its head. The bill has been debated in the senate, but little opposition has been manifested against it.

An agreement has been reached to take it up tomorrow and vote on it before adjournment. President Taft will aprpove the bill, and it will become a law in time for the new administration to set in motion the machinery of the new executive department.

Organized labor has been demanding this legislation for years.

CANNON "CHIEF QUACKER"

"Lame Ducks" Tell Press Club How It Feels to Go Home

Washington, Feb. 24.—"Uncle Joe" Cannon and ten other "lame duck" congressmen, three of them senators who have been recalled to private life, told the National Press club how it feels to "go back home."

C. K. Berryman, who acted as "official duck chaser," tapped on a large gong on each occasion when the "gentleman's time had expired."

None of the speakers present had served less than six years in the national congress, while in the case of Cannon, the "chief quacker," as he was called by the master of ceremonies, a period of thirty-eight years covers his length of service in the house.

AUTO PLUNGES INTO RIVER

Driver's Life Is Saved by Young Man's Prompt Act of Rescue

Boston, Feb. 24.—While driving his automobile across the Wellington bridge, which divides Somerville and Medford, yesterday afternoon, Temple Craige of Wakefield was seized with an attack of heart failure, lost control of the machine, which darted across the roadway, jumped the sidewalk and landed in the Mystic river, eight feet below.

With Craige in the machine was his wife and Miss Nellie Wilkins. The tide was high at the time and this prevented the automobile from turning turtle and burying the three persons underneath it.

To Andrew J. Leahy, 19 years old, Craige owes his life. Leahy was sitting in the window of his home which overlooks the river. He saw the accident and rushed to the spot, throwing off his loose clothing as he ran. Craige's head was resting on the steering wheel of the machine and covered with water.

Leahy waded out to the machine and held Craige's head up until assistance in the person of George W. Brennan reached him and with his help Craige was landed on the shore. The women in the meantime had climbed over the back of the machine and, aided by Leahy, crawled up the embankment.

MOOSERS MEAN BUSINESS

$50,000 Pledged For Separate Organization In Massachusetts

Boston, Feb. 24.—An appeal to the working men and women of Massachusetts to rally to the Progressive cause and the sounding of the death knell in this state to the proposition of amalgamation with the Republicans were the two big things that set the 1500 Bay State Bull Moosers, gathered at the first annual dinner, into a cheering throng of men and women.

As evidence that the Bull Moosers mean to stand by their declaration against amalgamation, Chairman Hale of the state committee of the Progressive party announced that men and women from all sections of the state had just pledged $50,000 with which to continue the separate party organization. Hale said that in six weeks of campaigning 122,000 votes for Progressive party candidates had been polled and now that almost a year has gone by the Moosers expect to sweep the state at the next election.

CHAIR RUNGS THE WEAPONS

Used on Quincy Rooters By Roxbury Supporters

AT BASKET BALL GAME

Quincy rooters were hit with chair rungs and other articles at the Roxbury game Saturday night. Both Quincy A. A. teams beat both St. Alphonsus basket ball teams in the Greater Boston league. The seniors won 23 to 14, and the seconds 19 to 15. The crowd intended to get the Quincy players and acted in a boisterous manner. Throughout both games they appeared eager to win at all costs.

Carlson and Connelly, both professionals, were in the lineup. The local boys were equal to their roughness when it became apparent that St. Alphonsus insisted on that kind of a game. Their registration is now under investigation and while it is generally known that they are pro's no suspensions has been ordered as yet.

The game was played on a marble court. Boyle was in the game after a short absence due to injuries received while playing on this court three weeks ago. The "Als" have not beaten Quincy this season and keenly feel their defeats.

Both O'Rourke brothers played well for the seniors. In the absence of "Boot" Chapman, "Nedzo" Bennett played with the second team. "Boot" is confined to his home with pneumonia. In Thursday night's game he was kicked in the throat accidentally. He said afterward that he thought his tonsils were kicked out and that he felt uncomfortable. A cold developed, but he is now doing well.

The rough stuff is being handed to the Quincy teams by the others, who in trying to win allow their enthusiasm to run away with their judgment.

REVERE LOST TAUNTON WON

Sam Prout Made Sensational Shoot For the Basket

BOTH GOOD GAMES

The first team of the Quincy High school was beaten in the local gym Saturday afternoon by Taunton High, 37 to 19. The second team beat the Revere High second team and claims the State championship of the second teams.

The score of the senior game was 14 to 9 in favor of Taunton in the first half. Quincy's playing was hardly up to their standard. In the last period Taunton played a flashy game and Quincy's defense gradually weakened.

Nearly seven minutes elapsed before either team did any shooting. "Let" Andrews opened the game by caging two pretty goals and Sam Prout followed by making a most spectacular shot. The score then alternated during the half, Taunton taking the lead.

In the second half the Quincy spirit seemed broken. Through an occasional flash they scored, but the passing was poor and the ball was not well followed.

"Bull Moose" Brown was shifted from back to centre. He was in fine fettle and in his enthusiasm committed five fouls, only one of them being thrown.

Hoping to shake the jinx, Coach La Rose played Hamlin and "Whet." Brown of the second team in the closing minutes of play. Their efforts proved fruitless, however, although they displayed good ability. Safford and Jenkins were retired.

Poole and Lockhart excelled for the visitors and Andrews played well for Quincy.

The second team played good basket ball, considering their experience. Earl Bates, the "midget" opposed a player weighing about 165 pounds. "Midgie" stuck to his man in good style.

"Whet" Brown played the back position for the first time and he and Martin were instrumental in breaking up dangerous plays. Martin made a most clever pass from under the basket to Sam Prout who was directly under Quincy's net which resulted in a feature score.

QUINCY KNIGHTS TOOK PART.

At the district assembly of Fourth degree rank, Knights of Columbus, which convened in Faneuil hall, Washington's Birthday, three members of the Quincy Council, No. 96, participated in the degree work which was conferred on 200 candidates. They were Deputy Grand Knight, William A. Carey, George W. Berry and Henry W. McGee.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED, by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

YACHT RACING ASSOCIATION

Arranges Its Dates For Coming Season

AND ELECTED OFFICERS

The annual meeting of the Interclub Yacht Racing Association was held Saturday evening at the South Boston Yacht club house at City Point, South Boston. John J. Harland of the South Boston club who has been the president of the association since its formation was again elected to that office. Among the other officers elected were.:

Vice President—L. S. Coffin of the Lynn club.

Secretary—T. H. Campbell of the Columbia club.

Treasurer—Howard Gannett of the Squantum club.

Executive Committee—J. P. Holbrook of the Quincy club, and Cyrus K. Small of the Mosquito club.

The important business was the selection of dates for the association races. These with the annual midsummer week of the Corinthian club at Marblehead will furnish plenty of good sport.

The Hingham club which has been admitted to the association was not represented at the meeting and the date for the open race under the auspices of that club was not fixed. The other dates are as follows:

May 30—South Boston Y. C. at City Point.
June 14—Columbia Y. C. at City Point.
June 17—Mosquito Fleet Y. C. at City Point (A. M.)
June 28—Savin Hill Y. C.
July 4—City of Boston open race off City Point.
July 5—Quincy Y. C.
July 12—Wollaston Y. C.
July 26—Squantum Y. C.
Aug. 2—Lynn Y. C.
Aug. 9—Winthrop Y. C.
Aug. 13, 14, 15—Corinthian Y. C. at Marblehead.
Aug. 23—Cottage Park Y. C. at Winthrop.
Sept. 6.—Jeffries Y. C. at East Boston.

An important amendment was made to the rules, proposed by Cyrus K. Small. This provided that no professional or paid hand should be allowed aboard the boats while it lt was racing.

After much discussion the club adpoted a distinctive racing flag. It is a square blue flag with the letters "I. C." in white on the blue field.

On the table before Pres. Harland was a large handsome silver cup, the gift of Joseph Turner, one of the old skippers of the association. Mr. Turner has presented the cup to the association, with no stipulation as to how it shall be raced for. The method of awarding the cup will be determined at the April meeting. The thanks of the association were tendered Mr. Turner for his gift. ,

The Atlantic Shakespeare society met Thursday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. N. G. Nickerson, Wollaston. The second act of the Tempest was read. Mrs. Cecil H. Marble acting as chairman of the afternoon.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SOME LENTEN SOUPS.

FISH soups, chowders or broths are excellent items for the lenten bill of fare.

When buying a fish for chowder have the dealer remove the head and skin when cleaning it. Then when preparing it for cooking you have only to take out the bone.

Eels are in season all year. They make a nice broth as follows:

Eel Broth.—Take about a pound of small eels and simmer them in two quarts of water till the liquor is reduced to a quart. To flavor this soup add a small blade of mace, a bay leaf, two onions and a few peppercorns. Skim well when the broth first boils up and add salt. Strain through a thick cloth, thicken and just before serving add sufficient hot milk to make the soup white. Scatter chopped parsley and yolk of hard boiled egg over and serve.

Seasonable Soups.

Codfish Chowder.—Take a pound and a half of codfish, a pint of sliced potatoes, one-quarter cupful sliced onions, four tablespoonfuls flour, four slices salt pork, a pint milk, boiling water, salt and pepper. Fry out the salt pork, add onions and cook slowly till they are yellow; then pour in a quart of boiling water and the fish cut in small pieces. Cook until the latter is nearly done, then turn in the potatoes. When they are tender add the milk and the flour dissolved in a little cold water. Season to taste and serve garnished with water crackers moistened with hot milk.

Salmon Soup.—Take a quart of stock, a sliced onion and half a can of salmon and cook together. Rub through a sieve, add a quart of boiling milk, season with salt, pepper, minced parsley and celery salt, thicken with butter and flour and serve with whipped cream.

An Elaborate Chowder.

Haddock Chowder.—Take a half dozen potatoes, slice thin and place in cold water. Take a four pound haddock, remove the skin and bones and cut into large pieces. Place the fish in cold water. Fry a large slice of fat pork in an agate kettle, cooking it until the fat is fried out. Peel and slice two medium sized onions into the fat. Dredge with flour and then add a layer of the drained potatoes. Dredge again with flour and put in a layer of fish and thus continue with alternate layers until the material is used. Pour on boiling water and cover. Let this boil until the potatoes are soft. Then add two cupfuls of milk. If the milk is not rich add a piece of butter the size of an egg, a dash of pepper and a pinch of salt. Let this just come to boil. Split and place in a tureen six or eight water crackers. Pour chowder on these. Serve at once.

LENTEN SALADS.

ONE has usually many early vegetables to vary the monotony of Lenten fare, but here is a salad that may be made with canned tomatoes.

Macaroni and Tomato Salad.—Take a cupful of cold boiled macaroni, cut it fine and add an equal quantity of drained tomatoes cut into small pieces and a grated white onion. Dust this lightly with salt and pepper, moisten with a boiled dressing and serve heaped in a mound on a bed of heart lettuce leaves. Pour over the salad half a cupful more of the dressing and garnish with capers and stuffed olives.

Mock Oyster Salad.

Oyster Plant Salad.—Take a bunch of salsify or oyster plant, one cupful of diced celery, six sliced stuffed olives, half teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter of a cupful of olive oil, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of onion juice and a dash of paprika.

Scrub the oyster plant, then stew in salted water. Rub off the skin and cut the roots into inch lengths. Prepare a French dressing of the salt, oil, vinegar, onion juice and paprika. Marinate the oyster plant and celery separately in it for tweuty minutes, then combine. Garnish with parsley or watercress and stew with olives.

Fancy Salads.

Molded Celery Salad.—Take fresh, crisp celery and chop in inch pieces. Split these into thin lengths, dry and place on ice. Beat the yolks of two eggs very stiff and drop in olive oil to make a cup of mayonnaise. Thin with lemon juice when it grows too thick to beat. Season with a teaspoonful of salt and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of cayenne. Dissolve one and one half tablespoonfuls of gelatin in a little cold water and steam it over a teakettle until it is smooth and thin. Cool this, beat in the mayonnaise and add one and one-half cupfuls of celery. Put in a smooth, round mold and leave overnight. The next day turn it out on a flat dish, surround with white lettuce leaves and serve with thin crackers.

A Floral Salad.

Beet Salad.—Take five boiled beets uniform in size. Remove the skins and hollow out the centers with a sharp knife. Shape the hollowed beets to represent the petals of a flower, cutting down about two-thirds of the way. In the centers drop mayonnaise dressing and the chopped meats of blanched almonds. Serve on chilled heart of lettuce leaves.

Anna Thompson.

Toll Uses in Sales Campaigns

SUCH testimonials as the following from the J. E. SOPER COMPANY, wholesalers of grain and feed at 206 Chamber of Commerce, Boston, furnish unimpeachable testimony of the value of the telephone, especially the toll lines, in sales campaigns.

We quote a paragraph of a letter to the Company from this concern:

"We find that the telephone takes the place, in a large degree of men on the road, and that our business is done in much more satisfactory way, by having a man sell our goods from the office, as he then knows everything a salesman should know concerning the quality, location and other features of the goods, whereas a man on the road does not always have his information and is frequently induced to guess it, which does not work at all."

We would not suggest this rule in every case. The advantages of face-to-face salesmanship and the magnetism of a personality, coupled with the importance of showing many lines of goods, are not to be depreciated. On standard lines, however, once the salesman's personality is established, the telephone is an efficient auxiliary, and especially helpful to the salesman in making advance appointment.

TRAVELING MEN interested in little stories of the advantages of the telephone as a business auxiliary, are invited to send for "Modern Methods of Money-Making." In Metropolitan Boston call the Contract Department, Fort Hill 7600. Elsewhere call the Local Manager.

$12,000 HEART BALM

Jury's Award In Case of Stenographer Jilted by Contractor

New York, Feb. 24.—Miss May Wessel, for more than two years stenographer for Albert J. Schwartzler, at the offices of his contracting firm in the Bronx, got an award of $12,000 from a jury in the supreme court in a breach of promise action against her one time employer. She asked for $100,000.

Friends of Miss Wessel testified that on several occasions Schwartzler referred to her as his future bride. He later refused to marry her, Miss Wessel declared.

Y. M. C. A. BASKETBALL.

The Y. M. C .A first team strengthened its hold on second place while the Second team cinched its title as champions of the second team division by taking two games from the Boston teams, Saturday night. The games were two of the best that have been played on the local floor this season for both were rather large scores and both were free from much rough work, although Ernie Rich and his man had one lively mix-up. Parker, Rich and Trask all took a hand in the scoring with Rich having eight baskets to his credit.

For Boston, Benson led in the scoring getting three goals; a peculiar feature of the game was the fact that every Boston player scored at least two goals from the floor.

The Second team started off as it usually does here at home, about 5 or 6 points behind right off the reel. It showed its come-back powers, however by almost doubling its opponents score in the second half. Price, Thomas and Dineen led in the scoring for Quincy while Bryant was high man for the visitors During the latter part of the game Weiss, the left back of the Boston team was cut under the eye and was compelled to retire from the game; as the visitors had no extra man it was decided to play with only four men on a team. This style suited Quincy better than it did Boston for the locals scored 12 points while their opponents scored but 4.

The Silent Five-Braintree game was not played owing to the non-appearance of the visiting team.

CHARGED WITH TAKING $200 FROM HIS FATHER OUT WEST

Letters from the Parent Led to the Arrest of Young Italian in Weymouth

Claims He Was Given the Money and Did Not Make Trouble

Antonio Ghiozi of Weymouth was arraigned in court this morning on a complaint charging him with the larceny of a revolver valued at $6, a suit case valued at $4, and $200 in money from Dominic Ghiozi, his father in California. The case is a somewhat peculiar one. It appears that the Ghiozi family removed from East Weymouth to California two years ago and settled on a ranch. Mr. Ghiozi for a number of years conducted a fruit store in Jackson square and amassed quite a modest fortune. When the family went to California the two sons, one of whom was the defendant Antonio went with them. According to letters received by Minot P. Garey, the local agent for Mr. Ghiozi, senior, Antonio became uneasy and created somewhat of a rough house. He obtained possession of a revolver and threatened to shoot up the whole family. His first act was to seize an axe and chop to pieces a valuable Panama hat. This he followed up by chopping to pieces a derby hat. Then aiming the gun at the old man he forced him to give up $200 to save his life.

Then Antonio started east and arrived in East Weymouth a week ago. In the mean time letters to agent Garey had told of the trouble in California and Monday he came to Quincy and obtained a warrant against Antonio for larceny. When his room was searched Monday night after his arrest by Chief Fitzgerald and officers Pratt, Butler and Walsh the revolver and suit case were found, but most of the money had taken wings.

Judge Avery declined jurisdiction in the case and held him in $200 for the grand jury. In the meantime depositions will be obtained from the family in California and presented to the grand jury.

NEW IMPETUS IN MOVEMENT

For the Wollaston Community House

A CHANGE OF PLANS

The movement for a community house in Wollaston was given new impetus Monday evening, when a joint meeting was held by committees from the original community house movement and the organizers of the proposed social club in Wollaston. The meeting was held at the home of Harry A. Stevens, Wayland street and chairman Chester I. Campbell outlined the situation as it stands at present.

It was voted that the original community house committee see if the subscribers to date would allow the amounts against their names to stand under the changed plans.

A committee composed of John L. Hamilton, N. G. Nickerson, Jr., and Harry A. Stevens was appointed to organize new teams and canvass the district for subscriptions under the new plans.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

For the second time within two years, this country is prepared for an invasion of Mexico.

Wall street is all of a flutter because it is reported that J. P. Morgan is not in the best of health in Egypt.

If it should rain Monday the suffragettes' banners and millinery will suffer on the march.

And now it is claimed that a padrone system has been in vogue in Somerville. Possibly such a system exists in many other places if it was only discovered. There is one thing certain such systems should be stamped out where ever discovered.

The extra session of Congress plans to start on the tariff April first which does not of course mean that it is to be any joking affair.

The sending of a commission to England to take evidence in the Grand Trunk matter may be abandoned. It is hardly evident where there would be anything gained from such a course

The way those base ball magnates talk of thousands is enought to make an average financier's head dizzy.

Brownsville has again come into the limelight, this time by the possible clashing of state and national troops.

The Turkish war is not ended but it has been completely overshadowed by the more stirring events nearer home.

The Supreme court has held that the White slave law is valid. Now let there be a vigilant enforcement.

Harry Thaw is again in the limelight because of alleged crookedness in the pardoning efforts which have come to light. New York needs nothing so much as a thorough house cleaning, and may be Gov. Sulzer will be the man to do it.

ATTENDANCE FALLING OFF.

It was remarked at one of the Parents-Teachers Association meetings recently that there was a falling off in the attendance on the part of the mothers of the school children. It may have been a few times that this happened but it was getting noticable and showed a lack of interest in this department on the part of the mothers It is quite desirable that this will not become permanent or chronic. The more interest the parents take in the schools the more interest the pupils will take in their studies. It is a good healthful sign of advancement in school work when parents take an active interest in the school work of their children. Such activity on the part of parents stimulate the youngsters to renewed effort and makes them look forward to their school life with eagerness and not aversion. It is to be hoped that the mothers will not lose their concern over the Parents-Teachers Association and that they will make an effort to attend as often as possible.

ANNOYING WOMEN.

From several sections of the city, lately complaints have been received of men annoying young women. The police have been active in the effort to apprehend the offenders and have promptly responded to calls to break up this decided nuisance but they have not always been successful, owing to the fact that the offenders have made themselves as scarce as possible after indulging in this contemptible trick.

Young women have been accosted by those roughs who select lonesome places for the practice and take good care that there is no one around who could interfere and administer the punishment such conduct merits. In some instances the young women have later met relatives whom they informed of the manner in which they had been insulted and pursuit of the offender entered upon, but it has been difficult to establish the identity of the miscreants. The sections infested by those undesirables will be given more attention from now on and a determined effort made to break up this sort of thing. When any of them are caught, they should receive the punishment their conduct warrants.

DEPLORABLE CONDITION.

It is a deplorable condition which exists within the borders of the neighboring country of Mexico and one that calls for moral condemnation. The present government has shown that it does not propose to have any objectionable characters looming up on its horizon which might mean more trouble for them in the future. They have found it convenient to remove the persons whom they considered undesirable. That the removals were justifiable is hardly credited. The prisoners had every reason to be assured of a safe conduct until they were tried before a proper tribunal. That they were not properly protected within their legal rights one can safely assume from the condition of things which exist. Will the removal of Medro and his co-workers strenghten or weaken the government which is now in control? Cold blooded murders can not strengthen any cause. They form the basis for reprisals which may come later. Mexico is indeed in an unhappy state. A strong and just body of men with love of country and aversion to rapine and blood are needed to bring the country safely through the present crisis. Are the men at the head of the present government, or will it be necessary for more horrors before the proper men secure the upper hand?

TEMPLARS PLAN LONG JOURNEY

Quincy Fraters to Joint with Dorchester Brethren

The Sir Knights of Quincy Commandery have been invited by St. Omer Commandery of Dorchester to accompany them on their pilgrimage to Denver, Col., in August, to attend the triennial conclave of the Knights Templar of United States. St. Omer Commandery has chartered a special train of parlor cars which will run through to Denver without change and with but two stops between Boston and Denver. One of these stops will be at Colorado Springs. In addition to this trip the trip includes many sight seeing excursions out of Denver. Several Knights of Quincy Commandery have signified their intention of accepting the invitation and accompanying St. Omer Comandery.

HAND PAINTED DANCE ORDERS

Dainty Souvenirs at a Very Pretty Party

One of the prettiest and most enjoyable parties of the season occurred Friday evening at Alpha hall. It was given by Mr. and Mrs. John H. Johnson of Wollaston for their daughters, Misses Kathrine and Margaret Johnson and their friends. Besides this younger set, some of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were asked, a pretty custom much in vogue in Boston and other nearby cities.

The decorations were suggestive of the coming holiday and the lovely gowns worn all added to the beauty of the scene. Hand painted dance orders, by Miss Johnson, were dainty souvenirs of a most happy occasion. There were eighteen dances, including three favor Germans.

Delicious frappe was served throughout the evening and a supper was served in Union hall at eleven o'clock.

Guests were present from surrounding cities, and all were loth to depart even at one o'clock, so much had it all been enjoyed.

CHILD AND STATE.

This evening a meeting will be held by the Fathers' and Mothers' club of Boston in the chapel of the Old South church to confer concerning the "Child and the State." Mrs. Robert E. Park of Hillside avenue, Wollaston, chairman of the child welfare committee of the club, will preside and the discussion will be opened by Robert F. Forester, chairman of the "widow's pension committee." Among other social workers to take part are Charles W. Birtwell, J. Prentice Murphy, representatives from the Denison House and others.

ORGAN RECITAL.

An organ recital will be given in the First Presbyterian Church, Wednesday evening, March 19th at eight o'clock.

The occasion will be a notable one as the new $2000 pipe organ will be heard for the first time.

The following talent has been secured. Mr. Ernest L. Mehaffey, Organist, of the First Congregational Church of Chelsea; Mrs. Louise S. Reynolds, Soprano Soloist, of the Leyden Church of Brookline and Mr. Leon Van Vliet, Cellist, of Boston. They are all first class artists in their respective lines and a very high class recital is assured.

The new pipe organ is the largest of three to be installed by the Estey Organ Company in this city within the next two months with the generous aid of Andrew Carnegie. It will embody all the latest improvements known in the modern organ building and will be the finest instrument to be heard in the protestant churches of this city.

WILSON WILL CALL AN EXTRA SESSION

Names April First as Date For Reassembling of Congress

Trenton, Feb. 25.—President-elect Wilson announced that the extra session of congress would be convened on April 1.

The governor declared he had arrived at this decision as a result of a letter received from Representative Underwood, Democratic house leader. The governor intimated that the interval between March 4 and April 1 might be devoted to caucuses and conferences.

Two editors of a Wall street newspaper called on the president-elect and urged that financial questions receive his earliest consideration. In discussing his talk with them afterwards, Wilson said: "Everybody is agreed that there should be currency reform as soon as possible."

COUNCIL RULES HOW THEY LOOK

Correspondent Believes They Are Working Out Fine

PROVIDE PUBLICITY

A correspondent who is a keen observer of public matters has forwarded the following communication on the new rules now in force in the City Council:

Editor Daily Ledger:

Although the new rules of the City Council have been in force but a few meetings it has been fully demonstrated that their adoption has been a step in the way of progression. For years the complaint has been that not half of the Council attending a meeting fully understand what was transpiring and that often in voting they did not fully understand what they were voting for. Under the present method of transacting business however any member who does not fully understand what he is voting for must be devoid of common sense.

Under the old method it was the custom to refer every order no matter what it was to one of the standing committees. Many of these committees were apparently in no hurry to report with the result that the calendar was filled with Communications,

MINSTREL SHOW AND DANCING

Enjoyed by Members of the Knights of Malta

A minstrel show, dancing and refreshments followed the regular meeting of John Adams Commandery, Knights of Malta, at Electa hall, on Monday evening. Two applications were received at the meeting.

Bayrd and Scott, the original two men minstrels gave a 45 minute appearance, in which they rendered the latest popular song successes, gave bones and tambo solos, and closed with a grand finale of catchy song hits. The two prominent solo numbers were "Alabam" and "Silvery Bells." They were assisted by Reggie North who furnished a lightning accompaniment.

Melville's orchestra furnished music for the occasion and dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

CHAMBER RECITAL.

The first informal chamber recital by Enrico Barraja, will take place at his Quincy studio in the Greenleaf Building, Thursday evening at eight o'clock. He will be assisted by some of his advanced pupils from the Boston and Quincy studios in the interpretation of Italian music, operatic and chamber from 1659 to the present day.

The authors used will be: Scarlatti, 1659-1725; Tipoli, 1685; Marcello, 1686-1739; Martini, 1706-1784; Galluppi, 1706-1784; Clementi, 1752-1832; Rossini, 1792-1868; Donizetti, 1789-1849; Giordani, 1743-1798; Bellini, 1801-1835; Verdi, 1813-1901; Van Westerhout, 1862-1898; Martucci, 1856-1909; and Boito, Tosti, Mascagni and Longo living.

The success obtained by Mr. Barraja's informal recitals the past season, bids fair to forsee a repetition of their popularity. Invitation cards have been sent out to all those interested in music.

SUIT AGAINST "LABOR TRUST"

Electrical Workers' Union Attacked by Uncle Sam

ACTION BROUGHT IN CHICAGO

Asks Injunction to Restrain Linemen From Cutting Wires of Postal Telegraph Cable Company—Officers and Employes of Unions Charged With Conspiracy to Injure Property

Chicago, Feb. 25.—The federal government took a hand in the linemen's strike when Federal District Attorney Wilkerson asked an injunction to restrain officers and members of locals 9 and 134 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers from cutting wires of the Postal Telegraph Cable company and from intimidating Postal employes in connection with the lockout now on.

As part of the labor war against the telegraph company, the government charges officers and employes of the unions with combining and conspiring, through acts of violence and depredations, to injure the Postal Telegraph wires to interfere with the transmission of government and commercial messages in interstate commerce. The alleged interference is declared to have been deliberate.

While restraint of interstate commerce is alleged, the Sherman law is not specifically mentioned in the government's bill of complaint, which generally declares that the defendants' alleged unlawful acts have violated the rights granted under the constitution and laws of the United States to the telegraph company and the senders of messages.

The government asks that the defendants be enjoined from obstructing interstate and government messages over the Postal, from cutting, burning or otherwise injuring its telegraph lines and from interfering, by threats, intimidation, persuasion or force with employes or prospective employes of the company. Pending final hearing the petition pleads for a temporary injunction against the alleged unlawful acts.

Pointing particularly to the packing house industry centering in Chicago and the operations of the Chicago board of trade, the bill declares that without prompt and uninterrupted telegraphic communication between Chicago and points in other states and foreign countries, the sale and shipment of products and merchandise in interstate commerce would be seriously interfered with and adds that the efficiency of the different departments of the government of the United States would be greatly impaired.

DRANK TO EXCESS

Man Found Dead Believed to Have Taken His Own Life

Epping, N. H., Feb. 25.—Medical Referee Knowlton performed an autopsy on the body of Arthur Wilmot of Seabrook, found dead on the highway in the town of Newfields. Though the authorities are puzzled as to how the wounds were inflicted on the man, Knowlton now says he was demented from chronic alcoholism and probably took his own life.

A communication from Chief of Police Rowe of Auburn, Me., to Sheriff Spinney confirms the story that Wilmot has been acting queerly of late, due to excessive drink.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Anncuncements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

Every available seat was occupied Sunday afternoon at the Wollaston Congregational church and many stood in the aisles to hear the cantata, The Holy City. It was rendered by the church uartet assisted by a chorus of forty voices. W. C. Rogers was director, Miss Ruth Ruggles, presided at the organ and Mrs. Amos T. Leavitt at the piano. Rev. Dr. Sneath gave a brief description of the cantata, calling atention to its reflective character and scriptural language. Also that it represented the longing for a better future and how that future was to be realized.

The work done showed the ability of Mr. Rogers in training a voluntary chorus, for the choruses were remarkably well rendered. The members of the quartet Miss Hardy and Mrs. Long and Messrs. Everett and Rogers in their solo parts gave exceptional satisfaction. There has been a strong request that it be repeated. Splendid service was also rendered by several members of the Bethany church chorus.

In the morning, Rev. Dr. Sneath spoke upon the topic, "Privilege of the Middleman," presenting the suggestion that we are to take the blessings of God in Christ and share them with others.

Tuesday evening William H. Bain, of Boston will address the Wollaston Congregational club in the church upon "Japan and Burmah." It will be an illustrated lecture and the public is cordially invited to come and hear it. Mr. Bain was a former resident in Wollaston and has travelled around the world.

The Ladies' Benevolent society will meet in the vestry Wednesday at 2.30 At the midweek prayer meeting Thursday evening Dr. Sneath will hold a Lenten preparatory service, topic; "Christ's Loyalty to Us."

BETHANY CHURCH.

Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott preached a strong sermon Sunday evening, taking for his subject, "Too Late to be Sorry." He pointed out to the young people who are frittering away their time, rather than applying themselves to the unusual educational advantages offered them, that the time would come when they would awaken to find themselves inefficient to secure the good positions which otherwise might be theirs, and it would then be too late to be sorry. He spoke of the unselfishness and devotion of New England parents and the lack of gratitude and appreciation on the part of their children. Mr. Willmott explained true repentance as being sorry enough for past sin to quit it and urged his audience to let no opportunity for kind words and good deeds pass lest they regret when it is too late.Mrs. Moore sang a solo entitled "Trusting."

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

At the morning service, Rev. Carl G. Horst preached "The Power of Touch," based upon the text "Thou hast made man but a little lower than God and crownest him with glory and honor—Psalm 8, 5. The psalmist realized the greatness of man or else he could not have written our text. Man's greatness is not physical, but spiritual. That which thinks and feels and wills is superior to all material things.

"That which lends the greatest interest to life is the personal touch. Europe attracts every year thousands of visitors because certain personalities are identified with its castles and cathedrals and mountains and valleys. The water and land in Palestine are just like any other land and water. But to the Christian, Palestine can never be as if Jesus had not lived. It is the touch of Jesus that makes Palestine 'the holy land.' Cremona is an insignificant town in Italy, but Stradivarius has made it immortal. But for Shakespeare we should know little of Stratford-on-Avon. But for Jesus there would be no Christianity. But for Paul, Christianity may not have found its way to Rome and western Europe in those early days. We are not called upon to live another's life, but simply our own. And our own words and deeds to have any influence must be backed up by our character. 'Be ye perfect as your Father in heaven is perfect,' must be ever the Christians' ideal."

If any one in our parish going to Norfolk Downs should take a Wollaston Quincy car and have the conductor refuse him a transfer to Norfolk Downs will he or she please take his number and notify the Wollaston Forum.

A special committee, consisting of Irving L. Shaw ,Miss Harriet Turner and Miss Evelyn Cummings, has been appointed by the Social Service committee to make a study of the "Wider Use of the School Plant." The annual collection for the American Unitarian Association will be taken Sunday morning.

A large number from the Wollaston Y. P. R. U. attended the tenth anniversary of the Quincy Y. P. R. U.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Alliance will be held in the vestry Wednesday, at 2.30 o'clock. Prof. Edwin D. Starbuck, the eminent psychologist and educator will speak on "The Worth of the Child." Dr. and Mrs. Starbuck while in the city will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carl G. Horst.

The third special Lenten service will be held Wednesday evening at 7.45. Rev. Sydney B. Snow, assistant pastor of King's chapel, Boston, will preach the sermon. The public is cordially invited.

HALL PLACE M. E.

Rev. Dillon Bronson, D. D., district superintendent of the Boston district of Methodist churches preached an excellent sermon at the Hall Place M. E. church Sunday morning from the text taken from a part of the 22d and 23rd verses of Eph. 1. "The Church which is his body."

Dr. Bronson said thatthe same relation should exist between the Church and Christ as between the body and the head for Christ is the head of the Church and that one of the saddest things in the Church which has no connection with Christ in so far that it fails to show his spirit. Every part of the body has its work to do yet no part can do its work without the power of the brain and that when the connection between the mind and body is broken its ceases to be a responsive body; so the Church when there is little or no connection between Christ and the spirit of the Church, it ceases to be a Church and exists as a mere club. There is a work in the Church for everybody but everybody must do their share. There should be room in our Churches for the foreigners as well as for the native born.

"There are lots of mysteries in the Bible which we have to lay on the shelf for Eternity but it is not the mysterious that way-lay us, it is the plainest things. Dr. Bronson made several applications in his sermon and also gave illustrations of his meaning.

The Choir sang "Sun of my soul, thou Saviour dear," with Miss Olive Grant as soloist. Fred Bowen, presided at the organ.

The Sunday school met at 12 M. at which time Dr. Bronson, addressed the school.

The Juniors met at 3 P. M. Miss Maud Nichols led the Epworth League meeting at 6.15 on "The social motive—Love." Albert Miller assisted the leader.

At 7 o'clock, the service was held in the vestry, with Mrs. Anderson as pianist. The pastor preached on the subject "Where is heaven?"

At the close of the evening a short meeting of the cabinet of the Epworth League was held after which the official board held a short meeting.

March 16 the Epworth League will hold a special service at 7 o'clock in observance of the Livingstone centenary.

Plans are well under way for the observance of Easter Sunday with an appropriate Concert by the Sunday School.

March 12 the Ladies' Aid is to hold another "quarter social" in the vestry.

The month of March will be observed as a month of self-denial, the returns to be brought in April 1st at the annual social.

MIXED MARRIAGES.

In explanation of the opposition to marriage of Catholics and Non-Catholics, Rev. Fr. John J. Coan gave a lengthy address on the subject at the high mass at St. John's Church, Sunday morning. He pointed out the reasons why the church does not sanction mixed marriages saying that divergent points between man and wife as to religious beliefs form a separation which is communicated to the children, that an indifference grows until it assumes the proportions of no religious conviction. He held that the experience of his priesthood had taught him that scarcely ever had he found such a marriage to result in an honored life guided by firm religious principles. The sermon was exhaustive on this important Catholic tenet. Rev. Fr. Scannell celebrated the mass.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MEMBERS PARTY

All Grades of the Universalist Church Had Pleasant Time

The Sunday school members of the Universalist church observed their annual birthday party Monday in the church vestry. The kindergarten and primary scholars had a jolly time from 3.30 to 5.30. Refreshments of ice cream cake and fancy crackers were served at the kindergarten tables. The church parlor was decorated in pink and white. In the evening from 6.30 to 8.30 the older scholars enjoyed themselves. A supper consisting of salmon and potato salads, hot rolls, chocolate, fancy crackers, cake and ice cream was served. Elaborate birthday cakes ornamented with colored candles added to the attractiveness of the tables. In the evening, games were played, music was enjoyed and all had such a good time it was voted to have another party next year.

Bartlett Spooner, superintendent of the Sunday school had general charge of the party and with the assistance of other willing workers made it an enjoyable party for all, both young and old.

A farewell reception will be tendered him Thursday evening. Rev. Mr. Palmgren recently received a call to become pastor of the Swedish Congregational Church of Hartford, Conn.

He will be succeeded by Rev. A. J. Sparrong of Sioux City, Ia.

Supreme Court Hands Down Decision Declaring It Constitutional

Washington, Feb. 25.—Forcing Pugilist Jack Johnson to trial for alleged white slavery cases, the supreme court upheld the contitutionality of the Mann white slave law, prohibiting interstate traffic in women and girls.

That human bodies, as well as merchandise, may be protected in interstate commerce by the government, was the principal finding of the court in five "white slave" cases.

The Girl Who Refused to Dance With Me

By THOMAS R. DEAN

When I was a little boy I used to hear a great deal about the family's "halcyon days," as we called them. My father had been both wealthy and prominent, but first his wealth disappeared, and then he died. My mother was anxious to maintain something of our social standing, but found it very difficult to do so on her very limited income. Nevertheless she was determined to bring us up as ladies and gentlemen, and about the only way to refine and polish us, outside of home influence, was to send us to a dancing school.

The scholars were divided into sets, and there was one set, the children of rich parents, many of whom came to the lessons in carriages, attended by their maids. They did not mingle with the other scholars, who came to consider them as something above themselves, too fine and beautiful to touch. But I, having often heard my mother say that we had never associated except with the best, saw no reason why I should take an inferior position.

There was one very pretty little girl among this exclusive set whom I worshiped from a distance. It was the rule of the school—not enforced—that any girl must dance with any boy who asked her. One afternoon, when the object of my boyish admiration happened to be left without a partner, I went up to her and made the bow which was considered an invitation to dance. She sat perfectly still. In other words, she declined my invitation.

This was the first rejection I had ever experienced, and it pierced me to the heart. But I have since had reason to consider it a blessing, for it opened my eyes to the fact that there was a position for me to win in the world, and I resolved to win it. The day will come, I said to myself, when I shall live the life my father and mother led in their younger days. I must be successful, and to be successful I must think and act for myself.

I grew up separate and apart from this little girl, but for a time I kept track of her. I learned that her father had made a large fortune out of a patent medicine. Since my own father had been a prominent professional man I felt the injustice of this child of a patent medicine proprietor snubbing the son of a lawyer and statesman. Nevertheless when I saw her rolling about beside her mother in a landau driven by a liveried servant I felt that she had the advantage of me, and I renewed my vow that the advantage should one day be blotted out.

When I was seventeen I had earned and saved enough money to keep me a year in college, and after that I taught night school and won scholarships to carry me through. Upon graduation I studied law and settled in a small but rapidly growing place where there was no great competition and soon sprang into a fine practice.

I had reached a point where there was no difficulty in resuming the social position my family had occupied in the "halcyon days," and, being still comparatively young and a wealthy bachelor, I was somewhat courted by the girls I met in society. Most of them were intent on winning for themselves an establishment before the heyday of youth passed from them. But I knew their tricks and their manners and had no use for them.

Instead of seeking a partner for life to spend my money in a luxurious life I was making love to my stenographer. She was a woman nearly my age and a very intelligent and patient person, whose appearance denoted that she had seen better days. Nevertheless there was that which drew me to her, though I could not tell exactly what it was. One day I asked her something about herself. She told me that she had been born in the same city that I was born in and that her father had lost in speculation a large fortune he had made in a patent medicine.

What need to go further! As I looked into her face I saw what I had not seen before—traces of the features of the little girl who had a score of years before refused to dance with me. And here she was, passing into spinsterhood, dependent upon a pitiful salary that I paid her for doing my drudgery.

The day of vengeance had come, and I resolved to quaff the cup of its dregs. But I kept my counsel. Not a word did I speak to call up in her memory the boy she had snubbed. And this was my revenge. I doubled her salary. She was much astonished. Then I told her that she was working too hard and employed an assistant for her. Her astonishment was increased to wonder.

One afternoon I kept her taking my dictation till all others had left the office, then said to her:

"Did you not attend Mr. B.'s dancing school at R. when you were a little girl?"

"I did."

"Do you remember refusing to dance with a boy one afternoon who asked you?"

"No."

"But you did. I am that boy."

I spoke the words calmly and waited for them to impress her, then added: "And now I propose to pay off that snub. I give you a choice between leaving my service and"— I paused. She looked frightened.

"What?"

"Marrying me."

In time she did both.

HEAVY BURDEN FOR AMERICA

Abandonment of Monroe Doctrine Seriously Discussed

STATESMEN THINKING DEEPLY

United States Being Crowded Nearer and Nearer to Intervention In Mexico—Leading Republican Senator Suggests That Germany Be Permitted to Conquer Mexico

Washington, Feb. 25.—Actual abandonment of the Monroe doctrine, or substantial modification of it, are matters which are almost certain to be discussed seriously in congress in case the Mexican situation should reach the point where a measure authorizing armed intervention is considered.

The truth is that discussion of the Monroe doctrine is going on among senators in the cloakrooms with a startling frankness. Sentiment for abandonment of it are expressed by some of the senators with a flatness that would surprise the public if they knew it.

This does not mean that in an emergency congress would not go to the defense of the Monroe doctrine with whatever steps seemed essential. But it does mean that thinking men in congress are wondering whether we have not outgrown the time to fear acquirement of territory by a European or other foreign power in Latin America.

The appalling responsibilities the Mexican situation puts on this nation are making public men here think deeply of the question of whether America is to go through the generations bearing the burdens that the Monroe doctrine in all its ramifications impose.

The tone of the British press, which is urging the United States to intervene in view of the assassination of Madero, is a factor in inducing responsible men in congress to ponder all the more deeply. The feeling is strong at the Capitol that, in spite of itself, the United States is being crowded nearer and nearer to intervention in Mexico, the result of which will be a cost in lives, money and sacrifices that even annexation of Mexico could not repay. Not only must the United States protect its honor, but the Monroe doctrine results in the whole world looking to the United States to see that no hostile moves are made on foreigners.

Publicly, senators are not inveighing against the Monroe doctrine. But how some of them feel was indicated by a leading Republican senator when he said he would be glad if Germany or any other nation undertook the task of restoring order in the republic to the south.

"The Germans are good people," he said. "What harm could it possibly be to us if they went in there, established peace and even took over territory? We would have nothing to fear from them and it would be a vast improvement over the present situation."

FOR KILLING HUSBAND

Lynn Bride of Six Months Held For Grand Jury Without Bail

Lynn, Mass., Feb. 25.—Mrs. Rose Spogard, aged 30, faced the district court charged with the murder of her husband, Sven Spogard, a tailor, seven years her junior. They had been married only six months.

She says he was about to leave her for the second time and this made her frantic. Counsel for the woman waived examination and she was held for the grand jury without bail. She was taken to the police station hysterical and had to be given opiates.

She told the police she had been closely watching her husband ever since she brought him back to Lynn from Buffalo, two weeks ago. Within a few days she purchased a .38-calibre revolver in a store in Boston, and the clerk loaded the weapon before she paid for it.

Early yesterday Mrs. Spogard returned to their room in the Hotel Bellevue. A dispute and the shooting ensued.

In a Small Furniture Shack on Sachem Street

DAMAGE SLIGHT

The alarm from Box 515 at 6.37 Monday night called the fire department to a slight fire in a shack on Sachem street, near the Quincy Mansion school that was used as a storage building for furniture. The building which is not over 10 by 11 feet was filled with furniture, but although Chief Litchfield made dilligent inquiry Monday night he was unable to learn the name of the owner. The fire was evidently of incendiary origin for someone had smashed a window and thrown a lighted match inside. Its early discovery however prevented much damage being done for what little fire there was in the shack was near the window where it had been set. The loss will not exceed $10.

BOTHERING YOUNG WOMEN

Several Cases Reported Recently in Vicinity of Dublin

Young women in different parts of the city have, during the past week, been approached by men acting in a suspicious manner and in one instance a young lady was chased by a man.

The centre of confusion appears to be in the section known as Dublin. The incidents have occurred frequently in the past during the evening. Most of the young women who have been accosted have sought refuge in nearby houses.

Friday afternoon, however, contrary apparently to the established custom, a young woman was followed by a disorderly man on Adams street. She ran and succeeded in eluding her pursuer. Her brother shortly afterward passed in his auto. She told him the facts and he gave chase. The party had too long a lead to make it possible to catch him and because of the distance a minute description could not be secured.

ARMY AND NAVY ARE PREPARED

Ready to "Cross the Border" at the Word of Command

SEVERAL THOUSAND EQUIPPED

Washington Authorities Paving Way For Wilson to Pacify Mexico Should He So Decide to Do—Assemblage of Second Division of Reorganized Army at or Near Galveston Is Ordered—State Department In No Hurry to Give Huerta Government Political Recognition

Washington, Feb. 25.—If war had been actually declared between the United States and Mexico there could not be more activity than exists at the present time in navy and regular army circles. It would but remain for the militia to be mobilized and general recruiting to be authorized to make actual war scenes complete.

President Taft avowed the decision not to intervene and explains the preparations being made to the wish to have the army and navy of the country ready for action if President Wilson on taking office should decide to pacify turbulent Mexico.

When President-elect Wilson takes office there will have been assembled at strategic points over 17,000 fighting men of Uncle Sam all ready and equipped to "cross the border" at the word of command.

During the last "feint on Mexico" there were very many of the present scenes and movements enacted, but nothing has ever arpproached the plans now being carried out in seriousness of the order or the practical mobilization for war of the army and navy of these United States.

If was was declared today these troops and marines have been so distributed that an immediate advance could be started across the Rio Grande and warships at points on the Gulf of Mexico and Pacific coast of Mexico could land and sieze important railroad connections.

Taft Redeems Promise

Military orders flew thick and fast in redemption of President Taft's promise to have an army of 10,000 men assembled at Galveston, the most convenient port to Mexico, all equipped for foreign service and ready to execute any order that his successor might choose to issue upon the basis of the conditions that will exist after March 4.

These orders, on the whole, were supplementary to those which began to flow from the war department toward the end of last week, and were calculated to insure the assemblage of the second division of the reorganized army at or in the neighborhood of Galveston.

The completion of the orders to move the entire second division is intended as further warning to Mexico that there will be no departure from the established policy of preparedness during the remaining week of President Taft's administration. All plans for the possible sending of troops into the republic to the south will combine the same minuteness of detail which would characterize official orders had the present acute condition arisen in Mexico at any time earlier in the strife which has rent that republic since the first uprising against Porfirio Diaz more than two years ago.

President's Course Justified

This course is justified on the ground that any cessation in the closing days or even hours of the Taft administration might be seized hold of by Mexican malcontents as an opportunity for a strike at Americans, which could not be adequately overcome should officials here relax their vigilance.

So far the state department has given little thought to the question of political recognition of the new government in Mexico, inclining to await further developments in the situation and willing to regard it largely by the recommendations of Ambassador Wilson, whose course so far, under extremely difficult and delicate circumstances, has met with the unqualified approval of the department.

Major General Carter, who commands the second division, was ordered yesterday from Chicago to Galveston. This will be the second time that this officer has had the honor of commanding a complete division of troops within the limits of the state of Texas, the first being in the case of the mobilization of 1911, when the Mexican trouble first became acute.

The Fifth brigade of this division is already moving under previous orders to Galveston, as is the Fourth field artillery, composed of mountain batteries. The order issued yesterday will set in motion the Fourth brigade, the Sixth brigade and the Sixth cavalry.

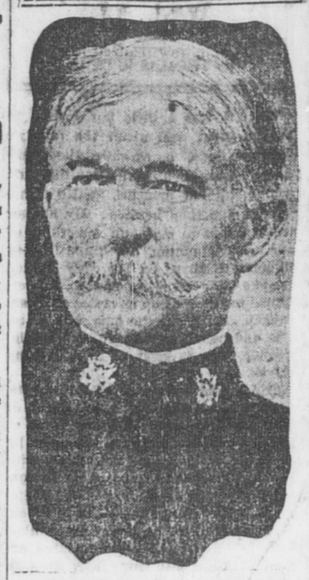

Brigadier General Smith commands the Fifth brigade, previously ordered to concentrate; Colonel Glenn of the Twenty-third infantry, will command the Fourth brigade, and Colonel Williams of the Eleventh infantry will command the Sixth brigade.

The war department's estimate is that under these orders there will be concentrated at Galveston between 8000 and 9000 infantry, about 800 cavalry and about the same number of field artillery, or a total of nearly 10,000 men.

These troops are widely scattered throughout the middle states and along the Mississippi river from the gulf to Canada.

During the maneuvers of 1911 it required two weeks' time to get some of the soldiers to Texas, but it is believed that this period can be cut in half at present. Even then the whole second division will almost certainly be at Galveston or vicinity some time before the necessary water transportation can be provided.

THE KILLING OF MADERO

Huerta's Explanation Accepted at Face Value In Mexican Capital

Mexico City, Feb. 25.—The killing of former President Madero and former Vice President Suarez has had no effect on the rank and file of the people of the city. The city continues gay with flags and bunting. Business is going on as usual.

The explanation of General Huerta has apparently been accepted at its face value by the general residents. Following the autopsy the bodies of Madero and Suarez were turned over to their families for burial.

If there is any regret over the slaying of the two former chief officials of the republic it is not apparent here.

But whether this indifference is real or rather it is because the people are afraid to demonstrate their real feelings is difficult to fathom. Most of the leading residents of the city insist they prefer the openly declared military dictatorship in "Madero's despotism under the pretence of democracy."

The people now understand they must obey without question any command of either Huerta or Diaz, or suffer quick and sure punishment.

The killing of the two officials is not being discussed here to any extent. Relatives and friends of the dead have vowed vengeance, but they are being watched so closely that it is doubtful whether they can take any action that will seriously embarrass the existing government. "Ley de fuga" is too old an institution to cause surprise.

All of the theatres are doing an enormous business. As indicating the general spirit one of them presented a play entitled "Le Grand Mort" (The Great Death).

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SOME SUBSTANTIAL SALADS.

WINTER vegetables may be made up into salads as attractive as they are nutritious.

A salad dressing made with cream or olive oil is nourishing. A rich mayonnaise makes the best dressing for a Lenten salad.

Handsome Dishes.

The materials for these salads should, when cut, be neat and symmetrical in shape. The ingredients should not be combined until just before serving.

Golden Salad.—Take two cupfuls of raw carrots put through the meat chopper or grated, one cupful of apples cut small and one cupful of minced celery. Toss and mix with a silver fork and cover with mayonnaise dressing. A few chopped raisins may be added and will improve the salad.

Cauliflower Salad.—Break a boiled cauliflower into flowerets, chill, season with salt, pepper, vinegar and oil, pile in the salad bowl and dress with a light mayonnaise. Garnish the base of the pile with pickled beets and parsley and stick a floweret of cauliflower on top.

Piquant Viands.

Sweet Potato Salad.—Take three large sweet potatoes, boil and cut into half inch squares. Cut up two stalks of celery. Season with salt and pepper. Pour over the vegetables a dressing made as follows: Take three tablespoonfuls of salad oil, two of vinegar, one teaspoonful of onion juice, one saltspoonful each of salt and pepper. Let the salad stand in a cold place for two hours. Garnish with pickles, olives and parsley.

If hothouse tomatoes are availabl try the following recipes. Slices of cold boiled potatoes may be substituted for them, however:

Mixed Salad.—Take one-fourth cupful French dressing, three medium sized tomatoes, one small green sweet pepper and one head lettuce. Select firh tomatoes, peel and slice. Remove the seeds from a fresh green pepper and slice the pod in very thin strips. Rub a small salad bowl with a bit of onion and line with crisp lettuce leaves. Arrange a layer of sliced tomatoes upon the lettuce and sprinkle with the sliced green peppers, then another layer of the tomatoes and the remainder of the green peppers. Pour the dressing over all.

MEATLESS DISHES FOR LENT.

CHEESE, like eggs, contains much concentrated nourishment. Used during Lent, it may be made to take the place of meat.

Macaroni, spaghetti or any foods cooked with cheese have their food values increased.

One pound of cheese is said to contain as much nourishment as two pounds of meat.

Toothsome Victuals.

Savory Baked Cheese.—Take one-half pound of cream cheese, with salt, pepper, mustard, milk and butter. Slice the cheese thin, place in a shallow baking dish, cover with milk, dust with salt, pepper and a bit of made mustard. Dot with butter and bake in a hot oven until the cheese is melted. Serve on toasted crackers.

Scalloped Cheese and Cabbage.—Take a small cabbage and boil until very tender in water to which salt and a quarter of a teaspoonful of soda has been added. Drain, separate into pieces and put one-half in a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and cover with grated cheese. Repeat until dish is full, then add one cupful white sauce and cover with buttered cracker crumbs. Bake until crumbs are browned.

Substantial Foods.

Baked Eggs and Cheese.—Take four eggs, a cupful of grated cheese, a cupful of fine, soft stale breadcrumbs, one-half teaspoonful salt, a dash of cayenne pepper. Break the eggs into a buttered baking dish and cook them in a hot oven until they begin to turn white around the edge. Cover with the mixture of crumbs, cheese and seasoning. Brown in a very hot oven. In preparing this dish the oven must be very hot or the egg will be too much cooked by the time the cheese is brown. To avoid this some cooks cover the eggs with white sauce before adding crumbs.

Baked Macaroni and Cheese.—Take a cupful of macaroni broken into small pieces, two quarts of boiling salted water, a cupful of milk, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one-fourth to one-half pound of cheese, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne pepper. Cook the macaroni in the boiling salted water, drain in a strainer and pour cold water over it to prevent the pieces from adhering to each other. Make a cheese sauce with one cupful of milk, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one-fourth to one-half pound of cheese, one-half to a teaspoonful of salt and a little cayenne pepper. Thicken the milk with flour, add the cheese and stir until melted. Put the sauce and macaroni in alternate layers in a buttered baking dish, cover with buttered crumbs and heat in the oven until the crumbs are brown.

SWEENEY IN COURT

Inspector Says Indictments Against Him Are Based on Perjury

New York, Feb. 25.—The New York police graft situation took a sensational turn when Police Inspector Dennis Sweeney was arraigned before Supreme Court Justice Goff to plead to two indictments.

Sweeney's lawyer made a plea that the indictments be quashed, alleging that they were based on perjured testimony. The court refused this and a plea of not guilty was entered.

Police Captain Thomas W. Walsh, who confessed to having received graft money, pleaded guilty to the indictment against him charging bribery. Bail was fixed at $1000 and sentence deferred at the request of District Attorney Whitman, to whom Walsh confessed his part in the alleged system of levying tribute from disorderly houses.

Mam Haney's Stratagem.

In her later years Mam Haney has given up her family washing for the more profitable trade of fortune-telling. She can reveal the past, explain the present, and foresee the future; she can locate lost or stolen articles and bring back your wandering true love. She lives in a small house on a back street. Next door are her daughter and a large family, but Mam prefers an independent establishment where she can live in the privacy befitting a seeress. She is a dirty old woman whose deep-set eyes are permanently screwed up from much peering into the darkness of the future.

One day Mrs. Curtis lost the gold thimble that had been her mother's. She searched her house thoroughly, but it could not be found. She valued it far beyond its intrinsic worth and in her anxiety to recover it she resolved to consult Mam Haney. She had always looked on Mam as a disreputable old imposter, but she had heard wonderful tales of skill, and in times of trouble we seek aid at strange doors.

"I'll give you fifty cents now," Mrs. Curtis said when she had explained her errand, "and if we find the thimble where you say I'll give you two dollars more." She thought thus to bribe unseen powers.

"All right, lady; I kin find it, sure," Mam answered with the confidence to which she owes half her success. She has a way of locating lost articles which is entirely her own.

She went to her cook stove, raised a lid, poked the fire until it was glowing red, then spat thrice into the bed of coals, meanwhile mumbling a charm.

"I hope the Judge will never hear of this," Mrs. Curtis thought, as she sat with her skirts tucked up to avoid the greasy floor.

Mam's yellow face turned red in the heat before she lifted her head and spoke. "I see a garding," she began, "an' a light-colored house and a lovely lady in the door." Two dollars would have made Medusa beautiful in Mam's eyes. "I see the garding and the light-colored house with green blinds. Begin in the garret an' look to the cellar. Ef 'taint there go in the garding an' door yard and search from the north to the south, an' from the east to the west. Somewhere or ruther you'll find that ere thimble."

"Our house is light-colored and has green blinds," said Mrs. Curtis, musingly.

"Now that's cur'us," Mam interrupted. "I disremembered how your house looked, Mis Curtis," which was very curious indeed, as she passed it every time she went down town. "Now you jest look around your house and gardin. Don't you never rest til you find that ere thimble," she counseled.

Mrs. Curtis went home. She and her "hired girl" searched the house from attic to cellar, while the children crawled about the yard playing they were snakes and incidentally catching heavy colds, but not finding the thimble for which they were looking.

She had quite given up and believed Mam Haney to be an old fraud, when Uncle Silas, digging a flower-bed, brought up the thimble impaled on his fork. When the Judge came home for dinner she told him for the first time of her visit to the fortune-teller, and the advice she had given her.

The Judge laughed incredulously. "Of course Mam knew that the probabilities were that the thimble was somewhere about the place," he said. "The old witch mixes more sense with her magic than I had supposed. Are you going to pay her the two dollars?"

"I did intend to, but if you think it was just chance, I guess I won't. I don't want to encourage imposters and I suppose she would spend it for whiskey anyway."

The Judge smiled at his wife's reasoning, but he made no reply, for he was a man who loved peace rather than strife.

In some devious way Mam Haney heard of the finding of the thimble. One morning she went to collect her debt. Mrs. Curtis told her that the thimble had been found by chance, that her magic had nothing to do with its recovery.

"But I told you it was in the garin," Mam answered, "an' you said you'd pay me two dollars if you found it. I'll get even with you yit."

"Leave the place at once," Mrs. Curtis said with dignity.

"I'll git even yit." Mam repeated. As it was a warm day she went outside the fence and sat down on the horse block. Whenever one of the Curtis family came out of doors she screamed:

"Gimme that ere money. Mis' Curtis ain't no lady. She's cheatin' a poor woman most eighty." To every passerby she told her story and between times shouted maledictions on the house of Curtis.

Mrs. Curtis listened from behind her curtains in an agony of shame, but she was an obstinate woman and was bound not to pay that money, let the old reprobate say what she would.

After the twelve o'clock whistle blew Mam left the horse block, yelling that she would be back after dinner.

When the Judge came home his wife told him to send the marshal to arrest her.

"I guess you had better pay her that two dollars, Fanny," he suggested.

"Never," returned Mrs. Curtis, "not if she sits there and screeches all summer."

Mam had returned to her post when the Judge came out of his door. She challenged him fearlessly.

He glanced around furtively, put his hand in his trousers pocket and brought out two silver dollars. He dropped them into one of Mam's long-pailed claws. "Now clear out," he said, "and don't ever say any more about this affair." The Judge hurried down the street as if the police were after him.

But Mam sat still. As she clinked the dollars together in her hand a wicked thought came to her, and she laughed until her cheeks ached. She settled herself more comfortably. "Gimme that ere two dollars," she shrieked with new vigor as soon as the Judge was out of sight. "You ain't no lady, Mis' Curtis."

During the afternoon Mrs. Curtis had callers. They politely ignored the persistent cry from the horse block, but she knew they would talk of it at the next house. She was tempted to tell her side of the story, but she was conscious that she had not taken a very dignified stand, so kept silence. She tried to talk of the strawberry festival and the strange sickness of Mrs. Peters, but above all she could hear the voice of Mam Haney and see her surrounded by the small boys of the town.

It was about six o'clock when she capitulated. That shrill old voice had shattered her obstinacy. She walked carelessly to the gate and held out a bill.

"Now go," she said severely, "and don't ever come here again."

"Thank ye, my bones is tired sittin' anyway," answered Mam, stuffing the bill into her pocket as she stumbled away. Four dolars a day was no small recompense for sitting still and using her voice in the vituperation for which she had a natural inclination.

"So Mam left," the Judge said, when he came home at evening.

"Not till about an hour ago, when I paid her," his wife answered, in a voice of forced gaiety.

"Till you paid her?" echoed the Judge.

"Yes. She was disgracing me before the whole town. I can never hold my head up again," she replied, giving way to her real feelings

"Oh yes, you can," the Judge said. "People have lived down worse things right here in this town."

Mrs. Curtis resented this jocose tone. "You didn't have to give in to the old cat and pay her, so you can laugh," she retorted.

"Oh, didn't I?" said her husband "Fanny, you never want to acknowledge you've been outwitted, even by a witch."

"That is easy to say," she answered.

"Indeed it is," said the Judge. All that week he secretly congratulated himself on his reticence, which he considered masterly in a married man. He even went so far as to make a proverb after the manner of Solomon:—"A wise man keepeth his own counsel."—Chicago News.

Deadlock Over Third Arbitrator For the Firemen's Trouble

New York, Feb. 25.—With but a short time remaining of the few days which the law allows for their selection, W. W. Atterbury, representing the railroads, and Albert Phillips, representing the firemen, admit they have not yet agreed upon the third member of the board to arbitrate the differences between the firemen and the fifty-four eastern railroads.

If no selection has been made by midnight tomorrow representatives of the commerce court and the department of commerce and labor will choose the third arbitrator.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

NEW COUNCIL RULES

petitions and orders of all kinds which had lain dormant so long in the committees that they were almost forgotten and even when they were at last brought up few realized just what was being done.

There are many minor matters that can readily be disposed of the night they are introduced and under the new rules this is being done. Like all radical changes from a long established route, the adoption of new rules naturally causes some confusion and will continue to do so until they become fully understood and the members of the Council make up thier minds to give them an honest and fair trial. One great improvement has at least been accomplished and that is publicity, which is something that has long been needed. During the year there are many orders involving the appropriation of sums large and small that are not fully understood by the members at large when they come up for action in the council simply for the reason that a majority of the members have not been members of the standing committee having that matter in charge and therefor have not had the opportunity to inform themselves.

Under the new rules however, when financial matters, especially, are discussed by the entire Council in a sort of Committee of the whole every member has an opportuity to ask questions and fully inform himself of the matter under discussion, and if he does not no one is to blame but himself. There has long been a cry for more publicity in city affairs and these new rules afford the publicity that has been desired. One evidence of this is the increased attendance of citizens at meetings of the council.

It was anticipated from the first that the adoption of new rules would mean long Council meetings, but the committee who framed them took the ground that it was better to come to City Hall twice a month and remain until midnight, if necessary, then to come to City Hall two and three times a week and remain until 11 o'clock and after at meetings of committees.

Perhaps no where up to the present time has the adoption of the new rules been more noticable than in the matter of minor licenses. Nearly five hundred of such licenses were granted last year, and as it must readily be seen entailed a vast amount of work upon the License Committee.

Then after the Committee made its report much time was often lost in the discussion of some one being granted a Common Victuallers license and the evidence submitted to the committee was rehashed again in the Council. This year the rule has been to immediately refer all applications for such licenses to the Chief of Police who makes an investigation through his department and makes his report in writing to the Council on each application. If there is any reason why the applicant should not receive a license that reason is stated frankly in the Chief's report. In this way every member of the Council gets the report first hand and can act accordingly.

The only great objection heard is that it gives one man, the President, too much power, this claim however, is dispelled by the fact that the Council has the entire matter in its own hands and if it does not desire to abide by his ruling they have the opportunity to exercise their perogative and object. From what is known of President Bryant and what he has himself stated time and time again his only idea is to give more publicity in matters that come before the Council and to see that business is dispatched with the promptness it should be. The general idea seems to be that if the members of the council will only give the new rules a fair trial without not too much quibbling over trivial matters and question of points of order, it will be found as stated above that the new rules are a step toward progression.

Progress.

WONDERFUL KINETOPHONE

Talking Pictures Astonish Thousands of Boston Theatre Goers

Boston, Feb. 25.—A practical demonstration of what is considered to be one of the most remarkable inventions of the age was made before thousands of enthusiastic people yesterday at the first appearance in Boston of the taling pictures of Thomas A. Edison.

At Keith's and the National theatre disappointed throngs were unable to obtain admittance, but several thousand persons heard for the first time figures in a picture talk, sing and render selections on piano and violin by means of the kinetophone.

The barking of dogs which romped about in the films was heard distinctly, and so perfect was the synchronization that the sounds were in perfect accord with the movements of the actors in the pictures.

THAW'S TESTIMONY SOUGHT

Will Be Asked What He Knows About Alleged Bribery

This announcement by the committee followed a bitter attack by William F. Clark, former secretary of the committee, upon what he termed "the so-called prison ring."

Clark, at his own request, had been relieved from duty as secretary, pending investigation of charges that he had used Sulzer's name without the executive's authority in an attempt to bring about the release of Thaw.

He launched into an attack upon the prison authorities, including Joseph F. Scott, superintendent of state prisons, and Dr. Russell, superintendent of the institution at Matteawan.

Whether the furs were taken by some party who forcibly entered the building during the night or whether the party entered by false keys was not given out.

RAISING PEARLS ON "FARM"

Japanese Has Decided He Can Produce Them on Land Laid Out In Ocean's Bed.

Mr. Mikinoto's oyster farm in the Bay of Ago, off the coast of Japan, is one of the few successful attempts at the deliberate production of pearls. Mikinoto spent several years in costly experiments before he perfected his scheme.

Then he secured government patents and, according to Popular Mechanics, has succeeded in getting his "farm" on a paying basis. He first makes a bed for his crop in the shallows of the bay, where the larvae of the pearl oyster abound during the months of July and August.

He merely deposits a large number of small stones, to which the oyster spat naturally attach themselves. Then his diving women transplant the young oysters to deeper waters to protect them from the cold.

Here they lie on carefully prepared beds until in their third year they become full grown, and have firmly attached themselves to the stones by means of "necks" which they secrete.

At this time the diving women bring the mollusks to the surface and they undergo an operation. A small seed pearl is introduced into the center of the shell. Then the oysters are replanted in the bed and left alone for four years.

When they are again brought to the surface it is found that the seed pearl nucleus has been covered with many layers of the nacre, a secretion of the mollusk, and the large, brilliant translucent pearl of commerce has been formed.

But the process is not as simple as it appears. During the seven years that the farmer must wait for his crop to mature a large percentage of the oysters die. The oyster beds are raided by such enemies as the octopus and the starfish.

Occasionally the "red current" sweeps over them and in a day destroys the entire crop. At all times the farmer must keep his oyster bed free of "miruno," a seaweed which will smother the crop.

Women divers trained from girlhood to long immersions in the sea are engaged at 20 cents a day to care for the farm. In this work they wear nothing but a head cloth, a white shirt and diving goggles. At each dive they can gather several oysters and return to the surface.

A dive occupies about one minute, and a day's work is from four to six hours. An expert can readily gather 500 oysters a day in a depth of water ranging from two to six fathoms. To keep at the work for a day they must frequently come up and warm themselves at a fire.

DORR TRIAL HALTS

State Will Accept No Plea but Guilty of First Degree Murder

Salem, Mass., Feb. 25.—Following a two-hour conference with Attorney General Swift, District Attorney Attwill said he would refuse to consider any plea on the part of William A. Dorr other than the plea of guilty of murder in the first degree for the killing of George E Marsh.

Because of the stand taken by the district attorney, Dorr's colnsel will be forced to go on with the case when court again opens.

The trial was halted yesterday. The reason given was the physical condition of the defendant, whose appearance gave evidence of physical and mental strain.

BABY DIES IN COURT

Due to Lack of Food, Though Its Father Owns Some Property

Chicago, Feb. 25.—As Mrs. Frank Stupka, emaciated and poorly clad, stood in the court of domestic relations waiting to testify against her husband on a charge of non-support, her baby died in her arms. Three doctors declared the baby died of starvation.

Stupka sat stolidly in his chair. Judge Uhlir called him before the bench and asked sharply: "What are you going to do about it?"

"I can't do anything. I can't support her," Stupka replied, though he admitted he owned some property. He was sent to jail.

BOWLING

After a few days rest the bowling teams again contested in the Fore River and City Leagues, Monday night. A number of postponed games in the Fore River league will probably be rolled during the week.

At the City Square alleys Cranch beat the Gilt Edge, 4 to 0. Both teams had four men in the first string

The high man was G. Erickson who rolled a single of 113 and made a total of 291. Gillis, Hanson, F. Erickson and J. Skinner were over 100.

At the Coliseum alleys the excitment ran high. The Machine Gallery made a team total of 1460, beating the Yard 4 to 0. The pinfall is one of the largest made this season in bowling circles.

The Patternmakers beat the Foundry, 3 to 1. The match was interesting because of the keen rivalry. The breaks were also running peculiar, some of the men being obliged to fight for every pin.

High man in the series was Smith with a single of 118 and a total of 318. Nine other bowlers were over the century mark with Antony and McKey were flirting the 300 total.

Thursday evening the Coliseum will be the centre of bowling interest .

The women bowlers of the Chauncey street alleys will come out to Quincy to avenge their defeat by the Quincy Girls. The management has reserved a section for the women of the city who are following the sport.

Judging from the way some of the local girls are hitting the pins, scores, equal to that of some league teams will probably be made.

The Brockton Y. M. C. A. and the Boston Retail Shoe Dealer will hold their second match Thursday evening.

To complete the card, a special match has been arranged between fast Boston and Quincy boys.

Gillespie, Hartford, Campbell, Powers and Lothrop of the Arch street team will roll Connell, Burke, Kiley, Smith and Bliss.

While the Boston gentlemen are high rollers it is expected that they will have some difficulty in shaking the "Pride of Quincy."

—We have seen no good reason given, says the Athol Chronicle, for the proposed change in the presidential term of office. The bill now before the House of Representatives at Washington to make the term six years instead of four, and to prohibit re-election, should be well "threshed out" before action is taken.

WOLLASTON MAN FOR GOLF HONOR

Will Represent Mass. Association in England

AT BLUE RIBBON EVENTS

So hearty has been the response of the golfers of Masaschusetts to the request for subscriptions to the McNamara-Brady Fund that it is flattering to the two professionals concerned and encouraging to the Massachusetts Golf Association which for so many years has striven to promote the best objects of the game throughout the State.

The object ofthe fund has appealed to all genuine sportsmen as well as to the golfers, for its mission is to send two Massachusetts-born and Massachusetts developed golfers to compete in the Open Golf Championship of Great Britain at Hoylake, near Liverpool, June 19 to 24, this championship being considered the blue ribbon event of the world wherever the game is played, which means from one end of the earth to the other.

Thomas L. McNamara was born in Brookline in 1882 and began to carry clubs at The Country Club, Brookline, when he was 11 years old.

Michael J. Brady was born at Brighton in 1887 and began caddying when he was 11 years old at the Commonwealth C. C., part of the course of which is in Brighton. He served the Commonwealth C. C. as professional for three years and then went to the Hyannisport G. C. and is now attached to the Wollaston G. C. of Montclair where he is a great favorite

Brady's national record during the last two years has placed him easily among the very best golf professionals of the country, for at Chicago in 1911 he tied for first place and last year at Buffalo he led the field at the end of the third round and very likely would have won the championship if he had not played too much within himself in the last round for the sake of safety. He tied for third place. In recent Massachusetts open championships Brady has been a favorite to win the title and might have done so in 1911 at The Country Club when he was second, only two strokes behind the winner, but in that tournament he took 86 in the first round owing to being trapped in a bunker. His other rounds were 74-73-78.

MILTON RESIDENTS DEMAND THAT THEY BE REGISTERED

Over 90 People in Line When the Time For Closing Registration Arrived

Nearly All Women Who Wanted to Vote For School Committee

Maude D. Kirkland with 21 other women and two men brought a petition in the Supreme Court Tuesday against Charles H. Bearce and others registrars of voters of Miltons, to compel the defendants to register them so that they may vote at the annual town election on Monday.

The registrars held a session Feb. 21 in accordance with the acts of 1907 at which persons eligible to vote and desiring to vote at the town election could register. The hours of registration were from 12 until 10 p. m., as fixed by the statute.

Owing to lack of facilities provided by the registrars, more than 90 persons, who had waited in line some time, were not reached as the registrars ceased registering at 10 o'clock and refused to continue registration after that hour, notwithstanding protests.

Nearly all the persons excluded from registration because the time fixed by law when registration should close had expired were women who desire to take part in a lively School Committee contest in the town.

The petitioners claim they should not be deprived oftheir right to vote because the registrars were careless and negligent in the conduct of the registration in failing to provide ample facilities to handle the number desiring to register.

The petitioners are Maude D. Kirkland, Ellen J. Ladd, Beatrice F. Duncan, Mildred E. Rowell, Mary E. Barry, Mary A. Byrnes, Margaret Rogers, Elizabeth M. Kelley, Agatha A. Kelley Rose Moressini, Barbara J. Sullivan, Bridget A. Sullivan, Ella G. Smith, Isabel Wigley, Laura E. McDonald, Harriet E. Dugan, Mary F. Haley, Mary T. Piper, Mary E. Welch, Jennie Ross, Anna L. Roberts, Catherine J. Rehan, Eugene H. Kennedy and Charles Stuart.

The respondents are Charles H. Bearce, Patrick J. Mahoney, Ernest P. Libbey and Henry D. Martin.

LEADERS IN THE MOVEMENT

For the Wollaston Citizens' Association

The success of the Wollaston Citizens' Association committee has been to a great extent accomplished by two of its energetic members, the chairman, William E. Robinson of 202 Safford street, Wollaston, formerly a member of the Hyde Park Improvement Association and a prominent member of the committee, a gentleman who is from Missouri and to whom one has to present facts.

The second member is William Dean Sanford, 101 Belmont street, Wollaston, formerly a member of the South Boston Citizens' Association, also one of the organizers of a co-operative bank in that section. He is a very progressive man, whose advice is always timely and it was at his home that this committee had its birth.

Those who attend the meeting at the New Wollaston school house this evening, will have a chance to hear both of these gentlemen.

SHORTLE FELL DOWN.

LECTURED ON EASTERN LANDS

William H. Bain Also Renewed Old Acquaintances

AT FORMER HOME

A stereopticon lecture on "India" by William H. Bain was the entertainment provided by the Wollaston Congregational club for its monthly meeting Tuesday evening. The speaker is a brother of B. H. Bain of Prospect avenue and himself lived in Wollaston a number of years ago. The public was invited to the lecture and many old friends and neighbors came to renew their acquaintance.

The supper enjoyed by the club was furnished from food packed under the brand of Bain Brothers, wholesale grocers, in which firm the speaker and his brother are partners. Included in the menu were boiled salmon, chicken salad, peas, string beans, potato, sliced pineapple with cherry and fancy crackers.

William H. Bain is a retired business man and an experienced traveller. His lecture on India was listened to with added interest on account of the views displayed, taken by himself.

Many pictures of the people, their trades, customs and modes of living were shown. Examples of Indian architecture were among the views.

The Tay Mahal and other mausoleums, and pagodas with their minarets and quaint Oriental touches were most beautiful.

The holy Ganges with its thousands of pilgrims and priests was shown as were the Himalayas and the people of the mountain country.

The cast system of India was fully explained and pictures shown of a few of the many types.

Scenes of Burmah and its lumberyard, elephants closed the evening. Pictures were seen of these ungainly looking beasts piling huge logs of a ton or over with human skill and sagacity.

GOOD SKATING.

Nightly skating parties by the young people is a regular feature on Butler's pond. As long as the weather holds as cold as it has been for the past few days there will be skating. The only regret is that the pond is not larger. The pond is owned by Eugene Connors who kindly allows the young people to use it.

RUMOR CHANGE OF THE COURSES

At the Woodward Institute Not Favored

It is rumored that the business course, and the course in Domestic Science are both to be dropped at the Woodward Institute. As Dr. Woodward did not approve of the "higher education" for women and did not wish them taught "house work and sewing, it seems a pity, if not a mistake; to divert the fund entirely from the object for which it was given.

ANNUAL BALL.

The committee on the annual ball of the Ave Maria Council, Knights of Columbus, which will take place in St. Joseph's hall, April 16 is in charge of Edward Monahan, one of the councils most energetic members. He will have as his assistants, Michael Crowley, Edward Martell, Angelo Bizzozero, Charles Buckley.

ARRESTED IN NEWPORT.

A dispatch from Newport, R .I. says that two boys, Edward Sanborn and James Barry of Quincy were turned over to the police by the Captian of Fall River steamer Providence when she arrived at Newport from New York Tuesday morning. The boys were charged with evading fare. Later in the day they were arraigned in the police court and fined $5 and costs each. The fine was raised through relatives to whom they appealed.

The boys told the police that they had been working in a ship yard in New York. The work had become slack and they decided to go home, hoping to be able to work their passage on the steamer. Instead of that however they were placed under arrest and turned over to the police at Newport.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS TAKE UP THE BOYNTON CASE

Within Memory of Oldest Ministers Only One Such Assembly Held in District

Session Adjourned to March 11 After Two Hours Conference

In a final attempt to adjust the differences between the Park and Downs church of Wollaston and Chester A. Boynton, who has been dismissed and refused a letter of transfer to the First Congregational congregation of Revere, the "ex-parte" council called by him met yesterday and made an appeal to the Wollaston church to join in the hearings of Mr. Boynton's complaint. If the congregation can be induced to take part in the proceedings the affair will become a "mutual council" instead of the extremely rare procedure otherwise necessary.

The delegates, ministers and laymen numbering between 30 and 40, who gathered at Pilgrim hall, yesterday to consider Mr. Boynton's case, had hardly formed into an ex-parte council whenthe resolutions were drawn up inviting the Park and Downs Church to take part. The delegates then adjourned for two weeks, in order to give the Wollaston congregation ample time in which to reconsider their refusal to further consider the case.

The Old South Church of Boston, was the only congregation represented yesterday that is not included in the South Suffolk conference.

The Rev. Frederick B. Richards of the Phillips Congregational church, South Boston, was chosen moderator. Mr. Boynton was represented by the Rev. Rufus A. Tobey of Quincy, a retired pastor, and by Atty. S. R. Cutler. All members of the press and interested parties were excluded, except those appearing in the interest of Mr. Boynton. The Rev. Mr. Herbert L. Torbet, pastor of the Revere congregation, to which Mr. Boynton seeks admission, was finally admitted.

En route both going and coming they will make stops in New York city.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The original Connecticut dam bill was lost in the senate. This of course refers to waterways.

The new steel train has been installed on the New York route and it is said to be the latest word in train service.

Harry Thaw got himself into Matteawan on the insanity dodge but he has been able to keep things pretty well stirred up in the institution even if his mental faculties may be claimed to be wobbly.

It will soon be "having your talking taken," as well as "having your picture took."

The new nickel will have "The Indian sign" all right, with its Red man and buffalo designs.

A Boston doctor claims that flat houses are insanity breeders. With a troop of youngters overhead, many a flat dweller has gone mad.

Washington will not be isolated as it was four years ago even if a blizzard should happen along inauguration day, as the wires are now underground and able to cope with such an emergency.

Nourishing the human body by electricity is the latest and no doubt many people would be better off if they had a little electricity injected into their systems.

Mr. McGraw deserves better treatment at the hands of Mr. Marquard.

Letter carriers will have their work cut out for them when the milliners get using the parcels post if the hats retain their present enormous proportions.

Jack Johnson with a court case hanging over his head is getting into the stylish habit of being poor health.

Harvard only made $60,000 at hockey this winter which puts sport in the football class as a money getter.

The writer who says "if Thorpe can only hit and field he will make good with the giants" has said a lot but still nothing new.

The powers took the right stand when they refused to recognize the government of Mexico until the people of that country have put their stamp of approval on it or selected other masters.

Senator Root says women rule the world today by reason of their supremacy but he probably does not include the London suffragettes in that grand summing up.

TREATMENT OF ANIMALS.

One can hardly fail to notice the improvement which has developed in the treatment of dumb animals, and more particularly horses during the past few years. Some years ago it would be no unusual thing to see a heartless ruffian driver lashing a horse, who was overburdened to force the animal to greater effort. Now such a spectacle would be the exception rather than the rule. The society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has accomplished much in bringing about this desirable state of affairs and owners of horses and drivers as well have readily lent their aid to the good work. Whips on wagons are more in the form of a necessary ornament which custom has established than an instrument of punishment. The worst things horses have to contend with in the present day are slippery paving blocks and slimy covered asphalt. Undoubtedly some means will be found of minimizing those burdens as speedily as possible.

SEEKING RECOGNITION.

The present government of Mexico probably did not expect such a diplomatic set back as it received from the powers with regard to recognition at this time. If insurgents can start a revolution at any old time upset the governmental arrangements and immediately fall into the soft place of immediate recognition, the world's peace would hardly be worth a brass farthing from one twenty four hours to another. The people of the world rightfully demand that government as established by force and slaughter, rapine and ruin, with the later questionable deaths of three prisoners must have some stronger claim for recognition than the mere announcement that they are in power and the de factor government. May be Huerta Diaz and La Barra may be elected to the places they desire. On the other hand, one or the other may deem another little show of force is necessary to maintain their respective positions and show the other fellow their strength and power. Be that as it may they have learned that government founded upon such a course they pursued cannot receive the approval of the world at large. They must first get the approval of their own country and then the world will consider their case.

NOISELESS BASE BALL.

Noiseless base ball was the suggestion offered at a hearing recently in New York on a bill to permit Sunday playing by amateurs. The leader of the opposition to the measure admitted that his objection would not be so strenuous if provision was made to prohibit advertising the event and make it unlawful to make a noise. If it was considered wrong to advertise the game, it would be pretty fine figuring to justify it under any circumstances. But the noiseless part of it seems sufficient to eliminate any possibility of Sunday ball playing under such conditions. Under such provisions it is safe to assume that the attendance would not total up a corporal's guard, as the "royal rooters" so-called, or the bleacherites would have lost their jobs right at the start. Coaching would have to be an unknown quantity and the "fan" would be deprived of the privilege of howling at the umpire or making him a target of any missile within reach. Such a regulation if lived up to in letter and spirit would deprive the dyed-in-the-wool fan of 99 per cent of what he pays his money for at a ball game. Sunday base ball may be a long time coming, but the noiseless game, never.

PLEASE SHUT THE DOOR.

Judson Bisco.

In winter time in Northern homes,
Cold drafts oft chill you to the core,
Because some neighbor, when he comes,
Forgets to shut the outside door.

To him of course you are polite,
Extending welcomes o'er and o'er,
But in your mind you feel like fight,
Because he does not shut the door.

While riding to and from your work,
You're chilled way through, same as before;
You know some lubber or a shirk
Entered, and did not shut the door.

All through the day it had been thus:
Your patience would not stand much more;
Your hair a muss from nervous fuss,
And negligence to shut some door.

But you held your tongue and temper;
Such silence no one could deplore;
You were winner—an exemplar
Of patience with an open door.

WAS VERY MUCH ALIVE

Supposed Dead Man Jumps Through Window and Runs Away

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 26.—Cecil Williams, a negro living at Middletown, came within an ace of being embalmed. He was pronounced dead by several neighbors and an undertaker and was about to receive an injection of the deadly fluid when he opened his eyes. Then things happened. He was not dead, only dead drunk.

When the undertaker pricked the victim's skin with a needle preparatory to plunging it into his heart Williams' eyes flew open. He was sober then and took in the situation.

Uttering a shriek, he knocked down the undertaker, who also was badly scared, and jumped through a window, carrying the glass and sash with him. The supposed dead man did not stop running until he was three miles away.

Last night he made his wife promise never to call an undertaker to examine him until a regular physician had pronounced him dead. The wife, in turn, compelled him to take the pledge.

THAW AS A WITNESS

Question as to His Competency In Bribery Hearing Is Raised

Albany, Feb. 26.—The question of Harry K. Thaw's competency as a witness in the examination which Governor Sulzer's committee of inquiry is making into charges against William F. Clark, its former secretary, has been raised.

Clark is accused of having used the governor's name without authority in attempting to bring about Thaw's release, and in turn has accused Colonel Joseph F. Scott, superintendent of state prisons, and "his immediate underlings of having engaged in a conspiracy to involve the governor of the state."

Incidentally, Dr. Russell, superintendent of Matteawan state hospital, where Thaw is confined, has charged John N. Anhut, a New York lawyer, with having offered him a $20,000 bribe to aid in releasing Thaw. Anhut is expected to testify today.

Wilmeyer told her, she states in her petition, that he could not find her appendix and that if she had one it must be mighty small and not worth worrying about.

Miss Reckenberg was satisfied she had an appendix and therefore she went to Chicago, where she commissioned another surgeon to make an exploration. He did so and found her appendix.

BRIGADE OF METER READERS

Will Enter Upon Gas Campaign Saturday

A regular corps of meter readers of the Citizens Gas Light Co. will begin work Saturday on the new system of meter reading. Consumers however will receive their bills for gas consumed during the month of February on the first of March however as usual. After this for a few weeks the receipt of bills will be a little irregular, then it will have settled down to a regular basis and bills may be looked for on a certain day each month. However the customers of the comapny are all now aware of the proposed change and many have been heard to speak a word of approval of the plan. There are very many things that can be said in its favor and but few if any against. Practically the only thing against will be from those who underthe new system will receive their monthly bills in the middle of the month. They will soon become accustomed to that however.

ANOTHER CONFESSION

Former Pool Room Keeper Became Graft Collector For Police

New York, Feb. 26.—A confession throwing further light on police graft methods was obtained by District Attorney Whitman from Ashley Shea, a former pool room keeper, who was indicted for alleged bribery.

Shea told Whitman that at one time when he was paying $50 weekly for protection for his pool room, he became a graft agent and collector in the district commanded by Dennis Sweeney, the former police inspector, under indictment as a grafter.

For eighteen months Shea spied on pool rooms and gambling houses, and reported regularly to Sergeant Peter Duffy, one of Sweeney's men now under indictment. This information was used to regulate the price of tribute levied on resort keepers, said Shea.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

There was a large assemblage of club members and friends at the meeting of the Quincy Women's club Tuesday afternoon at Alpha hall. Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard presided in her usual gracious manner. She said, "This seems on ideal place for our meeting, yet in a way we are inclined to miss our clubhouse. However if we are comfortable and all can see and hear, it will compensate in a large measure our having to make the change from the clubhouse to a hall."

Following the secretary's report, the treasurer's report was read by Mrs. Holman, in the absence of Mrs. Herbert W. Pinkham who was ill and unable to be present.

Mrs. Sheppard spoke of the failure of the legislature to pass the widowed mother's pension bill in which Mrs. Robert E. Park and club members were interested. Mrs. Park spoke of the hearing and failure of the bill but said she was not discouraged but should continue her work and interest.

Mrs. Edward B. Marsh of the Program committee announced an opera talk by Mr. Hubbard of the Boston Opera house for Wednesday afternoon, March 5 at three o'clock at the clubhouse. Mr. Hubbard would be assisted by a pianist and soloist. It promised to be a treat for club members as he speaks on "The Blue Forest" and "Suzanne." The lecture would be free to the public.

Mrs. Charles R. Safford of the Civics committee announced a debate for the next club meeting, March 11th at Alpha hall, subject "Resolved—that women be given the right of Suffrage." Mrs. Zenas S. Arnold had secured club members to speak for and against and it promised to be an interesting afternoon.

Mrs. Alfred W. Jelinek of the Arts and Crafts committee said classes were forming in various departments and her committee would be glad to give information concerning them.

Mrs. Wilson Marsh for the Philanthrophy committee told of a party being made up for Wednesday evening March 5 to visit the Opportunity club at East Boston which would give those interested in work among young women an opportunity to see how others carry on the work. Miss Purchase, secretary of the Associated Charities would personally conduct the party.

Mrs. Stanley Bone delegate to the Home Economics conference in December gave an interesting report of the meeting, as did Mrs. Percy Holman, delegate to the mid winter meeting of the State Federation in Boston.

In the absence of Mrs. W. H. Doble, chairman of the nominating committee, Mrs. Frank J. Moore presented the following names for the election:

President—Mrs. Chandler W. Smith.

1st Vice President—Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham, Mrs. Charles R. Safford.

2d Vice President—Mrs. John D. Mackay, Miss Harriet E. Turner.

Clerk—Mrs. Zenas S. Arnold, Mrs. George L. Badger.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Edward S. Tenney.

Treasurer—Mrs. Herbert W. Pinkham.

Auditor—Mrs. Frank F. Prescott.

It had been the wish of the committee to put two names in nomination for each office but they had been unable to do so. The meeting would be held at 2 P. M. at Alpha hall, March 11 and ballots must be cast personally. The polls would be open from 2 until 3 o'clock.

There are three more meetings of the class in parliamentary law which club women should take advantage of as the subject "organization," was an important one.

Mrs. Sheppard spoke of the Federation Bulletin and thought club members would enjoy its monthly visit if they subscribed for it.

At the close of the business session and after a few words of welcome to the guests Mrs. Sheppard announced the musical program arranged by Mrs. Walter P. Emery who had been fortunate in securing the Grieg Trio of Cambridge; Marguerete Pearson Moss, violin; E. Thompson Hall, 'cello; Minnie G. Del Castillo, piano. They played selections from Madame Butterfly which were so well rendered and cordially received that they were obliged to respond, again giving much pleasure. It is hoped to hear them again next season in a longer program.

The rest of the program was arranged by the Program committee, Mrs. E. B. Marsh presenting Mrs. Helen Weil, who read three Irish plays, one by Signe and two by Lady Gregory.

The announcement that the usual social tea would be served in the lower hall was a pleasant surprise as it was thought this enjoyable feature would have to be omitted outside of the clubhouse. The hospitality of the committee, Mrs. Herbert S. Barker chairman, was enjoyed judging by the large number who lingered for a friendly chat over the tea cup. Mrs. John D. Mackay presided over one tea urn and Mrs. Willard E. Dow of Braintree over the other.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

The Quincy Alliance held its regular meeting Monday afternoon in the parlor of First church. In the absence of the president, Mrs. George G. Saville, Mrs. W. B. Nichols presided. Mrs. Nichols announced invitations from the Wollaston, North Easton and Second church of Boston Alliance and also spoke of the Cheerful letter work soliciting pieces of silk, print or gingham for a needy woman who is trying to earn a sewing machine by making patchwork quilts.

After the report of the secretary, Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis, Misses Ruth and Dorothy Packard sang two songs, "Water Lilies" by Karl Lindus and "Were I a Birdling," by S. Jadassohn. These songs were very sweetly and expressively rendered. Miss Minnie Packard accompanied at the piano.

The speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Susan Fitzgerald of Boston, whose subject was, "Equal Suffrage." Mrs. Fitzgerald said in part:

"I am especially pleased to be present at an Alliance meeting, and I assume that my being invited to come here is indicative of an unusual interest on your part in the question of Equal Suffrage. To us, who are deeply concerned in politics it is a living issue, a vital social need, and women are coming to realize and comprehend the situation and reveal the spirit which has been dormant so long.

"Women are becoming indefatigable workers in the cause of Equal Suffrage and the most conservative are prepared to admit that the principle underlying the question is based on true democracy. What is a vote? There is nothing mysterious about a vote. It is a perfectly simple and natural thing. Women in clubs and various organizations are called upon to decide upon whatever that body may require, or cast a vote. A woman has to equip herself and acquire the knowledge which will enable her to vote intelligently on the questions the club or organization may propose. The modern trend calls upon women to exert themselves in behalf of humanity. We do not ask them to rush into strange places but by the acquisition of knowledge make themselves fitted for what is coming as their right and privilege.

"Before women could work in any large numbers they had to be trained in the General Federation of Women's Clubs. While the clubs do not claim suffrage, many club women favor it, and many women have left the social work to engage in suffrage. Think of the many philanthropic activities of the women of America. The playground, the tenement districts, pure milk for babies, pure food and many others too numerous to mention. Women, by making themselves familiar with the circumstances and environments of the tenement districts have brought about better conditions and by the energy of club women many matters have been brought to the notice of congressmen and new laws have been made. Pure food fight was instigated by women. They have done much, but it is only a small part of what they are endeavoring to do and without a doubt they will eventually acomplish.

"The trouble is we were brought up to the assumption that politics did not concern us. A field with a high fence around it, which it was very improper for us to climb, but if we can do so much by our influence, why not apply our strength directly to the making of laws?

"To do the bidding of the citizen of the United States, the Government is for the people and by the people, but the mistake we have made is that we forgot that the people are women and men. With the trend of modern thought Government is power based upon the consent of women as well as men. We are not adhering to the rules our forefathers laid down for us. It is wonderful about our constitution, that it could take care of our modern conditions.

"In olden times the family could have a supply of vegetables from the farm, water from the well, a cow to supply the milk; but today our water supply comes through pipes, our milk in bottles and our vegetables from the canning factory and we know little of its history. Who is more concerned than the mother that her children should have pure water, milk and sanitary conditions, where food is canned? And why should she not have the right to vote on the making of laws to govern these conditions? Surely the mother should have a voice in these matters. Present conditions demand it, and some men ask the help of women.

"It is a day of specialization. Men and women have their own point of view. Men are responsible for business, women are responsible for the humane and moral standards. The first question a man asks is, what will be the effect on business if women get the ballot? Because his first instinctive thought is business.

"We are asking for the vote, not because we want to be tagged equal with men but that we may enjoy the splendid privileges. We are supposed to be a good business community hard headed business men, but women who pay heaviest taxes and for that matter all women who buy sugar, tea, coffee, etc., even the working girl who hires her small room in a boarding house, contributes her share towards taxes, but has no representation. We pay towards maintaining the government, but have no voice as to how our money shall be spent. The arguments that were brought up fifty or sixty years ago, are almost identical with the arguments that are brought up today. The same arguments were brought up in China against the unbinding of women's feet.

"Some argue that if women voted there would be so many foreign born women that would vote. By actual census we have two-thirds more native born women than foreign born, but what of that? We were all foreign born once. Should not those who couldn't get a board the Mayflower have a chance?

"Then another argument is the ignorant women would vote. Are there not ignorant men who vote? But so far the educated women we find in much larger proportions. The women in the tenement houses are the ones who are meeting conditions, try to improve and work with zeal. Jane Addams says if they would give the vote to the women of the tenement houses she could clean up the city of Chicago. Those who are in close touch with the work have faith. Why should those outside protest against it? It is coming, and coming very rapidly. Traditions, arguments, and sentiment, it will be almost impossible to remember what they were against the fear of forcing the vote."

During the social, informal hour all greeted Mrs. Fitzgerald. Refreshments were served, the hostesses, Miss Florina Collamore and Mrs. Lucy B. Waterman presiding at the tea urns and Mrs. William M. Hodgkinson, Mrs. John Christianson, Mrs. W. B. Nichols and Miss Mary Holden assisting. Mrs. Caroline A. Spear brought a delicious loaf of cake as she had the day before observed the seventy-first anniversary of her marriage.

GOVERNOR WILSON FORMALLY RESIGNS

Will Retire From Office In New Jersey on March 1

Trenton, Feb. 26.—Governor Wilson of New Jersey resigned yesterday afternoon to take effect at noon on March 1. The resignation was sent to David S. Crater, the secretary of state. At the same time the governor sent a message to both houses of the legislature notifying them of his act.

Mr. Wilson will attend the ceremonies when his successor, James Fielder, president of the state senate, succeeds him. Though there is usually no ceremony when the president of the state senate becomes acting governor, the fact that the governor goes to the presidential chair, and the long term which Fielder will fill have brought about a more formal program.

AMERICAN FASHION DESIGNS.

Great Movement in New York For American Modes—"Times" Prize Competition and Special Exhibitions

This year will be famous in fashion annals for inaugurating American designs for women's clothes. This movement has been hastened by the very freakish and eccentric styles sent over from Paris for several seasons past. Styles originated for a class of people who do not belong in recognized social circles in France, and quite unsuited to the taste and demands of refined American women.

THE "TIMES" CONTEST.

The New York Times recently offered prizes for original designs for hats, and gowns, and thousands of these were submitted and while the winners have not yet been announced, it is rumored that the far West has captured "first," which shows that New York does not hold all the winning cards for fashions, as we are perhaps too apt to think here.

OTHER ORIGINAL STYLES.

The Times fashion contest is only one of many manifestations in the field of American designed clothes. Several prominent Fifth Avenue dressmakers, and department stores, also trade schools and journals are giving exhibitions of the smart work that can be turned out here. The "Young Woman's Christian Association" has an excellent showing of original designs from their dress classes, and there are many other indications of the way the demand for dress improvement is being met.

The above designs are by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

FASHION AT SMALL COST.

Never has there been such an enticing showing of cottons as all the fashionable stores are making just now. Clever women, who want to make the best possible appearance for a limited expenditure, are taking advantage of the opportunity to secure dress lengths of these which can be successfully made up at home, into frocks and suit dresses pretty enough for any wear. The new "Bontex" cottons have the name woven in the selvage as a guarantee of up-to-date style and quality, and include every standard weave, as well as many exclusive novelties. Zephyrs at a few cents a yard, silk and cotton brocades, mercerized poplins, voiles, galateas, and bordered goods priced at several dollars. Merchants everywhere are showing these, so a woman can easily see them and judge for herself of their beauty and quality.

BEAUTY RELATIVE.

American women have as a rule an intuitive sense of fitness in dress which brands them as the best gowned women in the world. For only when a woman realizes her own needs and limitations can she expect to appear at her best. An elaborate and fussy frock suited for wear in a motor car, looks ridiculous in a public conveyance where rich and elegant attire can be correctly worn if properly selected "A fine sense of fitness heralds the well dressed woman" says a well known fashion authority. "Beauty of dress is not a question of buying the latest mode" but of buying what suits the wearer and fits her needs.

Fannie Field.

BONCI—RHADESKA CONCERT.

The concert in Symphony hall, Boston Sunday afternoon will be given by Alessandro Bonci, the greatest of Italian lyric singers assisted by Madame Rhadeska, a gifted young singer who will be heard in Symphony hall for the first time. Bonci needs no introduction to the public of Boston and the surrounding towns. He is one of the classic figures of the concert stage of today. Madame Rhadeska is a very remarkable singer particularly as she is blind and has been blind since the age of thirteen. She is a coloratura soprano of whom very flattering things are said. The programme will be as follows:—

Cradle Song — DeKoven
Day Is Gone — Ruthven Lang
Love's Lyre — Tirindeli
Signor Bonci
La Pastorella from "Rosalinda" — Veracini
Qual Falfalletta — D. Scarlatti
Aime—Moi (arr. by D. Viardot) — Chopin
Vissi D'Arte, Vissi D'Amore — Puccini
Mme. Rhadeska
"Cielo E Mar," from "La Gioconda" — Ponchielli
Signor Bonci
Tuscan Stronelli — Blair Fairchild
Cantate su.
O. Rondinello.
Questa e la Sera
O Rosa, Rosa!
Mme. Rhadeska
Voce E Notte — DeCurtis
Occhi Turchini — Denza
Barcarola — Rossini
Signor Bonci
Soir Paien (Flute obbligato) — Georges Hue
Le Nil (Flute obbligato) — Xavier Leroux
Madame Rhadeska
Celeste Aida — Verdi
Signor Bonci

—The future regulation of the field of industry does not lie with the violent agitators who are just now making themselves so conspicuous, says the Banker and Tradesman. It is rather with the sane forces of labor which know the difference between right and wrong, and which do not desire to force and terrorize their associates, as if it were the right of the minority to rule the majority.

TRADE-MARKED GOODS SOUGHT

Demand For Getting Goods by Name is Fast Growing

The Pilgrim Publicity Association has just issued an interesting article from the pen of George B. Gallup, on "Safeguarding Our Industries." Among other things Mr. Gallup says:

"New England has got to meet a competition of a new kind that is fast menacing our industrial supremacy. She has great need of scientific advertising as well as the efforts of all her best trained advertising men, advertising clubs, and publicity committees of commercial organizations, guided by expert advisers.

"To give an idea of how formidable this competition is growing, let me say that the West is developing 100 per cent faster in the knowledge of how to produce and sell trademarked articles of general use and consumption than is New England. This means that in a very few years millions of the most intelligent people in the country will be asking for goods by name and insisting upon getting these goods,—and a considerable proportion will be those not made in New England. Consider the automobile and stove industries, both of which began in New England. Unfortunately a very large proportion of the really excellent goods made in New England are not trade marked and are not asked for by name in the retail stores of the country.

"Now the skilled labor is the one thing in which New England is supreme.

"How can we hold our skilled labor against the splendid inducements is housing, in social advantages, in city perfections that these competing cities are beginning to offer?

"How can we retain our superintendents and foremen and groups of expert workers?

"By improving our own cities. By a City Planning Compaign which shall sweep all over New England. By competing with these splendid Western and Southern people on a plane of excellence in city building and city regenerating on scientific and competent engineering lines.

"Now the work of bringing about such a result demands the energy, wisdom and scientific acquirements of all our best advertising men, our active and almost indomitable Publicity Clubs, our Publicity Committees of our Board of Trade, in order to arouse public sentiment for a campaign of municipal betterment. We must have a City Planning movement in New England, to hold our industries at all. Then we must have scientific advertising campaigns applied to our individual industries in order to expand these industries and maintain them at the highest possible point of efficiency.

"We must respond to this universal demand of a competition, a new kind of competition based upon supreme excellence rather than privilege, monopoly, force or cutthroat methods. We must guarantee everything, stand back of our guarantees and make good as scientific city builders, as well as makers of perfected products submitted by name to a daily referendum of the consumers in every home in the land."

MESSAGE TO YALE MEN

Taft Says There Is Need of Respect For the Constitution

New Haven, Feb. 26.—Through the Yale News President Taft, who is shortly to assume the chair of the Kent professorship of law at Yale, sends a special personal message to Yale men.

"There is need," he says, "that young men should appreciate the constitution of the United States. And this need is especially keen in a day when that instrument is regarded so lightly by a class of fanatical enthusiasts seeking short cuts to economic perfection on the one hand and by unscrupulous demagogues who, to promote their own interests, do not hesitate to inculcate disrespect and even contempt for the constitution and the laws enacted under it, on the other."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taker out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

PEACE APPEARS TO BE FAR OFF

Rebel Activity In the North of Mexico Has Increased

ZAPATISTAS ON THE WARPATH

Their Demands Upon New Government Are Strongly Objected To—Work of Destruction Now More Complete Than Ordinarily Undertaken by Rebels—Their Subjugation Will Prove Difficult Task—President Proclaims General Amnesty—Rewards Men Who Stuck to Him

Mexico City, Feb. 26.—Hope for immediate peace in Mexico is slight. Rebel activity in the north has increased and the government's efforts to enter into arrangements with the Zapatistas appear to have failed.

Whether the rebels, whose centre is the state of Coahuila, have increased numerically is not generally known, but they have so conducted their operations already that communication with the frontier has been stopped, that region between Laredo and San Luis Potosi being practically isolated.

In the south the Zapatistas continue burning and raiding, and an attack on a military train between Ozumba and Mexico City leaves little room for doubt as to their attitude toward the new administration. The attack on the train was of ordinary ambush type. The train was stopped by a burned-out bridge, and the fighting continued for more than two hours.

One of the demands of the Zapatistas, made by commissioners representing that section of the rebels, was that all Zapatista officers be admitted to the regular establishments with corresponding rank, some having taken unto themselves the title of general. To this the government strongly objected.

The commissioners left in order to report to their chief, and soon word came back that the Zapatistas considered the revolution still in progress. The government has sent forces southward toward Cuernavaca, along the line of the Central railway, a portion of which, destroyed by rebels, will be rebuilt.

Reports from the state of Morelos indicate that the work of destruction during the past twenty-four hours has been more complete than ordinarily undertaken by the rebels.

To offset the antagonism of the Zapatistas, however, the government believes there will be no difficulty in concluding arrangements for peace with Juan A. Almazan and Julio Radillo, the two most prominent leaders in the state of Guerrero. Nor is there much doubt felt by the officials that arrangements can be made by the government agents sent to El Paso with representatives of Orozco's army.

The official closing of the port of Laredo was the first public intimation here the government regarded the rebels to the north of Monterey as unfriendly to the new regime. It had been stated officially that Venustiano Carranza, governor of Coahuila, had decided to abandon his antagonistic attitude, but hope of this has greatly diminished, and the cutting of the National railroad between San Luis Potosi and Saltillo and between San Luis and Tampico indicates that the government has much to do before it can subjugate the rebels.

In spite of these conditions President Huerta insists that his will not be a government of retaliation or revenge, but will devote its energy to the placation of those persons mildly antagonistic and to the exclusion of its active enemies.

An amnesty proclamation has been sent broadcast. The government has not forgotten to extend rewards. As a simple general, Huerta long resented the failure of some of his companions in arms to receive promotion, and since his assumption of power new stripes have been bestowed upon numerous officers.

TAFT WILL NOT INTERVENE

So Long as Mexicans Make No Organized Attack on Americans

Washington, Feb. 26.—President Taft will make no formal statement of any kind with respect to his attitude toward intervention in Mexico, but his position has been well understood here since the beginning of the recent outbreak, and he has reiterated it so often to callers that no room for misunderstanding could exist.

The president has made it clear that the United States would not intervene in Mexico so long as the people of that unfortunate country confine their warfare to the killing of each other and make no organized attack upon Americans as such, or offer no indignities for which the Mexican government reasonably could be held responsible.

The president has appreciated fully the responsibility of holding off while the lives of Americans were endangered by flying missiles in the city of Mexico and while roving bandits have committed depredations upon American persons and property in other parts of the republic, but he has realized that, if nothing more than a mathematical proposition, the loss of life incident to the progress of revolution would be nothing compared with the actual murders of Americans should the United States through armed intervention place itself in the position of an enemy.

That this government would not in fact be an enemy of the Mexican people should it step in to pacify the country for its own good would cut no figure in the Mexican mind, which would seek to destroy American life and property by wholesale if United States soldiers should be instructed to cross the border.

The killing of Madero and Suarez is regarded with abhorrence in administration circles, but even that has failed to change the attitude of President Taft, who has believed that neither side has countenanced or would permit any attack upon Americans which this government could construe as an international affront to the flag for which the Mexican authorities could properly be held responsible.

It is recognized here that intervention means the immediate slaughter of many persons whose lives will be fairly safe if the United States keeps hands off, even though the Mexicans kill each other without restraint.

The administration is taking a much more hopeful view of the outlook in Mexico. This reflected in the cabinet meeting yesterday when all of the recent dispatches from Ambassador Wilson and American consuls in various parts of Mexico were read and discussed. The conclusion was reached that nothing remains to be done at this time to safeguard American interests in Mexico by the Huerta government.

It is strongly suspected that the apparently bellicose attitude of some of the Madero governors and other officials, as well as a number of rebel leaders, has been assumed in the hope of thereby inducing the government to provide them with remunerative offices.

READY FOR BUSINESS

Troops Have Begun to Mobilize at Galveston and Texas City

Announcement was made that the entire Fifth brigade, with Company D, Signal Corps; Company E, Engineers, and Field Hospital No. 3, will be encamped at Fort Crockett. The Fourth and Sixth brigades, with an actual strength of 10,000, will be camped at Texas City, near Houston.

All infantry organizations mobilizing here have been supplied with ammunition.

Eight-Hour Day Bill Introduced

Washington, Feb. 26.—A bill introduced by Representative Peters of Massachusetts, making compulsory an eight-hour day for women workers in the District of Columbia, was unanimously reported by the house committee on labor.

MARSH KILLED BY ACCIDENT

Counsel Admits Bullet Came From Dorr's Revolver

STRUGGLE IN AN AUTOMOBILE

Followed Alleged Insult to Name of Aunt of Defendant by Wealthy Soap Manufacturer—Alleged Slayer Will Take Stand and Tell Jury His Version of the Tragedy

Salem, Mass., Feb. 26.—George E. Marsh, the wealthy Lynn soap manufacturer, was slain in Dorr's automobile on the Lynn boulevard between 4:15 and 4:30 on the afternoon of April 11 last.

William A. Dorr, who is on trial before Judge Quinn and a jury in the Essex county superior court, will take the witness stand and admit he did the shooting. He will claim his revolver was discharged accidentally while he was attempting to defend himself from an attack which the 77-year-old victim made upon him in the automobile.

These facts were revealed to a crowded courtroom by the defendant's senior counsel, Mr. Barney, in his opening for the defense.

"Dorr will tell you," said Barney, "how Marsh accepted a ride in his automobile; how Dorr attempted to leave the machine when the old man insulted the name of his aunt. He will tell you how Marsh caught hold of him and pinned him down in such a way that he feared for his life; how he drew his revolver, which he always carried, and how the unfortunate tragedy was over in three seconds."

Barnew declared that the last man Dorr and Orpha Marsh wished to have die was George E. Marsh, because his death, in view of the tangled affairs of the estate of his brother James, of which he was trustee, would deprive her of title to any of the property.

Dorr will tell the jury that the reason he hung around the Marsh home in the manner already described by witnesses was because he wanted to see Marsh alone to talk about the affairs of the trust fund of $105,000 left by James E. Marsh for the benefit of Dorr's aunt, Orpha Marsh. Barney said Dorr believed there was a conspiracy to cheat Orpha out of this trust fund. He said Dorr came east for the purpose of consulting George Marsh, who was trustee of the estate. He wanted to lay the whole matter before George Marsh and have things straightened out.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

IN PLACE OF MEAT.

NUTS should have a high place in the estimation of the good church man or church woman because they may be used to provide really satisfactory substitutes for it when meat is banished from the table.

Baked and Roasted.

Some recipes for delicious nut foods are the following:

Nut and Celery Loaf.—Take a cupful of well chopped celery, one of nut meats and one of breadcrumbs. Add one cupful of milk, one tablespoonful of melted butter, salt, pepper, onion juice and poultry stuffing. Knead with the hands. Form into a loaf and bake about one hour.

Nut Roast.—Boil a pint of beans until tender, but not mushy. Put in a baking dish. Take a tablespoonful peanut butter rubbed to a smooth cream in half a cupful warm water; salt and pepper. Mix half of this with the beans and put the rest on top. Bake in the oven about an hour. If liked sweet add a little molasses.

Combined With Cheese.

Nut and Cheese Roast.—Simmer two tablespoonfuls of chopped onion in one tablespoonful of butter and a little water. When tender mix one cupful each of grated cheese, chopped English walnuts and soft stale breadcrumbs together and moisten with the water in which the onion has been cooked. Add half a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper, also juice of half a lemon. Pour into a shallow baking dish and bake in the oven until brown.

Fried Nut Meats.

Nut Croquettes.—Take two cupfuls of hot riced potatoes and three tablespoonfuls of cream, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a few grains of cayenne and a few drops of onion juice. Beat thoroughly and add one egg yolk. Cook one-fourth cupful of soft breadcrumbs with one-fourth cupful of cream until the consistency of a thick paste. Then add one-half egg yolk and salt to taste. Cool and add nutmeg broken in pieces, using as many nutmegs as will be held together by the paste. Shape the potatoes into small balls. Hollow out the balls and fill with the nuts. Cover with the potatoes and roll into balls. Dip in egg and crumbs. Fry in deep fat and drain on brown paper, serving very hot with garnish of fried parsley.

TWO DEATHS IN POLAR REGIONS

Ninnis and Mertz of Mawson Expedition Sacrifice Lives

SURVIVORS MISS RELIEF SHIP

Leader and Six Companions, Although Having Attained Principal Objects of Expedition, Must Spend Another Year In Frozen Southern Regions—Survivors All Well

Sydney, Aus., Feb. 26.—Disaster has overtaken the Australian Aantarctic expedition of Dr. Douglas Mawson.

Professor David of Sydney, who was with Sir Ernest Shackleton's South Pole expedition, received a wireless telegram from Adelie islands in the Antarctic ocean by way of Macquarrie island, saying that Lieutenant Ninnis and Dr. Mertz, two members of the party, had died. The message stated, however, that Mawson and the other members of the expedition were all well.

Lieutenant Ninnis was killed a year ago by a fall through a crevasse. Ninnis fell during a sledging trip.

This was the second time the Mawson party has been in communication with civilization within the past few weeks. Recently word was received from the expedition's ship, Aurora, that the vessel was leaving for another section of the Antarctic ocean to do some further exploring.

The expedition started out, not with any idea of rushing to the South Pole, but with the intention of exploring and naming the unknown lands of the Antarctic, which had never heretofore been traversed by human feet.

According to the reports of Mawson himself, the principal object of the expedition were attained and specially important information was gathered in regard to the southern magnetic pole.

Unfortunately, Mawson and six of his companions, after they had been picked up by the Aurora, undertook another expedition and were unable to join the ship, which was compelled to leave them to spend another year in the cold southern regions.

The expedition headed by Mawson set out from Australia in the latter party of 1911. It consisted of nearly fifty men, most of whom were graduates of the universities of Australia and New Zealand. It was financed by popular subscription.

Once again the British army is affected by the loss of a brilliant officer. Lieutenant Ninnis was of the famous Royal Fusiliers regiment.

Switzerland, also, has suffered a great loss by the death of Merts, a capable scientist as well as a leading sportsman. After winning the ski-jumping championship in Switzerland in 1908, he offered his services to Mawson, believing that his great experience among ice and snow would be of service to the expedition and that his scientific knowledge also would aid its leader.

"WAS MISQUOTED"

Probable Defense of Mrs. Pankhurst, Who Is Held In $3500

London, Feb. 26.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, who was arrested charged with inciting women to blow up the home of Chancellor Lloyd George, was arraigned in the Epsom police court.

The government is not ready to proceed and Mrs. Pankhurst was remanded, her bail being set at $3500.

The militant leader has hired counsel and is determined to contest her case vigorously. It is understood she is preparing to base her defense upon the contention that she was misquoted in her Cardiff speech, in which she was said to have accepted responsibility for the wrecking of George's home by an explosion.

KOHLER IS SUSPENDED

Charges Filed Against Cleveland's "Golden Rule" Chief of Police

Cleveland, Feb. 26.—Cleveland's "Golden Rule" chief of police, Fred Kohler, was suspended by Mayor Baker. It is understood he was first given an opportunity to resign.

Subsequently charges attacking Kohler's conduct were filed with the civil service commission.

Alfred Dickens' Widow Dead

I. O. O. F. VISITATION

good things placed upon them. The divine blessing was invoked by the chaplain of Puritan Lodge, Ellis F. Dyer and then after the Doxology followed the discussion of the bountiful repast which included cold meats, escalloped oysters, rolls, coffee, various kinds of pies, also ice cream and cake. Next cigars were passed and geniality reached its height under the magic spell of the fragrant and soothing weed.

The sweet music of the orchestra during the banquet and throughout the evening was a most enjoyable part of the program. The proceedings of the evening were started by P. G. John H. Macandrew, the chairman of the committee of arrangements who introduced Dr. Walter B. Robbins, Noble Grand of the local lodge. Dr. Robbins responded briefly and in turn introduced P. G. Hon. B. H. Woodsum who delivered a most stirring and eloquent address of welcome to the visiting brothers. It was a splendid effort and was received with thunders of applause from the large audience.

The response was made by the Noble Grand of Mattakesett Lodge, A. Elliot Holmes who voiced briefly but feelingly the sentiments of the visitors.

Next came some readings by Professor Cole, the well known entertainer and member of Edward Lacy Lodge, Albany, N. Y. The professor was suddenly stricken blind some years ago but he gives an entertainment which is of the finest character, refined and highly interesting. Indeed his contributions were among the distinct hits of the evening. His stories and jokes kept his hearers in a continual roar of laughter and his vocal hits were so apt as to bring down the house.

Mr. Gile of Boston gave some clever readings and pleased all by his efforts. He is a well known entertainer, has been heard here before and his name on the program is a sure and certain indication of hearty laughs to come.

The gentlemen were next favored with vocal selections by Miss Grace E. Clemens of Boston. The lady was handicapped by a severe cold but pleased all by her song.

A stirring address was delivered by Samuel Wood, Jr., Grand Patriarch of the Grand Encampment. Mr. Wood spoke eloquently of the "get-together" spirit, outlined the work and aims of Odd Fellowship and exhorted his hearers to do good to their fellows with each passing hour. His speech was full of eloquence and he was loudly applauded.

Orchestra selections followed and then came remarks from that silver tongued orator P. G. M. Joseph Belcher of Randolph. The attainments of the speaker, his great work in the order and his wonderful ability as a speech maker are too well known to require repetition and it only needs to be added that his words commanded the closest attention and received well merited and continued applause.

Some earnest and appropriate remarks were then listened to from D. D. G. M. Andrew S. Johnson. He convinced all by his earnestness in lauding the order and in a graceful speech of conclusion presented to Noble Grand Robbins as a gift to Puritan Lodge, two handsome gavels made of wood from the baluster of the old Braintree Town hall.

Dr. Robbins in behalf of his lodge accepted the gifts in a brief but appropriate speech of thanks.

There were more readings by Mr. Gile and his female impersonations in costume were one of the most delicious hits of the evening and his local hits elicited howls of merriment. Prof. Cole's wonderful feats of ventriloquism and his skilful manipulation of his dolls were really wonderful and easily stamped him as a most versatile and talented artist.

A vocal solo followed by that popular townsman C. S. Hannaford and the entertainment was concluded by the recitation of an original poem by W. S. Freeman, the oldest member of Mattakesett Lodge.

Among those present were noted the following: P. G. M. Joseph Belcher of Randolph, D. D. G. M. Charles Fewkes of Newton Highlands, D. D. G. M. Edwin Prouty of Plymouth, P. G. W. S. Freeman of Duxbury; Town Clerk, Henry A. Monk, Water Commissioner, John Kelley, W. B. Skinner of the Board of Health, Dr. J. William Watson, Hon. B. H. Woodsum, Rev. John S. Mitchell, Henry M. Storm, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, Dr. Franklin H. Merriam.

There was a very efficient committee of arrangements as follows: John H. Macandrew, chairman, E. Forrest Watkins, F. M. Buzzell, B. H. Woodsum, Jr., Courtney Atkinson, Perley Proctor, C. F. Mellen.

The banquet which was both ample and satisfying was in charge of F. M. Buzzell Perley Proctor, C. F. Mellen.

The visitation was a grand success and will be long and pleasantly remembered by all who had the privilege and pleasure of taking part in it.

MOST GORGEOUS TRAIN.

Two steel vestibuled trains, representing in grace of workmanship, artistic finish and durability of design the very perfection of the car builders' art, begin running between Boston and New York Tuesday. They form the "Merchants' Limited" of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, the five o'clock five-hour train between the two cities.

These trains came from the Pullman Company's shops. The "Merchants' Limited" is primarily a tired business man's train. It was with a view of providing for him all the car architects could furnish to contribute to his comfort and ease that this new equipment was ordered by President Charles S. Mellen of the New Haven. In these trains the ingenuity of the car builders have been taxed to provide as well for the passenger's safety as for his comfort.

These new trains are practically indestructible. Made of steel they could go through a stone wall without being scratched. Reinforced underneath with two immense steel girders running the length of the car and attached at the end to a solid cast steel U frame forming the vestibule, no impact however great could telescope them. A rear end collision might tilt them up on end a bit but that would be all. So far as resisting powers go they are built like battleships.

Each of the new trains will consist of six cars exclusive of the diners. There will be four parlor cars, a combination parlor and baggage car and an observation smoker. All of them have a steel exterior with a wood interior to give them elegance.

But it is in their unique lighting system that these cars surpass anything yet conceived by the car constructors. They are the first to have the new indirect system of lighting, a system by which light is reflected from the ceiling. From a dozen beautifully chased bronze lacquered domes, each containing a 100 watt lamp, light is thrown upward against the white ceiling.

Citizens' Gas Light Company

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO CONSUMERS

NEW SYSTEM OF METER READING AND BILLING

It is the aim of the Citizens' Gas Light Company to give to the Public a service as excellent in every detail as possible and to improve the service as opportunity offers.

To this end the Company will on March 1st, 1913, put into effect a new system of Meter Reading and Billing which has been adopted after careful study of the many systems in use in other cities.

REGULAR METER READERS

Instead of hiring a large number of special men to read all the meters on the last few days of the month (as will still be done up to February 28th, 1913) the Company will in March create a permanent force of regular meter readers, who will be easily identified by the Company's badge conspicuously worn.

CONSTANT SYSTEM

These men will on each working day throughout the month read all the meters in one of the sections into which the accounts have been grouped and, having covered the City, will periodically read the same meters once in about every thirty calendar days, all bills rendered covering gas used during the preceding thirty days.

BILLS PAYABLE WITHIN FIFTEEN DAYS OF DATE

Two days after the reading of the meters of any section, the corresponding bills will be delivered. Each bill must be paid within fifteen days of its date and should a bill become overdue by not being paid within fifteen days, the supply may be discontinued without further notice.

EXAMPLES

The following examples are given on typical cases:

| METER IN SECTION NO. 2 | | METER IN SECTION NO. 7 | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Meter read | Monday, Mar. 10 | Meter read | Wednesday, Mar. 19 |
| Bill delivered | Wednesday, Mar. 12 | Bill delivered | Friday, Mar. 21 |
| Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Tuesday Mar. 25 | Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Thursday, Apr. 3 |

METHOD OF CHANGE FROM OLD TO NEW SYSTEM

As all meters will be read in the last days of February and as the new system will go into active operation about March 10th, it is evident that the first bills received after this latter date will cover periods ranging from two to six weeks. But in future the date of the last state of the meter and the date of the preceding state of the meter will appear on all bills; the period covered by each bill will therefore be evident in the bill and should be considered in connection with the amount of gas used.

For instance, bills rendered March 14th, will cover a period of about three weeks, while bills rendered April 2nd, will cover a period of about six weeks. After these first six weeks of change, customers will find that each month they will receive their bills on or about the same date, and that each bill will invariably cover the preceding thirty days.

LEARN TO READ METERS

We would again urge our customers to learn how to read meters; instruction as to this will be found on the back of the gas bills and will enable customers to check bills rendered.

REMITTANCES BY MAIL

Remittances sent through the mails should be addressed only in the name of the Company to its office, No. 11 Granite Street, Quincy.

We desire in conclusion, to assure our customers that the installation of the system outlined above is to secure uniformity and accuracy in handling their accounts.

The Little Authoress

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

Walter Ewing had just that kind of suavity that is required of the editor of a magazine. When authors came in with their manuscripts he would grasp them cordially by the hand, smile upon them, ask them to be seated and listen to their long talks about what they had to offer.

One day the prettiest little girl in the world was admitted to Mr. Ewing's sanctum. She came in with a smile not only to beat the one with which he greeted her, but, in slang phrase, "to beat the band." He drew up a chair for her close to his rosewood desk and relieved her at once of a package she carried by which he knew her for an authoress. Then he brought his expressive eyes upon her as if to say: "Do tell me what I can do for you. I am dying to serve you."

Then she began to talk. About what? Everything—her bashfulness about entering the field of literature, the great responsibility that must necessarily rest upon editors, what wonderful powers of discrimination they must have, the characters in her work, a novel; her difficulty in finding a motif and the many times she had rewritten certain parts. For half an hour she talked, the editor listening rather to her sweet voice than what she said—he had heard it all a thousand times before—sometimes fancying that she was a bird that had flown into his sanctum to rest him from the hardest work in the world—that of reading one manuscript after another through the long day.

When she went away he had promised her that in order to give her story especial attention he would take it home with him and read it. far away from the interruptions constantly occurring during business hours. For some time after she had gone he sat, with her warble still sounding sweetly in his ears, then began to write in blue pencil the word "return" on the covers of a pile of manuscripts on his desk, throwing each into a basket beside him, such as is commonly used as a receptacle for soiled linen.

That evening, true to his promise, he took the manuscript home with him, intending to read it at an early date; but, whether the little authoress had made a deeper impression on him than the bundle or whether he had been so taken with her that he was in no hurry to get rid of her, he put off its examination from day to day. Now and again she would call upon him. He would greet her with the same affability as before, telling her that he was deferring the examination of her novel till he felt in a mood to appreciate its merits. The more delicate the style and sentiment in a story the more difficult it was of detection Doubtless within another week he would feel inspired to read the manuscript and decide upon its merits.

The patience, the good nature, of the little authoress were inexhaustible. She appreciated the editor's kindness to her, a stranger, and hoped he would not hurry. He invited her to drop in occasionally, since he would always be glad to talk with her about her literary aspirations.

One day when the editor felt "inspired" to read the manuscript he had taken home he looked for it in his room and did not find it. Calling his landlady, he made inquiries and learned that she had gathered up some "old truck," among them a lot of paper done up in a bundle, and it had been taken away by the scavenger.

The editor turned pale. The manuscript of the little authoress had doubtless gone to the dumping ground, whence it would not be recovered. He wrote her at once to know if she had another copy, since he wished a friend on whose literary judgment he greatly relied to read the story and had not yet finished it himself. She replied that she had given him the only copy in existence.

The six months that followed were wearing on the editor. For that period he put the little authoress off with excuses. Then, there being no other way out of the trouble—at least so he put it to himself—he asked her to marry him When she refused him she took away his last prop. He had a faint hope that the estrangement which usually comes between a man who has been refused and the lady who has refused him would lead the little authoress to keep away from him and the lost manuscript would in time be forgotten But she continued to call for it in person, always with the same good natured smile, never chiding him for the delay, and every time she left him he assured her that by the time she came again he would surely be ready to give her his literary opinion on her work and did not doubt that it would be accepted by the magazine.

The lady's refusal of him made him cognizant of the fact that she was much more to him than he had supposed. After a month more of mental distress he confessed to the loss of the manuscript and that he couldn't possibly live without her.

She clapped her hands in glee. "And I, too, have a confession to make," she said. "Friends of mine had sent you manuscripts which they proved, by sticking together certain of the leaves, were returned without having been read. It occurred to me to try blank paper on you."

However, she concluded to forgive him and accept him. And now she is helping him to git rid of manuscripts without reading them.

WEYMOUTH NOT IN THE RUNNING

Walloped by Quincy High to the Tune of 40 to 3

SECOND GAME GOOD

Quincy High defeated Weymouth 40 to 3 and rolled up their high score of the season Tuesday. The visitors were hopelessly outclassed. At no time was Quincy endangered, Baker scoring the only goal from the floor for Weymouth. A number of fouls were called but Bates threw only one goal from a free try. The Weymouths were probably severely handicapped because of the difference in the gyms. At Weymouth the floor space is small and the ceilings are low. Posts about the sides also interfere with games, but the home team can play good basket ball on their home floor. The Quincy court is spacious and the difference in the playing of the visitors was apparent from the start.

At times the game waxed warm, Baker and Bull Moose Brown roughing it with smiling faces. Other players jumped into the breach now and then and tousled the Weymouth boys about a bit but in a game in which the scoring was so frequent the Weymouth aggregation showed themselves to be good losers.

However, Quincy played a very listless game at times, losing fine opportunities to shoot and pass. Weymouth should have had more baskets but as it happens good shots rolled around the rim, banked onto the wire and did everything but go through the net.

Jenkins who has been content with playing the back position, jealously guarding the goal, came into prominence by opening up a shooting streak which stopped only after he had made four netters. Prout, "Whet" Brown and Larkin retired in the second half and Safford, Andrews and Hamlin went in. Coach LaRose has been giving a number of the second team players a chance to work in the senior games and strange to say some of them have all but qualified for the first team, although in the beginning of the season they did not display any too surprising an adaptability.

The schedule dates are concluding. Friday the team goes to South Braintree to play Thayer Academy for the second time this season. Thayer was badly beaten here, but have improved. Braintree fans say the game will be on an even basis. Weymouth High second team did not appear, and in their absence, a group calling themselves the Latin A. C. sent a defi onto the floor where the second Quincy team was playing. The dare was taken and the second team won in a grueling contest, 20 to 7. The feature of the game was a shot of "Midge" Bates, who with his right hand on the floor, a man covering him while he faced the opponents baskets, shot a basket fully 15 feet from the wall line for the prettiest shot ever made in the gym. Capt. Crane of the Romans also made a corker.

The summary:

Birmingham, Eng., Feb. 26.—Lady Scott, widow of Captain Scott, the dead Antarctic explorer, has heard the news of her husband's death, and is herself in good health, according to a wireless dispatch, received by her brother, Dr. Bruce.

The wireless was sent from the South Pacific, where Lady Scott is on her way to Christchurch, N. Z. She started from England in January to welcome her husband on his return to New Zealand, and was five days out from San Francisco when word came to the world that the explorer and his companions were dead.

WEST QUINCY TOOK HONORS

In a Special Match with South Quincy

OTHER BOWLING GOSSIP

Three Heptasoph and one special match wasthe Coliseum bowling card Tuesday evening.

West Quincy defeated South Quincy 4 to 0. The alley record appeared to be slated for another boost when Joyce was crashing the third string. He reached 131 for high single and made a total of 307.

Several other men were over 100. The most consistent rolling of the evening was by Egan who totaled 298 in three pretty singles.

In the Heptasoph league team D beat F 4 to 0, winning the third string by only two pins.

Team A beat E 3 to 1 in a match that boxed average bowling.

Team C beat B 4 to 0 in bowling that ran from fair to poor .

Robertson was high man with 108. Century strings were as scrace as hen's teeth the second being credited to Cahill who made 105.

The matches were the opening for some o fthe lowest rolling ever made here.

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Paul Poehler, Miss Florence Brown and Miss Stearns were hitting for high scores, preparing forthe Thursday evening match with the Chauncey Girls.

The strings rolled averaged between 85 and 90 and the scores would be a credit to any bowler male or female The indications are that the Quincy Girls will again beat the visitors and that the scores will run high.

The so-called Poehler and Christopher match which has been postponed is causing a lot of wonderment. Poehler has repeatedly stated he will roll anytime and that he was obliged to jump the dates forward because "Chris" was sick.

It is true that "Chris" explained his absence on Feb. 15 as being due to illness. The fact remains however that within two days following he was talking with Quincy bowlers at Boston alleys. As far as can be learned Boston fans cry "quitter" at "Chris." Quincy men are more generous and while harboring a genuine disappointment they ask f orthe roll-off and nothing more.

In the meantime the large bundle of money that is bet on the match is withdrawn from circulation. After April 1 it will draw the regular rate of interest.

HAD IT PROPERLY NAMED

English Sailor May Have Forgotten Politeness, but He Had Appropriately Designated Dish.

A certain London clergyman who had been traveling in Greece found himself compelled to stay the night at a monastery at Mount Athos. The welcome was warm, but the food execrable, in particular the soup, which the guest could hardly force himself to swallow. Being a classical scholar, his knowledge of ancient Greek helped him to some understanding of the monks, who spoke the widely different modern tongue, and he was astonished to hear that the unpalatable soup was an English dish.

"English!" cried one of the monks, adding that an English sailor had been there not long before and recognized it.

"What did he call it?" asked the clergyman.

The monk had to think for a moment before he could recollect the strange English name of that soup. Ah! he had it. It was "bees'ly muck!"

Powder in the Sea.

It is calculated that in the depths of the sea, under 6,000 meters of water, there is a stratum of powder so infinitely fine that, were it broken in the fingers, it would penetrate the pores of the skin, this powder being made up of the remains of shells and the skeletons of little animals and plants. Each cubic centimeter of slime (or mud) that covers the bottom of the ocean contains the remains of ten thousand millions of organisms, each one of which is structurally as individual as the human body.

Additional Letter Carriers Suggested as a Remedy

With the operation ofthe eight hour in 10 for letter carriers which goes into effect, March 1, there is liable to be some dissatisfaction among the ranks of the great public over the mail service from that date, until some remedy is offered. The defects cannot be laid at the door of the local post office officials, but must of necessity be credited to the department, which according to the schedules arranged has not taken into account that under the old arrangement of delivery, more carriers might be required to maintain an eight hour day for the men and still maintain the standard of service.

Mails arrive from Botson and other points, from 6.14 A. M. to 11.04 P. M. daily. All Boston pouches usually bring mail from all points.

If He Listened to the Seductive Voice of the Legislative Tempter on Beacon Hill

New Wollaston Citizens' Association Formed Under Good Conditions

About 75 men met in the assembly hall of the Wollaston Grammar school Wednesday evening, and formed an organization to be known as the Wollaston Citizens' Association. The following officers were elected :

President—William Dean Sanford.
First Vice—William E. Robinson.
Second Vice—Theodore C. DuPlessis.
Third Vice—W. Y. Sherman.
Treasurer—A. J. Scorer.
Secretary—George B. Curran.
Directors—H. D. V. Edwards, H. H. Albee, Charles W. Bailey, L. C. Merrill and B. H. Bain.

The temporary chairman W. E. Robinson called the meeting to order and outlined the objects of the association. "The association will not be for the benefit of Wollaston alone but for Quincy in general." Mr. Robinson stated. "There are a great many things in the city to take care of." Lower gas was one.

"We are here to get our money's worth. That is what we are here for tonight." He declared that gravel was put on the streets instead of the sidewalks where it was needed. There is water on some sidewalks. The trains are dirty. There is a smoke nuisance. There was bad ventillation in the South Station. There were things the association would work for.

Frank Shay thought the association should confine its work in a large degree to the interests of Wollaston. There were other associations in Quincy. Political and religious questions should be eliminated.

Ex-Councillor Edward J. Barry, a past president of the South Boston Citizens' Association was the chief speaker of the evening. He spoke at length of the workings of the South Boston Association and give much good advice.

William Dean Sanford, the new president was then inducted to office. George B. Curran read a history of Mr. Sanford's activities after which the president thanked those present for electing him.

Senator McDevitt, the next speaker in the course of his remarks charged attempts had been made to bribe him and that lobbying was going on at the State House.

"If I wanted to take advantage of this," said Mc Devitt, "I would be worth $20,000 at the end of this year."

Representative Leslie said he had never seen any attempts and the former speaker should not make charges if they were not true and he could not support them.

Senator McDevitt in reply reiterated his statements and made further charges.

A letter from Mayor Stone was read testifying his sympathy with the aims of the organization.

President John L. Hamilton of the Quincy Board of Trade was the last speaker. He referred to the Board of Trade as the parent association and urged that members of the associationn join.

During the evening selections were played by an orchestra. The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the governing board.

McDEVITT MUST TELL HIS STORY

Of Alleged Attempted Bribery to the Rules Committee

Summoned Today

(Special to the Ledger.)

State House, Boston, Feb. 27. Senator John J. McDevitt has been summoned to apear this afternoon before the joint committee on rules to explain the charges which he is reported to have made in a speech before the Wollaston Improvement Association Wednesday evening. President Greenwood of the Senate will probably preside. The house chairman is Speaker Cushing.

At the hearing, Senator McDevitt will be obliged to give a direct statement of facts, and if as he alleged he has been approached by lobyists interested in the passage of certain measures an investigation will promptly follow. Today Senator McDevitt is very much in the limelight.

Representative Leslie who was at the meeting at which Senator McDevitt is alleged to have made the startling statement wil l also attend the hearing.

HEARING ON CITY CHARTER

Many Arguments for and Against a Change

REFERENDUM OPPOSED

One of the important hearings coming up before the legislature in which Quincy is interested, and one which will doubtlessly be largely attended by citizens, is the bill to amend the City Charter. The hearing on the bill which is before the Committee on Cities will be held Wednesday, March 12.

From what can be learned there is considerable opposition to the bill which eminated from Wollaston parties, who did not send the matter to the City Council, as is usual in such cases, for them to authorize the Mayor to petition. Those in favor of the bill claim that all they ask is for the people to be given an opportunity by a referendum vote to express their opinion, or rather wishes in the matter.

On the other hand those opposing the bill claim that past experience in referendums has shown that a fair expression of opinion is not obtained in this manner for the reason that many who are called upon to vote on the question do not fully understand the full purport of that which they are voting on.

NIMROD'S DOGS IN THE GAME

Carried Off Many Prizes at Boston Show

Miss Helen B. Elcock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Elcock of Copeland street, West Quincy, who is known as "Nimrod" is the proud owner of two fox hounds which won many prizes at the Boston Dog Show Wednesday.

Her "Belle of Quincy" was a winner of one class, "Manet," in seven appearances in the ring was awarded a prize each time and she was given one first, three specials, one winner and one reserve.

In addition she was given the Medal awarded the best fox hound entered.

"Nimrod" Elcock has not only trained the dogs but she has raised them from their puppy days. She is a tireless tracker of foxes and her home contains choice specimens of her unerring markmanship. She holds the state record for the number of foxes bagged this season. "Nimrod" modestly declares that her success is due a great deal to the thoroughbred strain of her hounds. Her pack now is seven, all lusty adventurers, whose playground is the great Metropolitan Blue Hill reservation and their pleasure is following the scent of Bre'r Reynard with "Nimrod" at their heels.

Ambrose B. Elcock's novice bitch, "Sue" also received a first in the American Foxhound class. The second was withheld.

POPULAR GIRL DEAD.

Miss Elizabeth W. Pinel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Pinel of 71 Franklin street died Wednesday night at the home of her parents, 71 Franklin street, in her 22nd year.

Miss Pinel graduated from the Adams school in 1905. She entered Woodward institute, class of 1909 and attended about one year. Since that time she has lived at home.

Miss Pinel was very popular in South Quincy. She has been ill for some time.

TWO GOOD BILLS TURNED DOWN BY THE LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE

Hingsten's Loan Recording by Brokers and Sullivan's Homestead Measures

Not Given Consideration They Deserve When Fully Understood

(Special to the Ledger)

Two committee reports on matters of interest to Quincy readers were made in the House of Representatives

REP. MICHAEL T. SULLIVAN.

Wednesday. One is for "Leave to withdraw" on the petition of Rep. Michael T. Sullivan, for legislation to exempt a dwelling house and the land on which it is situated from taxation to the amount of $1000. The other is the petition of William E. Hingston which asked for legislation to require stock brokers and others to keep accurate records of all loans, with the purpose of rendering more effective the office of the bank commissioner. This bill also received "Leave to withdraw."

The last named bill was not opposed by the bank commission, but one member of that body could not see any real necessity for it. Based upon his experience in such matters, and judging from what he must have known of some of the transactions which required such legislation there is no doubt but what Mr. Hingsten's bill was one that would have proven of some considerable use if adopted.

The bill of Rep. Sullivan was one that also appealed to a great many people and would afford relief to many people who only own a small property and are really taxed for more than what it is worth.

A courtship followed, one of its many incidents being an automobile accident at President's bridge, Quincy, at which time boht narrowly escaped serious injury. They will reside at Tacoma, Washington, after a honeymoon trip around the world.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Federal income tax amendment is now part and parcel of the Constitution.

It was a graceful thing of the English King to confer a title upon Capt. Scott's widow but the poor lady would have found more gratification in being plain Mrs. with the knowledge that her husband still lived.

President-elect Wilson warned the New Jersey legislature that he would come back as president and try to make them pass some of his reform measures and judging from the type of man he will do it.

As a type of distinct marine architecture the Sch. William L. Douglas did not last long.

For people who would repudiate Mr. Hays action the Grand Trunk people are pretty eager to get some New England capital into the enterprise they stopped a few months ago.

SEEKING INFORMATION.

A member of the legislature has given notice that he desires information from the adjutant general's department for information relative to the secret negotiations pending between the department and the war department at Washington. He suggests that the legislature should have information upon the state's preparedness in case an invasion of Mexico is necessary. His excuse for this wonderful display of legislative intuition is that the state faces a big state tax and should know just where it stands in the matter of expense. This legislator wants secret information, relative to the army, preparing for a possible invasion. A fine proposition truly. It is an absurd suggestion on the face of it. To think that the war department would sanction such a course is contrary to the rules of common sense and the methods of preparing for war. Possibly the young man would like plans prepared of the forts along the Atlantic coast, the inside workings of the war department, the exact strength, equipment, ability and other information about either branch of the service. All this would make nice reading for any foreign power in case there was a war ,and would place the commander-in-chief in a rather peculiar position. Let the legislator turb his thirst for knowledge and allow the war department to attend to its proper functions, as they should in secret.

CARS FULL.

The Boston elevated company is to try an experiment on some of its lines the outcome of which will be a matter of considerable concern to the people who have to use the trains. If successful the experiment it is believed will become a permanent institution The plan as proposed is to have certain lines show "car full" signs when every seat is taken and when this sign is exhibited no stop will be made to take on passengers. The plan is a good one, but it is believed that its successful operation will mean a large addition in cars running between certain points at certain hours of the day. Take the early morning hours for example when people are using either north or south bound cars to reach their working place, it is not a novel sight to see the elevated cars crowded to the limit, to such an extent that a passenger has to squeeze and push mighty hard to entrance or egress. Take the rush hour about 5.30 o'clock in the afternoon, the same conditions prevail when people are returning from work. At the station connecting with the South Terminal this is particularly noticable. About that hour, two and three cars will come along, and the sign "no passengers" will be shown. The result is that the platform is crowded pretty much and then when a car bound for Dudley street comes there is a rush to get on board and the cars are really overloaded. No doubt the company is doing the best it can to accommodate the travelling public. Like every other concern they have their trials and tribulations, but it seems that some effort might be made to obliterate this objectionable confestion. No doubt the company officials know why those "no passenger" trains come along about that time, but the general public is probably not as familiar with the reasons ,and at times it is a shame to listen to the remarks which flow with ready eloquence from the people thus discommoded. At the very time when it would seem from the rush of people, more cars are needed, cars make their trips through the station and just as the passengers are congratulating themselves that their mode of transportation has arrived with some hope of escaping the usual jam, their hopes are shattered by that "no passenger" sign. During the morning hours it is quite certain unless enough cars are operated to take care of all the people who want to be accommodated there will be some tall objections offered when a car booms along with the "car full" sign and the workman stands a good chance of being late on his job.

LOCAL POSTAL SERVICE.

Possibly it may be claimed that objectors are crying before they are hurt in the proposed local postal service, which goes into effect Saturday, but the hours which are given out from the post office, give cause for apprehension. The people sending mail from the city proper to Wollaston, Atlantic and local points, must have them in the post office quite early in the afternoon or they will not be able to have their mail delivered until the next day. The change is wrought by the letter carriers going under the eight in 10 hour schedule. There is no objection to the letter carriers coming under their legal rights, but where does the public come in when the inconvenience which is bound to come, becomes noticable. In private business if a concern did not have enough men to perform the work with justice to its standards and customers it is quite certain that additions would be made to the force. The post office department will undoubtedly find this condition to exist and should take steps to remedy the defect. If more letter carriers are needed to accommodate the public let there be more letter carriers.

GOD WAITING REQUEST.

Rev. Henry M. Saville, rector of the Church of the Ascension, Waltham, preached at the Christ Church, Wednesday evening. He spoke from the text, "Straight is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life and few that be that find it," from St. Matthew, VII-14.

He said "strong character will come as a result of strict discipline, that with pure devotion discipline became a pleasure and not a hardship, that the love of God was ever awaiting the request from the sinner for guidance in spiritual things and that the material things of life were besetting the pathway of the righteous for straight is the gate and narrow is the way that leads unto life and few there be that findeth."

STATE TAKES NO RISK

Suggestion That Rhode Island Guarantee New Railroad Bonds

Providence, Feb. 27.—President Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk told Governor Pothier and the general assembly that if Rhode Island would guarantee the $6,000,000 bonds of the Southern New England railway, there would be no difficulty in raising the funds necessary to complete the proposed extension from Palmer, Mass., to this city.

Chamberlin further stated he was certain the state would be taking no risks in guaranteeing the bonds, since it was figured by Grand Trunk officials that the Southern New England road would be more than self-sustaining.

Chamberlin explained that it was the intention of the late President Hays to finance the Southern with the assistance of the Grand Trunk and the Central Vermont, but it is now impossible for the Canadian road to guarantee the bonds of the Southern, and the Central Vermont, never having done any financing in this country, was not in a position to be of material assistance.

BIG BROTHER CUT AN ARTERY

Putting Out a Fire Set By Younger Scion of the House

Sergt. John T. Larkin who has been investigating the incendiary fire in the small shack on Sachem street Monday night has found that the fire was set by three small boys. The boys met Sunday night and planned to set the place on fire the following night to see the fire apparatus come out. They secured a lot of old dead grass. Then smashing a window they threw it inside and touched a match to it, and the next instant a blaze had been started. The oldest of the boys is but 13 years of age and the other two were younger. Their parents have been notified and the boys will be brought into the juvenile court next Tuesday. One of the peculiar things about the fire was that one of the first persons to arrive at the scene when the fire was discovered was an older brother of one of the three boys. He assisted the firemen inextinguishing the blaze and in doing so accidently cut an artery in his wrist causing a painful injury. His feelings may be well imagined when he learned that his little brother was the cause of the fire.

ACT QUICKLY

Delay Has Been Dangerous in Quincy

Do the right thing at the right time.
Act quickly in time of danger.
In time of kidney danger Doan's Kidney Pills are most effective.
Plenty of evidence of their worth.

Mrs. Ellen Lawler, 51 Meridian St., East Boston, Mass., says: "I praise Doan's Kidney Pills just as highly today as I did some years ago when I gave a public statement in their favor. The cure this remedy effected has been permanent. The principal symptom of kidney complaint in my case was a dull, heavy ache in my hips and back, often accompanied by pains in my loins. I became dizzy when I stooped and lost my strength and ambition. My entire system was run down and I did not know what to do for relief. Finally I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and it was not long before they restored me to good health."

"When your back is lame—remember the name." Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Lawler had. 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

NO ATTEMPT TO BRIBE RUSSELL

Lawyer Anhut Denies Offering $25,000 to Free Thaw

HE GOT $25,000 AS A RETAINER

Says Head of Matteawan Asked "Where Do I Come In" After He Had Recommended Anhut For Famous Prisoner's Attorney—Wouldn't Do Anything For Thaw Unless Paid

Albany, Feb. 27.—John N. Anhut, the New York lawyer accused by Dr. John W. Russell, superintendent of the Matteawan state hospital for the criminal insane, of having offered him a bribe of $25,000 if he would aid in bringing about the release of Harry K. Thaw from that institution, was a witness before Governor Sulzer's committee of inquiry.

The committee is investigating a charge that William F. Clark, its former secretary, used the governor's name without authority in endeavoring to secure Thaw's freedom.

Anhut denied absolutely that he offered Russell anything to aid in getting Thaw out of the asylum.

Detailing the circumstances leading up to his employment as attorney for Thaw, however, Anhut said he had an intimate personal acquaintance with Russell, who told him he would be glad to "throw any business he could his way." Later, said Anhut, he was retained as Thaw's counsel and received a retaining fee of $25,000 to be returned unless Thaw was released.

Anhut then told of a conversation with Russell Dec. 16, when the efforts to set Thaw free were discussed. Anhut said he told Russell of the agreement whereby half his retaining fee was to be returned Jan. 1 and the remainder July 1 unless Thaw was released.

"Russell than said: 'Where do I come in?" testified Anhut.

The attorney said he asked Russell what he meant, and Russell replied:

"Why, I recommended you. I got you the job. I wouldn't do anything for Thaw unless I got money."

Anhut said he told Russell he could not give him anything, as he had signed receipts for the money he had received and it all had to be returned unless Thaw was released.

THAW WON'T TESTIFY

Refuses to Answer Questions While He Is In Matteawan Asylum

Fishkill, N. Y., Feb. 27.—Harry K. Thaw refuses to testify before Governor Sulzer's committee of inquiry which is investigating an alleged conspiracy to obtain Thaw's release from the Matteawan state hospital for the criminal insane.

Thaw declared that the only conditions under which he would answer questions were that he be allowed to testify "in the same place and under the same circumstances as other witnesses" and "without pretence of insanity." He said he had taken this position "on advice," but refused to say who had advised him.

The commission came here from Albany after hearing the testimony of John N. Anhut.

TWO HUNDRED MOWED DOWN

Many Killed or Wounded by Ill-Timed Explosion In Spain

Gijon, Spain, Feb. 27.—Upward of 200 persons were killed or wounded by the ill-timed explosion of a charge of 7000 pounds of black powder which had been laid by the engineers in charge of the new harbor works with the object of raising an enormous block of rock.

An immense concourse of people had gathered to witness the demolition of the hill separating Gijon from the coaling harbor of Musel, a mile and a half distant. The object of the operation was to cut a roadway and thus avoid the present long detour.

When the fuse was lighted and the explosion occurred, instead of the rock being blasted, hundreds of tons of clay and small stones were hurled among the assembled spectators. Whole families were mowed down as well as many of the engineers and municipal officials.

FOR AFRICAN CHAMPIONSHIP

Two Quincy Men to Play Base Ball at Cairo

MAKING GOOD IN EGYPT

The American game of base ball has spread to Egypt, and many Quincy fans would like to be in Cairo this week Saturday. Dr. Harold F. Curtis of this city, who is located in Alexandria with Dr. A. P. Bonney o fQuincy Point writes as follows to a friend

"Boston is not the only base ball city. We have here a team composed of missionaries, Standard Oil officials, Bonney and myself, while the Cairo Y. M. C. A. has one of a like nature. The two teams meet for the African championship title on Saturday, March 1, at 3.30 P. M., on the Cairo grounds. Wouldn't you like to see the game! It will be for blood. Bonney will catch for our team, and I will play left field as usual. All the Americans in Egypt will journey to Cairo to see that game and there will be some blow out after."

Drs. Curtis and Bonney graduated from the Quincy High school and played on the base ball team with credit, and later on the Makaria team. "Honey" Curtis usually headed the batting list, and was very successful as a run getter.

Dr. Curtis writes that he and Dr. Bonney, who are known as the American dentists, have been very fortunate in their work; that they have earned a good reputation among the best class of people, and are doing night work to keep up, at good prices. That they have made many friends and are quite comfortable and at home. They like the climate and the life, but would like some good old Boston baked beans, or some apple pie. The only drawbacks are separation from home folks. The heat of the summer is nothing, as it is generally dry and long continued, in which case one gets quite accustomed to it.

"We never get snow or ice, the mercury not going below 50 degrees. Of course, at first, it was very hard for us to manage, as we could speak nothing but English. Now we both jabber Arabic well enough to get along, and are becoming fluent in French. Regards to all my Quincy acquaintances.

Dr. Curtis is the son of ex-Councilman and Mrs. Jesse F. Curtis of Upland road. Both he and Dr. Bonney were graduated from the Tufts Dental school.

OTTOMAN MISSION TO LONDON FAILS

Tried To Get Powers to Support Claim to Adrianople

Constantinople, Feb. 27.—The mission to London of Ibrahim Hakki Pasha on behalf of the Ottoman government has failed. His object was to persuade the European powers to support the claim of Turkey to the retention of Adrianople.

He was, however, unable to prevail upon the ambassadors of the powers to accept the porte's reply to the European note as a basis for fresh negotiations for peace.

The ambassadors replied verbally to Ibrahim Hakki Pasha in the sense indicated, but left the door open for fresh proposals from Turkey.

Although some members of the Turkish cabinet are in favor of peace, the war element shows no tendency to weaken its attitude. Military operations are still confined to skirmishes at various points along the front and fighting on a grand scale is improbable for the present, owing to the inclemency of the weather.

FAVORS ONE DREADNAUGHT

House Tentatively Approves Construction of Single Battleship

Washington, Feb. 27.—The first test of strength on the battleship question in the house came when by a vote of 131 to 123 the house went on record in favor of an amendment to the naval bill for one battleship. The vote is not final. A final settlement of the question will be determined by an aye and nay vote when the naval bill is reorted to the house from the committee of the whole.

The house then voted on the question of inserting the one battleship amendment directly in the bill. The result was 144 to 133 in favor of one battleship, which means that the naval bill when reported to the house from the committee of the whole will provide for but a single dreadnaught.

TEACHERS WANT HIGHER SALARY

Quincy is not the only place on the South Shore that is alleged to pay too small a salary to its school teachers. The Town of Holbrook faces the possibility of its teachers entering the annual town meeting where they will make their demands for increased salaries. It is also said that they have the backing of some of the officials who believe Holbrook has lost good teachers because of the small salary.

BRIEFS

The Odd Fellows ball is to be held in Music hall tonight.

Newman Savage who has been ill for some time is still confined to his home.

Mrs. James Thompson who has been staying at the Wrigley's is at the home of her brother, E. B. Ford, Franklin street.

The large special committee of the City Council to whom was referred all of the street matters pending before the council met Wednesday evening.

Miss Josephine Bailey of the Thompson Cafe, City Square is confined to her home, Upland road with a severe attack of the grippe. She is doing well.

The cold weather for the past ten days caused the ice men to think that perhaps they could get another cutting of their ponds, but the rain and fog this morning made havoc of it.

Miss Mabel Pratt will be in charge of the program Saturday evening at the meeting of the Quincy Young Woman's club at the clubhouse on Goffe street when a play will be presented.

Among those visiting friends in Quincy over Sunday were Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Shannon of Lexington. Mrs. Shannon is known to many as Miss Edith Holmes, a former teacher at the Lincoln school.

Miss Elizabeth Pinel, daughter of W. P. Pinel of South Quincy passed away at her home on Franklin street after a long and serious illness. The family are well known and have the sympathy of a host of friends.

Combination auto chemical No. 1, of the Central station was called out on a still alarm Wednesday evening for a grass fire in rear of Undertaker Beans office on Franklin street. The fire had been started by sparks from a passing locomotive.

Congratulations are being extended by Quincy friends to Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Sherwin of West Townsend, on the birth of a daughter who arrived on Washington's birthday. The little one has been named Dorothy Mae Sherwin. Mrs. Sherwin was formerly Helen Troupe of this city.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

On Monday, March 3rd, a guessing contest will be started in the Children's Room of the Public Library. A picture representing the characters or scenes from some book will be placed on the bulletin board every Monday and Thursday morning, and any child who desires to, may have one guess at the name of the book which the picture represents. Each child will write the title of the book guessed, on a slip of paper, sign his name and drop it into the box provided for the purpose. Every other Saturday morning all pictures previously shown will be exhibited for the benefit of those who missed them the first time. A first and second prize will be awarded the two guessing the largest number of titles and a list will be posted containing the names of those deserving honorary mention.

On Friday afternoon, March 14th, Miss Hibbard will conduct a story hour in the Children's Room. All children who wish to hear the stories must be in the room promptly at four o'clock.

—William C. Morris, the well known cartoonist for the Spokesman-Review, started something which somebody else finished when he put out a cartoon suggesting that girls wear spiked belts to prevent "ragging" at dances. Two days later Mrs. Elna T. Hunt, gave a dancing party providing a number of leather belts, pierced with 20-penny nails. To show that she meant business Mrs. Hunt ordered the orchestra to play the "raggiest" piece in stock, announcing that girls who insisted on dancing after the too-popular fashion must don the belts. The announcement proved to be as the red rag to the bull. The outlawed dancing became general, and Mrs. Hunt fitted every girl in the party with a belt. An enterprising newspaper photographer arrived on the scene and the Morris anti-ragging device is now the topic of the hour.

In the Waiting Room

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.

A woman arrived the other forenoon from the east with seven children in tow, and almost the same hour a man reached the same depot from the north with five offspring of various ages and sizes. She was a widow and he a widower, and the children had not been whipped more than once around before there was a sort of mutual sympathy that begot admiration and then friendship. One of the widow's boys offered one of the widower's girls a bite of his fried cake, which was accepted in the spirit tendered, and a ten-year-old girl belonging to the man made up to the two-year-old belonging to the woman.

The widower smiled as he saw these things and presently winked at the depot policeman, who was strolling around and took him aside to say:

"Them children seem to take to each other?"

"Yes."

"I reckon that gal's mother is a widder woman?"

"Shouldn't wonder."

"And with seven young uns to care for she'd be willin' to marry again?"

"I should say so. Widower, ain't you?"

"I am, and these are my five innocents, as you might call 'em."

"Seven and five are twelve," mused the officer as he looked over at the widow.

"She used to be when I went to school."

"Well!"

"If there's no law agin it I'm goin' over and ask that woman if I'm the man to make her heart palpitate."

"No law at all. Go right ahead. We aim to please our patrons."

The man drew a long breath, braced up and sauntered over to the woman and asked:

"Madam, am I wrong in believin' that you are a widow?"

"I have been a widow fourteen months today," she answered.

"Great Scott! But it's just fourteen months today since my Hanner died. Which way be you goin'?"

"To Illanoy."

"That's just where I am goin' too. Did you promise your husband never to marry again?"

"No."

"And I didn't promise my wife either. Fact is, I believe I shall unite as soon as I find some good woman."

"And my children need a father's care," she sighed as she pulled little John Henry off the window sill and bumped him into a seat.

The man got up and walked around the waiting room and took a closer look at the children. Then he returned and said:

"I suppose you've got a few hundred dollars, belong to some church, can wash and bake and mend and are of a mild and forgivin' disposition?"

"Yes, that's me."

"Well, I'm kinder religious, even tempered and am worth $2,000. I'm sort o' struck on you. There's somethin' about your eyes that reminds me of Hanner."

"And you look like Alonzo around the mouth," she sighed.

"Sure your Alonzo is dead, are you?" queried the man after getting a drink of water for one of her children.

"Oh, my, yes! And how about your departed?"

"Safe as a woodchuck in his hole. Good woman she was, but she will have to stay right where she is."

Then he bent over and whispered something about Chicago and getting married, and she nodded her head. He gathered his children under his wing, took them into a corner and solemnly and impressively observed:

"Children, I'm goin' to get married to that woman over there and give you a new mother. If any of you is goin' to kick and boohoo about it begin now, so that I can tune you down before the train goes. Henry, you are the oldest. Are you goin' to declare you'll run away or commit suicide? Let me know right now, for this is a good, cool place to prance you around with a shingle."

Henry said he guessed it would be all right, and the rest of the crowd seemed to agree, and ten minutes later the widower and widow sat holding hands and trying to eat peanuts, and the twelve children were biting and pulling hair and kicking to see who should have a seat on the steam heater.

"This is kinder the work of heaven!" chuckled the widower as he hitched a little nearer.

"You bet, love!" she replied as she shucked another peanut with her teeth.

By and by the officer, who had watched the progress of events from a distance, walked over to the couple and smilingly queried:

"Well, is it all settled?"

"As solid as a rock," replied the man.

"Yes, I love him," added the woman.

"Then you'll get along all right."

"Sure to—sure to," said the man as his right arm stole around the woman's shoulders. "It's a case of love in five minits and twelve children back of it, and that's a combination hard to beat. How about the train?"

"Ten minutes yet."

"Then I'll spank the children all around and prepare to go into details with the bride to be as we rush across the country toward joy unconfined."

And when he had seen the last of them the officer turned away and mused:

"Freight rates may be high on this line, but, as an offset, see what it does for the happiness of humanity!"

FISH THAT FELL UPWARD

Brilliant Colors Have Been Noted at a Depth of Three Thousand Feet.

According to Sir John Murray, one of the greatest authorities on oceanography, the bottom of the sea is a desert of pitch black darkness, penetrating cold and eternal silence, says the London Evening Standard. Worms, sea puddings and coral polyps sluggishly crawl or sway in the almost currentless depths, and only two species of fish, both of them small, with much head and little body, have been found deeper than a mile and a quarter down.

The range of fishes in the sea is as though it were divided into layers, one above the other, and no fish can live above or below his layer. Thus many of the deeper fish—three-quarters of a mile below the surface—have been found floating at the top; they had swallowed a fish as large or larger than themselves and its buoyancy had lifted them out of the strata to which they were accustomed.

The physiology of a bottom fish is almost impossible to know, because they are built to resist a tremendous pressure of water, and when this pressure is released—as when they are brought to the surface in a net—sometimes the fish has burst; the organs are crushed beyond reconstruction.

Similarly if a fish of a higher strata attacks a bottom fish in the neutral zone where both can live, and—as sometimes happens—his teeth become entangled so that he cannot let go and he is dragged into deeper water, he strangles instantly, for his breathing arrangements are of no use to him under the pressure of water in the lower strata of the sea. As a rule, however, the fish of the various depths rarely feed on those above or below them.

There have been brought to light an astonishing number of forms of fish, and especially of prawns of a brilliant red color, living in the ocean at a depth of 3,000 feet. But, astonishing as it may seem, there brilliantly colored fish and prawns, instead of being conspicuous in the water at that depth, are almost invisible when almost any other color could be easily seen.

MAKE SOMETHING OF LIFE

Not Without Reason Should Any Pass Through the Joys and Troubles of the World.

Thousands of men breathe, move and live; pass off the stage of life, and are heard of no more. Why? They did not a particle of good in the world; and none were blest by them, none could point to them as the instrument of their redemption; not a line they wrote, not a word they spoke, could be recalled, and so they perished—their light went out in darkness and they were not remembered more than the insects of yesterday. Will you thus live and die, O man immortal? Live for something. Do good and leave behind you a monument of virtue that the storms of time can never destroy. Write your name by kindness, love and mercy on the hearts of the thousands you come in contact with year by year, and you will never be forgotten. No, your name, your deeds will be as legible on the hearts you leave behind as the stars on the brow of evening. Good deeds will shine as bright on the earth as the stars of heaven.—Thomas Chalmers.

Rubber Plant Oil for Umbrellas.

A vegetable oil used in making paper umbrellas in Japan is pressed out of the seeds of the rubber plant. This oil is made in the various islands famed for oil and seeds from these plants. Sandy ground is favored for the cultivation of the plant, and the oil is extracted from the seeds by presses. The yield of seeds is estimated at 20 bushels per acre. The annual production throughout Japan amounts to 350,000 bushels, from which over a gallon of oil per bushel is extracted. The oil before it is used is boiled and then cooled until it can be applied by hand to umbrellas with a piece of cloth or waste. No machinery or tools are used in applying the oil. When the oiling is complete the umbrellas are exposed in the sun for about five hours. This oil is also used in making the Japanese lanterns, artificial leather, printing ink, laquer, varnishes, oil paper, and paints.

Modern Idealism.

Our intuitions of a goodness, a beauty, a truth, transcending anything that earth can show, our persistent devotion to ideals that actual life always disappoints, our postulates of a perfection that rebukes and shames our practice—what can these things mean save that . . . a refraction of the white light of eternity by life's dome of many-colored glass, a sequence of shadow pictures cast on the further wall of the dim cavern where we sit, our eyes . . . averted from the true light of the world?—Paul Shorey (on Plato).)

Telling Him.

A well-known Boston physician has the reputation of being exceedingly gruff, especially with those whom he thinks are trying to "beat" him. The doctor was present at a social affair the other evening when a "dead beat" whom the doctor knew of old approached. "Doctor," said the man, "what is the best thing for a cold?" "Competent medical advice," replied the physician shortly, as he turned on his heel.

A WORD ABOUT MORMONISM

Eastern Mission Objects to Certain Criticisms

CLAIMS NEW ENGLAND LED

Some time ago there was a little stir created throughout the state by the circulation of a story that Mormon girls were sent to eastern colleges and other institutions to preach their faith and try to make converts. The Ledger commented on the fact at the time and strongly urged against Mormonism, with the attendant objectionable features which have been held as a part of the creed.

In response to that editorial a communication has been received, the first page of which is written on the stationary of the "Eastern States Mission of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, 33 West 126th street, New York."

The letter is signed by Russell E. Pratt. He does not however state that he is a member of the mission or connected with it in an official capacity. From many view points the communication is interesting and for that reason it is published in full as follows:

New York, N. Y., Feb. 22, 1913.

Editor Quincy Ledger, Quincy, Mass.

Dear Sir: I have read with much interest your editorial about the Mormons in which you note that "the serious charge is made that Mormonism is preached right here in Massachusetts and that girls who are Mormons ought to be driven out of the schools where they may be found.

You mention the fact that some girls have already found it advisable to leave hurriedly some schools where they have been discovered.

What is interesting to me about your editorial is that my grandfather was a native of Massachusetts and a Mormon and my wife's grandfather was a native of Vermont and a Mormon. In fact as a matter of cold historical record it must be admitted that ninteen out of the twenty young men who founded the Mormon church were New England boys. Their average age when the religious organization was formed by them was hardly more than 22 years. So that Mormonism is not only a growth entirely native to American soil but also a growth peculiarly native to the New England stock. In Salt Lake City, where my parents drifted with the Mormon outcasts after the expulsion from Nauvoo I have attended rather large gatherings of Sons of the American Revolution and also of Daughters of the American Revolution, these meetings being composed almost entirely of Mormons whose lineage went back through the old New England stock.

These are remorseless facts from which you cannot escape. Brigham Young's father fought through the Revolution. Fifteen of his descendants have since fought or have been killed in the wars of this country. Brigham himself organized a body of troops on the personal call from the President and sent them on the longest march of infantry every achieved, namely from the Missouri River to Los Angeles and San Diego, Cal., in 1846. They comprised Gen. Kearny's "Army of the West," and performed the military conquest which brought our country New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, south of Pueblo and parts of Southern California during the Mexican war. Later at the personal call by telegraph from President Lincoln Brigham organized a Mormon army and set to the task of guarding the Overland Mail route all the way east to Missiouri during the civil war.

Our missionaries have never for a single minute been out of New England, including Massachusetts, from the day the Church was organized. They are there now in quite a number. Our girls we wish to have the best education they can get. Parents looking for the best schools send them to New England Schools.

I think I can tell you were the story comes from that some of the girls have made hasty departures from New England schools. One young girl was badly advised and was directed to school on the Hudson. The principal has long conducted an anti-Mormon propoganda which was not known to her. The girl, in filling out her application blank named the church she belonged to and was quickly told to go. The girl has no doubt made propogandist use of this incident.

Now the sad fact is that you have to go outside of Mormondom to find how many horrible kind of things the church is purported to be. It is pushing ahead of one code of procedure. Outside it is charged with pressing ahead with another. We cannot correct this. But if it is any news to you, the patriarchal form of marriage, adopted by the church in early days was abandoned 2 years ago at which time 4 per cent of the people including 23 out of the 25 general authorities practised plural marriage. Today four out of the 25 general authorities still retain their plural wives. They are very aged men and the women are very aged too. The rule was that none of the established families should be broken up and the dwindling of the size of the polygamy question has been through deaths and new promotions solely. A mere fringe of an outworn problem remains. The Church existed long before it announced polygamy as a tenent; it will long survive its abandonment. I wish we could get a hearing for the real beliefs on which the Mormon minds are focused. Of course we cannot but at any rate we are glad to know all the world can teach us and oughtn't you to be willing to risk the culture of your schools on our girls in the consciousness that anything so hideous as the painted Mormonism cannot survive such culture? We are perfectly willing to submit our young folks to the test in the confidence that appeals in the religion of which you take no note—appeals which have made the Mormonism of the Rocky Mountains a source of great joy and fellowship to a vast body of earnest, clean, devout people— will bring the young folks back from your schools better Mormons than they could have been without the culture you can give.

Cordially,

Russell E. Pratt.

SENT LIGHTED STOVE FLYING

Bumped Down Stairs and Then Started a Fire

DAMAGE SLIGHT

The alarm from Box 721 at 7.15 Wednesday night was for a slight fire in the house of Charles Hellixson, 17 Watson street, Quincy Point. The fire was caused by an oil stove accidently being kicked down stairs by Mr. Hellixson. It seems that he lit a small oil heater in one of the upper chambers near the head of the stairs. In moving about he accidently hit the stove a kick with his foot sending it flying down the stairs causing a slight fire. While some of the family ran to the box and sounded the alarm Mr. Hellixson extinguished the fire. The loss was slight.

Tilden, 83 Front street, Weymouth, Mass., observed their 63d marriage anniversary, July 12, 1912, and are enjoying fairly good health for people so advanced in years." Mr. Tilden is now 89 and Mrs. Tilden 84.

JIM GOES TO BRIDGEWATER

Suggested His Preference for That Institution

WHEN HE SURRENDERED

James F. Sullivan, fat and lazy, gave himself up to the police Tuesday and said that he wanted to be sent to the state farm. If there is one thing Jim does not like it is work. This morning in court he told a pitiful tale of not having any home, no place to lay his tired head at night and nothing to relieve the craving of his stomach for food. It would have been a good thing to have sent Jim to the house of correction but he wanted to go to the state farm at Bridgewater and to that place he was committed. Here he will find a warm room and good fire against which he may toast his shins during the cold winter days and nights, and he will find a well laden table ready for him three times a day. There will also be tobacco but no booze. There is not much work to do at the farm at the present time so that he will not get over tired at manuel labor. In the spring he will probably be paroled and return to Quincy feeling as lively as a game cock, and just so much ahead of the game. It was ever thus.

BUNGALOW TYPE OF CLUB HOUSE

Favored By the Squantum Women to Cost $5,000

A special meeting of the Squantum Women's club was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. T. F. Callahan, Bellevue avenue. The chief topic of the meeting was plans for the proposed club house. It has been decided that the building shall not cost less than $5000 and members of the finance committee have begun soliciting the sale of bonds.

Mrs. Hiram Morse, chairman of the finance committee submitted provisional plans of the house, which call for a one story building of the bungalow type with reception room, coat rooms and an assembly hall 40 x 40 on the first floor with a stage and dressing rooms on either side at one end of the hall. The basement floor will have a committee room, banquet hall, kitchen and bowling alley. Toilets will be located on both floors.

Every member present heartily approved of this arrangement of rooms and the plans in general. It is expected that these plans will be perfected by an architect for presentation at the next meeting. A building committee was appointed by the president as follows: Mrs. Hiram Morse, chairman, Mrs. James Foster, Mrs. Helen McGowan, Mrs. Matthew McGrain and Mrs. C. E. Carlson. After the meeting adjourned Mrs. T. F. Callahan served a dainty lunch assisted by Mrs. Edward Eagar.

Among those present were, Mrs. S. H. Adams, Mrs. F. A. Morton, Mrs. Joseph Uppling, Mrs. Hiram Morse, Mrs. James Foster, Mrs. J. R. Nelson, Mrs. Herbert Smith, Mrs. Helen McGowan, Mrs. C. E. Carlson, Mrs. William A. Reed, Mrs. Matthew McGrain, Mrs. Edward Eagar.

QUESTION NOW UP TO WILSON

Status of Provisional Government of Mexico In Doubt

MUCH DEPENDS UPON HUERTA

Formal Recognition Will Be Forthcoming If Mexican President Can Properly Conduct Nation's Affairs and Amply Protect Foreign Lives and Property—Texas Border Insured Against Marauders by Presence of Several Regiments of Uncle Sam's Troops

Washington, Feb. 27.—Political recognition of the new provisional government of Mexico is not a matter requiring immediate consideration at the hands of the secretary of state, and it was made practically certain that this is another subject that will be left as a heritage to the next administration.

In the opinion of state department officials the United States has no interests in Mexico that will suffer by withholding the full recognition and also all necessary business can be discharged under the existing working arrangement that Ambassador Wilson has set up. This amounts to the recognition of a de facto condition. It in no wise commits the United States government to an acknowledgement of the legality of the Huerta government and that question must be determinel hereafter entirely upon the basis of performance.

If President Huerta is able to conduct his government in regular constitutional form, to maintain undisputed possession of his capital, and to extend full and ample protection to foreign life and property in Mexico, formal recognition will not be withheld. Because some doubt exists on the latter point, there is great deliberation exhibited in reaching a decision.

The United States government probably will be strongly influenced in its treatment of this question by the extent of the measures taken by the provisional government of Mexico to have a full and fair election, with the object of installing a permanent constitutional government. It is precisely such an omission on the part of the de facto government in China that has resulted in the withholding of the formal recognition of Yuan Shi Kai's government by Washington

In the course of a conference with the members of the senate committee on foreign relations, Secretary of War Stimson and Major General Wood gave assurance of such a disposition of troops along the Texas frontier as will insure protection of that section against invasions by marauders from Mexico. They said that seven regiments would be placed along the Mexican line in Texas.

They explained that the removal to Galveston of the detachments from El Paso and other Rio Grande points had been rendered necessary by the crisis in the City of Mexico. With the accession of Huerta to the presidential chair, they said, it had looked for a time as if active intervention might be necessary, and with this possible end in view it became desirous to get as large a force as possible to the nearest point of embarkation at the earliest possible moment. On this account the nearby garrisons were rushed to that place.

Now that the critical time has passed they expected time could be taken to bring troops from a greater distance to Galveston. This would be done, and the two officials expressed confidence that there soon would be no reason for complaint. The Texas senators as well as the members of the foreign committee expressed satisfaction with the assurance given.

Consular and other reports to the state and war departments indicate the existence of small forces of rebellious spirits in several quarters in Mexico, but on the whole there appears to be a general conviction of the ultimate success of the new administration.

ATTITUDE OF POWERS

Generally Accept Huerta Version of Killing of Madero and Suarez

Mexico City, Feb. 27.—The representatives of the foreign powers generally have notified their acceptance of the official version of the death of ex-President Madero and ex-Vice President Suarez, but the investigation instituted by the government continues.

There has been much speculation as to what the attitude of the foreign governments would be in the matter, but diplomats are inclined to believe their governments would accept, for the present at any rate, the official version, especially since it appears impossible to establish the facts.

American Ambassador Wilson called on President Huerto and at the palace it was unofficially stated he presented representations from Washington for a more detailed and circumstantial account of the deaths of Madero and Suarez.

The commission charged with the investigation has taken considerable testimony, but has made none of it public.

Emilio Rabasa has been appointed ambassador of Mexico to the United States.

FROM ALL QUARTERS

Thousands of Troops Pouring Into Galveston and Texas City

Galveston, Feb. 27.—Quietly and efficiently the mobilization of the second division of the United States army is proceeding through its early stages.

Enough of the incoming military force is here to outline the big camps at Galveston and Texas City. Within two days these camp grounds will be occupied by many thousands of fighting men.

The army transport Kilpatrick has reached here, anchoring near the transports Sumner and McClellan. Brigadier General Smith, commanding the Fifth brigade, established headquarters at Fort Crockett, prepared to supervise the mobilization of his troops.

Major General Carter, commanding the second division, is due here Friday.

DOW IS FOUND GUILTY

Convicted of Converting Mining Funds to the Extent of $251,764

Boston, Feb. 27.—Stephen R. Dow, who has been on trial for nearly three weeks, was found guilty of fraudulently appropriating and converting funds of the Algomah, Franklin and Indiana mining companies, amounting to $251,764.

In the indictment returned by the grand jury, Dow was indicted in ninety-two counts charging him with larceny and misuse of $300,000 worth of property of the mining companies, but the jury found him guilty on only twenty-four of the ninety-two counts. The jury deliberated for eleven hours.

Counsel for the defendant asked the court for fifteen days in which to file exceptions and Assistant District Attorney Webber agreed. The cash bail remains at $25,000.

OPINIONS OF PUJO BOARD ARE DIVIDED

Some of Untermyer's Proposals Meet With Opposition

Washington, Feb. 27.—Unexpected differences of opinion arising in the house money trust committee threaten to delay the presentation of the committee's report to the house. The committee sat far into the night pondering over the report framed by Samuel Untermyer, its counsel.

On many of the propositions advanced by Untermyer the committee's opinion was divided and several of his recommendations provoked prolonged discussion. The committee had hoped to complete consideration of the report last night, but it became apparent that several points involved could not be settled without extended argument and several members of the committee insisted upon substantial changes in the conclusions reached by Untermyer and in the recommendations he proposed as to remedial legislation.

Chairman Pujo and Untermyer had expected Untermyer's report would be accepted with but little discussion and practically no amendments, but the committee showed decided inclination to differ with Untermyer.

FAVOR VOTES FOR WOMEN

Pine Tree State Solons Take Action on Constitutional Change

Augusta, Me., Feb. 27.—The committee report favoring the resolve to submit to the voters a constitutional amendment giving women the right to vote has now passed both branches of the Maine legislature.

The test on whether the resolve will receive the necessary two-thirds vote required for a constitutional amendment will come when the resolve comes up on its passage to be enacted.

The report was accepted by the house yesterday afternoon by a vote of 88 to 50 in concurrence with the senate, which accepted it last week, 23 to 6.

He Wanted His Skates

Zurich, Feb. 27.—"I would not have bothered about him, only he was wearing my skates," nonchalantly remarked 14-year-old Emil Reich, after he had rescued a companion from a hole in the ice.

Freight House Burns

Boston, Feb. 27.—Fire this morning in the Fitchburg freight sheds in the Boston and Maine railroad yards caused three alarms to be sent in. The building and contents were destroyed.

Princess to Wed on May 24

Berlin, Feb. 27.—The marriage of Princess Victoria Luise, daughter of the kaiser, to Prince Ernest of Cumberland will be solemnized May 24, according to official announcement.

Against Direct Vote Bill

Boston, Feb. 27.—The legislative committee on federal relations reported against the adoption of resolutions in favor of the direct election of president and vice president.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SOME FISH CAKES.

LENT, with fish taking an important place on the bill of fare, brings new problems to the housewife. What shall she do with the fish that is left over from one meal to another? Left over fish may be used with other foods in compounding new and delicious dishes. Cold fish is indispensable in making fish cakes.

Baked or Fried.

Codfish Cakes.—Take a package of codfish, two cupfuls of mashed potatoes, a half cupful of milk, one egg, a tablespoonful of grated onion, a teaspoonful of bacon drippings, a quarter of a teaspoonful of white pepper. Wash the codfish and let it soak in cold water for twenty minutes. Then press out the water and add the mashed potatoes, onion, drippings, pepper and milk. Mix well and form into flat cakes. Then put into breadcrumbs and dip in an egg beaten with a tablespoonful cold milk, then in breadcrumbs. Bake or fry in deep hot fat.

These Are Appetizing.

Salmon Croquettes.—Take equal quantities of cold or hot boiled rice and canned salmon. Add a little melted butter and salt and pepper to taste. Mold into small ovals and roll first in finely powdered crackers, then into beaten egg yolk and again in cracker crumbs. Fry in hot fat like doughnuts.

Picked Up Fish Cakes.—Take a cupful of picked up salt fish and cream sauce, with two or three baked potatoes. Remove the skins from the potatoes while they are still warm, mash the fish or chop it if not tender enough to separate with the fork. Mash and work the fish and potato together until very fine and smooth. If you have so much sauce that the mixture is too soft mix in some soft breadcrumbs to absorb the moisture, and if you lack sauce use cream or a beaten egg. Add more salt and pepper and shape into small flat cakes nearly an inch thick and brown on each side in a little hot butter or salt pork fat.

FISH CANAPES.

THESE relishes give flavor to the otherwise plain Lenten meal. Canapes may be made by cutting slices of stale bread about a half inch thick and in any shape liked. Then they are toasted or sauted until a golden brown. Spread with some savory mixture, such as cheese, fish or meat, and tastefully garnished they add to the attractiveness of the table.

The slices of bread may be sauted in fat, butter or olive oil, as you prefer. If you have a fancy cutter to shape them with it is more convenient than using a knife.

Made With Shell Fish.

Crab Canapes.—For these fresh or canned crab meat may be used. For the foundation take a half dozen oval shaped pieces of toast.

For the sauce about a dozen hard shelled crabs are needed. Take the meat from the claws and divide the claws lengthwise. Wipe off the shells and put them in the oven to dry. Take out, put into a mortar and pour in four tablespoonfuls of olive oil and pound fine. Then place in a saucepan on the fire and let cook slowly for about ten minutes. Take off and press out the oil by squeezing the mixture in a clean cloth. Now take this oil and two tablespoonfuls of tarragon vinegar and mix this with the crab meat previously prepared. Cover the six pieces of toast with the sauce and garnish with the claws and add pieces of pickle, cut in fancy shapes or chopped fine; capers, watercress or horseradish sauce.

A Russian Relish.

Caviar Canapes.—Cut the sandwich bread a third of an inch thick and about two inches square. Toast golden color. Spread each piece with a teaspoonful of Russian caviar. Chop a cold hard boiled egg very fine. Mix with a teaspoonful each of minced parsley and onion. Divide this among the pieces of caviar covered toast Serve the canapes on a dish on a folded napkin and decorate with quartered lemon and parsley.

Sardine Canapes.—Sardines put up in oil are required in this case. Take the skin and bone from one-half dozen sardines and pound them in a mortar until smooth. Then mix in one ounce of butter, one ounce of grated cheese and season with salt and pepper. Make some toast of bread, cut in rounds and butter them. Then pile the sardine paste on each piece of toast, sprinkle with grated cheese and put in the oven to get thoroughly hot. Serve at once.

Anna Thompson.

A LABOR PORTFOLIO

Senate Passes Bill Increasing President's Cabinet to Ten Members

Washington, Feb. 27.—The senate passed the bill creating a department of labor, thus increasing the president's cabinet to ten members.

The bill included an amendment offered by Senator Gore placing the children's bureau under the new department and dividing the bureau of immigration and naturalization into two bureaus.

The bill has passed the house, but on account of minor amendments will have to go back.

Turkey Trot Is Barred

New York, Feb. 27.—If members of the Ninth coast artillery, N. Y. N. G., are caught turkey trotting at their annual dance they will be haled before a court martial, according to reports from headquarters.

BIG SIX-MASTER NOW ABANDONED

William L. Douglas Now a Barge Adrift

BROKE FROM TOWING TUG

The former six-masted schooner William L. Douglas, which was converted into an oil barge and renamed Delaware Sun a few months ago, recently broke away from the steamer Yosemite which was towing her from Philadelphia for England and is now drifting about helpless and probably abandoned in mid-ocean.

Several steamers arriving in England reported sighting the barge at sea, apparently with no one aboard and wallowing about in the high sea that has been running in the Atlantic for several weeks.

The Delaware Sun was the name given to the William L. Douglas after she had been changed from a six-masted schooner into an undignified barge.

The big schooner William L. Douglas was launched at the Fore River ship yard, Aug. 29, 1903.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

COULD NOT GIVE UP

"Sur-re-nay, is that the sea?

"Yes, father!"

The first voice was thin, despondent, querulous, that of "Old Mr. Butters," as the neighbors knew him.

The second was full and hearty, that of his daughter, Serena, who lived with him ,and made a home at "grandpa's" for any neices and nephews that might come on a visit.

"The sea is it. Sur-re-nay?"

"Yes, father."

"Why don't it stop?"

Serena did not argue. It would have been for her a waste of breath; for the invalid, it would have been excitement without satisfaction. To switch the talk over to the track of another subject was one of the daughter's methods.

"May I give you your tea now, father?"

"Yes, but don't make it as sticky as the last time."

"And will you have your toast?"

"Yes, but don't brown it."

Serena, biting her lips into silence, sat down before the humming kitchen fire to watch the toast, while she trusted the fire to heat a little more the water in the tea kettle.

Hark!

Did she hear a step along the plank walk leading through the yard to the back door? It was much too light a step to be that of John Sylvester, the hired man. Anything for a change from tea that might be sticky and toast that might be too brown!

"Hullo, Aunt Serena!"

It was a young girl-face, while suggesting womanhood not far away. It was a face of purity, sympathy, and also energy.

"Well, Amy, I declare! If I am not glad to see you! Come right in and sit down."

At the same time she seized the girl and fired off a kiss, whose explosion was something like that of a pistol.

"I thought, if you would have me over night , I might help you about Grandpa Butters."

"If I'd have you! I should be delighted. He just tires me out sometimes."

"You know I want to be a nurse."

"Well, what is there to hinder?"

"You may know that I began a course of study and training, but I have had some discouragements. One is that our hands have been full at home, for we have 'moved' as you know, and my help was needed at home, and at the hospital where I had my course, when I came to take my examination, one old doctor—I can't give his name, but I remember his face— thought my papers were not what they ought to be, and then he wanted to see some of my actual hospital work. So, before going into the next class of grade, I am sort of 'hung up,' I should say, waiting till I can get in some new papers. But I don't mean to give up—"

"Oh, you will get there," said Aunt Serena, encouragingly. "It is perseverance that does it. You jest stick."

"No, I can't give up—I must go on. Now, if you want me to help about grandpa—what is he doing?"

"Well, as I hear nothing from him, I hope he's asleep. Let's see!"

The two women softly advanced and peeped into the invalid's chamber. The old pilgrim was fast asleep.

"Now, Aunt Serena, you let me help you. And have you seen my long white apron and my cap?"

"Why, no! Do show them to me."

Out in the warm, sheltered kitchen, with its purring fire, Amy opened her dress-suit case and complacently showed her possessions to Aunt Serena.

"This apron, you see, I cut and made myself. And wouldn't you like to see it on?"

"Sartin, sartin!"

"And here's my nursing-cap! You know we have a dress, too—a gown, I mean,—but I'll just put my cap and apron on. There! How do I look?"

"Fine! You keep them on all the time, I hope."

"You don't think it would frighten him?"

"Grandpa? Oh, no! 'Twill give him a change. Jest the thing he needs. If that doctor could see you—that fussy old one that hadn't seen your work—now, I know a young one wouldn't want any proof—"

"Do you suppose I could step in and see how grandpa's getting along?"

"Do, do!"

"She's amazin' purty," thought Aunt Serena.

The old man was still asleep, the peace of a short oblivion of discomfort stilling his features.

Amy stole softly about, arranging gently some discomposed furniture, and a big arm-chair she set near the bed, as if it might have an occupant. A look of order settled down over the room, of hospitality also. The arm-chair was a symbol of welcome. There were several books on the center-table and she opened one of these, as if somebody had been reading. Two or three pictures on the opposite wall were hanging askew, as if rheumatism had attacked them. These Nurse Amy obliged to get over their sickness at once, and they were required to hang in healthy fashion.

Looking back into the sitting-room, Amy saw a geranium at a southern window. It was in blossom, and the rich crimson blossoms said, "We are in fine health, and we are going to make some more blossoms."

"Aunt Serena," asked Amy, out in the peaceful kitchen, "could I have this scarlet geranium on that table by the southern window in grandpa's room?"

"Sartin! Any flowers you see, and if you thought the table in my room would be of any service, I could—"

"Oh ,this will do. There, there, I guess he is stirring!"

When grandpa opened his eyes, he saw somebody in a white head-dress and long white apron. He looked puzzled.

"I'm Amy. You know me?"

"Oh, yes, sartin! My granddarter."

"Now, I'm going to help take care of you," said Amy. "Why, dear grandpa, why, jest let me make your head easier; turn your pillow, and it will be cool and comfortable. I heard a doctor say that to turn one's pillow at night would drive bad dreams away, and would piece out one's sleep. There!"

She raised his head gently, turned the hard, hot pillow and then let him sink back into cool, yielding depths of comfort.

"Thank you!" said the old man, in grateful tones.

"Now, I'll get your toast and tea, if you'd like them."

"Thank you."

"Why, he's gittin' quite rational," whispered Aunt Serena to Amy, when she came out of the sick-room, "By natur,' he's one of the most perlitest pussuns I know of. He really enjoys hisself now."

The old man was facing the re-arranged pictures and the geranium with crimson blossoms, his face brightening as he looked. The big arm-chair did look inviting. An idea came to grandpa, and he shared it with Amy when he had sampled his toast and tea.

"Say, granddarter, that 'ere cheer looks invitin'."

"Of course it does."

"I—I've a great mind to try it."

"You? Well, it won't hurt to try."

In a very little while an old man was sitting in the arm-chair.

"He's tickled as he can be," said Aunt Serena, when Amy came into the room where she was sewing.

"I know it. He said he didn't know he had so much strength. And he likes it."

"Oh, he's one of the kind if you git him to start an idea hisself, why, he may s'prise you with what he will do. You pulled the right spring—string, I mean. He saw that arm-cheer, and it sot him to thinkin'."

"And I opened that Bible you see near him on the table, and what do you think he said?"

"I dunno. What was it?"

"I saw it was a family Bible, with pictures, and I left it open at the picture of Jacob a-sleeping at Bethel and dreaming about the angels. He saw it, though not very distinctly. I told him what it was. 'When I was a boy, my mother called it the angel-pictur',' he said, 'and she used to tell us children about it.'"

"Oh, look," whispered Aunt Serena, "he has got his hand on it! Now he must be dreadful fond of it to do that. And I believe he has gone to sleep! 'Twill do him good, and he will wake up feelin' fresh as Jacob was arter his dream."

"Hark! Somebody is comin'! I hear a step out in the entry."

"That's the doctor. I can tell him—tell his step a mile off."

"The doctor? Oh, what shall I do? I don't know that he will approve at all."

"The doctor 'prove it? You send him into the kitchen, and lemme see him."

The doctor came in, a briskly stepping, vigorous, gray-haired practitioner.

"Good mornin', Dr. Tuttle!"

"Good morning!" the doctor replied cheerily. "Why, what's this? Who is in the chair!"

"Hush-sh-sh! He's fast asleep. She is a relative, a-visitin'—a new nus that come here and waited on him, and he took to her—fixed his piller, you know, and chirked him up, and sot that geranium on the table, and his arm-chair she sot here, and if he didn't take it into his head he'd like to set up; but I don't know as you like—"

"The very thing I wanted to see. Get him to do something—anything but keep him staying in bed—and there is a chance for him to mend a good deal. But what is that book?" said the doctor, in a low tone.

"The Bible," whispered Aunt Serena. "She opened it to Jacob's prayin' at Bethel. She's a dreadful good pusson, and prays herself—most wore a hole in the floor by her bed, her folks say— and you see he takes to it. 'Twill do him good."

"Where is this wonderful nurse? She must be old and experienced, and have been nursing many years," he told himself.

"Oh, she didn't know as you'd like it, and she scud into the kitchen."

"But I do like it, and I will tell her so."

"If you don't see her, she must have stepped out into the entry," continued Serena.

Out in the kitchen Dr. Tuttle could not find any one.

"This is strange," he murmured. "The old nurse is bashful. I'll open this door into the entry.

He opened a door, but it admitted him into a pantry, where a young woman in a nurse's equipments had tried to hide away.

"Forgive me!" exclaimed the doctor, holding up his hands, and withdrawing promptly. In the blushing young woman who came forward into the kitchen he saw what person? And she saw whom?

That evening, when alone in his study, he wrote this note to the chairman of a hospital-training committee: "I had occasion to suggest—wisely, as I thought then—that Miss Butters's transference to the next upper grade of students in our school of training had better be delayed, but today I am ready to vote that she be my successor and take all my patients."—E. ## AN INTERVIEW In DEATH AUTO

Trouble Began When Marsh Made Insinuating Remark Concerning Dorr and His Aunt—Accused Man Says He Was Struck With Wrench When He Tried to Leave Machine

Salem, Mass., Feb. 27.—William A. Dorr, on the witness stand, admitted that he shot George E. Marsh, the wealthy retired soap manufacturer, at Lynn, on April 11 last. But the shots were fired during a quarrel while the old man was clutching his throat and choking him, the prisoner said.

Dorr's version of the homicide was that first he was insulted and then attacked by Marsh, and while he was trying to free himself from the grasp of Marsh he drew his automatic pistol from his pocket and impulsively pulled the trigger.

Dorr would have the jury believe that the interview between him and Marsh, after the old man had accepted an invitation to take a ride in Dorr's automobile while they discussed the affairs of Dorr's aunt, Miss Orpha Marsh of Stockton, Cal., began amicably and would have continued so had not Marsh made an insinuating remark concerning Miss Marsh and Dorr.

"Tell me, are you her nephew, or are you just living there?" Dorr said Marsh asked contemptuously.

Then the prisoner declared he attempted to leave the machine in anger. Marsh tripped him as he tried to pass, he said, and struck him with a wrench. He got possession of the wrench and struck Marsh on the head, and then he told the jury the old man caught him by the throat.

Not being able to force Marsh to release his hold, Dorr said he drew his pistol and fired. But this struggle and the shooting all occurred, Dorr said, in Revere.

There was no trace of feeling apparent in Dorr's voice as he recited the details of the homicide to Judge Quinn and the jury, before a gathering that occupied all the available seating space in the courtroom. He spoke in a low tone, and went from incident to incident in a dull monotone, as if he were telling a tale of no especial interest to himself.

He needed little prompting from his attorney, C. N. Barney, and comparatively few questions were asked. Once Dorr was asked to tell what occurred on any one day he went over the ground thoroughly. When he came to the account of the last act in the tragedy Dorr decribed every circumstance up to the disposition of the body without an interruption by his counsel. During the last of his direct testimony, however, Dorr was so weak that he had to sit.

ONCE A FARMER'S BOY

Moffett, Vice President of Standard Oil Company, Dies In Florida

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 27.—James A. Moffett, vice president of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, died here after a brief illness.

Moffett was born in 1851 in Virginia. When he was fifteen years of age he set out to become a farmer's boy. Nearby, when Moffett was about 19 years of age, began some of the first developments of the oil fields of West Virginia. Moffett was attracted to them and he was taken into the employ of one of the oil companies of Parkersburg.

In a little while after that the managers of the Standard Oil company got him and sent him to the Pratt Refining company of Brooklyn, and then his rise with that corporation began. He leaves a wife and three children, two sons and a daughter.

MRS. PANKHURST'S THREAT

Says She Will Remain on Hunger Strike While In Prison

London, Feb. 27.—Mrs. Pankhurst has sent a message to the Women's Social and Political union, in which she says that the refusal of bail pending her trial renders it impossible for her to prepare an adequate defense. She adds:

"In these circumstances I repudiate the right of the legal authorities over whose appointment, because I am a woman, I have no control, to try me. I refuse to consent to a legal farce being enacted, and I shall begin by refusing to conform to the prison discipline while on remand. I shall take no food from the moment I enter prison."

The hostile feeling aroused by the tactics of the militant suffragettes is increasing.

Pearl Necklace Lost by Chicago Woman Is Returned to Her

Chicago, Feb. 27.—The pearl necklace belonging to Mrs. A. A. Sprague, 2d, of this city and valued at $15,000, which was lost on a sleeping car between Boston and Chicago, has been returned to its owner.

While the police of a score of cities and numerous private detectives were searching for the ornament it adorned the person of a 5-year-old girl, one of the six children of a crippled night watchman. The necklace had been found in a rubbish heap.

Heavy Earthquake In New Zealand

$24,235,740 Deficiency Bill Reported

Washington, Feb. 27.—The appropriations committee reported to the house the general deficiency bill, carrying appropriations of $24,235,740 to supply deficiencies in the various government departments for the current fiscal year.

MAIL SERVICE

There will be 22 mails received at the local office each day, not including the collections by carriers. The time and places whence those mails come are as follows:

A. M.—6.14, Boston and all points; 6.39, Boston; 7.41, Boston and New York: 9.15, Southern Massachusetts; 10.01, Boston; 10.11, Cape Cod; 11.02, Plymouth; 11.41, Boston.

P. M.—12.07, Wollaston; 12.21, Cape Cod; 12.41, 1.20 Braintree and South Braintree; Boston and Atlantic; 2.01, Boston and Wollaston; 2.56, 3.40, 4.34, and 6.30, Boston; 6.56, South Shore; 7.30, Newport and Southern Massachusetts; 8.28 and 11.04, Boston.

The carriers on the three trip routes report at 7 a. m. and leave at 7.30 a. m. on first trip. They report for second trip at 10.30 and leave at 10.50 a. m. and for the last trip they report at 2.20 and leave at 2.40 p. m.

The carriers on the two trip routes taking the outskirts of the city, report for first trip at 6.45 and leave at 7.30 A. M. For the last trip they report at 1.50 and leave at 2.20 P. M.

A mail has been arranged for from Boston due here at 2.01 to connect with these last deliveries that now leave early, also early pouches from Braintree, South Braintree, Wollaston and Atlantic, but anything later will not be delivered until next morning.

The mail will close at the Quincy branch office for the last local delivery at 1.30 P. M. Mail will close at 11.30 A. M. to connect with the last delivery for Atlantic at 12 o'clock noon and for Braintree, South Braintree and Wollaston at 1.30 P. M. All mail after those hours for the points mentioned will have to remain over until the next day.

It will be seen that the accommodation for those points is very meagre. Probably as soon as the new arrangement gets into full swing and the inconvenience becomes painfully apparent, there will be an effort to have some sort of a change made which will prove more satisfactory. It is understood that this can be done or at least attempted by petitioning the Congressman from this part of the state to exert his influence for greater mail accommodations for the people of this district.

The letter carriers are to work eight hours in 10. They arrive at the post office half an hour in some cases before the mail is ready for them.

The mail is put up by the clerks in the office and it takes on an average of about half an hour to remove the mail from the arriving pouches and arrange it for the carriers. It is contended by some people that if there are not letter carriers enough to provide adequate mail service by later collections and deliveries that the remedy is easy enough to apply, by engaging more carriers.

If a private concern found that it did not have help enough to meet the demands of its patrons in the usual working hours of the day that more help would be employed and there is no reason why the postal department cannot do the same thing.

HOPE TO TURN TABLES BY A WIN

The Quincy High is matched up with Wellesley High and Natick High at the schoolboy games on Saturday, March 1st to be hel din Mechanics building, Boston Last year Quincy ran Natick and was beaten by two feet and they hope to turn the tables this year. Captain Fred Kingsbury, Leslie Andrews, Ralph Prout, Richard Larkin will most likely compose the team with Willard Hyland and Willard Atkins as subs.

QUINCY IN SCHOOL GAMES.

Quincy entries appear in the 400 names now in the hands of the committee in charge of the B. A. A. schoolboy meet Saturday afternoon.

An innovation will be the two lap team races. Quincy, Natick and Wellesley High schools are grouped in this new event. Capt. Kingsbury has not stated who will comprise his team although the local high school candidates are very promising and it is difficult to make a selection.

The athletic committe has been obliged to rearrange many of the races because of the unusual number of entries.

Harvard Won by a Score of 3 to 1 in Royal Battle

The postponed Harvard '16-Milton Academy hockey game was played on the Cunningham Rink, East Milton, Wednesday afternoon and resulted in a 3-to-1 victory for Harvard. It was the hardest and the fastest game of the season on the local rink.

Lindsay Weld, Trainer and Capt. Francis Weld played well for Milton Academy. The latter warded off many shots which looked like points in the last period. The summary:

Miss Maragaret Carney of Melrose, division of the Sons of Veterans Auxiliaries of Massachusetts was the guest of Col Abner B. Packard Camp, G. A. R. Hall, Wednesday vening.

Miss Carney spoke on the movement on foot in the auxiliaries whereby a fund is being created to build dormitories for veterans at the Chelsea home. She told how all patriotic organizations were allied in this humanitarian movement and asked the hearty co-operation of all the members of the camp. She was given fine applause at the conclusion of her remarks. The next meeting will be March 7.

A collation was served at the close of the meeting and an entertainment was also furnished.

SAW A FOX.

William Wilson, a well known resident of Weymouth, tells me he had rather an unusual experience recently While walking through Federal street en route to the South Station ,he happened to glance into a doorway. Huddled in a corner wa sa fox which had evidently travelled considerable distance and had met with stiff interference. There was no question but Sir Reynard was far from his lair. Mr. Wilson was somewhat reluctant to take any decisive action as far as the capture of the animal was concerned and while he was debating within himself as to his course, the cunning fox made a leap and almost bowled over the Weymouth man. When the latter recovered from his surprise the strange prowler was nowhere to be seen.—Observant Citizen in Boston Post.

BANQUET FOR GILMORE.

This evening in Clark hall, Brockton, a monster banquet will be tendered Congressman-elect Edward Gilmore. It is the eve of his departure for Washington where he will take the oath of office March 4. Prominent state democrats will be present and among the speakers will be many exmayors of Brockton. Mayor Charles M. Hickey who won his office by the narrowest margin will preside.

FAREWELL RECEPTION.

A farewell reception will be tendered Rev. Gerhard W. Palmgren, who has resigned as pastor of the Swdeish Congregational church, at the church this evening. The affair promises to be quite a church gathering. Rev. Mr. Palmgren goes to Hartford, Conn. Sunday where he is to take charge of a large church. He has been five years in Quincy.

Nero's Claim to Distinction.

Aubrey Beardsley, the famous artist, once outshone Oscar Wilde, who was the greatest wit and conversationalist that ever lived.

At a dinner at which both were guests Wilde talked interestingly on Nero for nearly two hours. When he concluded, Beardsley, who was only a boy, spoke up:

"Mr. Wilde," he said, "you have forgotten to mention Nero's greatest religious achievement.'

"I must confess I do not know to what you are referring," admitted Wilde.

"I am referring to his action of pouring oil on Christians and setting fire to them," said Beardsley. "Wasn't it Nero who lighted the first fires of Christianity that illuminated the world?"

A SEA MONSTER

By F. A. MITCHEL

Three-quarters of a century ago, while piracy had lost its vitality, it had not become extinct. All ships at that time were sailers, and pirates were usually long, low, narrow vessels, with rakish masts, and their character could often be discerned by the merchant vessels they preyed upon.

One misty morning a Malay pirate was lying at anchor near the coast of Japan when sounds were heard indicating the near presence of a ship. Then came a stentorian voice, "All hands for'ard to raise anchor!" The pirates did not know what that meant, for they did not understand English, but they listened for something that would indicate the nature of the neighboring vessel, which they could not see for the fog. Presently they heard a snorting that was unfamiliar to them and a stirring of waters as if a whale were beating them with his tail. Smoke, mingled with the mist, floated toward them.

The pirates wondered at all this, and the more superstitious among them, hearing the snorting and the lashing of the waters, thought they were near some sea monster which, like the dragons of old, vomited fire and smoke. But the pirate captain, hearing the familiar sound of a turning capstan, knew that a ship was near him, and if she were not a man-of-war he determined to make a prize of her. So he ordered his anchor hauled up in order to be ready to give chase the moment the fog lifted.

But the fog was in no hurry to lift. Nevertheless the leviathan, or whatever she was, continued to snort and swish her tail, the sounds slowly receding. The pirate, not willing to let her go without a better knowledge of her character, decided to follow. Since there was no breeze a boat was lowered, a hawser attached to it and the ship, and she was pulled along in the wake of the monster which threw back the waters with her tail, with which she seemed to be propelling herself.

Presently the fog thinned, and the pirates could discern a dim body ahead of them vomiting smoke.

"She's a mountain of a swan!" exclaimed one. "She's paddling with her web feet that take the place of sails."

"Whoever heard of a swan breathing smoke?" queried another, turning pale

"Or squawking chug, chug, chug, chug?" said another.

By this time there was some wind which blew the fog with it, and, though it did not render the form of the monster plainer, the captain, who had more courage than his crew, ordered sails hoisted that he might get nearer. He succeeded in approaching her stern but the current of water she kicked back with her feet was stronger there her snorting sounded louder, and the terrified crew protested so strongly against getting any nearer that the captain was obliged to drop back to a safer position.

"Suppose she should turn and blow fire at us!" exclaimed one. "She would burn us to ashes!"

"Or if she should come beside us and close one of her wings over us she would send us to the bottom."

At that moment the smoke from the monster ahead, veering, enveloped the pirate. Most of the crew fell on their knees, and the others, running to the halyards, let down the sails. The captain swore at them for cowardice, but his own features indicated fear. They dropped behind the mammoth swan, her chugging sounded more faintly, and at last they lost her altogether.

Half an hour passed, during which the pirate captain served a double dose of grog to infuse courage into his men, for he had heard voices and the turning of the capstan, and since danger far is much less terrible than danger near he had recovered and regained the belief that the sea griffin was in reality a ship. Then suddenly the fog lifted, and there on the starboard quarter was a ship. Her masts were puny things, not capable of carrying sails to give her a headway of five knots. But she didn't look like a ship any of them had ever seen. She had no sails set, and yet she moved. Indeed, a white line of foam extended astern from midship, and it appeared to the pirates at once that she was paddling with feet, not seen because they were under water. She was moving on a course that would take her directly across the pirate's bow, and the captain of the latter gave orders to hoist all sail and stand toward her.

The order was obeyed by the crew, which had been braced by the grog, and it looked as if she would be an easy prey, when suddenly from a column amidships poured forth a thick smoke that changed the situation. The pirate crew looked on with horror.

"It comes from her back!" cried a sailor, aghast.

"There's fire in her belly!" exclaimed another.

Then, right where that belly was supposed to be, there burst a glare that sent every pirate to his knees, praying to his God or his gods not to let the fire paddleship destroy him. But the captain seized the tiller to keep his ship on her course, vowing that he was ready to fight Satan himself and would make him walk the plank. But the wind fell, and the paddleship went on, her speed not a whit decreased, and he had the mortification to see her pass away unharmed.

The monster was the first ship driven by steam in the eastern hemisphere.

MURRAY IGNORES ORDERS

Bay State Congressman Forcibly Removed From Speaker's Territory

Washington, Feb. 27.—During the consideration of the naval appropriation bill in the house Representative Murray of Massachusetts worked his way upon the speaker's rostrum and demanded recognition to make a parliamentary point of order against two members having the same views acting as tellers on the one battleship proposition.

Representaive Alexander of Missouri, presiding over the house, repeatedly ordered Murray back to the floor, and finally by his direction Murray was forcibly removed from the rostrum by a deputy sergeant-at-arms.

Murray fought against this removal and his coat was almost pulled off in taking him away. Murray's colleagues gathered around him quickly. Speaker Clark took the chair and order was restored.

After Clark took the chair Murray was recognized to make a speech of explanation, during which he contended that he found authority for his action in a book he had read at the congressional library. Later Murray apologized to the house.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S BUDGET MESSAGE

Executive Recommends Adoption of New System

Washington, Feb. 27.—President Taft sent to congress his much-discussed "budget" message. He recommended the adoption of a budget system of relating proposed expenditures to expected revenues and declared congress would be greatly benefited by having before it such a statement before it began the annual grind upon appropriation bills.

The United States, the president wrote, was the only great nation in the world which did not use the budget system, and in consequence "may be said to be without plan or program."

In a portion of the message relating to his scheme to classify what are now presidential appointments, President Taft says $2,000,000 would be cut from the payroll if there were a complete executive reclassification of civil service employes, and the government still be enabled to pay higher salaries to those now inadequately paid.

GAYNOR DEFENDS POLICE

Not More Than Fifty Grafters In the Department, He Says

New York, Feb. 27.—Mayor Gaynor was a witness before the legislative committee which was recently appointed to investigate police conditions in this city and to draw up reform mesaures. "There are not more than fifty grafters in the police department at this moment," declared the mayor.

Mayor Gaynor referred to Rosenthal and George A. Sipp, the latter a former Raines law hotel proprietor who turned state evidence against the police, as "two foul characters."

John Q. Thompson Dead

Chicago, Feb. 27.—John Q. Thompson, assistant attorney general of the United States, died here from uraemia. Thompson arrived in Chicago last Friday from Washington, intending to go for a short stay to him home in Canton. Kan.

NOVEL DEDICATION.

A dedication without a speech is the radical form of ceremony chosen by Mayor William J. Hindley for the formal opening ofthe new city hall at Spokane, Wash. Moreover, the mayor proposes to set an example of unparalled industry by having every city official and employee at work during the housewarming, just as if nothing out of the ordinary were going on.

He says: "Let the people see the city government at work, and open every room in the building, from cellar to garret. I think a dedication of this kind, held at night when all can attend, will give much better satisfaction than the ordinary kind, with hot air, red tape and solemn faces. If a citizen wants to visit the new city hall that night and pay water rent settle for a dog license, get vaccinated take out a blasting permit, or pay for an electrical or building inspection, let him do it. That is what we are paid for. When the ship of state is in full swing the taxpayers can get an idea of what they receive for their money."

—One of America's ablest writers on economic questions recently stated that at twenty years of age, coercion was his program for social and economic progress; but contact with life has taught him that force cannot produce progress. A strong man may knock another down, and yet lack the strength to lift himself up. Not progress, but the prevention of it, has to follow when man substitutes revolution for nature's method of evolution. —Rockland Independent.

BATES READY TO JOIN GIANTS

Stan Bates will leave here April 8 and will report to the New York Giants April 10. He received a telegram to that effect a few days ago. Considerable interest is manifested in this city over the tryout. Bates has been a wonder player every time he has performed here, usually with the Makaria, when he hung up a couple of city records.

In the spring of 1911 he signed up with the Frederickton team of the New Brunswick league. He played part of 1912 with them and then was placed on the Halifax squad of the league.

His best performance last season was a 14 inning battle against St. John, in which he secured 18 strikeouts.

GOOD GAME EXPECTED.

Although both teams of the Quincy A. A. have practically secured the championship o fthe Greater Boston N. E. A. A. A. league for the second time, the North Dorchester stalwart opponents will have to exert all their knowledge of the game Thursday evening in trying to make the record of being the first club to beat both Quincy teams.

The game will be played in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy and it promises to be one of the most spirited contests that the league has seen. A large crowd of rooters from the Boston clubs will attend, hoping to see the local champs conquered.

The first team has won nine and lost one game. The second team has led the league from the start, without a defeat and the players have surpassed all previous records. Manning is holding the greatest individual point record and is top man in the number scored.

"Booty" Chapman who has been confined to his home with pneumonia is reported as doing well. He was unable to play Washington's Birthday and "Nedzo" Bennett was in his position. Bennett, has not played regularly this season but his past experience and his showing in Saturday's game warrants a snappy defense.

The Quincy A. A. teams are claimants of the New England champinship and it is not disputed. Prominent New York managers are negotiating for games. The season is closing and it is probable that only a few teams will be played.

Inclement Weather No Terrors For Members

AND OTHERS PRESENT

The extremely inclement weather, seemed in no way to interfere with the attendance at the annual concert and ball of Mt. Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., Thursday evening, at Music hall, for it was the largest gathering for some years. Brothers of the three links, with their ladies and friends, were present in large numbers, other lodges in the immediate vicinity being largely represented. The officers of the ball were assiduous in their attention to the participants and nothing that would lend to the enjoyment of the evening was omitted.

The decorations of the hall were of a simple nature, being wholly confined to the platform. Along the front of the platform were many beautiful ferns, between which were small pots of flowering plants which served to brighten the effect. These decorations came from the conservatories of William Patterson at Wollaston.

Behind this embankment was Monk's orchestra and from 8 to 9 o'clock they gave a promenade concert, the program including the following numbers.

Introductory March Selected
Overture, Jolly Robbers Suppe
Selection, Opera, Midnight Sons by Hubbell
Waltz Song, from Faust Gounod
Selection, from Dollar Princess, by Geo. Fall
Finale.

While this was in progress the active dancers were arriving and their wants being looked after by the efficient reception committee who in-

McDEVITT'S MEMORY FAILS HIM WHEN QUESTIONED ABOUT BRIBERY

Smooth Faced Man Without a Hat, Supposed Member of Legislature Only Description He Offered

Further Opportunity to Refresh His Memory Today. Senate and House Much Stirred By Statements

Senator John J. McDevitt, appeared before the committee on rules of the legislature, Thursday to furnish some explanation of his astonishing statement at Wollaston the night before, relative to legislative bribery efforts. The only evidence which the senator had to offer in defence of his statement was that some one whom he did not know had offered him money. The only description he could give of the man was that he was without a moustache and as he was around the corridor, without his hat on, McDevitt assumed that he was a member of the legislature.

After batting around an hour trying to have McDevitt refresh his memory, without any great amount of information the committee voted to present order for authority to summon witnesses and administer oaths to conduct an investigation into the truth or falsity of the McDevitt statement without delay.

Representative Duncan of Clinton called attention to the fact that Senator Mack appeared as counsel for Senator McDevitt and quoted the rules to prove that it was not permissible, but the committee did not press the objection and Senator Mack said that his only object in appearing was to give a brother Senator the benefit of his legal advice.

Senator Blanchard also advised that the committee go slowly in the matter. He said that probably he had more reason to feel offended at the Quincy Senator than any other member of the Committee on Rules, McDevitt having appeared before his Committee on Public Lighting and insulted every member of the committee at the hearing on the Quincy Gas bill, but he regarded his talk as he would regard the idle gossip of any irresponsible person.

Representative Meaney thought the committee ought to give Senator McDevitt 24 hours in which to refresh his memory and come before the committee and testify again on the matter. At times the excitement was intense and feeling ran high. McDevitt's friends, including Senator Timilty of Boston, advised him to admit that what he said was said under excitement at a political meeting and retract his statement relative to the offer of bribery, but McDevitt wouldn't do so.

After President Greenwood of the Senate had informed Senator McDevitt that the Committee on Rules had invited him to be present in order that he could give them any information as to the member who had approached him with the offer of a bribe, Mr. McDevitt read this statement:

"After consultation with Senator Mack in this matter I desire to make the following statement: The statements I made in Quincy Wednesday night as has been reported were practically true so far as they were then within my knowledge; but on further investigation I found that the person who spoke to me as he did had no authority to do so or to offer any bribe to any member of the Legislature."

"Is there anything further that you desire to say?" asked President Greenwood.

"I have nothing further to say," replied Senator McDevitt.

"Are we to assume that someone did offer you a bribe?" persisted Greenwood.

"There is my statement," answered the Senator.

"Suppose some one did offer him a bribe who had no authority to do so. If the man was acting without authority he could not pay the bribe," interjected Senator Mack.

Pres. Greenwood—I do not quite follow that line of reasoning. Perhaps it is because I have not the advantage of a legal mind. Don't you think you ought to give something a little more definite, Senator McDevitt?

Senator McDevitt—That is all I care to say.

Speaker Cushing—I notice that the newspaper article states that you said the offer came from a Representative from Boston. Now that interests me somewhat.

Senator McDevitt—I only knew that the man was not a member of the Senate and when I saw him walking around the corridors without a hat I assumed that he was a Representative.

Pres. Greenwood—Are we to assume that you did not know the man and that you assumed from the fact that he wore no head covering that he was a Representative?

Senator McDevitt nodded.

Pres. Greenwood—Is it a fact that you did not know him?

Senator McDevitt—I don't think I did.

Pres. Greenwood—Is it a fact that you were offered a bribe?

Senator McDevitt—I think my statement covers all that I care to say.

Pres. Greenwood—Will you tell the committee in regard to what matter the money was offered?

Senator McDevitt—I don't know as I can recall.

KISSING BUG STORY DENIED

Quincy Point Teachers Do Not Kiss Their Pupils

The story that the spread of scarlet fever in the Point district is due to the teachers kissing the children of the school is emphatically denied by Dr. Fred E. Jones and William H. Teasdale of the Board of Health, Thomas B. Pollard, principal of the Washington school stated that it was not true that the teachers kiss their pupils every day. "I know the teachers love their pupils," said Mr. Pollard "but I doubt if the affection is carried to the extent of kissing them every day because the classes are so large that it would be quite a big task the teachers would have assigned themselves. All the schools of the city are closed this week, under the new arrangement of the school terms, so that it is not strange the Washington school should be closed. Advantage was taken of this circumstance by the Board of Health to fumigate the rooms of the Washington school.

Past Archon Joseph J. Mullen was presented with an handsome Heptasophs charm. As he was leaving the platform after making a short speech of acceptance the deputy presented him with a large travelling bag to take the charm home in. The second testimonial of the esteem of his friends was a complete surprise.

The degree team of Cambridge Conclave exemplified the degrees on three candidates. New applications for membership were received.

Retiring Past Archon "Al" MacKay who is at the Quincy City Hospital with pneumonia was reported as doing well.

Music for the work of installing and the exemplification by the degree team was by Austin F. Chamberlin of Allston who rendered several piano and vocal selections.

At Session of Board of Trade For That Purpose

DIRECTORS TO DINE

A regular meeting of the board of directors of the Board of Trade together with the chairman of the several committees met Thursday evening at Thompson's restaurant where they had supper after which the business was transacted at the dinner table. The object of the meeting was to arrange for the meeting next Wednesday evening and as outlined in Thursday's Ledger the meeting decided to take up for discussion at the regular meeting the question of the revision of the City Charter, a bill for which is now pending before the legislature.

The secretary was instructed to obtain copies of the bill that the hearing will be given upon and have them at the meeting. It is anticipated that the discussion will be a lively one as many of the active members of the Board of Trade have been active in the affairs of the city and are well qualified to speak, on the subject. It was also decided at this meeting that future meetings of the Directors should be proceded by a dinner.

FLAREUP OF GASOLINE TANK

Proved Disastrous to McQueen and Reynolds

William McQueen and John Reynolds, well known South Quincy young men are at their homes suffering from severe burns about the face and head following the flareup of gasoline at the Rice & Hutchins South Braintree factory this morning.

They had drawn gasoline from a tank located outside the factory when it took fire. The cause is unknown.

They were treated by Dr. H. L. Dearing. Both are doing well.

Court business has been a little quiet of late. The fact is that court business is always quiet just preceding the annual town meetings of the towns in the district. But for that matter it has been a little quiet in Quincy.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

How do you like the new mail arrangements which go into effect tomorrow Mr. Average voter?

Joe Walker is a real progressive he is now in favor of woman suffrage.

New York has nothing to be overwhelmingly proud of in the contemplation of her officials or institutions.

Horse racing is to be resumed. Horse racing as a sport is not objectionable, but like everything else an appendix like bookmaking are what kill it. It would be well to operate upon horse racing and remove its appendix then.

It was hard to tell which was the most frightened the undertaker or the man into whom he was going to inject embalming fluid at Wilmington when the dead one woke up.

If all public buildings were dedicated like the Spokane City hall without speech making there would not be so much to regret in looking over the flowery oratory and fine pledges inspired by such an occasion.

The college man has another job picked out for him as detective Burns has assured them they are equipped for his line of work. Well maybe, but would they all be so successful?

President elect Wilson says his razor strop is a regular weather prophet. Will it be able to tell him of squalls in the cabinet and congress?

Judging from the way the critics treat it, "The Yellow Jacket" has a few things on "Pigs in Clover."

The cabinet guessers will have it all over in just four more days.

When will the general public get upon its hind legs and object to the manner in which it is being mulcted for this high salary craze among ball players during the summer, then pay to hear them hand out a line of punk from a theatre stage and last but not least read a lot of bewhiskered base ball jokes and advice which have been kicking around for years as bran new in some paper under the picture and over the name of a player or manager.

FAREWELL TO THE TAFTS.

Washington will bid an official farewell to president Taft and his family, Tuesday. That there will be some regrets on both sides, especially on the part of the official family of the retiring president, goes without saying. President Taft would have enjoyed the honor and courtesy of a re-election, but conditions and the people were against him. His official family would have liked another four years to carry on the work they were engaged in and aid the president in carrying out his policies. President Taft like any other persons or official made mistakes. That they were errors of judgment, sins of omission rather than commission, is the firm belief in the minds of the great mass of the people. That during the trying closing days of his administration he arose to a height, power, independence and steadfast adherence to a policy which has been commended the world over, despite harsh and hasty criticism, shows the true type and character of the man. If he did nothing else, to commend him during his four years term, at this important crisis he gave an exhibition of strength and power, backed by gameness, then he deserves honor and credit for this closing act of his administration, which displayed the talents of a statesman and a humane instinct most commendable.

McDEVITT'S STATEMENT.

It is early as yet to make any extended comment on the statement of Senator John J. McDevitt. There is still a chance that his memory may not prove the "thing he forgets with," and this afternoon he may be able to throw some light upon his startling statements. If he had no greater strength or evidence than that which he offered to the rules committee, Thursday, it would have been much better if he had kept his mouth hermetically sealed upon the subject. As to Mr. McDevitt's further usefulness as a Senator from this district, it is up to the voters ofthe district to determine and judge in the light of events which have marked his course in that body, since inauguration day.

NEW YORK POLICE.

In the face of the overwhelming evidence, which cannot be evaded, Mayor Gaynor of New York, ersists in contending that the New York police force is the best in the world. Continued parrot like repetition may sound good to the mayor. He may even be able at times to lull his conscience on this point, but if the New York force is the best in the world, Lord pity the community with the worst. It would be assuming too much to think there are not a few honest men out of that army of 10,000, but they are cowed and shriveled by the others, who are not good, and the "system." So while the mayor may hug and conjure himself with the statement that he is making, that some of his men are the best in the world in a moral and physical sense, their control and fear by the grafters and the system nullify any good which they may possess. As long as the system is wrong so long will the police force be wrong. Just now New York, legislators, citizens and politicians are suggesting changes in the law, different methods of handling the various departments over which the police have control. All very fine, but apparently a waste of valuable time. The only accessories needed are a few honest, honest and honorable men in the high places, freedom from the grip of Tammany and the equally notorious Republican machine and the change would be wonderful.

THE G. A. R. MEMORIAL.

It has now been some months since a coterie of gentlemen, were appointed a committee to take some action looking towards the establishment of a memorial hall for the veterans of Paul Revere Post, G. A. R. of this city. The Adams Academy building was suggested. Many favored this project, others opposed but all were honest in their convictions and not moved by any bias or prejudice. The committee mentioned, it was understood, was to look into the Academy building proposition, but if this was unavailable they were still pledged to the Memorial building of some kind. It has been some time since a meeting of the general committee has been held. Probably some of the sub-committees have been active along the lines mapped out for them. In the meantime, the Adams Academy building is lying idle. Whether it is finally used for a Grand Army building or not it seems to be too valuable a piece of property to be permitted to go to rack and ruin and no building was ever improved by permitting it to be untenanted for so long, a prey to rats and mice and other animals which may find a home within or between its walls. Something should be done to reclaim the building for some purpose or another before it reaches a hopeless stage of decay and ruin.

FULL PARDON GRANTED FAXON

Washington, Feb. 28.—President Taft commuted the sentence of Harold B. Faxon, sentenced on Nov. 15, 1910, to serve five years in jail for the embezzlement of $7300 from the People's National bank of Roxbury, Mass., and he has been ordered released.

Faxon was arrested at Goldfield, Nev., after he had been sought for seven years by the Boston authorities. The commutation of his sentence was based on Faxon's good character, apart from his trouble with the bank.

Faxon, who is now about 38 years old, lived in Quincy till his departure for the west in 1903, shortly after the shortage of the bank's accounts w discovered.

☞Bernard Fritz & Son, the tailors in the Faxon block, have established a well stocked store for the sale of raincoats, dress suit cases, bags, umbrellas, etc. They invite inspection of their goods which in variety and quality is all that could be desired They have also received choice fabrics for spring and summer suits.

She Took to the Road

By BERTHA L. TOMLINS

All civil wars are terrible, but all civil wars are full of romance. This is because people divided and trying to kill one another brings greater grief than when they fight a foreigner.

Gertrude Milbank, the daughter of a country gentleman of Devonshire, found herself at the time Cromwell became ruler of England under the title of lord protector—her father and two brothers having been killed fighting for their king—an orphan and without any one to lean upon. Her father's estate had been forfeited, and she had no means of sustenance. Reared in luxury she was brought face to face with want.

In that age two professions were practiced by gentlemen, one of which is now obsolete, while the other has been relegated to the criminal classes. These were highway robbery and piracy. The highwayman was a popular character, while Morgan, the most brutally bloodthirsty of pirates, died in England unpunished for his many crimes. At the end of the war that lost Charles I. his kingdom and his head many of the young officers who had fought for him being impoverished took to the road for a living. Gertrude Milbank, bitter against the Roundheads who had beheaded her king, killed her father and brothers and robbed her of her patrimony, having heard of these cases of ex-soldiers turning highwaymen, determined to imitate their example. She stood five feet eight inches and was a marvel of beauty and stateliness. The former did not serve her purpose, for while on the road she was masked, but the latter helped her to maintain the appearance of a man.

Having attired herself in the male costume of the period, her own black hair falling in curls over her broad white lace collar, booted and spurred, mounted on a horse she had ridden constantly since she was a little girl, she sallied forth one starlight night to take a purse. Having waited for some time behind a clump of trees for the passage of a victim she at last heard the sounds of wheels. Her courage was oozing out of her finger ends, but she stopped it by recalling the wrongs of her family and, riding into the road, called upon the coachman to stop. He obeyed, and Gertrude, putting a pistol in through the window of the coach, called out in somewhat tremulous tones:

"Your money or your life!"

There was no reply for a few moments, then a man's voice said: "I have but a few pounds in my pocket, to which you are welcome, sir. But I wear a ring of considerable value which you will be able to turn into money."

"Such liberality," replied Gertrude, "could not come from an accursed Roundhead. You must be a loyal subject of our king across the water; therefore I shall let you pass without tribute, for I will take nothing from one of the king's party."

Gertrude was about to whirl her horse's head around when the man in the coach stopped her.

"You are mistaken," he said. "I would not save my property under false pretenses; I support the protector."

Such action was a surprise to Gertrude, who could not understand why the man should give her information unasked and with it property he might have saved. While she hesitated her victim got out a wallet, took a ring from his finger and handed both to her. She accepted them mechanically, her mind being diverted by the man's strange action.

"You need not take the trouble to raise money from the ring," he added. "It is an heirloom, and I prefer to redeem it."

"I shall not make myself known by calling upon you to do so," replied Gertrude. "Rather keep it."

"Drive on," was the only reply, and this was addressed to the coachman, who whipped up his horses, resuming the journey. As the carriage drove away the man within called out, "I will call upon you when I wish to redeem the ring, Miss Milbank, and will give you thrice what you can get for it elsewhere."

As the coach rolled away Gertrude sat on her horse paralyzed. The man till he spoke the last words disguised his voice and she had not recognized it. She had robbed one to whom when the war broke out she was engaged, but whose father had persuaded him to espouse the cause of the parliament. The son had refused to listen to Gertrude's efforts to retain his loyalty for the king, and when he broke with his king she forced him to break with her. The recognition was quite enough to cure her on its very threshold of any desire to follow the career of a highwayman and, riding back to the cottage she had come from, she divested herself of male attire and resumed her wonted garments.

The next morning she was meditating hiding herself from the man she had robbed and wondering how she could return his property before doing so, when he rode up to her door, dismounted and entered the house.

"I have come to redeem my ring, Gertrude," he said.

"Taking it from her finger, she handed it to him without a word, but intending to refuse his offer of money. Instead of handing her gold he took her hand and placed the ring on her finger.

Then her head sank on his breast.

McDEVITT'S MEMORY FAILS HIM

Pres. Greenwood—Are you certain the money was offered?

Senator McDevitt—That statement (referring to the newspaper article) is true so far as figures are concerned.

Pres. Greenwood—Do you know the man personally?

Senator McDevitt—I do not think that I do.

At this point Speaker Cushing directed that two official stenographers be summoned to take the testimony. Senator Mack suggested that Senator McDevitt should be asked whether he desired to testify.

Speaker Cushing—I don't know that it makes any difference whether he desires to or not.

Senator Mack—You cannot compel him to testify.

Pres. Greenwood—That is true; we cannot at the present time compel him to testify.

Senator McDevitt—I have come here as a matter of courtesy.

Speaker Cushing—The statement in the newspaper article makes the specific statement that he was offered a bribe by a Boston Representative; it is a reflection upon every member of the Legislature and especially upon the Boston members.

Pres. Greenwood—This statement is a very serious matter, and it seems to me that it is the duty of the Rules Committee to find out whether men are walking about the State House corridors offering bribes to Senators. I want to ask you again if you know the name of this man?

Senator McDevitt—I do not recall that I do.

Pres. Greenwood—Do you mean that you have known it, but have forgotten it? You say you can't recall it?

Senator McDevitt—No, I don't know what it is.

Representative Duncan—When did this thing occur?

Senator McDevitt—I should say about a week ago.

Pres. Greenwood—What reason did you have for saying that the man was a Representative from Boston?

After consulting with Senator Mack, Senator McDevitt replied: "I think my statement there covers the point at issue under the present conditions."

Representative Channing Cox of Boston, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, then took a hand in interrogating Senator McDevitt.

"You say in your statement that you were approached in the Senate parlor by a man who was rubbing his hands; that you knew what he wanted, but just to lead him on and see what he would say, you said 'What's the matter with you? Have you got the itch?' Now is that what you said?" asked Cox.

Senator McDevitt—So far as the substance is concerned that is substantially what I said.

Representative Cox—Don't you feel that you owe it to yourself and to the body of which you are a member to give us all the information you can in order that this thing can be cleared up?

Senator McDevitt—I think I have gone quite a ways now.

"Would you know the man if you should see him again?" asked the President of the Senate.

"Probably I wouldn't," replied Senator McDevitt.

Representative Duncan—What was the bill?

Senator McDevitt—I couldn't tell at this time.

Representative Cox—Yet it made such an impression on you that you remembered it for a week, remembered the amount offered and when you were invited to address an audience, that occurred to you as something you ought to say.

Pres. Greenwood—What sort of looking man was he?

Senator McDevitt—I don't think he had a moustache. All the smooth faced members smiled.

Representative Cox—I move that Senator McDevitt be given every opportunity including all the time that he may desire, to enable him to make to this committee such explanation of this matter as he desires.

This motion was adopted unanimously, and Pres. Greenwood said: "It is apparent, Senator McDevitt, that the committee feels that you ought to tell us something more about this. Have you anything further to say?"

At this point of the hearing Senator Mack asked permission to consult with Senator McDevitt in private and together they went into the Speaker's private office.

On return to the hearing room Senator Mack said "the Senator doesn't desire to speak further at this time, but that he would make a further investigation and if he obtained further informaion, which he expected to, he would appear before the committee tomorrow afternoon after adjournment."

Representative Duncan of Clinton, clerk of the Committee on Rules, asked: "Do you appear as this man's counsel?"

Senator Mack replied: "I appear as his counsel."

Representative Duncan—Then let me call your attention to rule 2 of the joint rules which reads, "No member of either branch of the Legislature shall act as counsel."

Senator Mack—Well if I have got to be registered I will get out. I am simply advising this member as a fellow-Senator.

Pres. Greenwood asked what investigation Senator McDevitt had to make when he said in his statement that upon further investigation he found that the man who approached him had no authority.

Senator Mack replied that the man said that he was a member of the House from Boston. "Now he (Senator McDevitt) doesn't know whether he was a member or not. He would like to clean this matter up and if you gentlemen will give him until 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon he may be able to do so or not. He hopes to have some information for you tomorrow night. I simply advise him as a lawyer as to his rights."

Speaker Cushing remarked: "McDevitt has had since Wednesday night tomake his investigation. He has had his opportunity to find out who the person was that addressed him in the Senate reading room. I am against any continuance unless this committee goes to the Legislature for authority to summon witnesses and to administer oaths and then this committee can proceed properly to the bottom of this thing. I make that as a motion."

Representative Michael J. McEttrick said it would be pretty hard for a man who has been in the Legislature as many years as he had to oppose a motion made by a gentleman for whom he entertained the highest respect.

"But I understand," said Mr. McEttrick, "that Senator McDevitt has had no experience, practically. He comes here wholly unprepared and makes one of the poorest witnesses that I have ever seen. Now a statement of this kind should be made calmly and coolly.

"I don't want to see this Legislature plunged into an investigation from which no good can result, as I have seen such investigations several times in the past; no good, but a widespread criticism of the Legislature. I don't know what the real situation is and he (McDevitt) doesn't know. I insist that he be given some time to prepare a statement."

Representative Channing Cox asked what possible exception there could be to McDevitt stating under oath what he knew.

Representative McEttrick said that if Mr. Cox was a member like this man who has had no experience he might see why there should be such an exception.

Representative Alvin E. Bliss remarked that he saw no reason why a man can't tell the truth. That was all he was asked to do.

Representative McEttrick—He does tell the truth, but truth that needs explanation.

Senator Claude L. Allen—If the order goes through, the Senator will have time enough in which to prepare and state what he knows before the investigation begins.

Representative McEttrick—Yes, and you are also thrusting an investigation on this Legislature on a matter which may have nothing at the bottom.

Representative Bothfeld of Newton thought it was proper to give the Senator some time, and they would be doing so by introducing this order in the house.

Senator Blanchard said: "I am inclined to feel somewhat as the gentleman on my right (Mr. McEttrick.) I think that this whole thing is due to the inexperience of this Senator (McDevitt.) He has been before my committee and insulted every man on it, but I laid it to his inexperience.

"I think that Tuesday night, in the excitement of a public meeting, he inadvertently said things that he could not prove. I think if the gentleman shall say that he is sorry, that he made a statement that is without foundation, that would close the incident."

Representative Thomas W. White—I don't wish to persecute or prosecute any man, but when talk gets so loose as it is evident this was, it is time to stop it.

Representative John F. Meaney offered as a substitute motion for Speaker Cushing's that the committee adjourn to 3.30 tomorrow afternoon, and that Senator McDevitt be then given an opportunity to make a statement. Then, if not satisfactory, the committee could proceed under the Speaker's order.

Speaker Cushing said he had hoped that the gentleman would have come before the committee and said that what he had said was not true and that he was sorry for what he had said in a public meeting.

"I cannot stand here as Speaker of the House," he added, "and see members of that body publicly charged with accusations of this kind without demanding the proof or a retraction as publicly made. Unless there is a formal retraction" (here the Speaker struck the desk emphatically,) "or the proof of the charges offered to this committee, we will carry this thing through to the end."

"TRYING TO BE BRAVE"

Lady Scott Meets Brother and Commander Evans In New Zealand

Wellington, N. Z., Feb. 28.—Lady Scott, widow of the Antarctic explorer, arrived here on board the Aorangi, on which she had embarked for the purpose of coming to New Zealand to meet her husband on his expected return from the South Pole.

Lady Scott heard of the fate he had suffered while she was in mid-ocean, off Fiji. As soon as she had recovered from the first shock she said: "I must be brave as by husband would like to have me."

Her brother, Lieutant Bruce, and Commander Evans of the British navy, who brought back the news from the Antarctic, met Lady Scott on the pier. She appears to be bearing up bravely under the blow.

Eleven Fresh Counts Against Deposed New York Police Inspector

New York, Feb. 28.—Eleven new indictmenst against Dennis Sweeney, deposed police inspector, covering various phases of his alleged activities as a receiver of graft, were returned by the grand jury. Sweeney was already under indictment for bribery.

The new indictments, which superceded the old, were based, it was said, mainly upon testimony of Ashley Shea, a poolroom keeper and self-confessed collector of graft in Sweeney's district.

TURKEY LOOKING FOR PEACE

Willing to Negotiate on Basis of Giving Up Adrianople

London, Feb. 28.—Turkey has once more signified her readiness to negotiate for peace with Bulgaria, this time on the basis of including the cession of Adrianople.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN

BOSTON AND VICINITY

SHUBERT THEATRE.

Monday night at the Shubert Theatre, Boston playgoers are promised the most important dramatic event of the season in the appearance of the unusual company of stage favorites interpreting "Ready Money," the comedy by James Montgomery, with original Maxine Elliott Theatre cast.

"Ready Money" is a smart comedy, containing strong dramatic scenes and many original ideas new to present plays. Its comedy is described as being up to the minute and said to contain the "punch" of a play intended to land in the front ranks of popularity. Its author was connected with "Brewster's Millions," "The Fortune Hunter" and "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford," and in "Ready Money" has given to the stage a new play of modern love and finance based upon a new idea. How Stephen Baird, a young mining operator, down in his luck and stripped to his last penny and with the chance of losing the girl he loves, suddenly, through the flashing of a roll of fifty one-thousand dollar bills, turns the tide of his fortunes and involves himself, his friends and his fiancee into a remarkable series of mixups and misunderstandings is told in the story.

"If you've got money, you don't have to spend it. All you have to do is to show it," says one of the characters.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Never before in the history of amusements has any attraction created a greater sensation than the new Thomas A. Edison Talking Motion Pictures, which were placed on exhibition for the first time in Boston at B. F. Keith's Theatre last Monday. This latest invention of Mr. Edison's may well be called the greatest wonder of the twentieth century. It is the acme of realism, and the perfect synchronization of sound and action. B. F. Keith's Theatre has been packed to the doors at every performance, and the wonderful Talking Pictures are the talk of all New England. For the second week a complete change of program will be presented, new subjects and new artists appearing in the wonderful pictures. The vaudeville show announced for next week is of the real all-star variety. Gus Edwards' Kid Kabaret, presented by Eddie Kantor, Hattie Kneitel, and a company of twenty clever kid comics, will present a musical frolic called "A Kid Kabaret In Kidland," abounding in music, songs, imitations, and a number of striking novelties never before offered in vaudeville. Another important feature will be the return after two years absence of Lillian Shaw, the character comedienne, who brings a fresh repertoire of songs new to Boston audiences. Will H. Murphy and Blanche Nichols will present their immortal travesty, "The School For Acting," which is nothing but one long riot of merriment from start to finish. Hugo Herzog's Eight Russion Stallions will be a great feature for the lovers of animals.

BOSTON THEATRE.

The last weeks of the most wonderful dramatic success known to New England, "The Garden of Allah" is announced by the management of the Boston Theatre. The play which is a dramatization of the novel of that name by Robert Hichens and Mary Anderson Navarro is the superlative effort by the greatest American producing manager, Mr. George C. Tyler, head o fthe producing firm of The Liebler Company, who made three separate trips to Morocco to obtain correct scenic environments and atmosphere for this play. A troupe of Arabs from the Desert including a Mohammedan Priest, several aides to Rasuila, the famous bandit, and other noted figures of the Desert were brought over to this country. Madame Faddma, a famous dancer of the Ouled Nailes Tribe of Arabs was also imported. The play, which now enters upon its seventh week at the Boston Theatre has proven one of the sensations of the theatrical season. Few among the many distinguished managers of America, excepting George C. Tyler, would have undertaken, under any conditions, so tremendous a task as staging "The Garden of Allah" none certainly, could have carried it to a more successful conclusion.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"Believe Me, Xantippe" grows steadily in popularity at the Castle Square. Its seventh week begins on Monday, and in its constant succession of comedy scenes the large audiences will continue to find occasion for plenty of laughter. Through each of its acts and scenes the humor of this latest Harvard prize play persists, and the occasional touches of melodrama and exciting incidents give it an added interest. The scene in the Rocky mountain shack is remarkable for its mingling of comedy and humor, and there is never a moment in the play when the adventures of George MacFarland cease to be followed with the keenest enjoyment. And the acting is clever as the play. Donald Meek is winning praise for the character of Arthur Sole, and Frederick Ormonde, who now appears in Mr. Meek's original role of Simp Calloway, is being cordially received. With Mr. Craig, Mr. Walker, Mr. Trader and Miss Young in the other leading parts, the performance is in every way excellent.

ALPHABETICAL SUPPER

the world is incapable of understanding. Jesus knew what was coming and he felt it keenly. He was trying to teach the disciples but their minds could not grasp the situation. When they questioned, "Who is to be greatest, who is to be the head?" He said, "in my kingdom the order is reversed, not to be great and rule but to serve." Not he who governs but he who serves is the greatest in my kingdom. Is it not well we understand again the story of his life and class? A great man is great because his soul is great. A small soul is hurt because of his vanity, for we have not that view-point that Jesus took symbol of service, symbol of love. I do not know of any truth more sacred than the truth of that upper room. It convinces beyond all power and doubt. We are grateful for what took place there. Let us go to that room for inspiration, that we may derive stronger faith and closer fellowship with Jesus. Many we be imbued with His gentleness and be made great in humility."

DISTRICT COURT.

The continued cases of Frank Chanille, Guide Perznandi, Robert LaPenna and Carmen Salahini of Braintree for disturbing the peace were called and they paid the fine of $10 each imposed.

George S. Corliss was fined $50 for keeping and exposing liquor for sale at Weymouth. He appealed and was held in $300 for the grand jury.

GENERAL STRIKE ORDERED

Nine Thousand Garment Workers May Go Out In Boston

Boston, Feb. 28.—A general strike that will affect about 9000 shirtwaist, cloak and dressmakers was called at 10 o'clock this morning.

Internationad officers of the Ladies' Garment Workers union held conferences in this city yesterday with the officers of the local unions, and the decision to call a general strike was made.

Circulars ordering the strike were distributed by a committee of 40 girls who began their distributions at 6 o'clock this morning. Fifty men members of the Cloak Makers' union aided the girls.

ANOTHER POSSIBILITY

McReynolds Slated For Attorney General In the Wilson Cabinet

New York, Feb. 28.—James C. McReynolds, special assistant to the attorney general of the United States, engaged in prosecuting the latest suit the government has started against the anthracite combination, has been selected by President-elect Wilson for the position of attorney general, according to dispatches from Washington.

McReynolds would not say, however, whether the position at the head of the department of justice had been offered him or whether he would accept if it was offered.

Missing Girl's Body Found

Pawtucket, R. I., Feb. 28.—Robert and James McKee, cutting ice on Old river, Lonsdale, found the body of 10-year-old Amanda Souci, who disappeared from her home in Lonsdale Jan. 9.

—The printing of the inventory of all taxable property in the reports of the towns of Milford, Amherst and Mount Vernon, N. H. which will be bound up with the annual report and distributed at town meeting time, will add greatly to the interest in that otherwise all important publication. Inasmuch as many changes have been made in the valuations of property by nearly all boards of selectmen this feature of the forthcoming reports will be scanned with much interest. Quincy reports are also to have this feature this year.

WINNING FRIENDS FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE

While the suffragists of Great Britain are devoting their efforts to arson, bomb-throwing and window-smashing, their sisters in the United States are working in a quieter but perhaps more effective way to win friends for the "cause." The photograph shows a number of well-known Washington women distributing handbills and arguments in the streets.

RED HAIR ALWAYS DISLIKED

With the Exception of the Romans, Ancient Peoples Had Strong Aversion to It.

Red is the fashionable color of woman's hair just now, but in many periods and countries to have red hair meant to test the depths of misfortune, even of death.

Prejudice against red hair runs back even to Egyptian times, for in that land of decided opinions and strong prejudices it was the custom to burn alive some unfortunate individual cursed with red hair, so it was decidedly uncomfortable to have red hair in Egypt, as no one knew whose turn would come next.

That the Chinese shared this prejudice against red hair is proved by their epithet for the English, whom they called "red-haired barbarians" or "red-haired devils."

The great exception to this rule among ancient nations is the Romans, for since the time of Nero they have praised red hair in the highest terms. They preferred a dark red, almost brown, such as we term auburn, and modern Romans share this liking. It is said that among the patrician families of Rome and Florence there is an abnormally large number of red-haired women. Modern Greeks share this predilection with the Romans and they highten the reddish effect of the hair by wearing dull gold ornaments.

One of the most frequent causes of the prejudice against red hair in Christian countries undoubtedly goes back to the tradition that Judas, the betrayer of Jesus, had red hair, and most of the artists paint him thus. Shakespeare refers to this in "As You Yike It," when Rosalind says of Orlando, "His very hair is of the dissembling color," and Celia answers: "Something browner than Judas."

The Brahmins were forbidden to marry red-haired women and, as has been said: "The populace of most countries, confounding moral with esthetic impressions, accuse red-haired people of various shortcomings."

Besides the old tradition of Judas having been red-haired aiding to create the prejudice existing in many lands the fact of the feeling against red hair in England is set down to the red-haired Danes, who could not be regarded save as invaders and barbarians.

That Furrowed Brow.

It seems almost as if we modern folk studied deliberately to appear ill-tempered in the eyes of our fellow-beings, fearing lest a relaxation from our habitual frown should lower us in the esteem of those we meet. Yet surely the opposite should be the case. The sour expression is that of the beaten woman, the failure. The well-to-do, the successful, should, of all people, be the happier.

There is nothing undignified in a smile; one should not be ashamed of a light heart and a clear conscience. But the world has created a tradition that the cares of responsibility must be marked by a furrowed brow. It finds the women with a merry laugh, in business hours certainly, a woman to be treated with caution. "This woman laughs," says the world, in effect; "she cannot be a sound woman; she is too frivolous."

Dull, dour and unbending, the world, our world, plods on its way, hoarding its smiles for fear of its dignity, until at last it forgets to smile altogether. Generations of scowling faces have taught us to usspect the smiling ones. We fear their owners are endeavoring to ingratiate themselves with us for no good purpose. To regard things cheerfully is to betray a lack of solidarity and worth.

—We do not believe the average American man, even if he favors woman suffrage on general principles, will have a particle of sympathy for the methods used by its advocates in England. If similar methods were adopted in this country it would mean the death of the movement in the United States beyond the hope of resurrection.—Waltham Free Press.

HOME MADE GOWNS.

Little Frocks of Summer Fabrics That are in Demand Long Before Warm Weather Arrives—New Trimming Wrinkles.

At this time of year there is apt to be a clever little dressmaker busy upstairs in the sewing room refurbishing the party and dinner gowns, that are now doing yeoman's service, and making up pretty, simple frocks of the Summer materials that are so irresistibly pretty as shown at all the fashionable shops.

NEW COTTONS.

All the best stores here in New York, and up-to-date stores all over the country, for that matter, are making most attractive displays of latest cotton dress materials. All the fashionable weaves, colors, and designs are shown in poplins, galateas, piques zephyrs, batistes, voiles, crepes, silk mulls and ratines. These are only a few of the many varieties of cotton goods that have the name "Bontex" woven in their selvage as a guarantee of style and quality. The name itself is French and means a "Good Textile," that can be depended upon Whether its price is 10 cents or $3.50 a yard, so that a woman can be sure of getting the right kind of cotton for any purpose desired.

NOVEL TRIMMINGS.

One of the promises of the new season is a trimming of satin buttons and bindings on cotton fabrics. A recent model of white cotton voile shows rows of black satin buttons down the front with extended loops. A fichu bordered with black satin is caught by a buckle both front and back.

VESTS AND PANELS.

Vests and panels offer opportunity for clever touches of contrasting materials and colors. Sleeves are apt to be two part affairs, the long cuff, or upper of fancy embroidered or patterned stuff. Aeroplane bows which are endless affairs softly draped are responsible for catching together the edges of the dress over a panel, and clinging flounces overlapping one another are fashionably indorsed since they do not seem to break the long straight lines that are to continue the ruling mode. Bayadere effects of all sorts both on waists and skirts are becoming alike to full and slender figures, while wool embroideries of the sort used in upholstery departments are sparingly but fetchingly employed for contrast.

AN INAUGURATION GOWN.

Among the Nellrose silks which come in a great variety of styles and in all fashionable colorings as well as in the original shade named in honor of Miss Eleanor Wilson, daughter of the coming head of the Nation, there are beautiful brocades, and satins that will remain first favorites for handsome combinations as well as for whole suits and gowns. One can find in these silks only the very latest and most desirable ideas in weaves and newest and most varied colorings. The Andre silk mill at Norfolk, Va. has woven the dress that Miss Wilson will wear at the inauguration festivities next March, and a celebrated New York dressmaker is designing and making the gown which will cost $650 and be in every way worthy of its producers and of the charming wearer, one of the most interesting members of an exceptionally attractive Presidential family.

The above designs are by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

Dress of malvern ratine in black and white with collar and vest of gray blue Nellrose satin. Sash and buttons of same satin in darker tone. Frills and plastron of shadow lace.

MEANS DRY SUNDAYS

"Raines Law Sandwich" Receives a Death Blow in New York

New York, Feb. 28.—There is mourning in the "white light" district today. And all because the appellate division of the supreme court has placed a ban on the "Raines law sandwich" as a full meal.

Heretofore the sandwiches, properly dusted, have done duty Sunday after Sunday, their presence on the table being considered sufficient service of a meal under the law to permit hotel proprietors to purvey unlimited drinks. But there will be nothing doing in the future. A meal must be ordered if a drink is to be had.

RUSSELL RESIGNS

Head of Matteawan Who Said Lawyer Offered Him a Bribe

Albany, Feb. 28.—Dr. John W. Russell resigned as superintendent of the Matteawan state hospital for the criminal insane. His resignation was accepted by Joseph F. Scott, superintendent of state prisons.

Dr. Russell had accused a New York lawyer named Ashut of offering him a bribe of $20,000 if he would bring about the release of Harry K. Thaw.

HONOR TO OLD GLORY

Bill to Prevent Desecration of Flag Is Passed by the Senate

Washington, Feb. 28.—The senate passed Senator Webb's bill to prevent the desecration of the American flag.

The measure would prohibit the placing of any word, figure, mark, picture or design upon any flag, standard or ensign of the United States, and provides a fine of $500 or imprisonment for not more than six months for such desecration.

The bill also would prohibit the mutilation of the American flag.

NEW REVOLT IS ON IN MEXICO

"Constitutionalist" Party Is Formed by Madero's Friends

CONTROL A LARGE TERRITORY

Assert That Constitution Has Been Disregarded at Mexico City—Fighting Is General In States Where Maderist Troops Are Aiming to Oppose Rule of New Government

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 28.—"Constitutionalists" is the name adopted by the latest revolution party in Mexico. Reports reached here of operations by the constitutionalists at various points in the state of Chihuahua. Ranches and mining camps were raided in the district along the Mexico Northwestern railway east of Chihuahua City.

Most of the new rebels are former federal volunteers who served as insurrectos in Madero's revolution. They are ranchmen and mountaineers from the districts of Casas Grandes and Guerrero, where the Maderist revolt was born. Now their warcry is for the constitution, which they assert has been disregarded at the national capital. They propose to assist the volunteers of Sonora state in the revolt against the party in power at Mexico City.

Maderistas have attacked and annihilated a small federal garrison at Concha, Chihuahua, according to advices received here. Twenty federals are said to have been slain.

Other advices indicate the Maderistas now control practically all the country along the Mexican Central railroad from near Chihuahua City to Torreon, and hundreds of Mexicans are said to be joining them.

Pancho Villa, former bandit and commander of the rurales in Chihuahua state under Madero, who joined Orozco's revolution and then returned to Madero's cause, has crossed into Mexico and is at the head of a Maderista force moving to the south. For several weeks Villa has been a refugee in El Paso.

Villa is reported to be seeking vengeance for the death of his former chief. He has a strong following which is expected to join him in the western border state.

Passengers arriving from Chihuahua City report all quiet with no armed opposition to the military government. The trial of Abraham Gonzales, the elected governor, charged with sedition, is progressing slowly.

Fighting is general throughout the states of Sonora, Coahuila and Morelos.

Jose Marytonera, who resigned the governorship of Sonora two days ago, has fled and is reported to have come to the American side. He had led the Maderista revolt in the state, but had been siezed with panic when the state congress declared war on the Huerta government and fighting started in Hermosillo, the state capital.

Maderista troops are being armed and put in the field at practically every town in the state. In Coahuila, Raoul Madero and Governor Carranza are at the head of rebellious forces which already have captured Saltillo, the state capital.

The Maderistas as yet are without a leader and appear to be in arms more to avenge President Madero's death than to establish a new government.

Battle Near Texas Border

Eagle Pass, Tex., Feb. 28.—Loyal troops from Lampasas engaged the revolutionary force of Governor Carranza of the state of Coahuila, near Monclova, 150 miles south of the border, yesterday afternoon, according to advices received here.

The dispatch related briefly that a battle was in progress and the fighting was desperate, but did not state the number of men engaged or if either of the forces had gained an advantage.

A dispatch from Cuatro Cienegas, near Monclova, reports that the rubber company located there, controlled by German capital, has been forced to subscribe $5000 to the cause of maintaining constitutional government in Mexico.

HOOK FOR HAYWOOD

Ousted by Socialists Because of Recent Utterances on Labor

New York, Feb. 28.—In a nation-wide vote of all the dues-paying members of the party, William D. Haywood, head of the Industrial Workers of the World, has been recalled from the national executive committee of the Socialist party.

The result of the vote was announced by John N. Work, national secretary of the party. He said that the count showed 22,500 votes against Haywood and 11,000 for him.

Utterances made by Haywood in favor of direct action, the general strike and sabotage, led to the movement, it was said, to oust him from the executive committee.

AUTO BANDITS CONVICTED

Eighteen Receive Sentences Ranging From Death to Year In Prison

Paris, Feb. 28.—The trial of the twenty-two auto bandits who held Paris in terror for months has ended, after occupying the court for twenty-one days, with a verdict of guilty against eighteen of them on counts including murder, arson, robbery and many other felonies. Four of the accused, including three women accomplices, were found not guilty.

Four of the bandits were sentenced to death. All are self-confessed anarchists. Two others were sentenced to penal servitude for life. Twelve others got one year apiece.

Among the indictments brought against the prisoners were no fewer than twenty-two murders, their victims being motor drivers, bank messengers, freight agents and policemen. They held up a number of suburban banks, broke into the residences of prominent people, killed the chief of the Paris detectives, set fire to buildings, and finally, when their two leaders, Bennot and Garnier, were in danger of arrest, underwent two sieges in the environs of Paris.

COMES A LITTLE LATE

Morgan Company Enters Denial of Existence of Money Trust

Washington, Feb. 28.—A general denial of the existence, or possibility, of a "money trust" was presented to the house money trust committee in a long letter from J. P. Morgan & Co., at the invitation of the committee.

Upon receipt of the Morgan letter Chairman Pujo gave out a letter written to Morgan & Co., saying that the invitation to Morgan & Co. had been extended Jan. 27 and that the committee had been at work on its report for a month. "Your memorandum," the reply concluded, "manifestly comes too late to be of value."

The Morgan letter laid at the door of the present banking and currency laws the responsibility for any "concentration of money and credit that may exist."

Nothing Else to Do—Got Married

New York, Feb. 28.—Gaiele Bryce, actress and former manager of a beauty parlor in Boston, suing for divorce, said she married Frank White because she had nothing else to do that day. She got a decree.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

LEWIS CHOSEN SENATOR

Illinois Democrats Steal a March on Republicans and Progressives

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 28.—A ruse by Speaker McKinley to elect J. Hamilton Lewis, Democrat, to the long-term senatorship was sprung yesterday afternoon. McKinley, after the first ballot had been taken and most of the members had left their seats, called for a second ballot.

The second rollcall showed that Lewis had received sixty-six votes and he was declared elected United States senator. McKinley had taken the Republicans and Progressives by surprise.

PROPOSES TO VISIT THE CAPITOL DAILY

Washington Legislators Stirred by Plan of Wilson

Washington, Feb. 28.—Lively discussion was precipitated in congressional circles by a published statement credited to President-elect Wilson, that he intended to spend part of every working day in the president's room at the Capitol to keep in closer touch with legislative affairs.

Such action on the part of the president would overturn a precedent which has restricted the president's visit to the Capitol to the last hours of a session of congress.

Democratis leaders discussed the reported plan of Wilson with reluctance, though many seemed to favor it, while others qualified their expression.

TELEGRAPHERS WIN FIGHT

Men Suspended by Boston and Maine to Be Reinstated

Portland, Me., Feb. 28.—After several hearings and a lively campaign on the part of a committee representing the railroad telegraphers and station agents, the Boston and Maine officials have decided to reinstate Station Agent Scott at West Ossipee and Herbert Emery as operator at Conway Junction.

Scott was suspended when he declined to work short handed, owing to the station help being reduced to save expenses. Emery was dropped on short notice while engaged as operator at Spinney's switch because he refused to work long hours waiting for his relief. These reinstatements are considered a decided victory for the Order of Railway Telegraphers.

Former Athlete Crushed to Death

Philadelphia, Feb. 28.—Edward J. Williams, who played halfback on the Swarthmore college football team in 1905 and held the middle Atlantic record in the 300-yard sprint for several years, was crushed to death when an elevator pulley fell upon him at a building operation which he was superintending.

Slayer of Marsh Is Guilty of First Degree Murder

CALMLY HEARS THE VERDICT

Apparently Less Concerned Than Men Who Pronounced It—Declares Death Preferable to Rotting In Jail For Life—Outline of Claims of Each Side In Summing Up

Salem, Mass., Feb. 28.—William A. Dorr was convicted of the murder of George E. Marsh, a wealthy Lynn soap manufacturer.

"Guilty of murder in the first degree." These words formed themselves on the drawn lips of a jury foreman. Dorr strained against a steel-barred cage. A moment of tense silence, then Judge Quinn thanked twelve jurymen for their patience, care and interest in performing a disagreeable duty.

The Essex county court was adjourned for the day. The steel door of a prisoner's cage swung open and a young man doomed to the electric chair took his place between two court officers to be led away to a jail cell.

The most dramatic murder trial in the criminal annals of the commonwealth was at an end and William A. Dorr stood a murderer in the eyes of the law.

"I'm glad they made it first degree, instead of second. Now I won't have to rot away in prison," was Dorr's comment as he left the courtroom.

When the verdict was pronounced its effect upon the prisoner scarcely could be noticed. His hands clutched tightly the steel railing. His body momentarily strained against the cage front. Then in a flash he was again the calm, cool, extraordinary man. The noticeable effect of the verdict had passed and whatever effect remained was contained within him.

When his senior counsel, C. N. Barney, came to his side, a smile overspread the prisoner's face. It broadened as he made a remark to his attorney. Then the prisoner was led from the courtroom, apparently less concerned at the verdict than were the men who had pronounced it.

It was at that point that he remarked concerning the verdict and of his preference of death in the electric chair to confinement for life in a prison.

The jurymen were less than two hours in deliberating on the case. Their first ballot, according to report, stood 11 to 1 for first degree guilt, and the one man who held out against the others favored a second degree conviction. The agreement came on the second ballot.

Under the law sentence cannot be pronounced for twenty days, within which time the attorneys for the defendant are privileged to file for action the exceptions noted during the case. Barney has saved several exceptions, but he would not say what further action he would take.

District Attorney Attwill in summing up said the death of Marsh was a cruel murder, deliberately planned by Dorr, who believed that with Marsh out of the way he would profit by a legacy which would revert to his aunt upon Marsh's death.

The defense claimed the estate in question was so involved that the death of Marsh would leave Dorr's aunt with nothing; that Dorr knew this and came east for the purpose of securing Marsh's aid in putting his aunt's affairs in shape. They claimed the killing of the aged soap manufacturer was in self-defense and that it occurred in Suffolk county and not within the jurisdiction of an Essex county jury.

Jurge Quinn's charge to the jury gave the case of the defendant equal consideration with that given the case of the prosecution. Dorr is unmarried. He has a mother and two sisters. He was 30 years old Sunday.

HAPPY HOURS IN THE HOUSE

Statesmen Making Best of Winding Up Business

IMPORTANT WORK IS ON HAND

But Representatives Find Time to "Take a Fall" Out of Boston and Bostonians and Attack Passing Presidents—Action of Money Trust Probers Comes In For Criticism

Washington, Feb. 28.—With its hours numbered and much important work yet to do, both houses of congress began session long before noon yesterday. The senate, which sat till after midnight, was admittedly sleepy. The house was in high spirits and began with anecdote and quip, considerably to the detriment of the business before it.

Representative Moore of Pennsylvania, speaking nominally on the general deficiency bill, "took a fall" out of Louis D. Brandeis of Boston, to whom he referred, not by name, but as the prosecuting attorney in the house investigation into the Shoe Machinery company, and as a man who, being mentioned for the cabinet, is being opposed by New Englanders because he takes fees from both sides.

This brought Representative Allen of Ohio to his feet with an anecdote about the crooked streets of Boston. The point of the story was that when Boston is as dead as Philadelphia its streets will be laid out as well.

Representative Heflin, the Alabama orator, next took the floor, and not an interruption was suffered till he had concluded a five-minute diatribe against the "fat man of the Philippines" and the "wild man from Africa," both of whom, Heflin maintained, now pass from public life.

It is evident congress is making the best of the tedious job of getting through the laborious details of the last days of the session. The weather has turned wet and sultry, and real interest is in the cabinet, inauguration, and the "new deal" which the new administration will next week bring to Washington.

Samuel Untermyer's retention as counsel for the house money trust investigation committee came in for sharp condemnation during debate. Representative Martin of South Dakota attacked the appointment of Untermyer and the entire conduct of the investigation.

"This committee," he said, "has engaged in an Untermyer investigation and is now preparing an Untermyer report. It seems very strange to me that the banking and currency committee of this house, with the many lawyers in its membership, should find it necessary to go outside to secure a lawyer."

Representative Moore of Pennsylvania referred to the action of the Pujo committee in securing Untermyer as "the champion of the common people. He has been taken by the Democrats as their champion in the holy cause of the common people," he shouted. "He is a member of a firm of attorneys for the great brewery, mining, industrial and railroad corporations—a distinguished champion of the common people, who have been ground beneath the iron heel of corporate greed."

Representative Fitzgerald of New York defended Untermyer, declaring his examination of witnesses before the money trust committee had been conducted with deference and good results.

The Kitchen Cupboard

BUCKWHEAT CAKES.

BUCKWHEAT has more heat giving elements than wheat. It should be used, then, in cold weather. As it is a trifle hard to digest, after eating buckwheat cakes one should exercise a little. These griddle cakes are all right for those who work hard or exercise a great deal, but sedentary persons should partake of them sparingly.

Nice Brown Cakes.

Buckwheat cakes brown better when prepared with boiling milk instead of water. To make them light and tender the cakes require the addition of baking soda just before they are baked.

If you wish only a moderate quantity of the griddle cakes try these proportions:

Mother's Buckwheat Cakes.—Take a pint of boiling milk and pour it on half a cupful of yellow cornmeal which has been sifted fine with half a teaspoonful of salt. Stir well together and allow to become lukewarm, then add half a cupful of sifted flour and half a cupful of buckwheat. Then mix well with a cupful of yeast. Cover the bowl in which the batter has been mixed and stand in a warm place to rise until morning. When ready to bake mix in a saltspoonful of baking soda.

A Hasty Breakfast Dish.

Quick Buckwheat Cakes.—These are mixed with water and so are less expensive than the others. The molasses used in this recipe is supposed to make them brown. Take a pint and a half of buckwheat, a cupful each of yellow cornmeal and flour. Stir these together, then add three heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a teaspoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of molasses. Mix to a batter with water, not too cold. The cakes should be mixed just before they are needed for baking.

Toothsome Pancakes.

Buckwheat Pancakes.—These proportions will provide enough for a large family. Take a quart of buckwheat flour, add to it half a pint of cornmeal and a tablespoonful of salt. Mix a cupful of cold milk with three cupfuls of hot water and when lukewarm stir it slowly into the dry ingredients to prevent lumping. Beat till smooth, add a yeast cake dissolved in tepid water and continue beating five minutes. Put aside to rise. Before baking in the morning mix an even teaspoonful of soda in a cupful of warm milk and beat into the batter, which should form in bubbles. Pour the batter on to a hot greased griddle in small, round cakes. They should be a rich brown when baked. Serve with fresh butter and hot maple sirup.

SALLY LUNNS.

SALLY LUNNS are made very much like muffins. Yeast is generally used for raising them instead of baking powder. They are popular for breakfast. Quickly made by using baking powder for raising them, they are also available for tea.

Delicious Hot Breads.

Southern Sally Lunns.—Take a cupful each of scalded milk, boiled water and butter mixed with lard, a half cupful of lukewarm water, a half cake of compressed yeast, three cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of salt and a quart of milk. The milk, yeast, water and three cupfuls of flour should be mixed together and then stood aside to rise. When light put in the eggs, the shortening, the salt and the rest of the flour. Beat well and pour into the pans. Bake and serve hot.

Quick Sally Lunns.—Take one cupful each of flour and milk, a teaspoonful each of baking powder, salt, melted butter and one egg. Sift the flour, baking powder and salt into a bowl, add the milk, a well beaten egg and butter, mix well and pour into a baking pan which has been brushed with lard. Bake in a hot oven for twenty minutes. Cut in squares and serve hot.

Tea Cakes.

Sally Lunn Tea Cakes.—Take two tablespoonfuls each of butter and sugar and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Place in a bowl and pour in one cupful of scalded milk. When lukewarm add one-half cake of yeast dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of lukewarm water, three well beaten eggs and enough sifted flour to make a stiff batter. The amount required is about two and one-fourth cupfuls. Cover and let rise until very light. Pour into buttered tins, again let rise and bake in a quick oven.

English Sally Lunns.—Take three-quarters of a pound of flour, half a teaspoonful of salt, one ounce of butter, half an ounce of compressed yeast, one egg, one and a half gills of milk and a quarter of a teaspoonful of sugar. Mix the flour and salt, then add the butter. Rub the yeast and sugar together until they are liquid. Warm the milk till just tepid and mix it with the yeast. Beat up the egg and add it to the milk, then strain the milk and other ingredients into the middle of the flour and mix. Turn on a floured board and knead lightly, using a little flour to prevent sticking. Grease two high, round cake pans. Divide the dough in two, make into round cakes and put in the pans. Twist a piece of greased paper over the tops and set them in a warm place to rise till the dough fills the pans. Then bake in a quick oven half an hour, turn out and brush over with a little warm milk and butter.

RANTOUL DIVORCE CASE

Woman Gets Children and Alimony Until Suit Is Resumed

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 28.—Mrs. Lois B. Rantoul, granddaughter of James Russell Lowell, was awarded by Judge Hall in the superior court here the custody of her two children and $150 a month alimony from Edward L. Rantoul. In addition, her husband, scion of a prominent family, must pay her a substantial sum in cash to repay her for the expense of caring for their children since they separated in May of last year.

It is expressely provided in the agreement incorporated in Hall's decree that nothing shall be said to the children, nor may they be permitted to hear anything, which would tend to diminish their respect and affection for either parent while with the other.

If she has recovered her health by that time and her physicians will permit it, Mrs. Rantoul is planning to resume her suit for divorce from Edward L. Rantoul, on allegations of cruel and abusive treatment, in February of next year.

Yesterday's decree is pendente lite—that is, it is merely to preserve the status quo until Mrs. Rantoul's divorce libel comes up for trial again.

JAIL FOR BONDSMAN

Convicted of Larceny of $600 From Widow of "Big Jack" Zelig

Boston, Feb. 28.—Henry K. Friedman of Chelsea, a professional bondsman, was found guilty by Judge Ely in the police court on a charge of the larceny of $600 from Mrs. Henriettta Zelig, widow of "Big Jack" Zelig, who was shot dead in a street car by "Red" Phil Davidson last October.

Friedman was sentenced to fifteen months in the house of correction. He appealed and was held in $1500 bonds, which he furnished, for trial at the March term of the superior court.

The trial came about as the result of Friedman refusing to pay Mrs. Zelig the money after he had promised in a lawyer's office to pay the money in four weeks, in December last.

PRISON REFORM IS URGED BY GOVERNOR

Foss Sends Message to Legislature on the Subject

Boston, Feb. 28.—Governor Foss took up one branch of the subject of prison reform when he sent to the legislature a message urging the passage of a bill which shall require the court to suspend sentence in order that poor persons shall not be required to serve jail sentences because of their inability to pay fines.

In 1911, he says, 11,550 persons were sent to jail because of their inability to pay fines, although their cases were, as a whole, no different in character from those in which confinement was escaped by the payment of a fine.

The American Lady Shoes Are an Exceptional Value

Sometimes a woman thinks she must take a pair of shoes in the first store she visits, whether the shoes are just what she wants or not. They dislike leaving empty handed.

Wisdom says, "Go to a store where the choice of shoes at your price can be found." If you plan to spend $3 or more, the American Lady Shoe has the style that you will like, in all kinds of leather. They are the equal of shoes that sell for more in the Boston stores, and our service will be satisfactory and interested.

WINNING STREAK IS CONTINUED

Both Quincy Teams Win From North Dorchester

FIRST PERIODS GEMS

As usual the Quincy A. A. "Champs" of the Greater Boston league won both games against North Dorchester at St. Mary's hall Thursday evening. The senior team won 32 to 16 and the second team 47 to 14. "Bill" Coady referred and his impartial and strict interpretation of the rules resulted in a large number of fouls being called on Quincy. The violations were of a minor nature and the referee probably figured that others had allowed the champs to cultivate habits which were not in strict accord with the rules and that if allowed to continue them their game might be spoiled.

In the first half of the first game the Quincys led 15 to 11. The visitors scored but one basket, O'Connor shooting nine and missing two free tries. In the second half the local boys stiffened their defense and scored at will while the North Dorchesters were unable to do anything.

In the first half of the second game Quincy led 12 to 11. Kelley also shot nine fouls for the visitors, missing three. In the second period the Quincy Juniors opened up a lead which stopped at 47 points while the visitors only scored one basket and one foul.

Powell of East Milton played centre and did well throughout the game. He and Dan Duggan had a few friendly tusseles.

The other players dropped their individual efforts after a while and in the fine exhibition of team work that followed all took an active part and reaped the collective honors.

The first periods of both games was admittedly the best that have been played here this season and few recall any better plays in past games.

"Booty" Chapman who has been ill at his home is reported as rapidly improving. He had a slight attack of pneumonia. General sympathy was expressed by the fans Thursday evening.

"Nedzo" Bennett was in his place and played a strong game. His passing was of good order.

SYMPOSIUM OF BOWLING

Regular, Special and Women Matches at the Alleys

SOME GOOD SCORES

Bowling all over the district was on Thursday evening's card.

At the Coliseum alleys the Quincy Girls beat the Chauncey Girls, 4 to 0. The attempt of the visitors to average their defeat at Boston was fruitlass, none of their bowling coming up to the showing made by the Quincy Girls. Mrs. Paul Poehler was high with a single of 93 and total of 251.

The Coliseum Specials defeated a team from the Arch street, Boston, alleys, 3 to 1. Gregg of the visitors rolled 127 on his first strings. Visions of a severe defeat faded only after he had dropped to 97 and 86. His total was 310.

The Car Men and the Police Men had an encounter which developed more good natured joshing than any match yet rolled. George W. Ford made high single of 129 after pretty rolling.

John Casey smashed the bunch for 115. The Police Men did not reach their established bowling standard, none of the singles reaching 100. Thorne was the officer who rolled 99 and Canavan made a high single of 98. More matches will follow and if the intentions of the Guardians of the Peace are carried out they will send in a wagon call and clean up the Car Men. Otherwise the Car Men will again collect the fares.

In the Foresters League at the Coliseum, Court John Adams beat Court Roger Wolcott, 4 to 0. Riepke made high single of 112. Both he and George Hastings, anchor men on the teams tied for high total at 305.

At Burrells Alley, Weymouth, John Ericson Court beat Monatiquot, 3 to 1. C. Ericson made 109. Smith rolled high total of 277.

At the City Square Alleys in the City league the Melon Chopee beat the Gilt Edges, 3 to 1. Kelly had high single of 102. Best total of 271 was made by Skinner.

At St. Mary's hall the newly organized West Quincy league again made good. Hall Place team is in leading position, winning eight and losing none. Bates Avenue beat the North Common 4 to 0. ### SUNDAY SCHOOL LEAGUE.

The Sunday school basket ball games in the Y. M. C. A. "gym" Saturday afternoon will be between Christ church and Wollaston Baptist, First Presbyterian and Union Chapel.

Wife Couldn't See the Idea.

That few men know how to make the most of their time was the assertion of Governor Deneen. To prove his point the governor told of friends of his who were moving.

The wife conceived the notion that she might save time by wearing on each trip to the new home one of her numerous coats and leaving it. It would be easier than packing them. She was surprised, however, to find, on the occasion of one visit to the future dwelling, her husband removing his clothes.

"Why, John, what on earth are you doing? Are you going to bed?"

"Of course I'm going to bed," said John. "I'm going to .get my clothes over here like you are yours. Now, then, you see, I will just go over to the house and get on another suit."

Needless to say his wife soon settled that.

Caddy's Mean Suggestion.

Mrs. R. H. Barlow, the eastern champion, said at the Cape May Golf club, nodding toward a certain man:

"Yes, he is a very poor player. Even his caddy, for all his liberal tips, scorns him.

"One afternoon he made a wretched foozle and tore up a sod. Lifting this sod in his hand—it was about a foot square—he said to his caddy ruefully:

"'What on earth am I to do with this, John?'

"'If I was you,' the boy answered, 'I'd take it up to the hotel to practice on, sir.'"—New Orleans Daily States.

His Car.

"And what is that little building over there?" asked the visitor to Tompy's place.

"That? Oh, my wife calls that the garage," said Tompy.

"Oh—what is your car?" asked the visitor.

"Oh, that's a mirage," said Tompy.—Harper's Weekly.
